The reports of the executive officers of the Association were then read.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The annual report of General Secretary A. F. Bromley is as follows:

Mr. President:—It is with the feeling you will appreciate that in a little over eight months a person cannot get thoroughly acquainted with a field so large as Quincy, I am presenting

A. FITCH BROMLEY,
General Secretary of Quincy Y. M. C. A

this report. When we further consider that we cover a territory of seventeen square miles you can see that it takes a person some time to get acquainted with the geography of the place.

At the outset I wish to say that whatever has been accomplished in this short time in view of the above has been made possible by the thorough and efficient work of Mr. Gay. Insofar as it has been possible it has been our aim to carry out the plans and policies which were so well started.

One event that contributed towards making it possible to get acquainted with the people and the field in a much shorter time than it would have otherwise been, was the coming of the Men and Religion Campaign last fall and winter. Knowing people and their having an opportunity to know you is a very valuable asset in our work. The Campaign afforded this opportunity.

At the risk of repeating one thing that really has been brought to pass during the twelve months ending April 30, 1912 has been the liquidation of the last of the old indebtedness carried for so long a time by the Association.

The Financial Campaign carried through to the successful end by Mr. H. L. Kincaide, produced funds sufficient to end the year with all bills paid and a balance in the Treasury.

The formation of an Eating Club among the Dormitory men has in a large measure solved what was becoming a vexing problem in this connection. The Club is conducted entirely by the men and has been very successful.

So much of the work is covered by other reports it is difficult to present lines of work not already covered by them.

The balance of this report will deal with a line of work that is fast coming to the front and is assuming a very important place in the minds of not only the paid officers of the Association, of the Boards of Directors but of the community at large. So important has it become that in answer to the invitation of the State Committee over one hundred men responded to gather in Boston yesterday for a conference upon the work for the immigrant. As a large number of these men find their ways into the manufacturing concerns of the country it is also involved in the larger problem of the men employed in our numerous manufacturing establishments. When the Association was first organized in England, nearly 70 years ago, the aim was to reach the clerks in the stores of the city of London. In this country today this class of men is in the minority and the men employed in these large and small manufacturing plants are becoming the field in which the Association can do its best work. It is however true throughout the country that this class of men is reached only to a very limited degree. In years gone by the manager of these plants have been very slow to permit the Association to do any definite work within the gates of the plant. There have been notable exceptions but the number is still large in which it is not yet possible to do any definite work. At the conference yesterday, this fact was given quite a prominent place in the discussion. The experience in many places is proving that the Association can do a very definite piece of work that really is of great benefit to all concerned. The attitude in many quarters is changing very decidedly. In the fall I feel we must address ourselves very earnestly to this problem.

In connection with the Men and Religion Movement we recommenced work along this line in holding weekly religious meeting at the Fore River Ship Building Co's. yard. We have been very fortunate in securing Mr. Lawrence Greenwood to conduct this meeting. Mr. Greenwood has had large experience in this work and has been very successful not only in Quincy but in some 20 other places as well. These meetings have been attended by from 150 to 400 each noon. It is our purpose to hold them throughout the month of June at least, perhaps right through the summer. When this meeting was well under way a second meeting was started at the Boston Gear Works. This meeting has averaged about 75 in attendance. While it had been in our minds to seek for this opportunity, still the opportunity also sought us, as we had an invitation to hold the meeting at this plant. We are hoping in the fall to open other meetings as opportunity shall offer itself, or the opportunity may be made.

Along this same line last Monday noon the opportunity was made use of by Mr. LaRose to address the men at the Gear Works upon the possibility of having some athletic stunts at that plant during the noon hour. The first attempt will be made next Monday noon. This noon we made use of the same chance at the Fore River Ship Building Co., and are planning to hold the same sort of events on the Wednesday noons of June there. If in these ways we may become so acquainted with the men in these various plants that we may be able to help them solve their problems of life we feel we will in some measure be fulfilling the mission of the Association in the community,

We deeply regret no definite religious work has been done, except the noon shop meetings which have been solely this, this past year. In co-operation with the Ministerial Association, however, we are hoping some real definte and at the same time effective religious work will be accomplished this coming year.

FUTURE WORK GREAT PROBLEM

For the Graduates Who Enter Upon Life's Campaign

MISS THAYER'S BRIGHT TALK

We print below an address given before the graduating class of the Woodward Institute by Miss Blanche M. Thayer, R. M., superintendent of the City Hospital of Quincy. Miss Thayer is to speak on the same subject to the graduating class of the High school on Monday.

MISS THAYER'S ADDRESS.

Your superintendent has kindly allowed me to come here today to present the merits of the nursing profession to the young ladies of the graduating class for their consideration in the selection of their future work.

Your aim in life is probably to secure the highest development of your intelligence and faculties, while applying yourself to some work useful and remunerative.

Here is a profession in which the greatest opportunity is offered women, for advancement and usefulness, and there are many fields in which a nurse may find after graduation a career both honorable and satisfactory.

I will mention first the private nurse who goes about at the call of the physician to take care of the sick in various diseases, and if faithful and competent secures for herself the lifelong friendship and regard of the patient and household.

The district nurse, engaged in one of the best and most useful branches of the profesion, going from house to house administering comfort to the sick and teaching the household many of the principles of nursing and hygiene, leaving behind her as she goes some knowledge of what cleanliness and order can do to increase the happiness of a family and some idea of what a touch here and there in the right place will do to give comfort to an invalid.

On Massachusetts avenue, Boston, there is an association known as the Instructive District Nursing Association which trains graduate nurses in this work and many nurses take it up and find it most interesting. Anyone who visited the exhibition of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society a few years ago in Boston and saw some of the rooms in which patients were found before the nurse's visits and again after these visits, will appreciate the amount of good done in this work. The advantages to the nurse, aside from the satisfaction of seeing the change in condition, folowing her visits, are that she has no night work and has her Sundays free, and receives a good salary.

Again there is no nurse who is trained for special work in the operating rooms of the hospitals. In this branch a very special knowledge of the dangers to the patient from bacteria during operation must be acquired and lived up to with the utmost exactness in every detail, and requires intelligence of the highest order to give proper assistance to the surgeon, and to protect the patient from infection during operation.

Another branch of the professional nurse's work is the executive work in hospitals.

The Superintendent of a hospital must know something of each branch of the profession of nursing, so that she may guide those working under her intelligently, establishing such system as shall result in the proper care of the patients entrusted to her, giving them the benefit of her scientific knowledge and experience, and instructing the pupils in the little amenities and niceties of nursing which give pleasure or annoyance, as they are observed or neglected. A flower on a breakfast tray may change one's entire views of life for the day. The Superintendent of a hospital must also have some knowledge of bookkeeping—of buying and giving out supplies—of the amount necessary to feed a given number of people—of the correct method of making reports—estimating costs and making averages—and she must be a good house-keeper. This branch of the profession requires a special post-graduate course known as an administration course, given in some large hospitals, or may be acquired by taking the position of Assistant Superintendent in some well established hospital.

In the large hospitals there are also positions to be had as Superintendents of nurses, concerned only in providing nurses for the hospital, distributing them in the different departments, and in their instruction.

All the fields are open to the professional nurse after graduation and a three years' course of instruction fits them for some one of these places.

The three years' course is, however, only the beginning of what there is to learn in the profession. And practising the profession in any of its branches makes one an educator—in the family, where one always has opportunity to teach some member however learned in other directions he or she may be, some of the principles and practises of nursing—in district work, where it is an important part of the work to teach—in the operating room, where the nurse must teach the pupils who assist her and must be responsible for their work—as Superintendent of nurses or of hospitals, in either of which positions it is her business to teach.

You young ladies starting out from the excellent schools of Quincy are the ones we want to take up this work, which will fulfill many of your ideals of future usefulness.

ALBERT H. TABER PASSED AWAY

Was Prominent in Many Fraternal Organizations

END CAME SUDDENLY

Albert H. Taber, of 18 Baxter street, one of the most widely known and highly respected citizens of Quincy died at his home shortly after nine o'clock this morning. Mr. Taber had been in ill health for the past three years and while he suffered a shock recently, his death came unexpectedly as his family had made preparations to move to the summer home at Houghs Neck.

The deceased was a member of a number of fraternal orders in Quincy and had held office in nearly all of them. He was a member of the Knights and Ladies of Honor, Quincy Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, Quincy Lodge, Benevolent Order of Buffaloes, Granite Conclave, Improved Order of Heptasophs, Merrymount Lodge, A. O. U. W. and of the Workmen's Benefit Association of the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company. He was also a prominent member of the Quincy Yacht club and frequently had taken part in yachting events. He was active in all the social affairs of the organizations of which he was a member and the announcement of his death came as a severe blow to the many friends to whom he had always endeared himself.

He is survived by a wife, two sons, and a daughter.

HIGH GRADUATES GREET JUNIORS

Very Pretty Reception Tendered Latter at School

DECORATIONS FINE FEATURE

The gymnasium of the Quincy High school presented a scene of gaiety Friday evening, the occasion being the reception tenderd by members of the graduation class to the juniors. There was a large attendance of students and the affair proved one of the most successful of the season. The reception was from eight until nine o'clock, followed by dancing, which continued until eleven.

A most attractive scene was presented by the artistic arrangement of decorations. On one side of the hall were conspicuously displayed in gold letters on a green background, the color of the class, the initials Q. H. S., while at either end of the gymnasium were the numerals '12 and '13, worked out in the same colors.

At the north east corner of the hall was hung a large American flag, and it was in this section contiguous to the stars and stripes that the receiving party sat. They included Misses Mary G. Brown, Elizabeth O'Neil and Victoria Zella, all teachers at the High school. The guests of the evening were Headmaster James D. Howlett, superintendent of schools Albert L. Barbour and teachers of the High school staff.

Punch was served during the evening in one of the ante rooms. Music was by Pinkham's orchestra. The dance order comprised sixteen regular numbers and four extras.

The following committee was in charge: Miss Eleanor Whittemore, Miss Elizabeth Howard Philip Halvosa, Jr., Everett Andrews, Howard Cantley and Mildred Sumner.

It makes one tired to see the ordinary limb wood that expects to be made over into Senatorial timber. One would think it was merely a municipal politics, hurrah boys job, or a stock gambling arrangement with a lurid and cheap vocabulary attachment, or a graduate school from the Governor's Council and a political convention-almost anything excepting a position which needs training, especial adaptability and, above all, the good sense and experience of a statesman.—Waltham Free Press.

DANCING FOLLOWED PLAY

The production was successfully given and all acquitted in the cast, themselves in a splendid manner. The guests of the evening were Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady and ex-mayor William T. Shea.

The players were members of the Guild, all of whom are popularly known in Quincy. The audience was attracted to many a laugh throughout the production and the play itself was replete with jokes and wit.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

"Everybody's doing it." What? Working for the success of the safe and sane Fourth of July Celebration.

Think of it. Thousands of poor Russian peasants starving because of crop failure at the same time tons of food were rotting in the London and Liverpool docks because of a labor strike.

The veterans of Paul Revere Post stood up well under the trying march and bad weather, Memorial day. They should not task their strength too much. A grateful people would willingly provide them with vehicles on each Memorial day.

Brookline's new selectman was just counted in by one vote on the recount. However one was just as good as a thousand when counted on the right side.

And now the would-be prophets are telling what will happen at Baltimore and Chicago conventions. So far the prophets have not come within four rows of apple trees in doping out anything near like what happened in politics.

It is a pretty safe bet that William Jennings Bryan the "Peerless One" has his weather eye peeled for that nomination at Baltimore.

If all that is said of Judge Archibald is true he is a marvel in being able to get away with the goods and cover up his tracks.

The Senate had a good chance to realize the truth of the old adage, "More haste less speed," when they blocked their own game in their eagerness to wind up the session.

Mayor Stone appears capable of exercising his own judgment upon matters without the advice of would-be assistants.

Milk is going up. It seems that everything is going up. It will soon be time for the people to get up in their might and emphatically assert that this sky-high prize fever is uncalled for and must come down.

New York women contend that New York does not need to expend $10,000,000 for a storage plant for private enterprise. Competition is the remedy they demand for present conditions. They know and must be right.

At the present rate Boston will be soon be thoroughly catacombed with subways.

Lobsters, the shell fish, were in a Boston court as witnesses this week. There are many lobsters in court every day which could be held up as horrible examples, and also many who do not get into court.

Councilman McGreggor's responsibility is a heavy one unless some other members of the body change their mind on the fate of Lena Cusumano.

SAFE AND SANE FOURTH.

The city council will be called upon to appropriate $1200 for a Fourth of July celebration this year. The idea is to have $1000 for wards one, two, three, four and five and the other $200 for ward six, which plans to hold a celebration of its own. Many people object to the city appropriating money for a celebration, contending that such an enterprise should be financed by private subscription. There are many things which could be said in favor of this contention but at the same time it must be understood that the entire city is interested in this enterprise and all will reap a benefit. Celebrations of the character such as have been conducted in Quincy the past two years, make for a safe and sane Fourth of July, keep the people at home make them satisfied, provides all with a mode of recreation, at once healthful and moral and obviates much rowdyism that otherwise might crop out. And of still greater moment is the indisputable fact that it keeps money right at home here among the Quincy trades people. Citizens who would be compelled to go elsewhere in search of recreation would remain at home instead of going abroad and the money which they would spend on any journey would find its way through local channels into the stores and establishments of local merchants and in turn would be circulated by them right here in Quincy.

The record the past two years when celebrations have been conducted here is indeed a most creditable one. Only one fire and one arrest. The fire damage was less than $50. It costs quite a little sum every time the fire department is called out. It is reasonable to assume that a safe and sane celebration would save the city quite a bit of money in this branch of public service alone.

The gentlemen who are at the head of the undertaking are public spirited, giving freely of their time, energy and money that others may have a good time and keep alive the spirit of patriotism and traditions of the day.

The automobile parade as planned, of which Col. Henry Kincaide will be the head promises a new feature and one that cannot fail to please every one. It will be sent through every section of the city, so that all may witness it.

The children will be taken care of in grand style. Besides entertainments, the committee has other features in store for the little ones which will prove alluring to them.

The Fourth of July Association believes that $2000 will be needed to provide a satisfactory celebration. If the city appropriates $1000 for the purpose, the balance will be raised by public subscription. It is believed that this latter amount will be forth coming.

Every one favors a celebration. It would be too bad if the enterprise was handicapped by lack of funds. The city will be the gainer in every way by such a celebration and on those grounds we heartily endorse the movement.

MAYOR APPEARED JUSTIFIED.

The order for $6,000 for a Kessel automobile combination engine, which was signed by the Mayor Friday has occasioned considerable comment. It is rather unusual for the City Council in an order to dictate to the Mayor what kind of an engine he shall purchase, and according to a strict interpretation of the City Charter of the City Council has no right to say that this or that make of a piece of fire apparatus shall be purchased. Strictly speaking it is simply the duty of the City Council to appropriate the money and then the Mayor may use his own discretion and purchase what he thinks is for the best interest of the city.

In this case however it is reported upon good authority that the Mayor was fully aware that the word "Kessel" was to be added to the order by the Finance Committee, and some of this committee even say that it was at the Mayor's suggestion that the word "Kessel" was added in place of the word "Knox" which it is said the committee had voted to add. However the Mayor would have been perfectly justified, if he saw fit to veto the order on the ground that the City Council had no right to dictate what make of a piece of apparatus he should purchase.

A WOMAN'S HAND UNDER AEROPLANE

Mystery Marks Accident In Grandstand at Seattle

Seattle, June 1.—A woman's left hand, gloved and with the third finger bearing several rings, is the gruesome mstery connected with the aeroplane accident at Meadows race track, when Aviator Clifford Turpin crashed into the grandstand.

The police found the hand under the wreck of the aeroplane, but have been unable to find a trace of the womany.

Turpin declares the accident was unavoidable. The aviator had started his motor and was wheeling along the track, preparing to ascend when a man ran across his path. Turpin attempted to raise one plane so as to rise over the man and turn his machine into the infield. He declares he knew the machine would be wrecked, but wished to save the man's life. He was accomplishing his purpose when the other plane rose suddenly also, swerving the aeroplane into the grandstand. The machine was wrecked there and then dropped on the heads of the persons standing in front of the stand.

ATLANTIC PLANS BIG TIME 4TH

Parade to Have Auto Division and Other Good Features

ICE CREAM FOR KIDS

At a meeting of Ward Six Patriotic Association in Music hall building, May 29, to consider ways and means of celebrating the Fourth of July this year it was the unanimous opinion that celebration be along lines similar to those of last year. As funds must be raised by subscription the finance committee, of which Josiah C. Fuller is chairman, will soon begin work, and it is expected a larger amount will be contributed than ever before.

An organized celebration is desirable because it is a protection to property and fosters the spirit of national patriotism and pride in the home community.

William L. Buckley will be chief marshal and the official events of the day will be as follows:

1—The parade, starting early in the morning and passing through all the principal streets. The committee of which Edward J. Gallagher is chairman has already several features planned for the parade. There will be an auto division also which will be a new feature this year.

2.—The famous fancy ball game; fat versus lean men, will be on the playground as usual. Charles E. Cherrington is chairman of this committee.

3—Athletic sports on the playground and water sports at Sandy beach, foot of Webster street, Joseph P. Clarke, chairman.

4.—Ball games on the play ground in the afternoon. Frank E. Brown, chairman.

5.—Fireworks in the evening. Frank R. Whall, chairman.

Music will be furnished throughout the day by band of 28 pieces. George W. Lovejoy, chairman.

Ice cream for the children will be furnished at headquarters. Tickets for same will be distributed by finance committee. Josiah C. Fuller chairman.

Other events are being planned. A prize will be awarded for the best decorated premises and also suitable prizes for the various events. Due notice of the time these events will be held will be announced later. The committees are:

Entertainment—L. F. R. Langelier, James A. Smith, Charles E. Gill, Josiah C. Fuller, Joseph P. Clarke, John J. Herne.

Executive—Frank E. Badger, president; Louis F. R. Langelier, vice president; Charles E. Cherrington, treasurer; Herbert G. Beeman, secretary, James R. Smith, William L. Buckley, James Thomas, Josiah C. Fuller, Joseph P. Clarke.

—The town of Bowdoinham, Maine, which has just reached its 150th birthday, did not celebrate, but set apart a fund, for the celebration of its 250th anniversary, a century hence, which is to bear interest until the time arrives The usual practice of cities and towns is to pile up debts for posterity to pay.

RUNG IN FARES TO STOP CAR

Conductor Fell, Rattled Man Pulled Wrong String

CAR MOVED MERRILY ON

While collecting fares on a crowded running board Edward Fleming, 26 years, conductor of the Bay State Street Railway company, fell off the 6.10 car for Houghs Neck Wednesday evening on Sea street, and was severely injured. Although the car was crowded with passengers, none of them had presence of mind enough to pull the bell for the car to stop.

Many passengers shouted to the motorman to stop the car but he evidently was unable to hear the shouts owing to wind which was blowing. One of the passengers thought he was pulling the right bell, but instead was ringing the bell used for transfer checks.

An automobile happened to be passing by at the time and Fleming was picked up and taken to the office of Dr. Charles W. Garey, where it was found he had sustained abrasions to his legs and nose and a wrenched shoulder. He was later removed to his home.

The car stopped hundreds of yards from where Fleming fell, and the motorman and passengers went back to give assistance to Fleming but the automobile was before them. Fleming in an effort to grasp one of the handles did not judge his distance correctly.

PROBATION JOB GIVEN F. H. FAHY

Judge Avery Made Selection From Many Candidates

NEW MAN WELL QUALIFIED

The office of Probation Officer at the District court which has been vacant since the resignation of Francis A. Spear early this year was filled this morning by Judge Avery, who appointed Francis J. Fahy of Washington street, Quincy Point to the position. There have been a large number of applicants for the position and the selection has been a hard one to make, from the fact that all of the applicants had good recommendations. Judge Avery however believes that the right man for the position has been found.

Mr. Fahy was sworn in and entered immediately upon his duties. Arthur C. Hultman who was recently appointed as Assistant Court officer also entered upon his duties as such this morning.

Mr. Fahy although born in Cambridge is thoroughly familiar with Quincy. His parents spent their early married life in this city and his uncle lived here for many years. During the time his uncle was alive he was a frequent visitor to Quincy and for several years has made his summer home in this city.

He was born in Cambridge in 1875 and was educated in the public schools of his native city. Leaving school he entered the real estate and insurance business which he has since followed having an office at 45 Kilby street, and making his home in Cambridge up to January 1911 when he made his home in Quincy.

The only public office he held was a member of the Cambridge Board of Aldermen in 1905.

He married Miss Catherine T. Larkin of Woburn in June 1911 and brought his bride to Quincy. They have one child, a daughter. His uncle who died three years ago made a number of bequests in his will to charitable organizations.

He has been deeply interested in the probation system for some time and has made it a study. He has a kindly disposition, is broad minded and has an even temperament which serve to fit him for his new office and the court believes him a man well fitted for the position.

He is a member of St. Finbar court, M. C. O. F.

SENATE AND HOUSE DISCUSS RECIPROCITY

Democrats Intend to Pass Repeal of the Bill

Washington, June 1.—The repeal of the Canadian reciprocity act will be offered as an amendment to each tariff revision bill brought up in the senate, according to a plan announced by Senator Gronna of North Dakota.

Mr. Gronna, who contends that the reciprocity bill is iniquitous, and that it was passed "by the Democratic party assisted by standpat Republican senators" said he purposed to give those who voted for it an opportunity to "purge themselves" and to give the president the same opportunity.

Responsibility for Canadian reciprocity was debated in the house. Representative Shackleford of Missouri, Dem., asserted that the reciprocity bill, a repeal of which was placed on the house metal tariff revision bill by the senate, was the work of President Taft and a "former president." Representative Prince of Illinois, Rep., retorted that the Democratic speaker of the house was a bed-fellow of President Taft on the reciprocity question.

Mr. Prince insisted the people would hold the Democrats responsible. Representative Lloyd backed Shackleford in reiterating that President Taft fathered the measure upon the advice of an ex-president.

PASTOR AYERS THANKS PEOPLE

For Devotion and Loyalty Under Trying Conditions

GREAT WORK COMPLETED

At the always helpful prayer meeting of the Park and Downs church on Friday evening, the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers publicly thanked his people for their unswaying faith and loyalty to him through the past trying two years of his ministry under circumstances that would make a less courageous man fail. The great work he started so enthusiastically, the building of the new church, the plans of which he himself designed, has been successfully completed and the auditorium already tested to its full capacity at both morning and evening services on Sunday. The wonderful growth of the church from a membership of fifty to over two hundred in so short a time testify strongly to the able leadership of Mr. Ayers who has given three years of his life in his untiring efforts and zeal for his church. As is always the case where men are before the public eye and accomplish great things, when reforms are instituted and changes made in the methods of procedure, criticism is aroused in a few who object to changes ,but in spite of these he has risen above it all and the pretty stone structure, the large congregation, the love and esteem of his people stand, for a memorial.

By vote of the church a special communion with admission of new members will be held on Sunday.

There is no district in the city that is showing such a growth as Wollaston Park.

A splendid class of citizens coming every day, and increasing the population of this beautiful section of our city. A pretty church with good facility for worship, an able pastor, all help to make the Park and Downs church a power in the community and presents a wonderful opportunity for good.

REPORT OF PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT

The report of physical director LaRose in part is as follows:

It has been my privilege during the past season to give physical examinations to over 150 men and boys and I am glad to say that with very few exceptions the members were only too glad to speak openly with me regarding their religious lives, etc. Over 15,800 men and boys used the privileges of the Physical Department as a whole; this means gymnasium, baths, pool, and bowling alleys, class work and private exercise. 120 men and 176 boys were enrolled in definite class work on the floor and 19 firemen, policemen, carmen and civil service candidates also did work at irregular hours. 131 sessions for men and 237 for boys were held during the year and the total attendance in such sessions was 7545. 85 men and boys took part in scheduled games and athletic events to the number of 130.

In the group games of the Junior and Employed Boys' Classes practically every member competed regularly on their different teams. The group basket-ball tournament proved to be a grand success and the same policy will be carried out next year altho' from present plans the Association will also be represented by two regular teams.

The draughtsmen of the Fore River Co., were the guests of the Association as in other years and this coming season it is planned to extend the same invitation to the men of the Boston Gear Works, Tubular Rivet Co., and men in the yard of the Fore River Co. The Boy Scouts under the able leadership of Mr. Ben. Hodgkinson were granted the use of the gym floor and baths on Friday afternoons.

There is no doubt that the past season has been more successful in every way than that of any previous one. Our classes have been very largely attended, the interest shown in all around work has been greater and a spirit of loyalty to the Association as a whole has been developed. The best feature of the work to my mind is the fact that almost all of the men have said that they expect to return next season; this shows that we have something here that the fellows want and need and with the plans for next season for a broader work our membership should show a considerable gain.

Respectfully submitted,
Louis F. LaRose.

BOYS' WORK DIRECTOR'S REPORT

The report of Alden H. Blanchard Boy's work director follows:

The opening of the fall season in 1911 in the Boy's Department was necessarily late owing to the late arrival of the Boys' Work Director.

During the month of October, two Bible classes were started, one for the Juniors and one for the High school boys and two troops of boys scouts were organized one in Quincy under the direction of Mr. Hodgkinson, and the other in Wollaston with Mr. Hammel as leader. Both troops were started on a small scale and have grown steadily until at the present time there are nearly 100 boys in Quincy, and over 60 in the Wollaston troop. Their success has been due to the efficient leadership of Mr. Hodgkinson in Quincy and of Mr. George Brown, and Mr. Hammel in Wollaston. Both troops have been self-supporting and each has run a successful entertainment and drill.

Early in November the Saturday morning meetings started and with the exception of four Saturdays when there were conflicts, continued throughout the winter and spring until the first of April.

The Bible classes for Juniors continued only about 8 weeks, but that for High school fellows lasted until spring and was without question the most successful thing in the year's work. During the last three months the class work was prefaced by the suppers prepared by the boys themselves, and by this means fellows were brought closer together and the Boys' Work Director was given an opportunity to get in closer touch with them.

The crowning event of the year was the Boys' Conference for the boys of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

During the year an endeavor has been made to make the Association as much a social centre as possible.

At the opening of the year, the membership was 127; today there is a total of 160. In May 1911 the total membership was 182 or twenty-two more than we have today.

The Boys' Work Director feels that the department as a whole is in good condition and that a good foundation has been laid for another year.

One of the greatest handicaps to the work, outside of the wide scattering of the population, is the cramped quarters for the boys.

Following the association meeting the Board of Directors met to organize for the coming year. This organization was perfected by the election of the following officers: President—Richard D. Chase, vice president—George A. Sidelinger. Clerk—A. N. Murray, treasurer—William F. Cummings, auditor—Joseph W. Sedgwick.

JOB HARRIMAN IS ACCUSED

Hears His Name Brought Into Darrow Case

SENSATIONAL DAY IN COURT

Bert Franklin Introduces Sensational Testimony—Overcomes His Early Reluctance to Testify—Tells of Jurors He Approached—Darrow Came on Scene of Arrest to Warn Him—Family to Have Been Provided For

Los Angeles, Cal., June 1.—Job Harriman, late candidate for mayor of Los Angeles and of the McNamara defense, heard himself accused at the trial of Clarence S. Darrow, for alleged jury bribing, of being the man who provided Darrow with the alleged bribery money.

Later in the day the heard the same witness, Bert H. Franklin, testifying for the state, quote Darrow as saying to him:

"If you mention my name, I want you also to mention what you know about Job Harriman."

The witness departed from his apparent willingness to tell all he knew to a seeming reluctance to testify about close friends whom he subsequently drew into his story of jury corruption.

For the first time since the arrest of Franklin and the indictment of himself and Darrow, the names of prospective jurors, other than Lockwood and Bain, whose bribery is alleged to have been sought, were injected into the case.

Franklin testified he told Darrow after his arrest for attempting to bribe Lockwood, that had Darrow not been present when he was arrested he intended to turn Lockwood over to the police for accepting a bribe.

"That," asserted the witness, "was when I found that Lockwood had turned traitor to me."

He said that when he saw detectives near the scene of the meeting with Lockwood, he knew he had been betrayed. Darrow's presence at the place of Franklin's arrest the latter explained by saying that he had been informed that Le Comte Davis, one of the associate counsel for the McNamara defense, had telephoned to Darrow, telling him that Franklin was about to get into trouble. Darrow, he said, went there to warn him.

After his arrest, Franklin said, Darrow had assured him that his family would be looked after. On every occasion that he met Darrow thereafter Darrow always asked how his wife and friends viewed his arrest, and what his wife's advice was.

"I told him," said the witness, "that my wife had told me it was not my duty to draw Mr. Darrow into the mud I had made. I told him my son had addressed me the same way, but I had told them there was no danger of my dragging in Mr. Darrow."

Franklin related numerous conversations with Darrow, in which the former's course was discussed. He did not fear conviction for the attempt to bribe Lockwood, he said, but Le Comte Davis had been conducting negotiations with the district attorney with a view of getting the latter to accept a plea of guilty on the part of Franklin.

In the event of such a plea and the imposition of a fine of $5000 as anticipated, Darrow told him, the witness said, that he would pay the fine and in addition give him $3000; "the $3000," said Franklin, "for the protection of my family until I could rebuild my reputation in the community.

"I told Mr. Darrow," continued Franklin, "that if the district attorney accepted my plea of guilty and dismissed the other counts, and if he would care for my family as promised, I would accept the proposition."

FIREMEN UNCOVER LIQUOR

Blaze In a Salem Club Discloses Many Gallons

Salem, Mass., June 1.—The practice of some firemen of using their axes liberally when fighting a fire developed unexpected results in Salem when the department was called to the rooms of the French Naturalization club. The blaze was in the partitions and the firemen were hacking away at the walls when the crash of breaking glass caused them to investigate and the result was a call for the police.

A search of the rooms followed and in various hiding places in the walls the officers found 140 gallons of whiskey and a large quantity of bottled beer. Nicholas Boulay, president of the club, will be summoned to court. The damage to the rooms by fire was nothing compared to the destructiveness of the searchers after the contraband liquor.

Roosevelt on First Ballot

New York, June 1.—Betting men are giving odds on Roosevelt being nominated, and even money as to first ballot.

FUSS IS DEFIANT

Will Not Act on Various Bills Unless Legislature Acts

Boston, June 1.—"I won't sign another single bill until the legislature gives me my public utilities bill!" This was Governor Foss' dictum to several members who called on him to inquire for the fate of measures in which they are interested and which are awaiting his action.

Together with his public utilities board, Governor Foss desires electrification of all railroads within the metropolitan district and a tunnel connecting the North and South terminal stations, the latter to be built by the city of Boston and leased by the railroads.

The governor also intends to bring all possible pressure to bear upon the Republican majority in the senate to pass a bill which will allow voters to express their direct preference between the United States senatorial candidates of all parties.

To obtain the legislation desired the governor is prepared, he says, to keep the legislature in session as long as it cares to fight him and to daily reiterate, if necessary, through the medium of special messages, what he declares is the immediate need of the measures in question.

The more important pieces of railroad legislation facing the governor's veto are the bill to allow the extension of the New England branch of the Grand Trunk to Boston and Worcester, and the bill allowing the New Haven to acquire control of the western trolley lines.

There are votes enough in both house and senate, however, to pass both of these bills over the governor's veto. The Republican members of the senate, in particular, are in a fighting frame of mind, and have, to date, postponed indefinitely, consideration of two of the governor's special messages.

The vetoes Speaker Cushing refused to admit in the house are still tied up. Two of them provided for the pensioning of probation officers and court officers of the superior and supreme courts. If the beneficiaries of these desire to collect their benefits, the courts will have to decide the question of time, as State Auditor White will refuse authorization on all amounts based upon the vetoed bills.

BRYAN'S VIEWS ON ROOSEVELT

Believes That Colonel Will Win or Bolt

Lincoln, Neb., June 1.—That while President Taft apparently has a majority of the Chicago delegates, Roosevelt intends to be a candidate before the people and if necessary will organize a bolting convention, is the gist of an editorial forecast by William J. Bryan in The Commoner issued today. Bryan says:

"We have now arpoached near enough to the national convention to forecast the action of that body. Ex-President Roosevelt will have apparently a majority of the northern states, while President Taft seems likely to have a majority of the convention—including the southern delegates, who represent merely patronage and boodle.

"Mr. Roosevelt has been careful to arrange for the contesting delegates from the south—this was the first indication of his intention to bolt. With a majority of his northern delegates, he is in a position to have a convention of his own in Chicago if his contesting delegates are refused admission.

"The conclusion, therefore, is that Mr. Roosevelt will be the nominee of the regular convention, or the nominee of a bolting convention. Get ready for his candidacy. He is quite sure to run.

"Can Roosevelt be defeated? Yes, by any good progressive. A progressive will hold the Democratic vote and the Republicans who oppose a third term will do the rest. Mr. Clark and Mr. Wilson are the leading progressive candidates—either one of them can defeat Roosevelt. The country will never have a president for a third term."

Minister Finally Vindicated

Washington, June 1.—Unfrocked fourteen years ago, after a trial on charges made against him by a young woman who sang in a choir, Rev. Gilbert Williams of this city has been reinstated as a clergyman of the Episcopal church by the bishop of Washington. Mr. Williams, who has become a white-haired old man during the years he has been fighting for vindication, will preach next Sunday.

Consider a Lowell Strike

Lowell, Mass., June 1.—The question of ordering a general strike in the cotton mills of the city is to be considered tomorrow at a meeting of the central committee of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Cadets Not Reviewed

Boston, June 1.—For the first time in thirty years the annual Boston Common exhibition of the Boston high school cadets was called off by heavy rain.

TAFT BELIEVES CAN INTERVENE

In Cuba Without Any Authorization of Congress

REBELLION PLOT OF GOMEZ

Such Is the Belief of Many Students of Cuban Conditions—With One Exception Damage by Insurgents Has Been Small—Some Believe Cuban President Is Playing to the Gallery—Owners Lean on America

Havana, June 1.—The delay in attacking the rebellious negroes in Oriente province revived the theory, put forth at the outbreak of the "rebellion," that the movement was really fostered by the Gomez administration to enhance its political standing, which was on the wane.

Pessimistic politicians in the capital who are familiar with the situation are looking forward to a spectacular surrender of the malcontents in the field which they expect will be followed by a great outburst of joy and create a universal demand for the re-election of President Gomez as the savior of the country, both from the rebels and from the danger of American intervention.

With the exception of the attack on the property of the Spanish-American Mining company at Daiquari, there has been no real damage from the malcontents. Although there are many big sugar mills and valuable property in the black belt, none have been threatened and the little looting heretofore reported has been the work of isolated bands of thieves, who prefer stealing to working and who would rob, revolution or no revolution.

The open defiance of President Taft by President Gomez in protesting against the landing of American marines and by declaring that Cuba can take care of her own internal affairs, has popularized Gomez with the native Cubans. The big property owners in the island are not worried as they realize full well that America can be depended on to "pull the chestnuts out of the fire" if the revoutionary movement should gain any real strength.

Expert politicians here believe that much of the information circulated in the United States, especially at Washington, comes from the little group of Havana correspondents, who are rabid annexationists, and who have openly boasted that they will eventually force annexation.

President Taft holds the view that the executive without further legislation by congress, has ample authority for intervention in Cuba when necessary. He also advises the Cuban relations committee of the senate in connection with the Bacon resolution designed to supplement the Platt amendment by enacting specific "authority of law" for what now would be an "assumed authority to intervene." It was reported the committee might recommend that during a session of congress responsibility should rest upon that body, by reference of the matter to it by the president, but when congress was not in session the president should have a free hand to act.

SOUGHT NEPHEW'S AID

Judge of the Commerce Court Was Indeed Commercial Off the Bench

Washington, June 1.—Judge Robert W. Archbald's negotiations with the Girard estate of Philadelphia for culm banks on the Lehigh Valley railroad were considered at the meeting of the house judiciary committee hearing charges against the jurist. Superintendent George E. Kirkpatrick of the Girard estate read from his files letters showing that Judge Archbald and three partners applied to James Archbald, Jr., engineer of the estate at Pottsville, Pa., to lease the culm banks of the Girard mines being operated by the Lehigh Valley company. James Archbald, Jr., is a nephew of the commerce court judge. In addition to letters from the judge the witness described his personal application for the lease. The bank was not leased.

In his correspondence with his nephew, Judge Archbald, discussing his experience on the commerce court bench, said he was going back to Washington "unless the hotheads put the court out of business."

William H. Truesdale, president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, testified to Judge Archbald's participation in coal dump dealings with his railroad, said he did not talk with the judge about any deal and did not know him. He said the judge had not written to him but to other officials of the road about the Marion Coal company. He said a conference on this controversy was held and he attended it.

Mr. Truesdale admitted that the use of Judge Archbald's name got an immediate hearing of the differences.

Three Million Wires to an Inch.

Gold has been hammered out to thin sheets whose thinness is beyond imagination, so thin a pile one inch high would doubtless contain 300,000 if all were as thin as the thinnest one. But a platinum wire has been drawn to a diameter so minute that 3,000,000 side by side would occupy one inch. The method was to surround platinum with silver and draw the mass into finer and finer wire. Then the silver coating was dissolved off with nitric acid, leaving the excessively thin, insoluble thread of platinum. Particles of gold have been seen in the new ultra violet light, dark ground reflecting microscopes so small that a row containing 250,000 would be one inch long. And there are animals as small.—New York American.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

EX-PREMIER SCORES TAFT

Sir Wilfred Laurer Bitterly Replies to President

"BORROW SHALLOW RHETORIC"

First Public Utterance Referring to Taft on Reciprocity — Supports Roosevelt's Idea—Taft Nursed a Secret Says Sir Wilfrid—Canadian People Not to Be Purchased—Many Canadian Banks in America

Ottawa, June 1.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier at a great gathering of National Liberal leaders at a banquet given by the Reform club of Montreal reiterated his belief in reciprocity and spoke bitterly of President Taft. It was the first public utterance of the former premier in reply to Taft's allegation that reciprocity would have made Canada an adjunct of the United States. "Mr. Taft in that letter only repeated what had been said by the Canadian jingoes," he said. "For my part I wish to say I am surprised that a man of the eminence of Mr. Taft should borrow such shallow rhetoric from the Canadian jingoes.

"The funny part is that this letter did not convince my friend, Theodore Roosevelt. He did not share the idea that reciprocity would make Canada an adjunct to the United States. Is not Roosevelt as good an authority as Taft? You have your choice, and I take the Roosevelt idea, which is more in accord with the idea of commercial reciprocal trade. Yet, in the face of all this, while the negotiations were pending, Mr. Taft, president of the great American republic, nursed in his heart of hearts a secret which he never communicated.

"I have this to say of Mr. Taft, that he little knew the character of his people. If he harbors in his mind or heart the thought that any such arrangement could make Canada an adjunct, I have to tell him that Canada will never be an adjunct, and I say to Mr. Taft that the consent of the Canadian people to become an adjunct cannot be obtained by all the profits and wealth of the United States. He declared that reciprocity would transfer all our important business to Chicago and New York, with bank credits and everything else. Mr. Taft needs to explain why it would transfer Canadian bank accounts to the American side of the line. One thing Mr. Taft ought to know is that there is not a single American bank doing business in Canada, while I know of thirty places where Canadian banks are doing business in the United States.

"My reading of history shows that where two nations engage in profitable interchange of trade they become more friendly and more respectful to one another. That was our sentiment in negotiating the arrangement and I believe it was the sentiment of Mr. Knox. Mr. Taft candidly admits the arguments of the Canadian Tories and he evidently thought that if the Canadian Tories could use such appeals to the passions and prejudices of the Canadian people it might also appeal to American people in favor of reci- the passion and prejudices of the procity, which only goes to show the similar weaknesses of human nature on both sides of the line and the feelings which politicians not actuated by the highest motives will appeal to."

POISONED BY HAM

Rockland Partakers at G. A. R. Dinner Made Very Ill

Rockland, Mass., June 1.—Nearly a hundred well known men and women of this town were poisoned by something served at the annual Memorial day dinner of Harsuff Post, No. 74, G. A. R.

All of the food was prepared by members of the Relief Corps at their homes and warmed and served in the hall by members.

At first it was believed coffee caused the poisoning, but a woman who was stricken came forward with the information that she had cooked a ham for the dinner, had eaten a portion of it at home, but did not attend the dinner. It developed that all who are ill had partaken of the ham. It is not believed any serious results will now recover.

Washington, June 1.—There are rumors in Washington of a congressional investigation growing out of some startling facts relating to live stock receipts at the western markets just made public by the bureau of statistics.

The governmental figures show that the live stock receipts at the seven principal markets in April, 1912, were greater than for any April since 1907, and furthermore, that the aggregate receipts of live stock at these seven markets for the first four months of this year were greater by far than in the same four months in any year for the past decade.

BRIEFS

The Library was decorated Memorial day with flowers from Mrs. Thomas A. Addison also by a bunch of mixed flowers given by Mrs. George W. Morton in continuance of the custom of the late George W. Morton.

Mrs. Sarah Butler president of the Ladies' Benevolent society of Memorial church is planning with her executive committee to hold a large fair next fall. The ladies wish to help raise one thousand dollars on the church mortgage this year and if all take hold as they did last year, it is hoped to raise a good part of the thousand by the fair.

PASSES 8-HOUR BILL

Heavy Majority Votes In Favor of Shortening Hours of Labor

Washington, June 1.—By the decisive vote of 45 to 11, the senate passed the house bill extending the eight-hour principle to contracts involving labor on government work.

Mr. Bailey and Mr. Sanders opposed the bill, the former on the ground that the government has no right to restrict the right of any man in the mater of labor, and the latter on the plea that private manufacturing concerns could not continue to take government work with the time limit imposed.

The principle involved in the measure has long been contended for by the labor interests. It provides that "every contract hereafter adopted for the government requiring the employment of laborers or mechanics shall contain a provision that no laborer or mechanic doing any part of the work contemplated by the contract shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours in one calendar day." A penalty of $5 is imposed for every violation of the provision.

MALCOLM MACQUARRIE BURIED.

The funeral of Malcolm MacQuarrie was held Friday afternoon from his late residence 73 Garfield street. The services were conducted by Rev. James Matheson of the Water street Presbyterian church and were largely attended. Mr. McQuarrie was a member of Progress lodge, K. P. and Crusaders lodge I. O. O. F. of Brooklyn, N. Y. and these orders were represented at the funeral services by delegates from Monatiquot lodge K. P. of Braintree and Mt. Wollaston lodge I. O. O. F. of Quincy.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful and included set pieces from the two fraternal societies with which he was affiliated as well as from the employees of the John R. Richards Granite Company where he was employed. The burial was in the family lot at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

CATHOLIC CLUB DANCE.

There was a large attendance at the dance of the Ladies' Catholic club of Houghs Neck, in Brown's bungalow, Wednesday evening. Everyone had a good time and the affair proved successful.

The committee was Misses Helen Gagan, Fannie Hagan, Bessie Hagan, Mrs. John Peterson, Mrs. Rosewell Y. Woodbury and Mrs. Jason L. Harvey.

A Practical Query.

My little boy stood, open mouthed, while a friend elaborated the details of a sudden death. The patient had not been considered very seriously ill, and his nurse entered, bringing a baked potato for which the sick man had expressed a wish. "But," said my friend, "before he had tasted it he died." I deprecated the sadness of such recital before the child, but I need not have feared. His baby voice piped out, "And what became of the potato?"—Harper's Magazine

WOLLASTON AND ADAMS GAME

Decides the Length of Grammar School Ball League

PECULIAR SITUATION

Owing to the unfavorable weather, the baseball game scheduled for Friday afternoon at the upper field, Merrymount park, was postponed till next Tuesday afternoon at 4.15. The game will be played between the Wollaston and Adams schools and will mean much in deciding the championship of the Grammar school league. The Wollaston players are now in first place and a victory over the Adams will give them the title.

Should the Adams school be successful in taking the measure of the Wollaston players, four teams will then be tied for first place. They would be Adams, Wollaston, Lincoln and Gridley Bryant. In this event a series of games would have to be arranged and a situation would be presented such as has never taken place since the beginning of the league grammar schools in Quincy.

The game is awaited with great interest on all sides and the Adams boys will use every effort to wrest a victory from the team that is now in first place and which has lost but one game this season. A record breaking crowd will surely be in attendance when the game is called, as it is the most important on the schedule. Coddington school and Massachusetts Fields have a postponed game to play, which will take place Monday afternoon at Merrymount park. This game will not in any way affect those teams that are striving for first honors.

One Way Out.

A leading advocate of bigger pensions worked for nearly a year getting a pension for an Ohio woman. Her husband, an old soldier, had been away from home for years. Nobody had actually seen him die, but the evidence all indicated that he was dead, and the pension was granted. Just about the time the woman got her first payment the friend received a letter from her, saying:

"My husband has just returned home. What shall I do?"

The letter was returned with these words scrawled on the bottom:

"Kill him!"—Everybody's Magazine.

EARLY BIRDS FROM S. BOSTON CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

They Deny Breaking Into Allen's Store and Claim a Mistake Has Been Made

Gang Rounded up After Chase and Pistol Firing

About 5 o'clock Sunday morning, Joseph E. Allen of Shoreham street, Squantum telephoned the police station that he had been awakened by a noise in his store and upon going down had found a gang of youths who had broken in and were ransacking the premises. They made a hasty departure on his appearance. Some jumped out through the windows taking sash and glass with them while others managed to get out of the front door.

All escaped but one young man who gave his name as Thomas Diggins, aged 16 years of 80 Village street, South Boston. Allen attempted to hold him but some of the gang returned and the superior number succeeded in geting him away. As they sped up the stret Allen threw a stone at them which struck Diggins in the face. He then telephoned the police.

Sergt. Bishop sent the patrol wagon with Officers Cahill, Reiley and Farrell to the scene. The run of nearly four miles was made in record time On Atlantic street near the bridge the officers picked up four of the youths and seven others were picked up in two and threes all the way to Squantum. On the return trip two more were found hiding behind a factory building on the Quincy Shore Reservation. Officers Farrell and Reiley got out and gave chase and after firing their revolvers at them the boys gave in.

At the police station the boys said that they were going to Squantum to spend Sunday. They however, denied breaking into the store and claimed that a mistake had been made.

When booked at the police station the boys gave their names as follows:

George Simorin, 17, 16 Emerald street; William McCarthy, 17, 42 Emerald street; George Thomas, 17, 60 Middlesex street Samuel Bikosh, 17, 5 Emerald street; Harold Morey, 17, 120 Shawmut avenue; George Burke, 17, 320 Shawmut avenue; Joseph Biggins, 18, 28 Albion street; Robert E. McGowan, 16, 21 Mayo street; Frank Corcoran, 17, 63 Dover street; Joseph Trishin, 16, 23 Cobb street; Joseph Corcoran, 16, 63 Dover street; John McArde, 15, 45 Middlesex street all of Boston.

THREE HURT AS CAR LEFT RAIL CRASHED INTO TELEGRAPH POLE

Eighteen-Inch Stick Crumbled in Two Places Like Pipe Stem When the Impact Came

Third Consecutive Week End Accident of Hoodoo Corner

The electric car leaving Quincy at 5.05 o'clock Saturday afternoon for East Weymouth, left the rail near the corner of Washington and Mill streets five minutes later, swerved into the side of the road, crashed into a telegraph pole, breaking the heavy stick like a pipe stem and three persons were injured by the accident.

This is the third accident which has happened near this point within three weeks and the locality can truly be called "Hoodoo Corner."

The first one, Friday, May 17, was when Elmer Walters, eight years old, was struck by an automobile and died a few minutes after.

The second one occurred Saturday, May 25, when Conductor Arthur S. French was run over by Dr. Sibley's automobile, and is still confined to the hospital from his injuries.

The third accident came Saturday afternoon.

It is said that the car trucks were thrown from the tracks by a stone on the rail.

The car was in charge of Motorman Henry Devaney and Conductor Chas. H. Smallet. As the car was leaving the easterly end of the long turnout near the corner of Mill street the forward trucks struck a stone and left the rail and crashed into a large telephone pole 18 inches in diameter, which snapped like a pipe stem in two places.

There was quite a large number on the car, and the shock of the car striking the pole immediately caused great confusion among the passengers. Albert L. Whitman, president of the Merchant's association was thrown violently off the car into the street and stood dazed until assistance arrived.

Gertrude McDonald, the five-year-old daughter of Alexander McDonald of 10 Pray street was thrown from her mother's side to the floor of the car and suffered a general shaking up and numerous contusions.

Danzel C. Luther, aged 65, of 25 Farnum street occupied a seat on the front of the car and was thrown to the ground, suffering a bad scalp wound and injury to the chest.

Dr. W. J. Middleton came along just as the accident happened and and rendered medical assistance to those injured, after which he ordered them sent to their homes. Mayor

QUINCY'S FIRST JUNE WEDDING

Dr. Merrill and Miss Barber United at Wollaston

Miss Ardelia Elizabeth Barber of Atlantic became the bride of Dr. John Lummus Merrill of Wollaston, at the Wollaston Unitarian church, Saturday evening.

The ceremony was most impressive and was performed before a large number of relatives and friends by Rev. Carl G. Horst, the double ring service being used.

The bride was given away by her father Everett A. Barber, Dr. Ernest S. Merrill, brother of the groom acting as best man. The maid of honor was Miss Julia A. Barber, sister of the bride.

The bride looked charming in a costume of white messaline and Venetian point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore white messaline with an overdress of white chiffon set off by a large picture hat, and carried white roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Muriel L. Oakes of Providence, R. I., a cousin of the groom, and Miss Florence Hill of Atlantic wore pink messaline with overdress of white chiffon and dainty pink caps. They carried pink roses.

The ushers were Dr. Woodbury Bragdon of Danvers, Tufts '09; Charles L. Campbell of Wollaston, Technology '08; Dr. F. Carroll Allen of New Bedford, Tufts '11 and L. Blanchard Oakes of Providence, Brown '12.

A bank of evergreen, palms and potted plants formed a background for participants in the wedding service. The wedding march was played by Leslie L. Mehaffey of Dorchester, organist of the First Congregational church Chelsea and a former resident of Wollaston.

Residents of Wollaston and Atlantic were largely represented at the wedding and other guests were present from Salem, Danvers, Beverly and Boston.

The groom's present to the bride was

CASCADE OF MEMORIES OPENED BY LEGAL MEN OF 40 YEARS AGO

Distinguished Jurists Speakers at Dedication of New Court Building

Judge Avery Master of Ceremonies. Masterly Eloquence of City Solicitor Finds Vent

The new court building on Coddington street was formally dedicated as a temple of justice Saturday afternoon, in the presence of a distinguished assemblage of members of the bar and men in other walks of public life to the number of 300. It was a dual celebration in a way as the occasion also marked the fortieth anniversary of the establishment of the district court in Quincy.

The exercises opened at 2 o'clock in the main court room on the first floor which had been made unusually attractive with many potted plants and bouquets of fragrant roses and carnations. Inside of the rail were seated members of the Bar as well as visiting judges while in the immediate vicinity of the bench were other officials prominent in Norfolk County. Judge Avery as master of ceremonies occupied a seat near the clerk's desk.

On the bench were Hon. Everett C. Bumpus, the judge of the first district court in Quincy, Hon. John F. Merrill, Chairman of the County Commissioners of Norfolk County and John W. McAnarney, Esq., city solicitor.

The ushers were George H. Brown, Frank A. Tirrell, Walter S. Pinkham, George E. Adams, Charles H. Hardwick, and John A. Duggan.

Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, pastor of the First church opened the exercises with prayer and was followed by Judge Avery who in his introductory address said:

Your Honors, Ladies and Gentlemen and Members of the Bar:

It seemed very appropriate that on this day; The fortieth anniversary of the establishment of this Court; we should come together in this new and beautiful court-room to hold our simple dedicatory exercises.

Under the authority of Chapter 477 of the year 1910 entitled "An Act to authorize the County of Norfolk to purchase land in Quincy and construct a building for the District Court of East Norfolk," the County Commissioners have most faithfully performed their duty, and this substantial building will stand for many years to come as a monument to their forethought, their judgment and their integrity.

While the Constitution stands this structure shall stand and here every subject of the Commonwealth ought to obtain right and justice freely, and without being obliged to purchase it; completely and without any denial; promptly and without delay; conformably to the law."

The Roman order of architecture is represented in the exterior of this building which I assume is intended to remind us of that elaborate system of jurisprudence known as the Roman Law. The decorations of this room are Old English, Symbolic of the Common Law of Old England.

HON. ALBERT E. AVERY,
Judge of the Quincy District Court.

It would seem as if the architect with full knowledge of the fact that "A thousand years scarce serve to form a state; an hour may lay it in the dust;" desired to remind us that in these ultra progressive days we must not forget the very foundation of all law lest

"Everlasting fate shall yield to fickle chance and chaos judge the strife."—

It may be noted in passing that the decisions of all the judges in this Commonwealth, and particularly those of the judges of the lower Courts—when not controlled by special legislation, are always founded on natural justice and the philosophy of common sense.

But whether the formal statutes enacted by the legislature seeking, as they always do to embody the eternal laws, succeed and promote our welfare or fail and tend to bring confusion and disaster upon our people it is not for the judges but for the people to say; and since every act of the legislature is law, our Constitution provides that

"It is essential to the preservation of the rights of every individual, his life, liberty, property and character, that there be an impartial interpretation of the law, and administration of justice. It is the right of every citizen to be tried by judges as free, impartial and independent as the lot of humanity will admit."

"All systems of judicial appointment;" said Rufus Choate, "suppose the judge to be a mortal man, after all, and all systems that are wise and well tried, aim to fortify, guard and help that which his maker has left fallible and infirm. To inveigh against the lot of humanity is idle. He censures God, I have heard, who quarrels with the imperfections of man."

This building is worthy to be called a Temple—but we call it a Court-house.

Its doors are always open to the complaints of the injured its Courts

HON. JOHN F. MERRILL,
Chairman County Commissioners.

are always ready to hear criminal accusation when founded upon probable cause. "Law is the sister of freedom. And Sovereign Law, that collected will o'er thrown and globe, state, sits empress, crowning good, repressing ill."

"Here under the constitution may there be always "a government of laws and not of men."

HON. J. STEARNS CUSHING.

The first speaker, Hon. J. Stearns Cushing, of the Governors' council, spoke for the Commonwealth and brought the congratulations of Gov. Foss who was unable to be present. Mr. Cushing said that he was pleased to be present, after having been for three years the representative on the Council from this district. He was not talking for re-election. He knew

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Gov. Foss has certainly got the legislature groggy towards the end of the match.

Boston is crying for the covering of catables exposed for sale. Meat supposed to have been passed upon by United States inspectors in the big slaughter and packing houses was refused by army officers only the other day. Which only goes to show that the inspectors are inefficient or else the meat barons have influence enough to make their inspections but farcial.

Roosevelt came into Massachusetts to beat Gov. Foss and although the latter was running against one of the most popular republicans of the day he won out despite the Rough Rider tacties. If Roosevelt comes to interfere in Massachusetts congressional elections he may receive even worse consideration than on this former occasion.

A New York judge refused to accept the evidence of a confession obtained by threats and duress. It is healthful to see a just and worthy magistrate stand up for the right as in this case.

Richard Olney, 2nd is at the plate ready to make the circuit of the bases for the republican congressional nomination from the Fourteenth district. His bat is in his hand, meaning somewhat the same as that his lid is in the ring.

Egomania is another term which has been applied to the "Marvelous One."

The pardoned lifer at the Charlestown state prison was more anxious to see the subways than anything after his twenty years' seclusion from the world.

Waltham has lost its wild men of Borneo by death. They were twins, freaks of nature, born in Ohio, 85 years ago and exhibited for their peculiarities and great strength. The other twin died about five years ago.

You all thought it was a pretty wet spring, but you were mistaken. The man with statistics has come forward and shown that the rainfall was no where near the record. So that the grumblers cannot bask in the sunshine of the thought that it was the worst ever.

It did not require an editorial forecast by William Jennings Bryan to tell a breathless people that Roosevelt would win or bolt the convention. After his arraignment of President Taft he would be a rank quitter if he did not enter the contest in some way. Thomas B. Reed said "The Lord hates a quitter." And there is a possibility that Thomas was correct.

A Seattle woman left her left hand under the grand stand when an aeroplane crashed into it and the strange part of it is that no one reported losing a hand at the time and no one has come forward to claim this missing member.

The waiters apparently hold the key to the situation in New York. They quit work at a signal. The way they left some of the dinner guests might mean a considerable loss in the way of tips if the diner was particular and wanted to get in right on that particular dinner. Any way the patrons were treated in the most cavalier manner.

COVERING GOODS.

The agitation in Boston at the present time to have grocers, provision dealers and market men cover all articles which they offer for sale in the way of food, is gaining wide spread notice. There are many things to be said upon both sides of the question. The market men claim that such a provision is unnecessary and would mean an additional expense in conducting their business. The general public appears to be quiescent in the matter. The whole thing has been stirred up by a few agitators who are never happy unless they are inventing some means of making troubles for others.

They claim that the exposed goods are open to the invasion of dust and flies. Well every time that the cover is raised to take out some goods the same dust and flies will be right on the job and eager to penetrate and if a fly gets under the cover he is liable to stay there. If the covering is brought about it will only be another case where the consumer will have to bear the burden of the additional expense and may be it will be in proportion to the advance in coal and the increase of miners' wages.

Apropos of the above it might be noticed in passing that there are many and adequate pure health and food laws on the statute books, equal to meeting and coping with any situation which may arise. The whole trouble is that there is conflict of authority and politics cropping out at every turn. An official does not dare to perform his duty because he is afraid of losing his head. He may enforce the provisions of the law against one person and get by without any trouble but in the same treatment of another person he may encounter one who has a political pull and off goes his head. So that the trouble is not with the law but the system. Put a man in charge, tell him to enforce the law as he finds it or off goes his official head and there will be no trouble but what he will do his duty. On the other hand an official appointed by political influence has got to watch every wind that blows and adjust his sails accordingly.

Boston has offered the management of the pure food department to Dr. Harvey Wiley, the noted pure food expert. He is held out as an inducement a sum far in excess of the regular salary for the billet.

That is pure extravagance without a particle of excuse. Dr. Wiley can only follow the law as he finds it. He will not be impregnable from political influence any more than any other official and this is proven by the fact that he was practically forced out of the National bureau, because of politics There are hundreds of men in Massachusetts who can conduct that health department of Boston, just as good as Dr. Wiley if given a free hand. Both in city, state and nation, politics enter too much into the application of laws, therefore, what one person may be punished for another can do without fear of molestation. The laws are all right. It is the system that is at fault. Take the politics out of offices. Make the tenure of office conditional upon performing duty and carrying out the law and there will be no trouble but what he pure food laws or any other laws will be enforced by the official appointed under such a condition.

At Track and Street Hearings at City Hall Tonight

SPECIAL CAR ENGAGED

A special car has been chartered by the Wollaston Park Improvement association for this evening when the residents of that district will attend a hearing at City hall on the relocation of car tracks and the acceptance of several streets. The car will leave the turnout on Billings road at 6.59 o'clock, sharp, and will pick up passengers along the route. Much interest has been aroused and it is expected a large number will attend the hearing.

CAR STRUCK POLE

Stone and Commissioner Tupper also came along in an automobile and they immediately took charge of Mr. Whitman, who was lifted into their car and taken home.

The car was not moving fast at the time and the motorman stuck to his post and reversed the power as the car left the track, but the momentum was sufficient to carry it against the pole which it struck just right to snap it off.

Mr. Whitman suffered an injury to his right shoulder and left hand and was considerably shaken up, but it is not thought to have been seriously injured. This morning it was said that he was doing as well as could be expected but rather sore and no serious results were anticipated. The others are also reported as doing well and no serious results are anticipated.

CASCADE OF MEMORIES

something of Judge Avery's father. He was a man distinguished in law. A magnificent man whose word was as good as his bond. When he thought of the splendid men who have represented the judiciary he sincerely regretted such a retrograde step as the recall of decisions will mean should it ever take place in the good old Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He trusted that the appointment of judges would continue. If relieved from politics we will continue to have the splendid type of men represent us on the bench, who will not have one eye on politics and the other on the cases before them. May justice ever be properly handed out in this court.

MAYOR STONE.

Said that it seemed to him that his office was to congratulate Judge Avery, the City of Quincy and the Quincy Board of Trade which had worked hard to secure this building

First Chief Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

Also ex-Mayor Shea who had done much to help along. The architect and all contributing should be commended. If it had not been for the united efforts of the organizations the court would still be doing business at the old stand where the conditions were not what they should have been. Here is a fine building especially adapted for what it is to be used for. Seldom has it been the privilege of a town not a shire town to have a court building and in Quincy the people are especially fortunate in having such a building. It will be of great benefit to Quincy and the district that does business here.

HON. EVERETT C. BUMPUS.

Judge Bumpus who was to give a historical address was introduced as one who returned, who came back from the civil war not laden down with spoils but with his trusty sword and fired with ambition to make the best of what was in him. He entered a dingy law office and said to Mr. Avery "May I read Black's commentories?" "Here they are" said Mr. Avery "and may God have mercy on your soul."

In opening his remarks Judge Bumpus said that his rhetoric was shop worn. It had been put aside with the belief that the younger generation might pick up something better. " We had a job on our hands fifty years ago and I was in it. When we came back I felt that the world owed me a living. I started at the age of 23 years in the office of Edmund Avery. A kindlier man never drew breath. After being admitted to the bar I went to Weymouth to practice. The jurisdiction of the trial justices was limited but he who could satisfy the three state constables got the patronage."

He then spoke of those prominent in law at that time, mentioning Jacob Loud of South Weymouth, J. White Belcher, W. S. Morton, before whom he tried one of his first cases, Squire Lewis of Hingham, where as a rule, no money was let go out of that town. He related many anecdotes in relation to those whom he mentioned as well as to his old law associates such as Edward Avery, Asa French, Edward L. Pierce, John L. Eldridge, Judge Perry of Randolph, Jonathan Wales, Judge James Humphrey, Asa Wellington and Judge E. Granville Pratt. Of these only the speaker and Judge Pratt are alive today.

He referred to Nahum L. White of Braintree, G. A. Langley, Charles Q. Tirrell, John Quincy Adams and others of the Bar of forty years ago. Looking back on these things it seems that it was a most audacious act his being appointed a judge. He said he served ten years and then resigned, and this was the end of his relations with the court.

He then spoke of a vision that had come to him of a young man on one side and an old man on the other side. All looked like him. The old man said "why do you pull so at your chains? You have a lot of friends. Despise not the day of little things."

The young man said "I want something more. Le me leave these small quarters, let me see the world." The old man said "Stand to what you have." Then I woke up and realized how much happiness I had in days long ago.

"We are facing a futrue which we must keep pace with, 150,000 will live in this district 25 years hence. We should consider those to come. This is called a lower court. It comes close to the people in the law."

JUDGE JOHN A. HARDY.

Of the Superior court said it had been a long time since he had stood at the Bar and addressed a judge and jury. Way back forty years ago he was a school teacher and Judge Avery was one of his pupils. His first judicial office was in 1872 as Commissioner of bankruptcy. One of the first to come before him was Edward Avery the father of the present justice of this court and he found him at once a very kind friend. His first police court experience was before Judge Churchill and in his first apearance in the superior court he had John Q. Adams as opposing counsel. He congratulated the judge on the opportunity of doing business in such a fine building as this. He had a keen and deep sympathy with all judges of municipal courts. He always examined cases appealed from these courts and in the majority of cases the juries sustained them. It gave him pleasure to find that such conditions existed. It ought to be a pleasure to have a judge so near the people. He was also delighted to know that his old school pupil was here. "Long may he fill it dealing out justice with mercy."

JUDGE FRANK A. MILLIKEN.

Of the New Bedford court and President of the Justices of the District, Police and Municipal courts said "Justice is love with his eyes open. None can escape law's consequences or evade its findings. Well should this be called a temple of justice. Here is a beautiful building a credit and ornament to the city, well adapted for its use. I join in congratulating you. No doubt this splendid edifice will engender new resolutions to better efforts. There are in this state seventy municipal courts which might be better named courts of the people." He then gave some figures showing the number of cases in the lower courts as compared with the cases carried to the higher courts showing that a very large proportion were disposed of in the lower courts. High character and a source of fair play is exemplified by these courts. He was proud of the representative of these seventy courts in the Eastern Norfolk District. He trusted that the people would be so law abiding that this building would answer for all times.

HON. GEORGE L. BARNES.

Senator from this district extended his congratulations and said, "the legislature is charged with the duty of recording popular will in its statutes. We in the legislature are in a position to view hundreds of matters with comprehension of the difficulties of justice to interprete the statutes." He was not surprised when he thought of the solution that these statutes gave rise to. There are some who gather a few cases and present them as a wholesale indictment against the whole courts. "Our duty is to protest against anything that undermines the opinion of people about the courts." He paid a tribute to the honor and dignity with which the courts had fulfilled the work to the people. A judge sees two pathways. One rugged with duty and responsibilities, the other a smoother one strewn with flowers. To his mind the courts of this Commonwealth had been conducted along the lines of the rugged path.

JUDGE FREDERICK D. ELY

Of the Boston Municipal court was present for two reasons. First because he was the oldest member of the Norfolk Bar. Second to take the place of a better man, Hon. Asa P. French, the President of the Norfolk Bar Association. He spoke of the difference of methods of conducting court today and forty years ago. Yet it was only a difference of powers and jurisdiction. In those days there was nothing to do with a juvenile offender but to impose a fine or send the children to jail. Today such action would be called an outrage; and severely condemned. Drunks were then fined $5. Now many are released while others are put on probation.

CHARLES C. HEARN

President of the Quincy Board of Trade extended his congratulations to the county, to the City of Quincy for having such an addition to its civic adornment, and to the Quincy Board of Trade. He wanted to add his tribute to the occupant of the bench, Judge Avery. His is a noble example of the work of the probation system in Quincy. May the future have something higher in store for him.

EX-MAYOR WILLIAM T. SHEA.

Felt that he was on the right side of the bar. It was a great deal of satisfaction to him to note the growth of a new building like this. It is a recognition by the citizens of the state of the growth of our city. We are proud of our city. It is a growing and prosperous one and bound to be one of the leading municipalities of the Commonwealth. He wished to congratulate the County Commissioners, and Judge Avery and the gentlemen associated with him. Personally he had no desire to do business here. All knew and respected Judge Avery for his honesty and integrity. He was proud of the group of public buildings in this immediate vicinity and that he was the chief executive of the city when the law making the building possible was passed.

EDWIN MULREADY

Of the Probation commission, joined in his congratulations to the state, county, city and the architect. He said "You hardly think of the importance of the position and that the city hardly appreciates the importance of our court system. Nothing stands between us and anarchy but the courts The things not recorded are the things that count. They are the souls of the men and women." He spoke of the workings of the probation system of today and said the citizens could help establish a higher standard of justice here. He spoke of the difficulties Judge Avery had experienced in the selection of a probation officer. "He has given to you a man who will make good. I ask you to help take up the work of betterment throughout the county."

HON. JOHN F. MERRILL

Chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners told o fthe work of securing the bill to authorize the erection of this building. He had long ago realized the needs of better quarters for the court in Quincy and when it had been taken up by the Board of Trade he had done his best to help. There was no opposition from any other part of the county at the legislative hearings although it was necessary to go to the legislature twice to get the required sum. Architects were invited to submit sketches. Their sketches were anonymous and the judges selected what was deemed best without knowing the architect. It fell to a resident of this city, William Chapman. If the people are satisfied with the result he was more than repaid for what he had done and the County Commissioners were satisfied.

JOHN W. McANARNEY, Esq.

Was the last speaker and his address was a masterly one. He spoke as follows:

Your Honor, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

The Bill of Rights of this Commonwealth begins with the declaration—"All men are born free and equal."

True it is, all men are born free and equally true is it that that freedom may be forfeited, in whole or part, by the voluntary and accountable act of its possessors.

True it is, that all men are born equal, but equally true is it, that before the law that equality can never be forfeited.

One may ride over our streets in the most costly of modern conveyances, another walk them clothed in the beggar's rags.

One may possess the intellect of a genius, another be the dullest of the dull.

One may be at the very apex of social distinction, another tread the paths which lead through the slum of society.

Yet when the threshold of a court room is crossed, and they stand before the bar of justice, then the equality which came into being at the hour of their birth reasserts itself and before the keen eye of him who sits in the seat of judgment they are equals.

So it has been these many years in this Commonwealth, and so it will continue so long as we remain true to the principles of that immortal declaration of rights, and laws made for all men, not for or against any man or class of men, rule the land.

The central feature distinguishing our form of government from that of other countries is that here we have no one man who rules by "Divine Right." No man's will dominates and controls the forces which may make or mar the destiny of our country. Here the sovereignty rests in the people. Here the sovereign is the people. Here the people rule, and their will when duly declared by their representatives and administered by their chosen agents, the only law before which we bow, and to which we render a ready and willing obedience.

When men learned, able, and of lofty character have been selected from their fellowmen and intrusted with the responsible duty of administering the law, it is fitting and proper that the places where they are to perform their high functions should be set apart, and by appropriate services dedicated to the purposes to which they are devoted.

Hence it is that today, we, citizens of this Commonwealth, loving her institutions and pledging anew our fealty to her laws, have assembled in the City of Quincy, to formally dedicate this Court House.

May these walls ever witness even handed justice!

May there never be a suitor here so powerful as to be able to purchase justice, or so poor as to be denied it!

May the Justices of this court ever perform their duty with a singleness of purpose and with such fidelity to the obligations of their office as to win and deserve not only the approval of their own conscience, but also the enconiums of their fellowmen!

May the Bar of this court be ever mindful of its high privileges, and at all times be loyal not only to client and cause, but also to the Court!

May justice be so administered here that this court house in all the long years to come may in truth and fact be a temple of Justice!

To that end we do now dedicate this building.

At the close of the exercises all adjourned to the rooms on the upper floor where light refreshments were served. After this many took the opportunity to examine the building.

Among the many present aside from the speakers were Judge John F. Brown of the Superior court, Assistant District Attorney Frank Katzman, Clerk of Courts Louis A. Cook, the Police Chiefs of all the towns in the district as well as many members of the Bar of the East Norfolk District as well as Norfolk county.

His Profession.

Mr. Justice Lawrence was once passing sentence on a man, and in the course of his preliminary remarks he referred to him as "a professional burglar."

The prisoner raised loud protests from the dock.

"Here," he exclaimed, "I dunno wot you mean by callin' me a professional burglar. I've only done it once before, an' I've bin nabbed both times."

Mr. Justice Lawrence beamed upon him.

"Oh, I did not mean to say," he remarked in his most suave manner, "that you had been very successful in your profession."—London Answers.

Many of the children of the Sunday School cannot go to the picnic because their parents are not able to go, and there is no person to take care of them. Only a few of the teachers can attend. If we had a number of volunteers we could assure parents that their children could be safely looked after.

The Sunday school record ot attendance shows the following names upon the Honor Roll: Perfect attendance for Seven Consecutive Years, Ralph W. Prout.

Perfect Attendance for Four Consecutive Years: Helen Dovell.

Perfect Attendance for Three Consecutive Years: Florence Smith.

Perfect Attendance for Two Consecutive Years: Mildred Robinson, Roy Westland, Edna B. Wright.

Faithful Attendance for one year only one absence: Mary Atkinson, Alice Dickie, Rose Gabriel, Albert Rendle Stanley Ross, Russell Westland, Peter Williams and Ellis Young.

While this is the close of the regular sessions the whole School will continue to meet in the Church Sunday mornings in June at 9.30 for a short service. A record of attendance will be kept.

The Boys' club has organized a base ball team, and gave a good account of themselves in the game with the Boy Scouts. Peter Williams is captain. It is hoped that a game may be arranged with the St. Chrysostom's nine.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The usual large audience was present at the Sunday morning service to hear the message by the pastor on the subject, "We seek not yours, but you." In opening his sermon Rev. Mr. Willmott called the attention of his audience to the fact that the best things on earth are capable of being the worst There is no place on earth which is more like heaven than a good home and yet a home with evil influences in it is the worst hell on earth. A good man or woman is the noblest work of God, but a bad man or woman is the devil incarnate.

A good church is the best institution that a city can have but a bad church is the worst.

The church must be democratic, it must recognize the man and not what the man possesses. The church which is merely an avenue to social distinction ought to be eliminated. The woman who goes to church in the most hideous creation of last year's style of millinery should be shown the same sisterly affection as the woman who dresses in a thoroughly up-to-date fashion.

Our church is fortunate in having a healthy individualism. Man is directly responsible to his God and needs no mediator in the way of another man to get in touch with the Divine being. In that community where there is a good healthy Protestant church, the real estate has its highest value, the schools are at their best, the streets are in the best of condition, everything is at its best. When the people of that church go away and their places are taken by people of another type everything is bound to decline.

We do not want your money. We want you. Our church does not have the policy of erecting fine stone edifices by demanding money from our parishioners and allowing our poor to go neglected. The church is not or should not be a beggar. There are churches which are forced to turn beggars because their members set aside so much for cigar money, theatre money and automobile money that there is little left for the church. A man spends two dollars for theatre tickets on Saturday night, and puts ten cents in the collection plate Sunday morning.

We need money of course to run the church but what we need vastly more is men. The giving of money alone is not sufficient to inculcate in a man the christian principles. He must sacrifice something of himself. And men and women are doing this in the choir, Sunday school, Christian Endeavor and other agencies of the church, men and women who are tired and need rest and fresh air, are sacrificing themselves that the work of the church may go on. May God bless all such and may He give men to see that what we want is "You and not yours."

The Christian Endeavor meeting at 6.15, was led by Rupert McFarlane. The subject was "Fidelity" and a goodly number of the Endeavorers showed their fidelity to the society by their presence, and taking part.

In the evening a large audience was present to hear the excellent address by the pastor on the subject "Blessed be the Oiler." Special music was rendered by Mrs. Ada Frodsham Sholes, contralto soloist.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

The beautiful weather brought out a large attendance at the Wollaston Congregational church Sunday and the service was most interesting. The quartette rendered two anthems, and Mrs. Long gave a contralto solo. The Rev. Edward Norton preached from John 14:9 and text "Seeing God," emphasizing that God is revealed in nature and in history, and we have examples all about us of his presence. Life is hopeless without God.

At 5.00 o'clock the Christian Endeavor society held its consecration meeting and had a most helpful service on the topic "Fidelity."

On Thursday evening the annual supper and social of the Christian Endeavor society will be held in the vestry with the honorary members as special guests.

The regular weekly service will be held on Friday evening conducted by Mr. Norton. His theme will be "The children with us: our responsibility for them." This is a timely subject in view of the celebration next Sunday of Children's day when in place of the usual morning service at 10.45 the Sunday school will give a musical service entitled "Summer Comes Again."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service the minister, Rev. Carl G. Horst, preached from the text "Those things which are not shaken"—Hebrews 12, 27. He said: "The spirit of our age is truth seeking. What we want is truth, for the truth shall make us free. Never was there such effort put forth to get at the truth of things as we observe in every department of human life. We investigate and examine carefully everything that pertains to the great problems of life. We subject the great fundamentals of religion to the keenest criticism. We search the old records and make them answer at the bar of reason. We knock at the door of the churches and ask for their credentials. We no longer accept a statement simply because a creed or presbytery or pope or the Bible says so, but we ask is it true.

The result is that same of the old beliefs are relegated to a high shelf in the theological museum where other childish notions are put away and that accounts once held to be veritable history and the very cornerstone of religious faith turn out to be beautiful legends and traditions.

Criticism is always destructive of error, never of truth. Light is always the great enemy of darkness. All discovery of truth must be at the same time destructive of error. A great part of human progress consists in putting aside mistakes and erroneous notions. Among the things that are not shaken is the religious sentiment, which is part of man's nature. Out of it come all churches, ordinances, litanies, holy books and statements of faith. There was religion before there was a Bible. Before the commandments was Moses, the lawgiver. Before the fortieth chapter of Isaiah was written, Isaiah lived it. Before the parables and the Lord's prayer were given to the world, Jesus had lived them in his own daily life.

Again revelation is unshaken. It is the nature of God to communicate, to reveal himself to man. The human soul has direct access to God. "Let not Moses speak to me" says Thomas a Kempis, "or any of the prophets; but speak thou, O God, the inspirer and enlightener of all the prophets." And says Robertson "the highest revelation is not made by Christ. It comes directly from the universal mind to our mind."

Again God is unshaken. Modern science has destroyed materialism. Matthew Arnold recognizes "the stream of tendency which makes for righteousness" and Herbert Spencer, "the infinite and eternal energy from which all things proceed." The Christian knows that this infinite and eternal energy, out of which we see ever proceeding, not only order and beauty, but life and thought and goodness is none other than God, our heavenly Father, whose highest manifestation in mankind, we have in the Prince of life.

While the earth lasts and the heavens declare God's glory, while youth has its hopes and dreams and visions and old age its comfort and refuge and rest in God these things are not shaken.

The summer meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Unitarian Churches will be held with the First Parish in Sharon on Wednesday, June 5, from 10.15 till 4 o'clock.

The new choir, a mixed quartet, began its work yesterday and is a most welcome addition to our church forces. Fine musical selections will be one of the features of our services of worship.

The new quartet comprises Miss Abbie B. Penley, soprano, Mrs. R. L. Turner, alto, Charles A. Powers tenor, Louis Weston, basso, with Walter E. Rogers at the organ.

Children's Sunday will be held June 23. All who desire their children to receive the rite of baptism on that day will please communicate with the minister.

The Rollins Class of young men spent a profitable hour yesterday noon considering "The Power of Faith."

For the beautiful floral decorations of the chancel Sunday the church was indebted to Charles Luard & Co., the florists.

WOLLASTON M. E. CHURCH.

The services at the First M. E. church, Sunday were well attended. At 10.15 o'clock there was a love-feast in the vestry led by the pastor. The subject of the morning sermon by Rev. Wesley Wiggin was "Firm Foundation" based on the words "If the foundations be destroyed what can the righteous do." At the close of the sermon several were received into full membership and given the right hand of fellowship, after which Holy Communion was administered.

F. G. Bennett, the assistant superintendent had charge of the Sunday school in the absence of J. A. Sedgwick. The Union Prayer circle met at 5.45 o'clock in the ladies' parlor, led by Miss Rena M. Chamberlin. Clarence Cassidy, president of the Epworth League led the devotional meeting of the league, taking for his subject, "Abstinence, the Glory of Manhood." Storer R. Wiggin led the praise service, and Miss Marion Nevers was the pianist. The last part of the service was in charge of Miss Rena M. Chamberlin who continued her talk on church history which she began several weeks ago and which is growing in interest. She spoke on Julian, the apostate. She said in part: "At the time of Julian the people were in a state of anxiety as to what he would do. He was well educated for christian service. But he took his stand against Christians and christianity. One object of his life was the destruction of the christians. His military skill was successful in war. In scholarship he was a master. He insisted upon the soldiers attending pagan worship. He used violence against christianity. He first established schools for the spread of universal knowledge. He was trained for service in the church, but he failed to use his opportunities for good, hence he came to the inevitable end at last. If we fail to use our opportunities rightly they are taken away. His last words were, "Thou O Galilean has conquered after all." Mr. Clarence Cassidy spoke on Justinian and Storer Wiggin on Alexander Servius.

At 7 o'clock F. G. Bennett led the praise service and E. H. Marbaker of Philadelphia, spoke.

POPE PIUS 77 YEARS SUNDAY

Pontiff is in Good Health and Hopes to Live Many Years.

POPE PIUS X. GIVING HIS BLESSING.

Pope Pius X. observed his 77th birthday yesterday in the Vatican at Rome. In response to queries as to his health the venerable prelate said he was in the best health he has been in recent years and hoped to live many more years. He appeared in excellent spirits, and seemed to have shaken off his recent depression.

The troops and Vatican guards carried out an imposing demonstration. The observances were mostly of a religious character on account of the Sabbath.

APPEAL TO PUBLIC SPIRIT FOR CELEBRATION.

The Fourth of July Association has forwarded the following straightforward appeal to lodges, social organizations and individuals for moral and material aid in carrying out plans for a proper observance of the Fourth of July in a safe and sane manner:

Quincy, Mass., June 1, 1912.

Gentlemen:—

The General Committee having in charge this year's celebration of the National Holiday, the Fourth of July, desires the co-operation of all citizens and societies of the city, that this year's celebration may eclipse the most successful affairs of the past two years. This is only possible by everybody putting their shoulders to the wheels and helping along, not only by their attendance at the meetings of the committee, but by contributions of money. It needs money and a lot of it to make the wheels go round. The more money the better the celebration. Will you do your share?

It is the desire of the Committee that as many societies as possible participate in the morning parade, and your organization is most cordially invited, not only to be represented in the parade but to give your financial support. Every citizen is also requested to contribute toward the general fund. Every little helps. The more the better.

An invitation has been extended to PRESIDENT WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT to be the guest of the city on this day and it has been assured if possible he will be present. Negotiations are also under way to secure the presence in Quincy Bay of one of Uncle Sam's battleships, whose crew with band will participate in the parade. Plans are also under way for a Monster Decorated Automobile parade which will enter all wards of the city, in addition to the Antique and Horrible and Feature parade in the morning.

There will also be Base Ball games and other sports, Band Concerts, elaborate entertainments for the children and a grand display of fireworks in the evening at Merrymount Park.

Quincy has had two years of a Safe and Sane Fourth of July. It has resulted in keeping the citizens at home, reducing the fire hazard to a minimum and it is a notable fact that last year there was not an accident or an arrest for drunkenness made in the city. Is this not a record of which every citizen can well feel proud? Let this year's record be the same.

Kindly notify the committee as soon as possible if your society will take part in the morning parade and do not forget to send in your contributions early. Make checks payable to Clarence Burgin, Treasurer, (Quincy Savings Bank).

It is the intention of the Committee to make this year's celebration the most elaborate of any ever held in this city.

Yours respectfully,

EUGENE R. STONE, President.

ARTHUR W. STETSON, Secretary.

NEW UNION ON BOSTON "L"

Want Old Employes Reinstated and Wages Increased

A GENERAL STRIKE POSSIBLE

Demands of New Union Are Turned Down—Possibly a General Strike Will Ensue—Demands Will Be Presented Again Today—Company Promises to Stand by "Loyal Employes"—Four Wage Increases

Boston, June 3.—The threatened strike of the unionized employes of the Boston Elevated reached the point where the union must put the threat into execution or back down.

Rejection of the demands of the newly-formed union of Boston Elevated employes an dthe consequent possibility of a general strike on the street railway lines of Boston and suburban towns is foreshadowed in a communication issued from the general offices of the company.

The management terms the activities of the union men as "unwarranted attempts to create discord and dissatisfaction between the employes and the company," and announces its intention to support its loyal employes in their "avowed determination that no individual or organization shall come between themselves and the company."

The union men will present their demands today, and have declared that if the company does not appoint a committee to meet them they will go directly to the office of the president, General Bancroft, to present their side of the case. The company's statement indicates that it will not compromise with the union officials, in which event the men will in all probability be called out.

The chief demands of the union are for a general increase of approximately 5 cents an hour, and for the reinstatement of all men discharged since the organization of the union.

The company states that the wages of its employes have been increased four times since 1902, although no greater dividends have been declared, and that the action of the union can only result to the detriment of the employes as a body and most of all to the community which they serve.

This fact, the statement continues, is recognized by the local employes in their movement to protest against the "disturbances sought to be created by persons having no connection with the road, for the furtherance of their own selfish interests"

STATE POLICE WANTED

City of San Diego Will Ask Legislature For Special Aid

San Diego, Cal., June 3.—The city council of San Diego unanimously adopted a resolution asking Governor Johnson to call an extra session of the legislature to consider the Industrial Workers of the World situation here and to confer as to the advisability of the establishment of a state constabulary "with unquestioned police authority as broad as the state."

The announcement from Washington that a federal grand jury inquiry here had been authorized by Attorney General Wickersham elicited no comment from officials.

A demonstration by Industrial Workers of the World in the city jail and a report that forty-six members of the organization had reached San Juan Capistrano, sixty-two miles from this city, with the intention of continuing on to San Diego, to resume the campaign against the street speaking ordinance, are developments in the "free speech" campaign here.

The twenty-three Workers in the jail formed what they called a "human battleship" or battering ram. Taking off their shoes, they rushed upon the principal door which kept them from freedom and made attempts to break it down. Chief Wilson said his officers entered the room where the men were confined and stripped and searched them, finding them equipped with "billies" made from the handles of jail brooms and with small weapons constructed from steel bands which had bound plumbing pipes to the walls. The police placed the men in solitary confinement.

AEROPLANE OF PARMALEE FALLS

Aviator Takes Fatal Plunge of 400 Feet

North Yakima, Wash., June 3.—With a smile and a wave of his hand to the thousands who watched him in his aeroplane, Philip O. Parmalee took the air in the teeth of a gusty west wind here Saturday. Three minutes later his broken and lifeless body was dragged from beneath the wreckage of his biplane, in an apple orchard, in the lower end of the Moxee valley, two miles from his starting point. The exact cause of his plunge to death probably never will be known.

Parmalee was regarded by experts as "the safest" of American aviators as well as the most successful financially of those employed by the Wrights. He is said to have earned $197,000 for the Wright brothers during 1911 and he quit their employ only a few weeks ago.

Parmalee was born at St. Johns, Mich., about twenty-five years ago, and was a graduate of Ann Arbor. He was a great favorite with the army, as he took many of the officers up along the Mexican border when the troops were mobilized down there.

Seattle, June 3.—J. Clifford Turpin, aviation partner of Phil O. Parmalee, left for North Yakima as soon a he received news of Parmalee's death. Turpin was suffering from the injuries he received in Thursday's accident at The Meadows, when two persons were killed and many others were injured by his aeroplane striking the grandstand, and was in no condition to travel, but he insisted on making the trip to take charge of Parmalee's body.

"It's the way of the game," was all that he would say as he boarded the train, his face swathed in bandages.

WOMAN 77 YEARS OLD

Has Been at the Loom For Period of 57 Years

Saco, Me., June 3.—Mrs. Melissa Hodgdon of Saco is believed to be the oldest weaver of cotton goods in the world. Verging on 77 and a widow, Mrs. Hodgdon has been employed as a cotton weaver steadily since April, 1855, when she went to work in the Pepperell mill in Biddeford.

Mrs. Hodgdon at one time operated six looms, but at the age of 75 she found it too fatiguing, and now she limits herself to four. She is healthy, bright and cheerful and i able to do a good day's work, going to the mill at 7 in the morning and working steadily until 6, with an hour at noon for dinner.

FOREIGNERS FLEE COUNTRY

All Not Natives In Mortal Danger—Rebels Steal From Fellow Countrymen and Foreigners Alike—The Warning From Secretary of State Bore Good Fruit—Foreigners In Greater Peril In New Revolution

Washington, June 3.—Secretary of State Knox's warning to General Orozco that he will be held personally responsible for the safety of Americans has had one good effect. Consul Letcher reports that Orozco is permitting foreigners to leave Chihuahua for the United States. A train bearing several hundred refugees from Chihuahua arrived at Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

Consul Letcher reports also that much damage has been done to the railroad property in Chihuahua.

The American consuls at Enzenada and Saltillo report that conditions in those places are good.

The consul at Monterey says there has been no trouble at Torreon, notwithstanding the published reports of its capture.

The consul at Durango reports that Americans at Asarco and Velardena are safe and that the rebels at Loma have been routed.

The consul at Vera Cruz reports that marauders at that place are becoming more numerous and active.

El Paso, Tex., June 3.—American and other foreign residents are leaving the city Chihuahua and the rebel zone in northern Mexico as rapidly as train service and private automobiles will permit.

Several hundred refugees who came by special train from Chihuahua—the first one in three days—report that even in Chihuahua's long period of isolation during the Madero revolution foreigners in northern Mexico were in no such peril as today.

City of Mexico, June 3.—Claims for damages aggregating an enormous sum, estimated at not less than $20,000,000 gold, will be submitted to the government as a result of the depredations committed upon freign property interests by revolutionists in different parts of the colunty.

The revolutionists in the states of Chihuahua, Morelos, Guerrero and Sinaloa are living exclusively off of the country. They get their horses, saddles, feed stuffs and supplies from the ranches and towns. They get money from every available source, holding up banks, stores and individuals. Thousands hold receipts for horses, cattle, arms and ammunition, supplies and money taken by rebels. While the heaviest sufferers are the railroads, there are thousands of mining, manufacturing and other industrial concerns and individuals that have claims ranging from $1000 to $100,00 that will be presented to the government.

The rebels sieze the railroads, run the trains and collect the freight and passenger tariffs.

DR. WILEY IMPRESSED

By Offer to Head the Boston Board of Health

Washington, June 3.—At last Dr. Wiley has been offered a job to his liking and from all indications the announcement will be made today that the famous defender of the pure food faith will tarry no longer in Washington, but accept the position as chief of the Boston board of health.

The conditions will have to suit Dr. Wiley—he hasn't a thing to say in complaint of the salary and he likes the job all right, but what he insists on is that nobody but Dr. Wiley shall have any say in the conduct of Boston's public health, that the job shall be kept free from politics and that he shall be permitted to carry forward certain magazine writing contracts which are somewhat remunerative.

Through conversations and telegrams these conditions have been provided for, and while Dr. Wiley has been announced as going here, there and somewhere else ever since his resignation from the department, this time he seems to be permanently put.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COOKING CORNED BEEF.

THOSE persons who profess a great disdain for that homely dish corned beef and cabbage perhaps have never tasted it at its best.

The brisket and the rattleran are the parts most often corned. The part known as the fancy brisket makes the choicest corned beef, while the second cut of the rattleran, which contains fat and lean well mixed, is also generally liked.

Home Corning.

Fresh meat may be corned for boiling by making a brine of water and rock salt, using salt enough to float the meat. If the meat is weighted down, the vessel covered and left for three days the meat will be corned well enough for ordinary use where the meat is not to be kept very long.

For Slicing Cold.

Pressed Corned Beef.—If the beef which you have selected is very salt, soak for a half hour or an hour in cold water. Then put it into a vessel with enough cold water to cover it, skimming it when it begins to boil. It should be allowed to cook until the meat is tender. At the last the water on the beef should boil away. Let the meat stand until nearly cool, then place in a deep square pan, put a thin board over the meat and add a weight to press it down.

The Old Fashioned Way.

Boiled Corned Beef.—Rinse the beef and tie into shape or skewer together. Cover with cold water and place in a vessel on the fire where it can gradually come to a boil. Let it boil for five minutes, take off and skim and then simmer until tender, allowing a half hour to every pound of the meat. Take the beef out of the broth and put aside to keep warm while potatoes, turnips, beets or carrots are cooked in the liquid. They may be prepared separately to be served with the meat if preferred.

Corned Beef Hash.—Remove the gristle and skin from some lean corned beef. Take the beef and equal parts of hot baked potatoes. Wet them with beef stock if you have it; if not take milk. Add a flavor of onion and nutmeg. After you put it in your saucepan do not stir. Put milk or stock in the pan first with a generous piece of butter. Now turn in hash and simmer till liquid is absorbed. Brown and fold.

FEMALE SUFFRAGE

Will Be Considered By New Hampshire Constitutional Convention

Concord, N. H., June 3.—A constitutional convention to consider proposed amendments to the constitution, for adoption or rejection by the people at the November election, will meet here Wednesday.

It is expected that woman suffrage, the initiative and referendum, modification of the tax system by the abolition of the proportional requirement, various plans for the reduction of the membership of the house and for the increase of the senate and a simpler and less expensive manner of submitting future proposed amendments will be taken up at the coming meeting.

Woman suffrage is the only one of the proposed amendments that has been publicly discussed, and it is proposed to put up a hard fight to have the proposition submitted to the people at the November election. The state Woman Suffrage association and its various subordinate bodies have been active for several months, holding meetings in most of the cities and larger towns. It is reported that only forty out of 200 delegates to the constitutional convention are opposed to submitting the proposition to the people, while 135 favor it.

ONE BATTLE IS REPORTED

In Which Cuban Federals Win a Decisive Victory

MOUNTAIN GUNS EFFECTIVE

Report Gives 148 Rebels Killed—Eighteen of Them Said to Be Women—Troops Said to Have Landed at Daiquiri Bay—General Skirmishing In Disturbed Provinces Without Decisive Results

Havana, June 3.—One hundred and forty-five persons, of whom eighteen were women, are reported to have been killed by the federal troops, under General Mendieta, in an attack on the rebel headquarters at Mayola, near Palma Soriana.

The majority of the slain were negroes. The victory for the government troops is said to have been complete. The mountain guns were used with terrible effect on the rebels. Palma Soriana is on the river Cauto, near the centre of Oriente province, and about twenty miles northwest of Santiago.

There are unverified reports of other fights in the same district in which both rebels and federals suffered losses. The negroes are trying to bring in arms from other West Indian countries.

The United States gunboat Paducah, under Commander George C. Mitchell, landed a party of American marines at Daquiri Beach according to word received here from that place. The report is denied in a dispatch from Santiago, though it is said troops may land at any moment.

Washington, June 3.—A government dspatche states it is realized here that Cuba will have a difficult task to provide guards for all the foreign-owned properties in Oriente and yet retain a sufficient force of regular troops in compact organization to repel any quick attack from the rebel leader, Estenoz, because of the extraordinary mobility of the insurgent army, which enables it to break into small raiding parties and attack and pillage unprotected plantations many miles separated, within the same day, the maintenance of a largely superior government force will be necessary, and it is believed it will be several weeks before General Monteagudo can assemble an army large enough for a successful campaign.

WILL NOT OPPOSE ROOT

Roosevelt Entertains Delegates and Makes Plans For Convention

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 3.—Colonel Roosevelt's plan of action in his fight to capture the nomination at the national convention at Chicago has been definitely mapped out and became known after the colonel had a long conference with fourteen of the delegates from Illinois, and representatives of the North Carolina and Maine delegations at Sagamore Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt will go to Chicago to personally conduct his fight at the first sign of what he terms "unfair play" on the part of the national committee. Any determined effort to defeat Senator Elihu Root as temporary chairman of the convention will be abandoned as the Roosevelt forces feel that by fighting Root they may hurt their own cause and lose some delegates who feel kindly toward the senator.

The first step in the convention campaign is to be the organization of the Roosevelt forces throughout the country. It is planned to send to Chicago, a week or so in advance of the convention, an executive committee from every state in which Roosevelt delegates have been elected, or in which there is a contest. By this method it is expected to mobilize and drill an organization which will act as a unit on every matter which comes before the convention.

Two other points were agreed upon. Every effort is to be made to have the hearings before the national committee to settle contests for seats held publicly. And the Roosevelt supporters will fight to obtain what they deem an equitable distribution of tickets to the convention.

FULL COUNCIL VOTE

Is Expected on Commutation Pleas of Mrs. Cusumano and Mascioli

Boston, June 3.—Alexander McGregor, Jr., member of the executive council, in whose hand lies the fate of Mrs. Lena Cusumano, arrived home after a week's fishing at Middle Dam, Rangeley lake, Me. The councilor hurried back to acquaint himself with the facts in the Cusumano murder case and to prepare himself for the meeting of the governor's council Wednesday, when the cases of Mrs. Cusumano and Enrico Mascioio will be finally disposed of.

At last Wednesday's meeting the vote on the question of commuting Mrs. Cusumano's death sentence to one of life imprisonment stood 4 to 4, with Lieutenant Governor Luce voting against commutation. The vote was 7 to 1 against the commuting of the sentence of Mascioli.

The life of Mrs. Lena Cusumano may be saved by Enrico Mascioli, who with her, is condemned to die this week for the murder of the woman's husband.

Mascioli, although he has not been informed that the governor's council has refused his plea for commutation, seems to realize that he must die, and his principal concern now seems to be for the woman.

It is thought by those who know him, that when he knows absolutely that his case is hopeless he will come forward with a story of the crime to show that he alone was responsible for the murder.

FEDERAL POSTAL LAWS

Said to Have Been Broke By Former Populist Candidate

Macon, Ga., June 3.—A warrant for the arrest of Thomas E. Watson, once candidate for president on the Populist ticket, was issued by United States District Attorney Ackerman. The warrant charges Mr. Watson with sending obscene matter through the mails. Watson is expected to be arrested today at his home in Thomson, Ga., and taken before the federal commissioner at Augusta.

The warrant is an outcome of an article in Watson's magazine alleged to reflect on the Catholic religion.

JOY RIDE COSTLY FOR THE OWNER

Machine Is Wrecked, Robbed and Then Burned

Revere, Mass., June 3.—While speeding along the Revere Beach boulevard at an early hour this morning, the new $3800 automobile of Joseph Doherty of Kinnaird street, Cambridge, struck the curbstone and turned turtle, throwing out the chauffeur, George Hutchinson, and two young men companions.

Hutchinson received a severe cut on his head, but his companions, William Reed and Charles E. Haymen of Cambridge, escaped with slight bruises. The three men deserted the wrecked car, but were later found by the police and locked up, charged with drunkenness.

The police removed three spare tires from the machine and placed several lanterns on it to warn automobilists of its presence. The lights instead attracted thieves and the car was robbed of tools, robes and brass lanterns.

Half an hour after the police had placed lanterns on the wreck one of the officers returned and discovered the robbery. He hastened to report it to the station and when he returned he found the automobile a mass of smouldering embers, with the fire department responding to an alarm that had been sounded by someone living nearby.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ACKNOWLEDGE IT

Quincy Has to Bow to the Inevitable Scores of Endorsements Prove it.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

J. Fortin, Montello St., Brockton, Mass., says: "I was troubled for over two years by attacks of backache. If I arose from a sitting position or stood any length of time, I was caused great pain. There was a feeling of weariness present and if I did a hard day's work, I was bothered by Lameness and soreness across my bac k. I finally saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, for such complaints and I got a box and began their use according to directions. They went directly to the seat of my complaint, relieving me of severe backaches and restoring me to good health. It has given me pleasure to recommend this remedy on several occasions." (Statement given June 13, 1905.)

A SECOND STATEMENT.

On July 26, 1911, Mr. Fortin was interviewed and he said: "I willingly verily my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. You may continue to use my reference, as the relief this remedy brought me has been permanent."

SNAKE CAUSES ACCIDENT.

District Fire Chief, Louis K. Badger was thrown from his buggy Sunday when on the way to the scene of a brush fire and sustained injuries which will keep him in the house for a few days.

The whole trouble was caused by a black snake.

The chief was on his way in response to an alarm for a brush fire in the reservation.

While going at a fast clip around the one of the turns at the bottom of Pierce's hill, a big black snake wiggled its way across the road. This frightened the horse and the animal turning sharply dashed up the side of the steep hill, overturning the buggy and throwing the chief out. The horse was stoped farther along by one of the park officers.

The escape of the chief from serious injury or even death was a miraculous one, and he is receiving congratulations upon his good luck.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Mr. Marbaker has been a class leader in his church for the past twenty-two years. He based his remarks on the following scripture. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." He said in part: "Paul wants us to prove all things. The christian life is one of faith. We do not always see clearly. We have the spirit of the Master to help us. He is testing us. He is fitting us for a better life. He is preparing us to bring something better out of our lives. Prove the promises and see whether they are true. The Master wants us to look into our hearts. He wants us to have the strongest and the most valuable lives. Hold fast that which is good. Things that do not produce these results we ought to let go. Gain wisdom, and knowledge by experience. Live a life worthy of a christian. How have we been living? Have we lived up to our ideals? We should be found often in prayer. If we make a mistake let us come back. He will help us. Our richest blessings come as we go to the Bible to read it for instruction and devotion. We come nearer to God. Believe the precious promises.

Family prayer helps us to live better lives. The most important thing is life. We get the most real happiness when we live right. Not selfish happiness, but happiness that brings content. We should cut off the things that mar. Let us begin to live the christian life, if we have not already."

Miss Marion S. Nevers who graduated from the Deaconess training school last month begins her labors with the church this week as regular Deaconess. Miss Nevers served the church last year while in school and has already won a large place for herself in the hearts of the people for her consistent life and her faithful service.

BEACH CLUBS MUST BEHAVE

Or They Will Be Cleaned Out by the Police Force

TROUBLE ON CARS TO STOP

Rowdyism on the Houghs Neck line of street cars has reached a stage where drastic measures will be taken by the police and street railway officials to clear the cars of this element. The last straw of the burden that has resulted in measures being taken to relieve the cars of this element took place Saturday night on the car leaving Quincy at 10.10. Just before the car started a gang of toughs boarded the car to go to the beach to spend Sunday. Most of the seats were occupied with respectable passengers so the toughs sat down on their feet and immediately began to make a nuisance of themselves. This they did by the use of bad language and the drinking from bottles carried in the pocket. When near Post Island several passengers tried to get off but the toughs bent on mischief tried to prevent them from doing so. One passenger who is said to have been a Boston newspaper man was seized bodily and thrown to the street.

Later this passenger telephoned the police and attention of the street railway officials was also called to the condition. Chief Burrell says that he intends to clean out these club nuisances at the beach the same as was done a year go. The street railway will also co-operate and it is the intention to place special officers on all late cars and any disturbers will be promptly placed under arrest.

BARRY'S GOLDEN CHANCES LOST

Twice with Bases Full he Pounded Holes in the Air

LURID PLAY IN TWO INNINGS

The inability of catcher Blakenship to hold the delivery of pitcher Woods and some weird playing on the part of Mannix, Byron and Blakie, in the second and third innings gave Charlie Ganzell's Makaria a controllable lead over the West Quincy nine at the Water street playgrounds, Saturday afternoon and the game closed with a victory for the former by a score of 6 to 1.

Outside of those two innings it was one of the prettiest games to look at. West Quincy got its only run in the eighth inning when C. Chapman dropped a thrown ball from the out field letting a man cross the plate.

Barry wen behind the bat for the West Quincy team in the third inning. His fielding was good, but his throwing to bases is slow. He wastes too much time in a draw back and twist of the wrist just before sending the ball to head off a runner, which is no good judgment. A throw to bases must be snappy to be effective. He had two opportunities, which seldom come to a base ball player once in a life time. In the third inning with two out and the bases full he was the man on horseback, but failed to deliver the goods, striking out. The next time up in the sixth inning the same situation presented itself. Again he struck out, too eager to wait for a base on balls or good ones. Barry is a hard working conscientious player who is working all the time without any idea of individual glory, and he should be properly coached to overcome his slow throwing to bases and his eager desire to swat at anything from a streak of wind to a barn door. The Makarias contributed some lurid playing at times, but Brittingham tightened up and no damage resulted.

PIONEERS MAKING GOOD

That the Nova Scotia regions are providing a great attraction for Quincy baseball players was again evidenced Friday afternoon when George Barry, Edward Desmond, William Todd, and George McDonald left for Brownsville, N. B. to play with the semi-professional team of that town. The team is a member of a league that is composed of seven clubs.

A number of Quincy boys are playing with teams in the league and the newspaper reports from the sections in which they are located show that up to date they are all playing good ball and making good in every way.

"Patsy" Duggan is managing one of the teams and has among his Quincy players Stanley Bates, whose twirling has already proved a sensation in the game in which he has played, Moyt who covers the initial sack, Fay, who takes care of third base and Fitzgerald who alternates between catcher and right field with Murray, the former Old Colony league star and West Ganzel, son of Charles Ganzel, the former Boston National league player is covering first base for one of the teams and his fielding has been of the top notch calibre.

WORLD-FAMED AVIATORS TURN TO QUINCY AS IDEAL FLYING PLACE

Movement Towards Third Great Meet At Squantum Claiming Activity of Managers

New Arrangement of Hangars Places Machines at Close Range

Plans for the third annual Boston Aviation meet which is to be held from June 29 to July 7 at the Harvard Field, Squantum, Quincy under the direction of William A. P. Willard are being rapidly pushed forward. Already ten aviators have been signed to fly, and at least fifteen of the world's greatest aviators will enter the contests.

The field at Squantum is now being put into shape for the meet. For the past week several surveyors have been laying out the grounds which this year will be entirely different from that of the past two seasons. The ground is all staked off and a gang of several hundred workmen began Monday to lay out the field according to the plans of Manager Willard.

The getaway will be at right angles with the one used at the previous meets. This getaway will be nearly a half a mile long and 150 feet wide. It will be constructed as a gravel road and when finished will be covered with oil and other preparation to make it firm.

On one side of the getaway will be constructed a row of hangars which will accommodate at least twenty machines. These hangars will be built of wood and the backs of them will be of wire so that the spectators may have a chance to view the machines at close range. This is the first time in the east that hangars have been constructed in this manner. At meets where this plan has been worked, the people have been able to watch the mechanicians tune up the machine and to view the aviators while at work preparatory to flight.

Below the hangars on the same side of the getaway the administration house will be erected. This will be used as the headquarters for the officials of the meet. A huge grandstand and which will seat at least 10,000 people is to be started at once, a short distance from the administration building. The grandstand will be built so that every seat will be desirable to spectators.

The automobile space will be located opposite the hangars and grandstand. Room for over 5,000 cars has been provided for. These cars will line up on the getaway and the park room for the machines will be nearly perfect. A separate road for the field automobiles will be provided.

One of the chief attractions will be Lincoln Beachey, who was easily the star of last year's meet. Aviator Beachey has, since his last appearance in Boston, become one of the most daring and thrilling aviators in this country. His performance last year was the talk of the meet and since that time, he has added much to his reputation. Last August he established an altitude record at Chicago of 11,474 feet. This record was recently broken again by a foreign aviator.

The other aviators who have sent their contracts to Manager Willard are Hugh A. Robinson, William Hoff, Chas. F. Walsh, Charles Whitmer, Beckwith Havens, George W. Beatty and Frank Coffyn. During the coming week it is expected that the word will be received from as many more aviators and that the total number who will compete probably will be over 1s.

Several foreigners have signified their intention of coming to Boston to participate in the events. Negotiations are pending with two operators of the Wright biplanes and their entries are expected every day. Beside the men, plans are being formulated to have three women aviators fly at the meet. Miss Blanche Scott, Miss Matilda Moisant and Miss Harriet Quimby are the ones whom Manager Willard hopes to secure.

CITIZENS HAPPY OVER NEW STREET LAYOUTS

City Council Among Other Things Advanced the Price of Sewer Service to Make Up Shortage of $52,000

$4,000 Order for the Completion of Squantum Street Laid on Table After Debate

Nearly two hours of Monday night's session of the City Council was taken up with public hearings on the acceptance of new streets. There was a large attendance of citizens and few objections to the acceptance of any of the streets. Wollaston park had a delegation of fifty residents who came to urge acceptance of streets in that section. Besides there was considerable other business of importance. Councilman Sandberg was the only absent member.

CODDINGTON STREET.

A communication from the Mayor urging that Coddington street at its junction with Washington street be widened. Laid on the table until later and hearing ordered for July 1.

SWILL CLIAM.

A communication was received from I. W. Hayden claiming that he had been overcharged for swill. Referred to the Executive.

The Mayor appointed Richard Luomala, Paul C. Hersey and Elmer E. Pooler as constables. Confirmed.

LICENSES.

A number of applications for minor licenses were referred to the License committee and later being reported favorably upon were granted.

A petition for a relocation of car traks in Squantum street was received and a hearing ordered for June 24.

CHERRY AVENEUE.

A petition for the acceptance of Cherry avenue was referred to the Committee on Streets.

NELSON STREET.

A petition favoring the acceptance of Nelson street was referred to the Committee on Streets.

FRANKLIN STREET.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The special Committee on Financial Investigation submitted the following report relative to the method of computing sewer assessments. Their report was as follows:

The Special Committee appointed under Order No. 33 beg leave to make the following partial report.

In the course of our investigations we found that the present method of computing sewer assessments as established by the vote of the City Council, September 11, 1899, under authority of Section 8, of Chapter 279 of the Arts of 1895, is no longer adequate.

Under this act the city has authority to assess the estates benefited by the laying of the sewer through the street on which they abut to the amount of the benefit they receive. The vote provided that the city should pay one half the cost and that the remaining one-half should be assessed upon the abutting estates at the rate of twelve cents per running foot frontage, and six mills upon each square foot of area to the depth of one hundred feet. Largely on account of the increase in the cost of material and labor we find that our assessments have fallen short something over $52,000 of what they should have been. The Commissioner of Public Works at our request has investigated the subject and advises your committee that by increasing the charge per square foot of area from six mills to eight mills further shortage from this source will be prevented, and we therefore recommend that the computation be so changed.

We also found that the area upon which the six mills per square foot has been charged has in practice been limited to such area as is above the level of the sewer regardless of whether buildings erected upon such lots can be drained into the sewer. The result has been that building lots of equal area on opposite sides of the same street if the street happens to be on the slope of a hill have not paid the same assessment. Although the lot on the uphill side being entirely above the level of the sewer has been assessed for its entire area, the lot on the downhill side has been assessed only for the area above the level of the sewer, which area is often only a small fractional part of its entire area, yet in both cases buildings erected on these lots derive equal benefits from the sewer and should therefore pay an equal assessment.

We herewith submit an amendment to the vote of the council embodying the changes which we have recommended and strongly urge its adoption.

The order which accompanied the report is as follows:—

Ordered that the vote of the City Council under date of September 11, 1899 passed under authority of Section 8 Chapter 279, of Acts of 1895 establishing a method for computation of sewer assessments be amended as follows:—

By striking out from the second section thereof all after the words "according to the number of square feet of area of such estate within a depth of one hundred feet from such street or way;" and inserting in place thereof the following:—

"And if by reason of its grade or level or for any other cause a building erected upon said estate cannot be drained into such sewer no assessment in respect to any such estate shall be made, certified or notified until such incapacity is removed provided, however, that no area shall be assessed more than once and it is further."

And to amend the fourth section thereof so as to read as follows:—

Ordered that the said fixed uniform rate to be assessed upon estates is hereby established to be twelve cents upon each foot of frontage on any street or way where the sewer is constructed and eight mills upon each square foot of area within said fixed depth of one hundred feet from said street or way the same having been so found and determined by said City Council; and it is further."

MOSQUITO PEST.

The Committee on Health reported an amendment to the order for $500 to abate the mosquito pest by adding the borrowing clause. Referred to Finance Committee.

Ought to pass on the order for $250 for a culvert on Canal street, referred to Finance Committee.

Ought to pass on the orders for tar sidewalks on Newbury avenue, Willard street, Hall place and Cross street, referred to Finance Committee.

4th of July Celebration Meeting at Board of Trade Rooms

THE TIME IS TONIGHT

Large notices have been issued calling the attention of the citizens of this city to the annual Fourth of July celebration. A meeting of the association which successfully took charge of the observance the past two years is scheduled at the rooms of the Quincy Board of Trade tonight.

Mayor Stone is president of the association. It is his belief that one of the best ways a day of this nature can be observed is to have the city appropriate a sum of money which will defray the greater part of the expense, and that the citizens who are going to enjoy the good time should contribute their share for good measure.

The program for the day will include ball games, field events, band concerts, a parade with an automobile feature and a grand display of fireworks in the evening. Last year Mayor Shea secured the permission of the navy department to have an ironclad anchored off of Houghs Neck, and the U. S. S. Chester was here. In the morning parades the jackies appeared to advantage and their Commander Lieut. Abele is a Quincy born boy.

An invitation has been extended to President Taft to be the guest of the city and he has assured Mayor Stone that if it is at all possible he will be on hand to aid in the celebration of Independence Day by Quincy residents.

All the societies are urged to arouse its members to the point where they will be willing to turn out in the morning parade, and the route, which was a trifle longer last year than it should have been, will be shortened considerably.

One of the best reasons that can be advanced toward a first-class celebration is the record for fires, arrests, etc. which fact alone should commend any attempt to neutralize the celebrations of the careless.

FAILED TO OFFER RIGHT BUILDING

And Cotton Waste Co. Gave Quincy the Go-by for Sudbury

The American Cotton Waste Company which was prospecting for a manufacturing site in Quincy has located at Sudbury, Mass. Joseph Currie the local representative, stated that while this city offered opportunities for manufacturing purposes, the kind of a building necessary for the utilization of unclean cotton waste was not to be secured in this city.

Application was made to the local Board of Trade and every effort was made to induce the company to locate here. The firm manufacturers discarded waste and the shrinkage from cotton and is the only plant of its kind in the United States.

WITH THE ANCIENTS.

Edward H. Kavanaugh, the well-known granite manufacturer of South Quincy, and George H. Wilson attended the annual drumhead election and celebration of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., at Fanueil hall, yesterday and last evening.

Judge Avery presided at the session of the district court.

James F. Miller was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Harry Cook of Weymouth was arraigned charged with threatening to assault his wife, Marion Cook. Case continued on his personal recognizance until July 13.

HARRY KATZ'S LIFE SNUFFED OUT IN AN UNACCOUNTABLE MANNER

Man Struck by Electric Car Unseen by the Motorman or Policeman on Platform

Victim Leading Horse Which Must Have Shied and Sent Him to Death

Harry Katz, 32 years old, Hall Place was instantly killed when struck by an electric car on Copeland street at 11.45 last night. Motorman Thomas Brown, in charge of the car was taken to the police station and later released upon an investigation.

Katz, accompanied by his brother in law, Joseph Goldstein, was leading a horse to their home. When they reached the blacksmith shop of Alfred B. Olsen, Olsen who was in front of his place called to Goldstein. He went across the street to talk with Olsen and did not know of the accident until told, although he was but a short distance away.

At the police station he said that they had bought the horse earlier in the evening at Quincy Point and that the horse passed four cars without showing any signs of uneasiness.

It is supposed that Katz had the rope wound round his hand and when the horse saw the car so close, it is thought that he jumped in such a manner as to throw the man beneath the car.

Officer Duane who patrols that district was on the platform with Brown at the time the accident occurred. He went to a nearby house and telephoned for a doctor and the police ambulance. Brown made an effort to extricate the man from under the forward wheels, but realizing that he was probably killed, he ceased his efforts. Henry Davies, a conductor, was in the vicinity and seeing the car he ran to the scene. He jumped into the auto of the Quincy Electric Light and Power Company, and started for the car barn for the emergency kit. On the way he told starter Devaney of the accident, and Devaney telephoned for the wrecking car. Davies accompanied by the relief crew left the barn and on the way back notified Dr. Fred E. Jones When the relief crew arrived at the accident, Dr. Jones ordered the body removed from the forward truck. In order to place the jack in a position to raise the truck it was necessary to cut away a piece of the running board.

The body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms. Katz was a tailor and was employed in Boston. He also carried on a cattle business. He was married and had two children.

Goldstein acted in a very excitable manner and his cries brought all the nearby residents to the street. At the police station he regained his composure and left for his home.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Judging from the remark of a Quincy girl on Hancock street the other evening there is even a combine to boost the price of pickles. The poor girl was complaining that the cent pickle of the present day was no ways near as big as when she first went to school. Nothing was said as to how long ago that was.

The man who claims to have made millions by some hokus pokus deal is generously advertising to let in every one in on the ground floor and share his wealth. The man who really makes such amounts usually hangs on to it with both hands reaching out for more. Yet there are thousands who daily nibble at the bait held out and give their good money to help maintain a crowd of loafing fakirs.

A poll of the senate spells Lorimer's defeat. If every one who spent money on an election was thrown down as hard as Lorimer where would Roosevelt and Taft be today?

The Cunard Company is again in luck. The Carmania caught first, but was safely moored at the pier at the time, and not on the deep where destruction would have been inevtable. The Lucania settled down at the bottom of the Liverpool dock like a child in a cradle, and no one was lost. Cunard luck is a good thing.

Roosevelt has decided not to oppose Root for temporary chairman. As Root had decided to stick as if rooted to the platform, there did not appear to be much else for the Colonel to do.

June brides, well they are all too sweet and to attempt comparisons would be both odious and extremely bad taste. They all look the part and the bridegrooms, well they look happy, however long it all may last to both of them.

If a portion of the Boston Common was taken every time it was suggested for public utility there would not be enough left of it to hold an inquest over for breathing purposes by the people.

It is about time for the new summer styles in horse millinery.

The employees of the Boston elevated railroad appear divided. One group wants a union and the other does not. The company pledges itself to stand by the latter. This may promise a long drawn out and bitter labor war in Boston.

The gallant captain of the rescue ship Carpathia is having social honors showered on him by the rescued widows of the Titanic. It is about time for some enterprising sensational monger to weave a romance about this. Or perhaps the captain is already married.

It matters not how good a woman's figure may be, she never overlooks an opportunity to improve it.—Boston Post.

More power to her. Why shouldn't she? Half the beauty of anything, real or natural is the improvements which can be made upon it. Certainly nature can be improved upon in the cut of the jib of many poor mortals who have to go through life with a face and figure that should really force them to walk backwards.

A clergyman declared with much vehemence that God gave us one face and we put on another. For a long time we have been trying to fathom the origin of the remark "A two-faced person," but it is all clear now.

The taxpayers are showing a commendable desire to separate themselves from some of their spare cash and help out the city treasury.

Senator Lorimer is facing a situation which has never before confronted a member of that body He is practically told that to save himself he must resign. His election has been a fruitful topic of discussion pro and con for some months. The senate is said to have white washed him, given him a clean bill of health at one time but that was not sufficient.

The matter is to be finally adjusted shortly.

The wae of fear which has crept into the craven hearts of some of his supporters have found voice in the appeal for him to withdraw. They looked upon the primary returns in some places as a rebuke to Lorimer. Lorimer may withdraw, but he will be performing a far greater service to those who formerly supported him than to himself in doing so. Will he be magnanimous enough to save them from doing one thing or the other. If they vote against him they will be asked why this change of heart and on the other hand if they have the same courage they had before they will be painted as black as Lorimer himself. They are in the hole whichever way they vote. Will he save his former friends from the most embarrassing position in which a group of senators were ever placed. Incidentally it may not be out of the way to point out that the people, the voters themselves are to blame for money and bribery in campaigns. If the voters were not eager and willing to take it, it is a safe conclusion that the man with the roll would keep it in his pocket. In a country where all are sovereigns, very few of many boasted crowned heads can rake up money enough to be a candidate for the senate or legislature.

A COMPROMISE.

While the Governor did not get all that he actually desired or his pet public utilities bill, he obtained enough to satisfy the people that he was in earnest in his desires to protect public interests against class legislation.

The members of the legislature agreed to certain concessions and the governor did likewise and all agreed to be happy.

If the broadside which appeared in some of the Boston papers yesterday is authentic then there was good ground for the governor taking the stand which he did.

If concessions had been granted certain roads which could not in return produce results which were promised or even intend to do so, as promised then indeed Boston and the state would be in a mighty bad way.

It is somewhat amusing to have it announced that a certain paper owned by a much vaunted protector of the people's rights is the leading advocate of a hokus pokus arrangement which would have been indeed costly to Boston and Massachusetts. The loudest howler for the rights of the people usually has a joker up his sleeve which represents himself as the dear people and the dear people's interests are conveniently forgotten while this great unit is operating for personal ends. Then the public can come in later when there is nothing to gain.

THE SLAUGHTER CONTINUES.

The terrible toll of life to the fearless navigation of the air continues from day to day. The thrill of horror over one heartrending loss is hardly flicked from the senses when it is given place to another. And still the air men continue their perilous labors. They make big money but take their lives in their hands every time they make an ascent. Day by day the awful toll of life is collected. Yet there appears to be no lessening in the ranks of those who would follow on the wake of those who have gone before. As Aviator Clifford tersely put it, "It is all in the game." But it does seem as if the game might provide some means of safeguard, some system by which the danger would be lessened.

Of course it seems impossible to determine just when an accident might happen, an engine go wrong, gasoline or fuel fail to feed properly and the many other apparently slight things which are liable to happen to a flying machine will crop out. On land or only a few feet above the earth they could be easily remedied without hazard. But hundreds of feet above the earth it is different. There is no escape. Perhaps in time there may be regulation which will prohibit top flying until the machine has reached a higher state of perfection or possibly a parachute may be carried by operators. But it will be some time before such regulators can be adopted and even then it is a question whether they would be feasible or not.

Camembert Cheese.

Camembert is the name of a commune, a few houses about a Camembert church in the prefecture Vimoutier and the department of Orne. The cheese got its name from the fact that it originated near there, but there isn't a cheese factory nearer than three miles away now, and not enough people live in Camembert to run one of any size. Caen, the principal Camembert market, is in Calvados. The cheese is carted to the shore and carried across the mouth of the Seine to Haver in boats. It is made, however, on the northeastern side of the Seine and from there comes to Haver direct. The cheese is shipped unripe even to home markets near at hand in French cities. It is seldom over four weeks old when it leaves the factory and often only two or three.--Argonaut.

—If it is possible for the State to sue and collect from collectors of taxes the back taxes they have been unable to gather, it looks as though there was one office in each city for which there will be a little rivalry by candidates in the future. That there are some people who are willing to cheat the tax collector has long been notorious, and a certain percentage of uncollectable poll taxes, for example, has always been figured as a necessary loss every year. People migrate and say nothing, or manage to keep away from the constables, and pursuit of some of them is practically vain. A tax collector who could be sued and held responsible for the dishonesty or inability of the other fellow would stand a fine chance of having his last cent wiped out if the court sustained the position taken by the State tax commissioner. The State commissioner proposes to punish heavily not the liar and practical thief who fails to pay, but the man whom he should pay, and who in some instances is absolutely unable to collect. The thing looks queer.—Brockton Enterprise.

SUDDEN DEATH

The many friends of Mrs. Ellen M. French will be sorry to learn of her death caused by heart failure, which occurred in Stoughton, Saturday, June 1. She had lived much of the time in Quincy for several years past and was associated with Bethany church, and greaty interested in its work. Even when away she kept in touch with all its doings. She was in her eighty-first year and showed remarkable interest in the affairs of the day. All loved her who knew her. She had the sympathy of all in the loss of her older son who died five weeks ago, and with whom she made her home part of the time in Auburn, Mass. She leaves one son who lives in New Haven, Conn.

GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT.

The first annual gentlemen's night of the Braintree Catholic Women's Club was held in Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree, Monday evening. The affair was very enjoyable from start to finish, there were no dull moments, and the committee in charge deserve great credit.

The hall was attractive with its decorations of flowers and flags, and made a fitting setting for the beautiful gowns of the ladies. There was a fine program of entertainment consisting of some very well rendered piano solos by Miss Eva Leary, excellent vocal solos by Eugene McCarthy and Joseph T. Shay and some most enjoyable readings given by Miss Evelyn Cannon.

After the entertainment a most delightful and appetizing buffet lunch was served by Burleigh & Martin, Boston caterers. This part of the program was taken part in by all and it is almost needless to say was a very popular feature.

After the luncheon, dancing followed until twelve o'clock, music being furnished by Cuff's orchestra There was a very large attendance and everybody seemed to fully enjoy the evening. Among the invited guests were Rev. Frs. Matthew F. McDonnell and Andrew J. Fitzgerald of the St. Francis church and the Misses Mary Colligan and Elizabeth Monaghan, respectively, the president and the secretary of the Quincy Catholic Women's club.

The committee of arrangements were:—

Mrs. Edward V. Heffernan, Mrs. James Fryer, Mrs. John J. Flaherty, Mrs. J. Edwin Dee, Mrs. Albert Bousquet and Mrs. W. H. J. Fitzgerald.

INTERVENTION VERY POSSIBLE

As Foreign Powers May Request the Same

CUBAN MARAUDERS ACTIVE

Foreign Owners of Plantations Held For Money Contributions—Rebels Threaten to Burn and Destroy—Repeated Complaints to State Department of Cuban Inability—Small Town of Shanties Burned

Washington, June 4.—The "firebug" phase of the negro revolution in eastern Cuba furnished the most disquieting feature for state department officials here, who fear that the continued demands of marauders on foreign owners of plantations for money with which to finance the revolt will bring protests to the United States from foreign powers.

The proclamation of Eugene Lacoste, a rebel leader in the northern part of Guantanamo, who has set himself up as governor of a small section known as Tartaros, appears to be the most serious thing about the mvement. Lacoste calls on planters and proprietors in his district to contribute $6000 under threat of having the torch applied to their property.

It is believed here that the United States cannot much longer refrain from sending marines into Cuban territtory in the vicinity of Guantanamo to protect foreign mines and plantations. The owners of these properties have made repeated complaints to the state department that the Cuban government is unable to furnish them adequate protection.

The burning of the town of Lamaya on a branch line of the Cuban railroad, thirty miles from Santiago, is not believed here to be important or to indicate that the forces of General Estenoz, which did the burning, are making any considerable gains. The town was composed of only seventy shanties. The report that Estenoz had 800 men when he made his sally into the place is thought to be exaggerated.

Santiago, June 4.—Many refugees from La Maya, which was seized by the rebels, are arriving here. They report that upwards of 600 negroes entered the town shouting "Death to the whites!" They pillaged and then burned the stores.

American naval officers at the Guantanamo station visited La Maya after the rebels had withdrawn and made photographs of the scenes of destruction. The situation appears increasingly grave and much alarm is felt in this city.

Members of the chamber of commerce are considering a proposition to call a meeting at which a request for American intervention would be made. Looting and burning in the vicinity of Santiago continues.

LORIMER WILL NOT RESIGN

Lodge Is Listed as Against Illinois Senator and Crane In Favor

New York, June 4.—Senator Lorimer, according to the most trustworthy polls that have been made of the senate, will be ousted from his seat on the second vote on the question of his eligibility by a majority of from 14 to 17. The latest canvass shows 54 votes against Lorimer, 37 in his favor and 3 doubtful. A poll made by Vice President Sherman before he went to Chicago to urge the senator to resign gave Lorimer 39 votes as a maximum. Two of these votes have changed within a few days, leaving the senator from Illinois 37. The following is the result of the poll against Lorimer among the New England senators

The progressive Republicans to a man are against Lorimer. The regulars who were opposed to him last year have had their convictions strengthened by additional evidence obtained by the Dillingham investigating committee. The regulars who are counted in favor of Lorimer are anxious that he shall resign. They feel it is ungrateful of him to put them in a position where they will have to defend themselves against the judgment of the committee.

Senator Lorimer is in Washington today, and says emphatically that he has absolutely no intention of resigning his seat, but will fight for it to the last minute before the roll call.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

HALL PLACE M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. C. E. Davis, D. D. occupied the pulpit of the Hall Place M. E. Church Sunday morning and gave a splendid address, full of cheer and optimism.

Dr. Davis presented the cause of the Preachers' Aid Society in a most gratifying manner. He took for his text, Romans 10-15. "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

Dr. Davis especially urged the young men present to enter the ministry and said that though there were many hardships in it, yet any boy who has the true Anglo-Saxon grit in him will not stop because of the hardships, and that there is nothing which gives more satisfaction than the life spent in the service of the Master.

The Sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered, the pastor being assisted by Dr. C. E. Davis. The choir rendered "Lead Kindly Light."

Sunday School met at 12 and Dr. Davis addressed the School. Junior League was held at 3 .

At 6.15 o'clock, Mr. Leon M. Magee of Malden led the Epworth League service and gave a most interesting and helpful talk on "The Window of the Soul."

Mr. Magee spoke of the face as being the window of the soul and the expression of the face is but the reflection of what the soul is. When there is love or hate in the soul they are shown in the expression of the face, the God-like person reveals their God-liness in the light of the countenance and said how true it is that "God gives us one face and we make for ourselves another."

At the evening service the newly elected officers were installed by the pastor, who said in his remarks that, as in a ship the main responsibility rests with the captain, so the main responsibility of the Epworth league rested with the president. He referred to the faithfulness of the president in his duties of a secular nature and of his promotion, thereby to the higher position in the government service and that the same requisites which were so essential in his other work were necessary in his league work. He also spoke of the work of the other years. The officers installed were:—

President—J. M. Francis.

First Vice President—A. W. Nichols.

Second Vice President—J. L. Martin

Third Vice President—M. E. Hodgkinson.

Fourth Vice President—Helen Martin.

Secretary—Julius Fuller.

Treasurer—Camille Fuller.

This is the fifth time that Mr. Francis has been installed as president of Kelly Chapter.

At the close of the installation services Leon M. Magee gave a stirring address on "What a League ought to do and ought not to do." It was a most helpful address full of good suggestions and teeming with the possibilities and opportunities for Epworthians. Mr. Magee was able to talk straight from the shoulder as he is an ardent Epworthian himself, is president of his home chapter at Malden Centre, is president of the Medford circuit of Epworth Leagues and also president of the Lynn district, comprising 64 Leagues, and his wide experience in league work and methods enables him to understand its different phases and problems.

A quartette, composed for the occasion of Miss Helen Martin, A. W. Nichols, J. L. Martin and Camille Fuller rendered special selections.

The June meeting of the Epworth league will be held in the vestry this Tuesday evening at 7.45 o'clock. The male members of the league will have charge of the social hour and will present "The Ladies' Sewing Circle."

On Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid Society will meet in the vestry at 7.45 o'clock.

Prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Next Sunday will be observed as Children's Day. The pastor will preach in accordance with the day's observance at the morning service and at 7 P. M. the Sunday School will give a concert.

One Way to Look at It.

WORKING IN THE DARK CONTINENT

Miss Carlson African Missionary Resting in Quincy

GREAT WORK AMONG BLACKS

Miss Christine Carlson, who has been in South Africa seven years doing missionary work, is enjoying a vacation and is the guest of friends in this city. Miss Carlson was sent as missionary by the Swedish Baptist church, which supports her in the work and takes an active interest in it. She is very enthusiastic, and it is a pleasure to converse with her and listen to her graphic account of the good being accomplished by her and her co-workers among those barbarous people. The evidence of the uplift of the native by means of christian schools and churches is simply amazing.

Miss Carlson has some fine views of various places in Africa and also some beautiful bead work made by the native women, which she will gladly show to callers. She expects to return to her work in Africa some time in December.

BROKEN ANKLE FROM FOOLING

Trumbull and Mates Skylarked with Bad Results

WHILE KILLING TIME

While fooling with his fellow employees, Almon F. Trumbull, Bicknell street, Germantown, broke his ankle at the gates of the Fore River last evening. He was treated by Dr. Blanchard and later removed to his home.

Trumbull, who is a motorman employed by the Bay State Street Railway, was in charge of one of the extra cars which carry the workmen of the Fore River from the yard. Arriving a little early he and the other employee commenced running and jumping. Another motorman took him by the shoulder and while they grappled, Trumbull's ankle became twisted and snapped.

GENTLE WORDS.

The opening rose in summer time
Is beautiful to me,
And glorious the many stars
That glimmer on the sea;
But gentle words and loving hearts;
And hands to clasp my own,
Are better than the brightest flowers,
Or stars that ever shone.

The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew, the drooping flower,
And eyes grow bright that watch the light
Of Autumn's opening hour—
But words that breathe of tenderness,
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the summer time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart;
But oh! if those who cluster round
The altar and the hearth,
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth.

CURIOSITIES OF PAIN.

A Cramp In the Toe May Indicate a Disordered Stomach.

Pain sometimes behaves in a curious fashion. There was a soldier in London after the Boer war who complained of excruciating neuralgic pains in his right foot.

This very much amused his friends, for he had lost his right leg, and both leg and foot were long buried near Ladysmith.

The explanation was that the pain happened to be in the trunks of those nerves which had sent branches to the foot. Sometimes a patient comes to a doctor complaining of pain in the knee, and he is greatly surprised when the doctor tells him that the site of the affection is not the knee, but the hip. We are all familiar with the pain under the shoulder blade which comes from an afflicted liver.

The stomach, too, can produce pain in many parts of the body. A disordered stomach will give us pain as far away as the head, and when one gets a cramp in his toe it is often due to acidity of the stomach. Swallow a pinch of soda and the cramp will disappear.

An aching tooth will produce neuralgic pains in the face, and very often a violent pain at the back of the head is due to the faraway kidneys, which themselves may suffer no pain at the time.

THE ART OF FELTING.

It Was Developed Long Before the Weaver Was First Known.

Felt is a fabric formed without weaving by taking advantage of the tendency of hair and wool to interlace and cling to each other. Antiquarians state that the art of felting was developed long before the weaver was first known. Felting antedates the Christian era by many centuries.

Authorities state that the felting quality of hair or wool results from the natural structure of the material. The hair of most animals is noticed to be more or less notched or jagged on its surface. This is the more apparent when an examination of the material is made by the aid of a microscope. In some animals there appears to be a set of barbs on the hair, and these barbs are so placed that the tip of each points to the end of the hair.

It follows that when a number of hairs are pressed together those which lie in the opposite direction to each other will interlock with the barbs of the hair surface and resist an effort to tear them asunder. When the hair has a natural tendency to curl the interlacing process which is called felting is more easily accomplished.

Although the felting property is possessed by wool in a special degree, other animals have it in their covering. This is true of the goat, ox, hare, rabbit and beaver.—New York Sun.

Early Manuscripts.

The type of letters in early manuscript was the same as that of those used on the earlier metal plates and wax tablets. All letters were capitals. Minuscule, or small lettering, as opposed to the majuscule, was invented in the seventh century. Before its invention there was no spacing between the words. There was no punctuation unless possibly some mark between sentences. When cursive writing came into general use, about the beginning of the tenth century, the art was practiced by only a few highly trained scribes. This continued all through the middle ages. The scribes were artists, and they carried their art to a high degree of perfection. Many of the manuscripts of that period are very beautiful specimens of handiwork and as perfect as print.

And He Lasted Sixty Years.

Roger Crab, the hermit and astrologer, almost solved the problem of how to live without eating. About 1641 he began to restrict himself to a vegetarian diet, avoiding even butter and cheese. From roots he got to a vegetarian diet of broth, thickened with bran, and pudding made of bran and turnip leaves chopped together, and he finally resorted to dock leaves and cress. He drank nothing but water and lived for nearly forty years on 3 farthings a week. He died in London

ADE AND THE GOVERNORSHIP.

Indiana Author, "Mentioned," Takes to His Storm Cellar.

George Ade, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor of Indiana, thus commented on the suggestion:

"I have no wish to be governor of my beloved state. I have even less of a wish to be a candidate for goverhor. At the same time I have no earthly objection to being mentioned for the governorship.

"During the present rainy spell, which has delayed planting of corn, we sit around and mention our friends for the governorship. It is our principal indoor sport. Everybody's doin' it—doin' it—doin' it. Sometimes a man with a particularly keen insight into the possibilities of the autumn mentions an enemy.

"The suggestion that I might under certain unforeseen conditions become a candidate has brought mirth and laughter into many homes lately saddened by the internal dissensions of our party. It has caused no inconvenience to friends and has not alarmed others. It will permit the biographer to say in my obituary notice, 'In 1912 he was mentioned for the governorship.' Therefore it is a good thing.

"After all I would rather be mentioned for the governorship than be elected governor and then keep on being mentioned. With this kind explanation I shall retire to the storm cellar."

BIENNIAL REUNION.

The fourth biennial reunion of the former pupils of Thayer academy was held at the academy last Saturday with an attendance of about seventy. The buildings were open at three o'clock in the afternoon and the time passed very pleasantly in the renewing of old friendships and the exchange of reminiscences.. At six o'clock there was an informal reception followed by 6.30 by a banquet which was fully enjoyed by all.

At 7.30 o'clock there was music followed by addresses by E. Lincoln Wood of the class of 1880, William W. Gallagher of the class of 1899 and Hon. John D. Long, one of the trustees.

The music was furnished by John Herman Loud and Roscoe Ricker both former pupils and was a very pleasant feature of the day.

At this time the first award of the Sewall scholarship was made to Miss Florence Helen Perry of Union street, South Braintree. The scholarship was named for Prof. J. B. Sewall, head master of the academy for the first nineteen years. Mr H. R. Drinkwater of the class of '92 was to have acted as toastmaster but because of the death of his sister, the duty devolved upon Everett S. Litchfield, president of the Thayer Pupils' Association. The following members of the association were elected to serve as officers for the next two years:—

President—Merton L. Emerson.

Vice President—Mrs. George H. Hanblett.

Secretary—Otis B. Oakman.

Treasurer—William W. Gallagher.

Executive Committee—E. Lincoln Wood of Providence, George S. Sampson of Braintree and Miss Helen B. Josselyn of Wollaston.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Monday afternoon about 3.30 o'clock Generoso Genorgious, 34 years old, of Granite street, Braintree, was drowned in the stream just below the dam of the Monatiuot Rubber Works off Hancock street, South Braintree. The man was employed by E. L. Sampson of Plymouth, the contractor in charge of the additions to the works, and while wheeling sand over a temporary bridge lost his footing and fell in. The water at this point is abuot fifteen feet deep and he never once arose to the surface. The water was drawn off and the body was found at 4.45 o'clock by Frank E. Perkins, superintendent of the works and G. A. Scott an employee The body was viewed by Medical examiner J. C Frazier of Weymouth who pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

A COMPROMISE IS DESIRED

Railroad Committee Agree to Part of Governor's Plans

GRAND TRUNK BILL PASSED

Citizens and Legislators Gather In Office of the Governor—Wants Legislation Passed Before He Quits Office—Would Like to Prorogue In Time For Chicago Convention—Possible Adjournment Saturday

Boston, June 4.—"I'm with you on this proposition. I've been asked to veto it. But I'm with you on it. But I want you to promise to stand behind my plan to increase the membership of the railroad commission to five, a north and south tunnel making a physical connection between the New Haven and the Boston and Maine railroads and increased powers for the enlarged railroad commission. I'm not going to be here next year myself and so I want the railroad legislation to go through before I get out."

Governor Foss made these statements to a group of senators and representatives and business and professional men in his office.

Never has the governor spoken with such vigor. He grew red in the face and smote the palm of his left hand with the clenched fist of his right as he talked.

"I want you to promise to put my plan through. I want you to help do it. I want you to write today to your senator and representative to pass it. I demand that you pass my plan in the interest of the public.

"I want this legislature to stay here until it does it. I am willing you should prorogue in time to go to the Chicago convention, but I want you to pass the legislation which I have outlined before you start."

The governor was several times applauded and there was vigorous applause when he concluded.

Governor Foss has signed the optometry bill, which he was at first disposed to veto.

Later he signed the metropolitan park million-dollar bill and gave the pen to Senator Charles H. Brown of Medford. The members said on coming out that there was no trade, but that the governor was very earnest about his railroad commissioners bill, and quite a number of the members present at the interview expressed the opinion that as this is not a "public utilities" proposition such legislation regarding the railroad commission ought to be passed.

A compromise offer to meet the demands of Governor Foss was decided upon late yesterday afternoon at a conference of members of the committee on railroads.

The senate leaders agree to the terms of the Foss bill with the exception of giving the governor the power to appoint two additional members of the public transportation commission.

Secondly, they do not favor placing the powers and duties of the highway commission with respect to the supervision of telephone and telegraph companies in the hands of the railroad commission, hereafter to be known as the public transportation commission.

They approve of the governor's plan to give the railroad commission with its name changed the additional powers to fix rates and enforce decrees. They approve of the plan to build a tunnel and to electrify railroads within the metropolitan district.

When the senate adjourned last night after passing the Grand Trunk bill with only perfecting amendments and the conference committee broke up it looked as if there might be so substantial an agreement as would lead to the prorogation of the legislature by next Saturday night.

—For the first time in four years all the Metropolitan water reservoirs, including the Wachusett basin, are full to overflowing. We have 81,000,000,000 gallons on hand and a lot is going to waste every day. Should there be no rain for two years the supply is sufficient for all ordinary needs of the Metropolitan district.—Medford Mercury.

OROZCO IS DESPERATE

Western Mexico Residents Have Risen Against Rebel Leader

Chihuahua, Mex., June 4.—Devold of money and ammunition, the Mexican rebels in northern Mexico are confronted with the most critical situation for them since the revolution began. If the rebel chiefs can delay the expected battle at Bachimba they may be able to concentrate enough strength to deal a formidable blow to the government. Failing, however, to get money and arms, the liberal chiefs fear disaffection among the men and disorganization. The money situation is by far the most serious, and foreign residents have fled, taking large sums with them. Only about thirty Americans remain here and hardly any women or children.

The rebels have resorted to desperate means to obtain money, and this, more than the fear of an expected attack from Generals Villa and Rabago, has caused the exodus from here. The rebels took $5000 worth of clothing from a dry goods store here. From another store $25,000 worth of supplies were taken. Saloons and gambling houses have been closed, as in the last two days more than 4000 rebel troops have been in Chihuahua receiving their pay.

The people of the border of western Chihuahua and eastern Sonora have risen against Orozco. The people of Morris have taken Occampo from the rebels, killing five and obtaining considerable arms and ammunition. Orozco formerly lived in that mountain district.

Out of a normal foreign population of at least 2000, this city contains exactly 106 foreign residents today. Of the 1000 Americans who ordinarily live here, only thirty-five men and twelve women remain. An official census shows that fear of an attack on the rebel city by the advancing federals has practically depopulated the town. Thirty thousand people inhabit Chihuahua in time of peace, but today less than 20,000 are here and the exodus is daily growing larger. Besides the Americans there are twenty-six British subjects and thirty-three Germans.

VICTOR BERGER OPPOSES JUDGE

Seeks to Have Set Aside California Decision

Washington, June 4.—Representative Victor Berger, Socialist member of congress, announced that he will today take up with the department of justice the recent decision of Judge Hanford of Seattle, which deprived John Olsen of his citizenship on the ground that he is a Socialist. Mr. Berger is acting under the instructions of the Socialist party, which held its annual convention in Indianapolis two weeks ago, and which passed a resolution condemning Judge Hanford's action.

Representative Berger means to ask the attorney general's office if there is not some legal way of recalling the decision of a judge who, it is alleged, has established a precedent which, according to Berger, might be used to deprive the lone Socialist member of congress of his constitutional rights. "If Olson can be deprived of his citizenship on the ground that he wants to change the constitution of the United States," said Berger, "then Carl Shurz, for example, and the thousands of members who fought to change the constitution so as to prohibit chattel slavery, could be deprived of their citizenship. And so could I."

SHAW ON TRIAL

Shoe Manufacturer Arraigned With Mrs. Stuart

Boston, June 4.—The trial of Arthur W. Shaw of Freeport, Me., who, it is alleged, absconded to Los Angeles, Cal., with $19,000, and the trial of Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart, who lives in the Back Bay, as an alleged accessory, began yesterday before Judge Crosby in the superior criminal court. The jury had been impaneled last Friday.

Shaw is charged with the larceny of $19,000 from the A. W. Shaw Shoe company and the Cumberland County Shoe company of Freeport, Me. Mrs. Stuart is charged with receiving the alleged stolen money and as being an accessory before and after the alleged larceny.

Shaw has returned to the corporation every dollar that it is claimed he took without right. So also, Mrs. Stuart, who is charged with being an accessory and with having received some of the property alleged to have been wrongfully taken by Shaw, has turned over to the receiver all property, with the exception of one bond, which could possibly be claimed was the lawful property of the shoe company. So the testimony showed.

Largest Flat Building

Boston, June 4.—Governor Foss is to erect in the Back Bay the largest apartment house in New England. As the governor has outlined his plans to his architect he is to construct a building containing 1000 apartments, a theatre, a garage and a restaurant.

PAPER BAG COOKERY

COOKING in paper bags is no longer a fad. It has become an everyday method of preparing food in the up to date kitchen—that is, for some part of the day's menu. The theory is so simple that it instantly appeals to the busy housewife as an economical labor saving device which has revolutionized the modern cuisine.

But the cooking of food in paper bags is not an altogether new process. The present idea grew out of the old familiar method of cooking en papillote (in paper). The difference between the old method and the latest development of cooking in bags is that most of the old dishes were prepared and sometimes half cooked before they were put in the paper and not entirely cooked, as they now are, in the bags. By this old process a certain flavor was attained by the chef rather than a labor saving device established.

Reduce the Meat Bill.

The advantages of the new bag cookery are many, and not the least of them is the reduction of the meat bill 10 per cent. Three pounds of roast, for instance, will come out of the bag weighing exactly three pounds, as there will be no shrinkage of the meat. It is possible, too, to use less expensive cuts of meat with appetizing results, and poultry away beyond the "spring chicken" stage comes out of the bag tender and delicious.

This bag cookery also reduces the gas or electric bill, as less heat is required for the process. Food, too, is greatly improved in flavor, all the food values, all the natural juices and savoriness being retained.

The housewife who loathes to do battle three times a day with greasy pots and pans will welcome the new cookery because such utensils are eliminated. In their place she uses fresh germproof paper cookery bags which she throws away after using.

Another advantage of paper bag cookery is to be found in the doing away with all cooking odors in the house, and the concentrated essence of a century of dinners will not pervade the home where the "bag method" is installed.

A question asked by persons not familiar with the new cookery is, "Can all kinds of cooking be done in the bags?" It is possible to bake, roast, boil and stew in them, but soups cannot be cooked in bags, as the expansion caused by the evaporation bursts the paper.

Simple Outfit Needed.

The outfit needed for paper bag cooking is extremely simple, consisting merely of a number of especially prepared bags of different sizes, which are sold in all shops boasting a household department and at nominal prices.

First.—It is absolutely necessary to select a bag amply large for the food to be prepared.

Second.—Before using the bag moisten it slightly with water to make it pliable and to avoid breaking.

Third.—Grease the bag inside with butter or olive oil, using a brush or cloth.

Fourth.—Lay the bag flat on the table, lift the upper edge of the mouth and carefully insert the food.

Fifth.—Fold the mouth of the bag two or three times, folding in the corners to insure hermetical sealing, and fasten with three or four clips such as are used in business offices, or even pins.

Sixth.—Place the filled sealed bag on the wire or perforated shelf of the oven, seam side up, being careful not to place the bag too near the flames. Should the bag become very brown shortly after being placed in the oven reduce heat.

Seventh.—When the food is done draw the shelf or grid from the oven, gently slip a plate under the bag and so remove it.

Eighth.—To save the juices cut a hole in the bottom of the bag and hold a dish under the opening.

Ninth.—Slit the bag with a sharp knife, remove it carefully from the food and throw it away.

How to Know When Food Is Cooked.—Follow the time table given on the bags. If heat declines or for any reason it is necessary to learn the progress of the cooking a long needle may be used to test the food. To insure perfect browning make a few holes in the top of the bag five or ten minutes before the cooking is completed.

Fine For the Novice.

Half a dozen different things requiring different temperatures under old methods can be cooked at the same time and by the same heat.

The bag cookery is fine for the novice, as long teaching and experience in general cooking are not necessary. All that is required is to simply follow directions furnished with the bags.

Hostesses noted for their clever entertaining are giving this spring "paper bag dinners," and when the toothsome viands are brought upon the table concealed in queer looking brown sacks exclamations of delight escape the guests when the novel puffed pouches are slit open and give forth volumes of piquant odors.

Again, if the busy housewife be delayed and reaches home only in time to prepare a "hurry up" dinner for her family the paper bag readily lends itself to hasty cooking. Fish, roasts and most vegetables can be quickly prepared and made ready to serve in a surprisingly short period.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WITH GRAHAM FLOUR.

GOOD graham flour is not easy to get. What is often sold under this name is really an inferior quality of flour that is indigestible and unpalatable. Graham flour is wheat ground, but not passed through the screen through which flour is ordinarily run after it has been crushed and the bran removed.

For Weak Stomachs.

Graham Wafers.—These are excellent for those who are troubled with indigestion. Take a pint of graham flour, a pint of white flour, a third of a cup each of butter and sugar, a saltspoonful of salt and sweet milk enough to mix to a paste. Roll thin and cut out. Bake quickly.

Fruit In This.

Graham Mush.—Take a pint of graham flour, a quart and a half of boiling water and a teaspoonful of salt. Stir the flour into the water and let it boil for twenty minutes. Keep it free from lumps.

Turn out in a dish that has been dipped into cold water to prevent the mush from sticking. Cut into slices and serve with sugar and cream. A dozen or more stoned and chopped dates or a few raisins may be stirred into the mush just before it is to be taken off the fire.

When cold this mush may be dipped in beaten egg and cracker crumbs and fried in hot lard.

Nice Hot Breads.

Graham Biscuit.—Stir together one and one-third cups of wheat flour, two-thirds of a cup of graham flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Sift two or three times. Work two tablespoons of butter into this; add three-fourths cup of milk. Toss on a floured board, pat and roll to one-half an inch in thickness. Cut out and bake in a hot oven from twelve to fifteen minutes.

Graham Gems.—Take a cup and a half of graham flour, three eggs, a pint of warm milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter and a teaspoonful of sugar. Whip the eggs, without having first beaten them, into the warm milk. Add the butter and sugar. Gradually stir in the graham flour and beat hard for several minutes. Turn into heated gem pans and bake in a very hot oven. Serve immediately.

A Tasty Dessert.

Graham Pudding.—Take two cupfuls of graham flour, a cupful of breadcrumbs, a cupful of stoned raisins, a cupful of sour milk, a half cupful of molasses, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a small teaspoonful of soda in a little milk and a little salt. Stir these together, steam three hours and let stand in a hot oven to dry off. Serve with lemon sauce.

FISH, FLESH AND FOWL.

THESE recipes will be useful when nourishing foods that may be easily prepared are needed. In warm weather the demand is for food that may be cooked quickly to the elimination of long hours of work over the hot stove.

Fish Timbales.

Codfish Timbales.—Remove the bones from cold cooked codfish and shred it in fine pieces. Mix with stale breadcrumbs, add butter, cayenne and salt, if needed, and a little onion juice and fresh chopped parsley. Put into timbale dishes, sprinkle tops with bits of butter and some dry crumbs and bake a pale brown.

A Time Saver.

Quick Roast.—Beef may be roasted more quickly if it is first put into boiling water and boiled until almost done. Do not use any more water than is absolutely necessary. The water should be salted toward the last. Take the beef from the pot and place it in a pan in which is melted butter or beef drippings. Brown the meat, turning it that all sides may be roasted.

When done place on a hot platter and thicken the gravy in the pan with a little flour and add some of the broth in which the beef was boiled. A saving of half the time taken for roasting may be accomplished in this way.

A Rich Soup.

Bisque of Chicken.—Prepare the chicken as if for stewing. Cut up the fowl and put into a stewpan with a quart of cold water for each pound of meat. Mince an onion and three or four stalks of celery into the stewpan; then place a cover over it and let it cook slowly until the meat can be separated from the bones.

Take off the fire and when cool skim, take out the bones and chop fine. Place the soup back on the fire to boil. Into a small saucepan pour a cupful of milk and a pinch of soda. Place these on the fire and thicken with a tablespoonful of butter rubbed into a tablespoonful of flour. Season with a teaspoonful of minced parsley.

Stir the chopped chicken into the now boiling soup and then add the thickening. Boil for about a minute and it is ready to serve.

QUESTION NOW UP TO UNION

Boston "L" Men Have Had Demands Refused

Boston, June 4.—Gen. William A. Bancroft, president of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, declined to meet a committee of his recently organized employees who sent him a letter requesting a conference. He declined to met the committee because it was "inspired by or included persons not in the employ of the company."

The union leaders say that they realize that the situation is getting more and more strained. Some predict that a strike may follow rejection of the men's demands. Those who discuss the situation say, however, that it will be found impossible to call a strike immediately, since a secret vote would have to be taken and that three weeks would elapse before the result of the entire poll was known.

The union officials say that if a strike is called traffic will be tied up to such an extent that Bostonians will have to walk or use the steam trains, as more than half of the motormen and conductors of the Elevated are members of the union, and a great many more are said to be in sympathy with them.

At a meeting of the Boston C. L. U., with delegates present from 300 trade unions of Boston, it was voted to support the car men in every way possible.

The First Lesson of an Arab Boy.

The very first lesson which an Arab baby learns when he begins to talk is to keep facts to himself. It does not sound very friendly put in that way, but it saves a deal of trouble. Foreigners do not understand Arabs. They ask them pointed questions and receive peculiar answers. They construe the answers to please themselves and come away to tell the world that the Arabs are a nation of liars. They are not a nation of liars. Perhaps if they should tell the foreigners to mind their own affairs and let them and theirs alone the foreigners would understand them better.—Exchange.

Strength.

"Some scientist has declared that there is as much strength in three eggs as there is in a pound of beefsteak," said the observer.

"Well," replied the actor, "I met an egg once that would have eliminated the other two eggs from that proposition."—Exchange.

BLOODSHED AT CLINTON, MASS.

Pitched Battle Between Police and Strikers

WOMEN STRIKERS ARE SHOT

Police Forced to Use Revolvers Effectively—Strikers Began Assault With Sticks and Stones—Three Injured Taken to the Hospital—Catholic Cemetery Was Used as a Battleground—Strikers Are Foreigners

Clinton, Mass., June 4.—Seven persons, including several women, were wounded during a battle between the police an da band of striking Lancaster mill weavers here. The police were compelled to use their revolvers, while the strikers hurled bricks and stones at the officers. One man, a Greek, whose name is not known to the authorities, is seriously injured and his wounds may prove fatal in the opinion of the attending physician. Three of the injured strikers were taken to a hospital. The others were cared for at their homes. No arrests have been made but the police say that certain persons will be taken into custody.

The battleground was the yard of the Roman Catholic Church of Our Lady of the Rosary on Cameron street, and was precipitated by an alleged attempt on the part of a strike picket to prevent a woman returning to work at the mills.

The strikers who participated in the affray were principally Greeks and Germans. It is alleged that a Greek striker interfered with a woman on her way to work. Her screams brought a policeman to her assistance; but the officer was roughly handled by a crowd of strikers that had gathered, and a large band of police was rushed to the rescue.

The attacking force of police numbered between thirty and forty men, while the number of aggressive strikers was much greater.

The strike of 400 weavers began on May 1, and was called to enforce a demand for the reinstatement of a discharged Industrial Worker of the World leader, a ten per cent advance in the wages of all weavers, and a change in certain shop conditions. This strike came only ten days after the settlement of a strike of a month's duration. Only about 700 of the 2,300 operatives reported to the mills at the opening hour.

Prompt settlement of the labor difficulties here with the aid of the militia is a strong possibility, and it is understood that only the fear that Governor Foss will intervene has kept the town officers from issuing a precept to the local company.

Warrants for the arrest of the police officers who fired into the crowd of retreating strikers, wounding seven men and several women, will be sought today, according to Dennis J. Callahan, one of the local leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Callahan was in conference with Thomas L. Walsh who, with his brother, David I. Walsh, is counsel for the strikers.

Intense excitement prevails. The attack upon the striking pickets in the shadow of the shrine of the Church of the Holy Rosary, where women fell before the club and revolver charge of the police, has aroused great indignation.

John Hoffman, George Poul and Augustus Vettras are in the hospital suffering from bullet wounds. Four other men are being treated at their homes.

Tasia Mikeloplos, a 20-year-old Greek girl, was shot in the arm, and six other women, whose names are for the time being withheld, are likewise among the injured.

The strike situation is serious. Last week the strikers petitioned Governor Foss for the removal of Judge Smith, the local justice. They alleged seven different counts against the judge, all along the line of his being not only the counsel for the Lancaster mill, against which the strike is directed, but alleging that he is a stockholder of this mill and has held many conferences with its managers as well.

TROLLEY STRIKE AGITATION

Men on the New Haven Lines Demand Increased Pay

Worcester, Mass., June 4.—The local trolley men are voting on whether or not they shall strike in order to enforce their demands for a 30-cents-an-hour flat rate of pay.

The Westfield, Springfield, Pittsfield and Holyoke men have already voted to enforce the demand for 30 cents an hour flat.

Even should the vote favor a strike, it is probable that no walkout would take place immediately as a long period of conciliation and arbitration would follow.

Watson Placed Under Arrest

Thomason, Va., June 4.—Thomas E. Watson, former Populist candidate for president, was arrested, as predicted, on a federal warrant and taken to Augusta, to enter bail.

Washington, June 4.—Alleged undervaluations of importations of linens were considered at a conference between Secretary MacVeagh of the treasury department, Collector Loeb of New York and Chief Wilkie of the special customs agents.

SEEK THE PAWNSHOPS

Strikers In London Are Driven to Such Resorts

London, June 4.—It was estimated that 110,000 men are idle today along the Thames and Medway rivers. These include dockers, carmen, seamen, firemen and members of the builders' trade. However, there were more men working than was the case Saturday.

The position of the dockers is becoming very serious. Pawnbrokers are refusing to accept further pledges, and unless the strike is speedily ended it will mean semi-starvation for many residents of the riverside.

STAND OR FALL ON ROOT VOTE

Roosevelt Sends Instructions to Oppose His Selection

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 4.—Upon the selection of temporary chairman of the Republican national convention may hang the pesent fortunes of ex-President Roosevelt.

He has decided to oppose with all his strength the seating of Senator Root, and issued a call to all his supporters to stand with him.

Colonel Roosevelt's statement is so constructed as to make the issue a clear one between himself and his opponents.

With it he binds up the entire question of his political faith, so as to make a decision for or against Senator Root, a vote for or against himself. It is, he asserts, a question of principle, not persons.

Colonel Roosevelt declares that Mr. Root "has ranged himself against the men wh stand for progressive principles within the Republican party." But it is William Barnes, Jr., of New York, he says, who is to be the real head of the Taft canvass at Chicago.

Characterizing Barnes as "the representative of the very worst forms of bossism in politics," he asserts that no progressive delegate can afford to vote for any man proposed by him.

PRICES STILL SOARING

Food Stuffs Higher Than Any Time Except War Period

New York, June 4.—It costs more to live in this month of June, 1912, than ever before in the history of the United States, except, perhaps, during war time. Prices were high a year ago, but today they are on the average nearly 20 percent higher yet, according to trade authority quotations. Food products are the highest on record. Meat, eggs, butter, fish, potatoes, coffee, tea, sugar, salt, molasses, rice, beans and peas average 22 percent higher; wheat, corn, oats, barley, flour, etc., 33 percent higher. Fruits are the only things good to eat that have grown cheaper during the last twelve months, but they are still higher than in 1910. Leather products cost 12 percent and chemicals and drugs 13 percent more than a year ago. Textile goods, however, are a trifle cheaper.

The average increase in food products is nearly 20 percent, which means that the housewife must pay $6 to fill a market basket that only cost her $5 to fill in June, 1911; in other words $1 will only buy five-sixths as much as it did a year ago. The biggest advances have been in meat products—beef 26 percent, hog products 40 percent and mutton over 50 percent.

MORSE AT BATH

Quietly Slips Into His Old Home With Wife and Daughter

Bath, Me., June 4.—Charles W. Morse arrived in Bath last evening from New York and went direct to his old home, where he will remain for a greater part of the time during the summer. He was accompanied by Mrs. Morse, also by his sister, Miss Jennie Morse, and his daughter, Miss Anna Morse, who went to Portland and met him.

It was not generally known when Morse was coming, although he had been expected for several days, and there were only a few intimate friends at the station, who greeted him quietly, when the train arrived.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing, but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BOULEVARD BILL FAVORS QUINCY

The Measure Signed by Governor Calls for $1,000,000

WILL IMPROVE SHORE ROADS

The automobile Boulevard bill carrying with it an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the continuance of the Metropolitan park system, was signed by Governor Foss, yesterday and means a great deal to Quincy.

Among other things the bill provides for an expenditure of $100,000 to construct a portion of the Quincy shore drive towards Hancock street, and for $75,000 for the purchase of land for the later construction of the Old Colony boulevard along the water front and parallel to the railroad tracks from Neponset to Savin Hill. This will also help the Quincy boulevard.

Representatives William J. Leslie and Walter E. Piper of Quincy did good work in the advancement of this measure.

CHANGE IN THE UMPIRE SYSTEM

May be Made in Quincy City League Owing to Conditions

TWO MEN NOT POPULAR

President Bates of the Quincy City league believes that before the season goes much further, the fans of the city will be overanxious to attend the games on the balance of the schedule. At a meeting at his house on Monday evening several new ideas were advanced by the representatives of the team who attended the meeting and the board of directors will take them under advisement.

From present appearances, it is thought that a change in the umpiring system will be effected. In the three games played there has been a number of decisions made which can do the sport more harm than erratic playing. Two men have been handling the indicator, and it has been suggested that only one man fill the position in the future.

Paul Poehler, the champion bowler of New England has made application, and he is now being considered as an umpire. Poehler has the inside on most of the sports and has attained an enviable record as an umpire in the northern part of the state.

Saturday afternoon the South Quincy and Makaria teams meet. This game promises to be the best one played to date.

Manager Joseph Ford took the South Quincy boys to Concord last Saturday, and lost a 16 inning game with a 2 to 1 score. Commolly was on the mound and F. Ericson caught. This was the first severe test Commolly was ever given and his record in the game augurs a brilliant future. Ericson plays all positions well, but excels on second base. It has been a long time since he donned a mask but his playing was consistent throughout.

South Quincy has three games to its credit which have gone over the regular nine innings. The Buchans lost to them in an 10 inning game at Merrymount, and the United Shoe Machinery won the 3 to 2 game on the 11th at Beverly.

The Makaria has been playing good ball and although they lost the first league game to the Quincy A. A., they turned the tables on the West Quincy team. Their league game with Quincy was the first loss of the season.

BAY STATE BUSY POLITICS

Pelletier or Foss as Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate

LEGISLATURE OPPOSES FOSS

Building Inspection In Boston—Senatorial Situation Still Unsettled—Legislation Passed This Year

The Democratic party will be in some uncertainty over its gubernatorial candidate until after the Democratic national convention. Today Governor Foss is proclaiming vigorously that he is to be the Democratic nominee for president. His friends have some hopes that he may be nominated for the vice-presidency; they have no expectation whatever that he will receive any greater consideration than this. If he is not selected for vice president by the Democratic convention at Baltimore his friends expect to see him in the contest for governor this fall. It is probably true that he believes he stands some show for the vice presidential nomination, and he may really think he may be the dark horse when it comes to selecting the presidential candidate. His supporters however, do not believe the Democratic party would come so far east as Massachusetts for a presidential candidate; they have though it possible that he might be selected for second place under certain conditions.

If he should be nominated for any place on the national ticket it will then be up to the Democrats to find someone to run for governor this fall. Two or three men have been mentioned, among them Congressman Andrew J. Peters of Boston, District Attorney Pelletier of Suffolk County, and David I. Walsh of Fitchburg. It is suspected that Mr. Peters is quite willing to remain in Congress if he is allowed to do so. Several prominent Democrats, however, have been casting envious eyes at his district and it is quite possible that the desire to start him on another tack may have been responsible for his being mentioned in connection with the nomination to the governorship.

Boston's Poor Inspection

Mayor Fitzgerald has just waked up to the building situation in the City of Boston. In the last eight months there have been seven very serious accidents through the faulty construction of buildings or through lack of proper fire escapes. For many months some of the newspapers have been calling attention to the inadequate work being done by the office of the building commissioner and have urged that some action be taken to remedy conditions. Very likely nothing would have come of all this agitation had it not been that in the last two months four buildings in process of construction or already occupied, collapsed with a loss of four lives and ten persons injured. A few days ago the mayor asked Governor Foss to send a message to the legislature asking that body to enact a law giving the City of Boston greater power over the construction, alteration, removing or tearing down of structures.

This action was only taken after a number of influential organizations in Boston had strenously demanded that something be done to remedy the situation.

There was quite an exciting time in the legislature last week when an intimation was received in the House that unless the legislature enacted the bill creating a public utilities commission Governor Foss would veto the trolley merger bill and all other measures pending. The house resented the threat of the governor and showed its feeling by rejecting the public utilities bill. It was strenously claimed that it was a scandalous misuse of his executive powers by which Governor Foss attempted to have enacted his bill for a public utilities commission. It was felt by the members of the house that if the governor wished to disapprove of the trolley merger he should do so on the demerits of the bill or not at all, and that he should not undertake to log roll his pet measure through the legislature. In the constitution of Massachusetts, article 30, it is stated: "In the government of this commonwealth, the legislative department shall never exercise the executive and judicial powers, or either of them; the executive shall never exercise the legislative and judicial powers, or either of them; the judicial shall never exercise the legislative and executive powers, or either of them; to the end it may be a government of laws and not of men."

Senatorial Situation Mixed

The senatorial situation has not been cleared up during the last week. Former Governor Curtis Guild is willing to make the fight for the United States senate if all the factions of the party will unite upon his candidacy. It does not seem certain at the present time that this will come about. Congressman John W. Weeks of the Twelfth district is said to be a candidate and Ex-Governor Draper has stated that under certain circumtances he might be willing to be drafted. However, he wishes to know first what is to be the platform of the national Republican convention. Presumably if it is too radical he might not wish to be considered. Lieutenant Governor Robert Luce has also been mentioned in connection with the senatorship, and former Speaker Joseph Walker of Brookline has stated that it is an honor which no one would decline if it came to him. It is well understood, however, that Mr. Walker is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor and that his activities will be devoted to the campaign for this nomination, rather than to secure an endorsement for the senate.

Legislation Enacted This Year

The legislature has put the finishing touches to a bill creating a state finance commission to consist of three members, one of whom shall be the state auditor. Under this bill the commission is given jurisdiction over every officer or board having charge of any department, institution or undertaking which receives an annual appropriation from the commonwealth.

The legislature has enacted some very important measures during the present session. Among others it has ratified the proposed amendment to the national constitution for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people; enacted a law to permit voters to express their preference for president and vice president and for direct election of delegates to national conventions of political parties; divided the state into sixteen congressional districts, two more than previously existed; provided a maximum penalty of $10,000 for the making of political contributions by business corporations.

It has also passed a law to prohibit, under penalties, untrue or misleading advertisements; regulated the cold storage of food products by limiting the time in which such articles can be kept in storage to one year; voted to submit to the people article of amendment to the constitution disqualifying from voting persons convicted of corrupt practices in elections; enacted nine-hour day bill for persons employed by street railway companies; authorized directors of the port of Boston to lease sites for warehouses and industrial locations and establish port of Boston fund into which all moneys received which are now paid into the commonwealth flats improvement fund, shall be placed to the credit of the port directors; provided one day off out of every five for members of fire departments of cities; provided that fruits, vegetables and nuts shall be sold only by weight or numerical count; authorized widening and extension of Avery street in Boston; authorized issue of bonds by city of Boston, outside the debt limit, of $5,000,0000, for the construction of new streets, this act to be referred to the voters of Boston for their approval.

4 WOMEN TO BE DELEGATES.

Will Occupy Seats at the Republican National Convention.

Four women will occupy seats as delegates at the Republican national convention in Chicago on June 18 Two will come from California and two from other western states.

Sergeant-at-Arms William F. Stone has received scores of applications from women in western states for appointment as assistant sergeant-at-arms, doorkeepers and ushers at the convention; but, following a precedent established by the subcommittee on arrangements, none but men will be named for these positions this year.

The first credentials from delegates elected to the Republican national convention from the United States insular possessions were received by Secretary Hayward from Hawaii and the Philippines. No word has been received by the committee from Porto Rico and Alaska.

Maine Pennant Has Home.

The pennant of the old battleship Maine has a permanent home in Memorial hall, in Chicago. It was presented, with appropriate ceremonies, to the Grand Army Hall Memorial association recently by the United Spanish War Veterans.

OPTIMISM THE KEYNOTE OF THE FOURTH OF JULY ASSOCIATION

Every One Up and Doing for the Coming Celebration Which Will Be a Hummer

Promoters Cheered by Words of Encouragement on Every Hand

A representative gathering of citizens attended the meeting of the Fourth of July Association at the Board of Trade rooms last night. An animated discussion on plans for this year's celebration consumed nearly two hours, during which time collectors were appointed to secure the amount necessary for the expenditures which will have to be made to guarantee a successful celebration.

Mayor Stone president of the association, presided and reported that he felt certain that the council would pass the order calling for an appropriation of $1000, and he felt satisfied that the success of the past meant a brilliant observance. He explained that while there appeared to be some opposition in the council regarding the order, he nevertheless felt safe in assuring the association that the money would be set aside on June 24.

George H. Elcock, chairman of the fireworks committee reported that a number of manufacturers had called on him this spring, and that the appearances indicated an active competition on their part in submitting bids.

He spoke of the disappointing features which had marked last year's preparations and advised the committee of collectors to organize at once so the amount for fireworks could be assured and the order placed without any delay.

Secretary Arthur W. Stetson reported that on Monday at 2 o'clock at room 38, State House, a public hearing would be granted relative to the incorporation of the association and he requested that all the members, active and prospective, be on hand to assist at the hearing.

Receipt books bearing the stamp of the "Quincy Fourth of July Association" were distributed to the collectors. Every person who contributes will receive a receipt, and the stub remaining in the book will be a duplicate of the transaction.

All advertising was left to the publicity committee which is composed of all the newspaper men in the city. Arrangements are being made to placard the surrounding towns and cities, and a widespread publicity campaign will be started.

The following collectors were appointed:

Ward One, Delcevare King, chairman, Galen Bowditch, Charles C. Hearn, Charles A. Ericson, George Muirhead, John R. S. Ross, Henry P. French, William P. Taylor, Daniel J. Maloney.

Ward Two, Jacob Peterson, chairman, Thomas Griffin, Abel Gomez, Chester Mellen, William H. Flynn, Stephen B. Devaney, Fred A. Drake, Charles C. Foster, Richard Luther, William Caine, Michael T. Walsh, Albert J. Williams, William E. Lee, Harry T. Studley.

Ward Three:—Robert T. Craig, chairman, William Farqhuarson, George T. Gauthier, Robert McDonald, Joseph B. Grossman, Hartland Piper, Harold Richards, August Weeden, James N. Cantfill, Karl W. Leaf, James J. Brogan and Leo Elcock.

MORRISON-BATES CHURCH WEDDING

Brilliant Affair in All Souls' Church at Braintree

WILL LIVE IN EXETER

All Souls' church, Braintree, was hardly large enough to hold all the friends of Miss Mary Merrell Bates and Joseph Gregg Morrison, who wished to be present at their marriage on Tuesday evening. The beautiful little church was especially attractive with quantities of pink, roses palms and ferns.

Benjamin L. Whelply, organist at the Arlington Street church, Boston, presided at the organ playing while the guests were assembling and the wedding march to the strains of which the bridal party entered the church at eight o'clock. Rev. Harry Grimes of the First Congregational church impressively solemnized the marriage, the bride being given in marriage by her father Charles S. Bates.

The bride looked very sweet in a gown of white satin, trimmed with pearls and a brocaded court train and long tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor Miss Olive H. Thompson of Braintree wore pink charmeuse with cloth of gold jacket and carried pink roses. There were four bridesmaids, Miss Elizabeth Ellsworth of New York, Miss Mary Faxon of Quincy, Miss Helen Durkee of Braintree and Miss Lillian Harrington of Newton Centre. They wore gowns of blue charmeuse and gold lace jackets and also carried pink roses. Miss Fanny Ellsworth of New York was flower girl and was all in white except for the flowers which she scattered on the path of the bride. The grouping of white pink and blue gowns and the back ground of green made a pretty picture.

Lemuel Bannister, Harvard '09, of New York was best man and the ushers were Alva Morrison ,Harvard '02, F. Everett Winslow, Ferdon Shaw, Harvard '09, Alva M. Dow and George Anderson, all of Braintree and John T. Beach, Harvard '09 of Boston.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride 17 River street from half past eight until half past ten, the young people being assisted in receiving by the bride's father, Charles S. Bates and sister Mrs. F. Everett Winslow and the sisters of the groom Mrs. James I. Ellsworth of New York and Mrs. Henry M. Faxon of Quincy.

The decorations at the house were the same as at the church, being of pink roses and palms. A wedding supper was served. Many beautiful gifts attested to the popularity and wide circle of friends of the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison will reside in Exeter, New Hampshire, where Mr. Morrison is in business and they take with them to their new home the best wishes of many friends.

FORECLOSURE SALE.

At a foreclosure mortgage sale of the Wire Fabric Company property at Wollaston, Tuesday when William T. Shea, the mortgagee bought it in. Michael T. Sullivan was the auctioneer.

The building which stood on the land and which was used for manufacturing purposes, was totally destroyed by fire last summer.

—The market reports agree that the weather is the commanding influence in business today all over the country and in every line. If the weather is right everything is right and business prospers. A few weeks of really seasonable weather would produce a healthy boom all over the lot, in agriculture and manufacturing. Such a period is longed for even by those who usually give meteorolgy little thought. —Framingham News.

MALE MEMBERS IN FEMALE PARTS

Epworth Leaguers Displayed Versatility in Play

MUCH MIXED PICKLES

The June meeting of the Epworth League was held in the vestry of the Hall Place M. E. church Monday evening. The president called the meeting to order at 8.05 o'clock. All officers were present. After the usual devotional exercises reports were received from the various officers and these were accepted. Some matters of interest were discussed. It was voted to discontinue the Sunday night devotional service during July and August.

After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed.

This was in charge of the male members of the League, who presented "The Centerville Ladies' Sewing Circle."

The cast of characters was as follows

Mrs. Greenmount	J. L. Martin
Mrs. Alice Tompkins	J. M. Francis
Mrs. Cyrus Hinckley	Albert Thomas
Mrs. Handsome Lovesomemore	Camille Fuller
Mrs. Peddlesome	Harold Norris
Mrs. Lovejoy	Julius Fuller
Mrs. Tanglefoot	Leslie McCormick

Bargain sales were of more interest to most of the ladies and the president declared she would go at once and purchase some of the puffs which were selling at such a bargain price, they were marked down to ninety eight cents from a dollar.

Altogether it was a decidedly amusing take-off on the way most sewing circles or ladies' meetings are conducted, and was very cleverly acted out by the boys.

After the entertainment the boys served strawberries and cake.

MANY FRATERS AT TABER FUNERAL

Popular Yachtsman Laid at Rest in Mt. Wollaston

The funeral of Albert H. Taber was held Tuesday afternoon from his late residence on Baxter street and was very largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott and Mrs. F. J. Moore sang two selections.

Large delegations were present from several orders of which the deceased was a member. These included Merrymount lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, the Moose, Buffaloes, Granite Conclave I. O. H. and the Quincy Yacht Club and from the employees of Mellan Bray where the deceased had been employed for many years. Mayor Stone and Mr. Bray were also present and one of the charter members of the W. M. French Hose Association.

The flowers were many and beautiful and included set pieces from the several organizations with which he was affiliated. After the services the several orders under the marshalship of Charles H. Johnson escorted the remains to Mt. Wollaston cemetery where the committal service was read by Rev. Mr. Willmott.

QUINCY KILTIES IN BIG PARADE

McGregors Made a Good Show in Brockton Line

WITH FULL PIPE BAND

A large delegation from Clan McGregor No. 5, O. S. C., of this city, led by Chief Alfred O. Diack, went to Brockton last night by special trolley cars and assisted Clan McDonald to make a fine showing in the street parade which took place in that city.

The Scottish societies were headed by the Pipe band of the Boston Highland Dress association led by Pipe Major David Ferrier and composed of pipers George Martin, Donald MacQuarrie, James Cant, Ambrose Griffiths, John Frazer, Joseph Morrison, John M. Ballum and John M. Fraser, snare drummers, Robert Cromwell, John Costello and Joseph MacQuarrie, bass drummer, John Werquhart.

The band was in full Highland costume; the Clansmen wore the regulation plaid and bonnet; the McGregor tartan with its bright red coloring, making a decided contrast to more sombre hued McDonald tartan. The pipe band men were all clad in the tartan of the "McKenzies."

The parade was a lengthy one and a great many fraternal organiztions participated.

Martland's brass band headed the line followed by Swedish and Lith uanian societies, Knights of Pythias, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Odd Fellows, Co. No. 1, 1st Heavy Artillery Order St. Jean Baptiste, Clan McDonald O. S. C., Two Boys' Brigades, Foresters of America and several others unclassified.

LETTER CARRIERS' VACATIONS.

The annual vacations for letter carriers of the Quincy Post office will commence Friday, July 5th. The clerks start their season on Monday, July 1st.

A sufficient number of subs will be assigned to this district so there will be no interference with the service.

At the present time there are 21 carriers connected with the local office. During the summer months the increase in the beach population necessitates one extra man and since June 1st, Houghs Neck has been receiving full service.

SPLIT HIS HAND.

The right hand of officer Henry Riley of Quincy, was injured Tuesday at the game between the Quincy and Cambridge police base ball teams.

Riley is a left hander and played second. While one of the Cambridge policemen was "stealing" the base, Riley mishandled a throw from Duane, the Quincy catcher, and the ball split his hand around the little finger. He is not incapacitated from duty.

LENA CUSUMANO ESCAPES DEATH CHAIR BY VOTE OF THE COUNCIL

Life Imprisonment Substituted and the Action Towards Clemency Was Unanimous

First Condemned Person to Depart From Death Chamber Except to Execution

(Special to the Quincy Ledger.)

Boston, June 5—The Governors Council today unanimously voted to spare the life of Mrs. Lena Cusumano and instead of sending her to the electric chair, her sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life.

When her case was first brought to the notice of the Council last week, the vote stood four for commutation and four for the death sentence with Councillor McGregor absent in the Maine woods.

In the meantime the woman was removed from the Plymouth jail to the death house in Charlestown state prison.

She will be the first convicted person who has been admitted to the death house at the jail who has left it except to go to the death chair or gallows.

Enrico Mascioli, who was charged jointly with the woman in killing her husband Frank Cusumano will probably be executed shortly after midnight tonight as the Council voted against clemency in his case seven to one.

Mascioli made a statement which was given to Attorney Grady.

This statement cleared the woman to a certain extent of direct complicity in the murder. Yet it did not evidently show that she was without blemish else some other course than life imprisonment might have been determined upon.

The largest award, $3,000, went to Dr. Louis Lesage of Paris for an automobile designed for X-ray service in the field, and two prizes of $1500 each went to a German who invented a bicycle stretcher, and to a Swiss who offered a new type of folding stretcher. HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Unsolicited advice is a rather cheap commodity and generally accepted at its par value.

Tim Woodruff of New York is spreading like an eagle on the wing so that he may be under cover whichever candidate wins at Chicago.

The girl with the auburn locks and bright tan shoes and hosiery is bound to have both extremes in harmony.

Col. Roosevelt has again changed his mind and will attempt to pry Chairman Root from his Chicago job. Perhaps.

While Job Hedges poses as a humorist candidate for Governor of New York there are many who went at it seriously and afterwards gave a humorous turn to the position.

Clinton's labor riot produced seven patients for the hospital. The country is getting into a pretty state when every labor disturbance in small and remote places is attended by rapine and bloodshed.

No doubt Ambassador Guild will be as proud of his newsboy's decoration as any he wears but how will the Russian aristocrats look upon it?

Governor Foss plans to erect the largest apartment hotel in Boston. Surely the governor does not look forward to becoming a boniface in his old age.

The chances are that the New York waiters are some mad at the harvest of tips they are missing while parading Broadway on strike.

The Boston Elevated has made some pretty direct statements, such as did not require much study to interpret. The quesion is will they hold to their present position. If they do, the men must yield or Boston will again be the scene of a strike and at a time of the year when the travelling public will suffer the most inconvenience.

If it should rain on graduation day the flood of tears would undoubtedly equal the heavenly downpour.

Small as she is Massachusetts leads the states of the nation with the number of its cities having 25 to its credit. Big New York has only 21.

It is now believed that the Titanic fund is sufficient to meet all demands. The response to this appeal was one of the most spontaneous and generous in the history of raising funds for afflicted people.

ONLY A SKIRMISH.

It was announced that with the close of the New Jersey primaries the recent national exhibition would close and harmony would reign. Judging from the announcements made within the past few days the battle for the Chicago convention has only just commenced. The primaries were only the skirmish which led up to the real conflict. Both sides seeking the Republican nomination for president are at it harder than ever and there is no denying that even the cool wave has not dampened their ardor. The first great fight in the Chicago convention will come over the selection of a temporary chairman. Col. Roosevelt is determined to oppose Senator Root. If the Colonel should loose in that little battle it will give the enemy renewed hope and furnish them with an incentive for the real work of the convention. Some things can be carried along with a rush and a determined and well developed bluff, but in others failure is liable to loom up pretty strong. Considering the warm wave and the promise of continued warm weather the great mass of the people are satisfied to let them fight out this Chicago matter to their heart's content and then the people will in the cooling days of November settle the whole question to their entire satisfaction.

PEACE SHOULD PREVAIL.

It is not a creditable reflection upon our advancement or civilization, our progress or boasted freedom, our enlightenment, or the many things of which we so proudly proclaim and which Fourth of July orators love to roll around their tongues, when we are brought face to face with the fact that a handful of men in a small city or town or a few thousand in a big city like New York, can upset the entire woring of the municipality by the ears. It is all very well for people to strike if they feel so inclined. That is a privilege which they not only have but can practice. They can go to work or loaf just as the fancy strikes them. But they should have some respect for the law and the rights of others. Policemen were jeered on Broadway, New York by a few hundred passing strikers. Why should those people jeer the officers? Was it an expression of contempt for the law, the government and the representatives of the people in the preservation of order? If so it was a sorry spectacle indeed. When respect for the law of the land ceases and gains such a grip upon the country that it will have the upper hand, then the whole fabric of this great and boasted republic will be honeycombed by a danger to civilization an eating, gnawing cancer which will eventually prove the ruin of law and order and government. Policemen jeered. Do we stop to think when brought face to face with such a condition that it is not the police who are jeered. It is the government and the whole American people. The power of the millions who control the country is jeered and ridiculed. The policeman is only a unit, a factor to carry out certain things. You do not see strikers jeering at a private individual. No. The latter does not represent power, law, or authority. It is the representative of this trinity that is jeered and it seems that it is about time that strong measures were taken to prevent further repetition of an open, bold and unwarranted defiance of law, order, government and the mandates of the sovereign people.

Boston Elevated Union Men Ask For One More Interview

Boston, June 5.—No immediate change in the attitude of Boston Elevated company's officials, who refused to treat with representatives of the carmen's union, is looked for by those on both sides in touch with the situation.

The union leaders, however, hold the opinion that General William A. Bancroft, president of the L road, may eventually send word that he is willing to hold a conference with certain employes of the company now holding membership in the union, receiving them as employes, but not as representatives of the carmen's organization.

It is known that in the event of such word being conveyed to the union men it will be promptly turned down.

The one aim of [illegible] will be to pile up a m[illegible] from that, by force of numbers, will render the unionists weak and powerless.

VICTOR WEIL ADMITS GUILT

Federal Officers Dissappointed at the Outcome

Boston, June 5.—The second trial of Victor M. Weil, mining promoter, before Judge Putnam in the United States district court, was brought to an abrupt close by the defendant pleading guilty to each of the three indictments charging him with using the United States mails in a scheme to defraud in connection with the sale of stock of the Goldfield-Boston Consolidated Mining company. Weil was fined $3000.

The case had cost the federal government more than $15,000. It is understood that important evidence was to be presented to the jury.

The postoffice inspectors' department is disappointed to a large degree in the disposition of this important case. They believe that the United States district attorney should have made some recommendation to the court after the defendant pleaded guilty.

CONSTITUTIONAL GUARANTEE

To Be Suspended In Cuba That Martial Law May Prevail

Havana, June 5.—The Cuban senate passed a bill granting the request of President Gomez, conveyed in a special message, that he be allowed to suspend the constitutional guarantees in such portions of the island as he deems necessary, and a special session of the body was ordered to determine whether the order shall be applicable to all parts of the country. The president's message also was conveyed to the house, which referred the matter to the committee on laws, and an extra session was called to discuss the momentous question, which, it was believed, marked the crucial point in dealing with the insurrection.

The government has been unable to confirm the reported outbreaks in the province of Havana, but there is considerable alarm about the attitude of the local negroes.

The next step will probably be recourses to a rigorous policy of reconcentration throughout Oriente for the purpose of preventing recruits from the towns joining the insurgent columns, and also denuding the country of the means of subsistence to the rebels and cutting off their sources of information regarding the movement of the regular troops.

CHURCH WEDDING IN DORCHESTER

Quincy Man Took Bride From That Section

The marriage of Miss Alice Smith, daughter of Mrs. Alice Rogers Smith, of Dorchester to Richard H. McGrath son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGrath Pleasant street, Quincy was solemnized Saturday in the rectory of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom.

A wedding party at the summer cottage of Mr. McGrath at Squantum followed the ceremony.

Mr. McGrath is a graduate of Quincy High School, '03, and has been engaged in the granite business at South Quincy with his father since graduation. He is also well known in yachting circles. The bride is one of Dorchester's most popular young women.

GOMPERS FURNISHED BRIBERY MONEY

s Testimony of Witness In Darrow Trial

Los Angeles, Cal., June 5.—Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, sent direct to Clarence S. Darrow the money which the prosecution alleges was used in the bribery of George N. Lockwood, according to Bert Franklin, under cross examination in the trial of Darrow for alleged jury bribery in connection with the McNamara cases. Franklin said Mr. Darrow had given him this information.

That Clarence S. Darrow will base his defense on the assertion that the agreement for the McNamara brothers to plead guilty had been made before the conclusion of the alleged negotiations for the bribery of Juror George N. Lockwood, is indicated.

A special session of the county grand jury for the purpose of a further investigation of the alleged corruption of jurors by the McNamara defense was the only other important development in the trial of Darrow.

Accident to the Arkansas

Washington, June 5.—Information that the new dreadnought Arkansas has met with an accident on her trial trip off the Maine coast has reached the navy department. The skin of the ship was badly dented. It is thought she struck a reef or wreck. It is believed that the trials go right on.

—Connecticut is now the Gretna Green for couples who wish to be married in a hurry and don't care to experience the delay required by the law of this State and Rhode Island. Putnam, in the Nutmeg State, gets most of this business. Maine towns are attracting people matrimonially inclined from New Hampshire. The law requiring five days to elapse between application for the marriage license and its granting is a good one and some time all the New England states will have it.

SOUTH DAKOTA TO COLONEL

Plurality Seems to Be Large For Roosevelt

OHIO UPSETS PEOPLES VERDICT

South Dakota Returns Come in Scattering—Ohio Gives Its Six-at-Large to Taft—His Opponents Characterize It as a Bald Steal—Chicago Will Probably See Roosevelt—Beveridge For Vice President

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 5.—Theodore Roosevelt is leading both President Taft and Senator La Follette in the returns from the primaries held in the state yesterday.

Returns from 116 scattering precincts, estimates that Roosevelt will have 10,000 to 12,000 plurality in the state, and that Thomas Sterling has defeated Senator Gamble for senator.

The returns are slow on account of the long ticket. The earliest in showed the trend of the results when from Presho the vote was: Roosevelt 45, Taft 23 and La Follette 23.

Eight out of twenty-six precincts in Gregory county gave Roosevelt 235, Taft 205 and La Follette 6.

Columbus, O., June 5.—President Taft won Ohio's six delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention, at the state convention, by a vote of 390½ to 362½.

New York, June 5.—The only comment Colonel Roosevelt would make concerning the result at Columbus in the selection of the six delegates-at-large for President Taft was this: "I will refer to you what I said in my statement Monday about the Ohio situation." In this statement the colonel said that, notwithstanding a majority of 30,000 against Mr. Taft at the Ohio primaries, "the Taft managers in Ohio are straining every nerve and using every means to upset the people'ss verdict and give the delegates-at-large of Ohio to the man whom Ohio by overwhelming majority declared ought not to have them."

Chicago, June 5.—The Roosevelt followers declare that they are satisfied that in view of the result in Ohio, which they characterized as the most outrageous steal in the history of American politics, that Roosevelt is certain to come to this city. They declared their belief that he will come here early next week and personally take charge of the fight.

It was generally accepted that if the Taft men control the national convention the Roosevelt forces will withdraw from the convention in a body, proceed to the auditorium and organize a convention of their own at which they will nominate Colonel Roosevelt for the presidency and despite the multitudinous array of alleged personal selections of Colonel Roosevelt for the place, former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, for the vice presidency.

CUMMINS MAN CHOSEN

Primary Selection of Kenyon In Iowa Indicative of Situation

Washington, June 5.—Senator Kenyon's overwhelming defeat of Editor Lafayette Young in the Iowa senatorial primary will be noted with interest by the Republicans gathered at Chicago, where every political straw is clutched and examined for its possible significance. Kenyon is as typical a progressive as Young is a standpatter, and the Iowa primary must be regarded as a fresh test of progressive sentiment in the west.

The outcome will be cheerful news to Senator Cummins of Iowa, to whom the ten other Iowa delegates are pledged and who has opened headquarters at Chicago as a presidential candidate. When Cummins announced to his people that he would stand for the presidential nomination he was informed by the old guard of Iowa that he could have all the delegates for himself but that if he purposed to use them against Taft he would have to fight.

Cummins supported Kenyon in the senatorial contest, in which the presidential question did not enter to any great extent. The result shows, therefore, Iowa standing by her own progressives and prepared to back Cummins to the limit in any turn of the wheel at Chicago should give a third candidate a chance for the nomination.

MASSACHUSETTS FEDERATION.

Annual Meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Delegates from all over Massachusetts began to arrive in Templeton Monday afternoon, for the annual meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs. The Wellington club, which is the hostess of the occasion, had made careful preparations for the comfort and convenience of their guests and the Templeton Inn offered a most attractive place for headquarters.

Monday evening was given up to an informal reception, department conferences and general sociability.

Tuesday morning, the regular session opened with an address of welcome by Mrs. Carrie R. Manning, president of the Wellington Club and the acceptance of their hospitality by the Federation President, Mrs. Henry Coolidge Mulligan. That session was given up to reports of the officers and chairmen of special committees.

At the afternoon session greetings were presented by representatives from other states, among those being present were the president of the New Jersey Federation and Mrs. Harriet Bishop Waters, of Troy, N. Y., editor of the General Federation Bulletin. Four of the departments of work made their reports at this session. Bureau of Information, Mrs. Leila C. Pennock; Education, Mrs. William Croswell Brown; Art, Miss Jessie H. Wilkinson; and Music, Mrs. Edward R. Newton. In connection with the work of the Music department, a lecture on "Folk Songs" was given by Prof. John Patton Marshall of Boston University illustrated by songs by Miss Edith Bullard of Boston.

The evening's program was in charge of the hostess club and included music by Mrs. Nettie F. Esters of Gardner and a dramatic recital of "Betsey of Baltimore" by Miss Iva Roberts of Kentucky. This was followed by a reception during which the delegates had opportunity to meet the Federation officers and prominent guests.

This morning the convention assembled at 9.30 for the business of the annual meeting and election of officers, after which the department reports were continued, that on Industrial and Social Conditions being presented by Mrs. Clarence W. Clark; Civics, Mrs. Walter R. Dame; Legislative, Mrs. Snow Rich; Public Health, Mrs. Lilias Folger; Conservation, Mrs. Fred H. Tucker; Civil Service Reform, Mrs. John T. Taber, Literature and Library Extension, Mrs. George B. Woodward; Home Economics, Mrs. Hattie M. Douglas and Food Sanitation, Mrs. Joshua W. Clarke.

The following new clubs, which have joined the Federation during the year, were presented: Medway Woman's Club, Roslindale Community Club, Haverhill Mothers' Club, Congenial Club of Boston, Turners Falls Woman's Club, Ex-Club of New Hampshire's Daughters, Upland Club of North Reading and the Greenfield Woman's Club. Before adjournment the new officers present were introduced to the convention and with the usual votes of thanks to the hostess club and to the retiring members of the Board a most successful annual meeting was closed.

The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Minna R. Mulligan, Woman's Club, Natick.

Vice-Presidents—1st. Mrs. Florence T. Perkins, Roxburghe Club, Roxbury; 2d. Mrs. Elizabeth Denison, Woman's Club Framingham; 3d. Mrs. Jennie B. Wadleigh, New Hampshire's Daughters, Boston;; 4th. Mrs. Ella C. R. Whiton, Woman's Club, Dorchester.

Clerk—Mrs. Claire H. Gurney, Women's Club, Quincy.

Assistant Clerk—Miss Jessie M. Fisher, Social Science Club, Newton.

Corresponding Secretary — Mrs. Grace V. Hibbard, Woman's Club, Milton.

Treasurer—Mrs. Lena R. Wellington, Fortnightly Club, Winchester.

Directors (Term expires 1915)—Mrs. Anna Louise Collins, North Shore Club, Lynn; Mrs. Katherine H. McClench, Woman's Club, Springfield; Mrs. Sara S. Gilson, Woman's Club, Wellesley Hills; Mrs. Sephie M. Dumas, Middlesex Woman's Club, Lowell;; Miss Grace M. Burt, Newton Federation of Women's Clubs, Newton.

Nominating Committee—Mrs. Mabel S. Rogers, chairman, The Philergians, Braintree. Mrs. Effie S. Nowers, Woman's Club, Winthrop. Mrs. Lillian G. Breed, North Shore Club, Lynn. Mrs. Anna E. K. Darling, Current Events Club, Hyde Park. Miss Bessie Brainard, Cantabrigia Club, Cambridge.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

In October 1911 Massachusetts had 81 clubs belonging to the General Federation. In January 1912 the Dorchester Daughters of Maine resigned, and in May the Ex Regents' club of Boston was admitted, leaving the membership still 81 clubs. Your Secretary feels that this does not necessarily mean a lack of interest in the General Federation because many of the clubs not belonging to the General Federation have contributed generously to the Endowment Fund, thus doing all they could for this year. The Secretary has spoken on the work of the General Federation by request and on the Endowment Fund before many clubs.

In closing I would urge all clubs not yet affiliated with the General Federation to take such action another year. It adds to the dignity of a club and tends to broaden the outlook to belong to the National Organization. Then too it gives an opportunity to help along all the good works undertaken by that splendid body. If the dues seem too large to be taken from the club treasury why not add it to your club dues, as has been suggested before? Ten cents from each member is a very small amount and perhaps it would be the very best way to create an interest in the General Federation in the heart of every club-woman.

Elizabeth Boardman Denison.

BADGE COMMITTEE.

The Badge committee continues to meet all demands for Federation pins and is ever ready at State meetings to bring to the attention of club women the great necessity of owning and wearing the badge at all club functions. The pin can be worn by all members of Federated clubs and each one should consider it a privilege to do so. A gold one has been sent to Mrs. Eva Perry Moore, President of the General Federation as a gift from the Massachusetts State Federation. Her letter of acknowledgment is most complimentary and concludes with the following words, "The pin is so beautiful I am sure every member wears one in your dear state." The Committee hopes that the sales will increase and will add to the Treasury a larger sum than in the past.

Mary C. Alline, Chairman.

BUREAU OF INFORMATION.

Each year the work of the Bureau of information connected with the Massachusetts State Federation increases, indicating that such assistance as the department can render to the clubs is needed and appreciated. The applications during the past year for practical aid have been many and varied, extending over almost every phase of club work and organization. The Bureau wishes to state that it holds no papers pertaining to work of the Federated departments. Such papers are to be found in the hands of the chairmen and members of those departments.

Its mission is to act as a medium for general information and to advise from an unprejudiced and disinterested standopint whenever such advice is desired. It has, through the assistance of clubs maintaining scholarships, specific knowledge of scholarships carried on by the club women throughout the state. Each year the response from the individual organizations grows so that the Bureau has information regarding valuable class and department work that is being carried on. It has an increasing list of speakers who are willing to make special terms for small clubs.

The Bureau holds the constitution and By-Laws of nearly every club in the State Federation and during the past year in order to aid clubs desiring to revise their By-Laws, it has taken what has been deemed the most practical parts of these and embodied them in a so-called model constitution and by-laws, copies of which can be loaned to clubs at any time. It is not claimed that these are perfect but that they include practical and definite points which, it is felt, will be of assistance.

There are in the possession of this department, excellent outline studies of nineteen different countries. These are at the disposal of club study classes all that is asked—in return being that they shall be returned for the benefit of others.

The Bureau would like to come in touch with club women throughout the state who through experience in department work are able and willing to speak for any of the Federation interests. It also asks clubs to send their year books as soon as they are published to the chairman of this department.

Assistance is again solicited for the coming year, not only from the large club with its numerous advantages on account of numbers, but also from the small club which through the necessity of individual activity is rich in ideas.

Leila C. Pennock, Chairman.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

The Federation has increased its membership during the year 1911-1912 by the addition of eight new clubs—the Congenial club of Boston, Ex-Club of New Hampshire's Daughters, Medway Woman's club, Upland club of North Reading, Roslindale Community club, and the Turners Falls Woman's club. It has an enrollment of 249 clubs, with a membership of 34,046. One club, the Salem Century club has disbanded.

Grace Vose Hibbard.

SETTLEMENT DEPARTMENT.

The Settlement work of the Massachusetts State Federation for the summer of 1911 began early in June. The two teachers with supplies and furnishings went over the mountains from Maryville accomplishing the journey with less fatigue and in less time than formerly. The school opened a few days after their arrival and continued until September. The teachers had sewing classes at the cottages for the girls who could attend. They visited much in the homes and their help and friendly sympathy were much appreciated.

Six of our Happy Valley children have been at school at Maryville the past year—three of them having scholarships given them by Massachusetts clubs, the Monday club of Weymouth, the Woburn Woman's club, and the Pilgrim Woman's Literary club of Dorchester.

One young woman, who has been one of our teachers at Happy Valley, has had a scholarship given by the Dorchester Woman's Club. This club has taken a kindly interest in the young girl who has had the club scholarship, sending pretty little useful gifts at Christmas and Easter, and now are giving her her graduating outfit; all of which has been a great help and a great pleasure to a very conscientious girl making a brave fight against odds, for an education.

Two of our scholars taught a summer school beginning in August and closing in time for them to be back at Maryville at school after Christmas.

The work for the summer of 1912 will open the first week of June.

Sara T. S. Leighton, Chairman.

EDUCATION.

The work of the Department of Education this year has been an endeavor to interest club women in vocational education, home and school associations, scholarship funds, moral education, the use of school buildings for social centres, better daily newspapers and other educational subjects.

This year one hundred and twenty-two clubs returned answers to the annual questions. Amost every club is doing good work along educational lines. Forty clubs are working for the awakening of public sentiment for moral education and many are alive to the need of it, especially the education of the sex.

Only seven clubs report work done for better daily newspapers, but many would be glad to do so if they could intelligently. The department is working for the improvement, or abolition, of the comic supplement for the printing only of news that is fit to print, and the elimination of objectionable advertising.

Good work has been done by the clubs for the enlightenment of the members on vocational education. Twenty-one clubs report one meeting devoted to this subject.

Last year only sixteen clubs reported maintaining a scholarship fund; this year comes the encouraging word from twenty-eight clubs that they are doing so and some are educating more than one girl with these funds.

To the question: "Have you formed any associations, or held any meetings to bring parents and teachers together?" forty clubs answer that they have done so and that the home and school associations are of great advantage to parents, teachers and children. These meetings bring about a better acquaintance between parents and teachers and are an opportunity to further the cause of moral education.

The use of school houses as social centres is being advocated by many clubs with the result that a more economical use is made of property belonging to the people. Some clubs have classes for immigrants and others report that they are maintaining a kindergarten.

The Kindergarten association has enlisted the moving picture theatres all over the country to exhibit a film entitled "At the Threshold of Life." Our Committee believes the moving picture theatre should be made an educational agency. We are asking for pictures that will attract and entertain, but also will help young people to become the right sort of men and women.

In closing this report, it is recommended that every club woman attend the moving picture theatre in her community and urge her club to do what it can to make the picture show, which is one of the strongest influences on child life and the most generally patronized amusement, an agency for the promotion of education.

Emily E. B. Brown, chairman.

CIVICS DEPARTMENT.

Forty-four clubs have been actively engaged in some form of Town Improvement work. Fourteen clubs have assisted local Improvement Societies or some person or other organization doing the work. Perhaps more clubs have helped in starting "Clean-Up-Days" than in any other form of work.

We have tried to arouse some enthusiasm toward abolishing billboards, but as long as a revenue can be derived from them it is difficult to get the men to assist us.

More clubs are interested in the Playgrounds than ever before and we again urge you to work for trained directors. The playgrounds can never accomplish the good expected of them unless there is some one to lead and restrain, for whom the children have love and respect.

Thirty-six clubs are actively interested in playground work and seventeen others report assisting in establishing playgrounds either by paying for directors or equipment. In Winchester the Women's Club established, equipped and directed two playgrounds for one year. The town was so convinced of the feasibility of keeping these playgrounds that they assumed the expense and placed them under the charge of the Local Park Board.

The idea of a safer and saner Fourth has taken such a strong hold on the public that it seems as if we might concentrate on some other work in its place next year.

More clubs have showed an interest in International Peace than ever before. Thirty-four clubs have listened to lectures or held informal discussions and a few clubs have held study classes that the members might become better informed on this important subject.

A few clubs report they have investigated the conditions in their local Juvenile courts, and have found Judges and probation officers carrying out the law satisfactorily. However, only 22 clubs report any interest and many of these have simply listened to a lecture on the subject.

In the Department of Stamp and Bank Savings conditions are different. Only 26 clubs reported the amount of money saved, but they report $210,766.25. In reply to the questions sent out 39 clubs are actively engaged in the work and 22 others are either assisting bank or school officers or have turned over the work started by them to such officials.

The clubs report establishing and maintaining dental clinics, sewing-schools, summer-schools, home gardens, public parks, Boys' and Girls' Clubs, district nurse associations, working for better fire protection, placing street signs, doing local hospital work, marking historic spots, repairing sidewalks, studying the housing problem and city conditions. One club alone has assisted the Y. M. C. A. the Reform Club, Historical Society, Associated Charities, worked on the housing laws and beautifying the city, all in one year. Almost everything has been done under the name of Civics.

Jennie Stone Dame, Chairman.

PUBLIC HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

The record of the past year's work shows a continued interest in community health and a close co-operation existing between the clubs and health organizations. The work of establishing a visiting nurse is still a popular one with the clubs. Five maintain a nurse, thirteen report aid toward the suport of one, four are considering this branch of work and three have established one the past year.

One hundred and six clubs have replied to the list of questions sent out, an increase of eight over last year, and all show a greater and growing interest in all lines of health work, many new ones appearing. The names of thirty eight health chairmen were sent this year, while only four were given last year. This is most encouraging, and it was very interesting to note that four of these are men, two doctors, one a chairman of selectmen, and one club gave the name of a man, who with the district nurse, act as its health advisers.

Two clubs report furnishing wards in hospitals and two others using their influence to erect local tuberculosis hospitals. Other clubs report investigating and aiding poor families, the support of tuberculosis associations, lectures on tuberculosis and general health, contributions to anti-tuberculosis societies and hospitals for dental care, for vacations for poor mothers, eye treatment and glasses for poor children. Thirteen have sold Red Cross seals, one has had a children's exhibit, several have distributed literature, and one has placed leaflets on the reading tables of the Public Library. All this work with the observance of Tuberculosis Sunday, a health day and work for individual cases, shows a varied and energetic amount of work, which the clubs may well feel proud of.

A great deal has been done for the promotion of health in schools. Five have women physicians for the examination of girls, twelve report the establishing of school nurses by the school committees of the Boards of Health, and one club is endeavoring to have a nurse appointed.

This report shows in its great variety of work the adaptability of the

CAPT. BROWN HAPPY VICTOR

Sent the Wanderer to the Fore in Cat Class

The Wanderer won the race at the Quincy Yacht cub last Saturday and not the Iris as inadvertantly stated. This was the first race in the Cape Cat class that Capt. Brown has sailed the Wanderer and he naturally feels rather elated that he got the best of the old liners. Last year Capt. Brown sailed the Mudjekeewis with which he did great work. From his work of last Saturday he will be in it from now on with the Cape Cats.

In the boys' race Capt. Whittemore in the Alpha cleaned out his class in an easy manner. So far ahead did he finish over the others in the class that he had his sails furled and was seated on the piazza before any of the other boats in his class had finished.

Shakespeare's Tragedies.

Whenever "Macbeth" is put upon the stage very nearly a fourth of it has to be omitted, for, although it is the shortest of the tragedies, it would take fully three hours to read it out loud without gabbling. "Hamlet" thus read would take nearly two hours more, and this seems to bear out the contention of Swinburne, among others, that much of the play, and, indeed, of other tragedies, was written by Shakespeare for the study and not for the stage. A six or seven hours' performance must have been too much even for an audience of Elizabeth's spacious times.—London Graphic.

BELGIUM NOW IS IN REVOLT

Bloody Scenes in Various Parts of the Kingdom

MANY KILLED IN MOB RIOTS

Anti-Romanists Displeased With Clerical Political Victory—Reports From Many Points Tell of Wild Disorder—Soldiers Fire With Deadly Effect—Some Regiments Go Over to the People—Reserves Called Out

Brussels, June 5.—The result of the elections have brought this country to the very brink of a revolution. The victory of the church party has incensed the anti-Romanists and the recent riots are today being followed by revolutionary acts. While reports are conflicting it is believed that at least fifty persons have been killed in the battles between the soldiers and mobs, and that hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed.

Several regiments have deserted to the revolutionary forces and the foreign ambassadors and others close to the situation believe that unless the government takes drastic action at once that the present trouble will develop into a great revolution.

A mob assailed the gendarmes in Verviers with missiles. The gendarmes charged repeatedly and when the rioters refused to disperse opened fire. Thirty of the mob fell killed or wounded: Seven gendarmes were injured. Many arrests were made.

Two thousand miners struck at Mons in protest against the maintainance of the present government.

Rioting continued throughout the night at Ghent. A score of persons were wounded in a fight with gendarmes.

The favorite cries of the manifestants are those demanding the administrative separation of the Flemish and the Walloon provinces. Some of the newspapers report a growing sentiment among the working classes in the Walloon districts of the southeast in favor of the annexation of their provinces to France.

At Liege enormous damage was done by the rioters. The streets in the centre of the city are piled high with debris.

The most serious encounter occurred near the Socialist headquarters known as "populaire." Firing revolvers in the air, the protestants advanced slowly through the streets to "populaire," sacking stores and cafes en route. After they had arrived at the headquarters several shots were fired from within the place upon the mounted gendarmes in the street. The commandant, thinking that the soldiers were about to be overwhelmed, gave the order to fire at will. Several volleys were exchanged, during which a number of persons were killed and twenty others wounded.

The new chamber of deputies will contain 101 Clericals, 44 Liberals, 39 Socialists, and 2 Democrats, or a Clerical majority of 16 over the opposition coalition. There are a number of new seats this year, of which the Socialists captured four, though most of them went to Clericals.

Paul Hymans, the Liberal leader, issued an appeal to the Liberals not to resort to violence, but to continue the fight within constitutional limits.

The latest reports from the provinces show that the strike has spread over the entire Liege basin and has tied up most of the collieries and the big metal industry. In the centre of Belgium many industrial proprietors seem to approve of the strike and sympathize with the men.

club woman to choose the immediate work which presents itself and that which will benefit the individual community. This originality and apparently constant vigilance cannot but bring about a greater degree of health to the citizens of all our cities and towns.

Lilias Folger, Chairman.

INDUSTRIAL AND SOCIAL.

Two years ago the industrial and Social Conditions Department took up the work of Child Welfare, thus shaping the course of the efforts of the committee, not only for this year, but probably for several to come.

That interest in our work is increasing in the clubs is proved by the fact that ninety-nine replies were received to the list of questions sent out by this department, and more than fifty clubs have had at least one lecture, on a subject relative to either Child Welfare or Industrial and Social Conditions.

Again this year we have asked the Clubs to work on the Child Welfare questionnaire, which presents two phases of our subject—The Child at Home and the Child on the Street, and many clubs have co-operated with us in this investigation into conditions surrounding child life.

A conference in the interest of the Questionnaire was held by courtesy of the New England Woman's Club in their club rooms on January twentieth Miss Georgie A. Bacon presiding. The subject of the questionnaire was presented by Mrs. Caroline Stone Atherton, while representatives of some of those clubs which worked last season told something of the methods used by them to secure the desired information.

At the bottom of one of the replies to our questions was written: "Investigation is an eye-opener," and the questionnaire returns certainly prove the truth of this statement for these returns are most interesting, showing in many cases careful thought in the training of the Child "in the way he should go."

It is claimed that "Every Child has the inalienable right to be well-born; to be loved, to be wisely trained in mind, body and soul; to have its individuality respected; to be protected from evil persons and influences, and to have a fair chance in life." I believe all Child Welfare work to be a striving towards this end and it is the ambition of our department of the Federation that the Women's Clubs of Massachusetts will bear their full share of the burden for the goal is not easy of attainment, it can be gained only by earnest effort and endeavor.

Ruby P. Clark, Chairman.

CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT.

The practical activity of clubs has been chiefly in connection with shade trees and children's gardens. They have raised money for tree planting in streets and parks, and for spraying, and have agitated for the better general care of trees, sometimes including proper pruning. Some clubs have cooperated with their tree wardens, but there is still a great tendency to feel that having a tree warden, especially a good one, relieves citizens of all responsibility, and that, on the other hand, if the tree warden is bad, both people and trees are helpless.

One club has set a shining example of the concrete work that may be done by a few determined and enlightened women. A year ago they had a lecture upon the care and treatment of shade trees. Following this the Forestry Committee issued printed leaflets describing the needs of the trees, and what they wanted to do about it. In this and other ways they raised more than $300 with which they hired an expert tree doctor to prune and otherwise treat all the trees on the main street as far as the money held out. Besides this the Committee so impresed tree officials and private owners that both public and private trees have been better looked after, especially as to spraying. This club has a Junior Work committee which does splendid service with boys and girls having among other things, for three years conducted a "Garden and Door Yard Competition "with great success.

GRAIN GASES FATAL

Four Lose Their Lives in Attempt to Save First

Cincinnati, O., June 5.—Five persons perished as the result of being overcome by gas fumes in a grain well at the dairy of Jacob Sachs in Fairmount, this city.

Henry Estermann, a fireman, who went into the pit to get out the bodies, was also overcome and lies at the city hospital in a serious condition. Two of the dead are women. Four of the victims forfeited their lives in efforts to rescue Jacob Sachs, the first victim.

The grain had fermented and generated deadly gases which caused the death of the five persons.

CLINTON MILLS ARE GUARDED

But There Is No Disorder Among the Strikers

HAVE SYMPATHY OF PEOPLE

Arrests of Strike Leaders May Be Made—Police Threatened to Arrest the Wounded—Do Not Put Threat Into Execution—Chairman of Town Board Says Strikers Fired No Shots—Greeks Do Not Parade

Clinton, June 5.—In the same locality where seven were shot during the recent riot, 500 strikers of the Lancaster cotton mill did picket duty early today, but there were no disorders. The four mill gates were guarded by a large number of police officers. Preparations to assemble the local militia company hurriedly, if need arises, have been made.

The report gained circulation here today that Chief of Police George Gibson will ask for warrants for the arrest of D. J. Callahan, Grover Perry, Annie McNamara and Nellie McDonald, I. W. W. leaders, whom he charges with inciting the riot. The four are said to be courting arrest, and defy the police authorities to take them into custody.

The police visited the homes of several of th people who were shot, stating that they had come to place them under arrest, but in every instance the strikerss refused to go with them and the officers did not use force.

Those visited 'phoned Maj. Thomas Walsh of Gov. Foss' staff, who is the attorney for the strikers, and asked him if they would resist arrest. He advised them to allow themselves to be taken in case the police showed a disposition to adopt such proceedings.

Three men are still in the hospital suffering from bullet wounds. John Hoffman of Oak street, who was shot under the left eye, is in a serious condition. The surgeons have not succeeded in extracting the bullet as yet. Charles Vettras received a bullet in the leg, above the knee, but his condition is satisfactory. Charles Papoulos was hit in the thigh, but is doing well and will recover.

Public sympathy on all sides here seems to be with the strikers. Even Cleveland Morse, chairman of the board of selectmen and lieutenant of the local militia company, admits that no shots were fired by the strikers. He said:

"None of the firing came from the strikers. It was done by the police, who were assailed by a bombardment of missiles and they fired in self defense. One German girl had some of her fingers shot off and another German girl received bullet wounds in both wrists."

In the day's parade that followed the picketing the I. W. W. banner was in line along with the Stars and Stripes. The march was taken up to a shaded grove about one mile from the mills, where 500 persons were addressed by Organizers Perry and Callahan. Perry denounced the police. He said:

"They walked over us and then they shot us. We have got this strike won and the mill people will find out that this is so. Many of the loom fixers joined us today and we will start a relief fund just as soon as Mr. Trautmann arrives here." The officials representing the strikers announced at the meeting as well that the strike will spread to the mills conducted by the same company in Fitchburg.

The absence of the Greek strikers from the parade was a noticeable feature. Michael Iatros, formerly Greek consul at Lowell, addressed the Greeks, advising them to refrain from violence and to avoid any semblance of making trouble. The paraders were principally Germans and Polanders.

A mass meeting of strikers will be held at the town hall tonight. The number of operatives at work today was about the same as yesterday.

EX-GOV. TAFT DEAD

Was the Oldest Chief Executive of Rhode Island

Providence, June 5.—Royal C. Taft, former governor and for a great many years one of the leading bankers and manufacturers in Rhode Island, died at his home in this city after a long illness due to old age. He was 90 years old and was the oldest living chief executive of the state.

Former Governor Taft was a native of Northbridge, Mass., and like the president was a descendant in the seventh generation from Robert Taft, one of the first settlers of Mendon, Mass.

Thirty Prospectors Drowned

Winnipeg, June 5.—Thirty people from near St. Paul, Minn., who were prospecting along the G. T. P. construction work in the mountains are reported to have drowned while crossing the Frazer river on a raft and in rowboats, being caught in the raging current.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BRAISED BEEF.

BRAISING is a combination of steaming and baking. The meat is cooked in the oven in a covered pan, in the bottom of which is enough liquid to create a steam.

The heat must be carefully regulated. On this depends the success of the process. Slow simmering makes the meat tender and savory.

The French Process.

The French braise in a shallow pan the lid of which has a depression in the center that may be filled with hot charcoal when the vessel is set over the fire. However, any stewpan with a tight fitting lid may be used for braising.

Any meat may be braised, but more delicious results may be obtained with beef. As the process properly carried out tends to make tough meat tender, cheap cuts may be prepared in this way very satisfactorily.

A Savory Combination.

Braised Beef With Vegetables.—Take three pounds of beef from the lower part of the round or the face of the rump, two thin slices of fat salt pork, a half teaspoonful of peppercorns, a quarter of a cupful each of pared and chopped carrots, turnips, onions and celery, with pepper and salt to season.

Fry out the pork and remove the slices. Wipe the meat, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and brown the surface in the pork fat. When turning the meat avoid piercing with a fork, which allows the inner juices to escape. Place in a casserole and surround with vegetables, peppercorns and three cupfuls of boiling water. Cover closely and bake four hours in a very slow oven. Throughout the cooking the liquid should be kept below the boiling point.

Using the Round.

Braised Round of Beef.—Take a nice piece of round and place it in a broad, shallow saucepan which has a tight cover. Drop over it a tablespoonful of melted butter and a finely chopped onion. Brown the beef on one side and then on the other. Now pour about a pint of boiling water over the meat and put on the cover. Let it cook slowly. Fifteen minutes should be allowed for each pound of meat.

When done take out the meat, strain the gravy in the pan, then put it again in the saucepan and on the fire. Thicken with a tablespoonful of browned flour rubbed in a tablespoonful of butter. Season with salt, pepper, minced parsley and any other herb you like. Pour the gravy on the meat, which should have been set on a platter to keep warm near the fire.

FRESH RASPBERRIES.

RASPBERRIES fresh from the garden are served with powdered sugar alone or with cream.

It is said that berries should not be washed, as the water destroys the delicacy of their flavor. If not washed they should be looked over carefully for small insects.

A Delectable Dessert.

Raspberry Charlotte.—Take a pint of stewed raspberries and mash them well. Get some stale sponge cake, cut in thin small squares and place a layer of these in a mold. Wet the cake with some of the mashed fruit, then put in another layer of cake, then more fruit, and so on until the mold is full. Garnish with whipped cream and whole ripe raspberries.

Fresh raspberries are nice served in individual dishes or in sherbet cups with whipped cream and powdered sugar.

Berries and Cake.

Raspberry Sponge.—Take small round sponge cakes, scoop out the center of each, cover the cakes inside and out with chocolate icing and fill them with ripe red raspberries, sweetened and mixed with whipped cream. Heap whipped cream on top of each.

Light and Dainty.

Raspberry Cream. — Dissolve and warm half an ounce of gelatin in half a pint of milk, let it cool, whip three-quarters of a pint of cream, adding by degrees half a pound of sieved raspberries and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Stir in the gelatin when cold. Pour into a mold to set.

Raspberry Charlotte Russe.—Line the bottom of a mold with white paper and the sides with split lady fingers. Soak one ounce of gelatin in a half pint of cold water and when soft place it over the fire until dissolved. Press one quart of fresh raspberries through a sieve and add one cupful of powdered sugar. When the gelatin is cold mix with the berries and sugar, add one pint of whipped cream sweetened to taste, pour into the lined mold and place on ice. This should be eaten cold.

Red Grod.—A Danish dish is made with raspberries. Take a pint and a half of the berries sweetened to taste. Put on the fire to boil. When boiling add three ounces of ground rice and let the whole simmer for twenty minutes, then throw in one ounce of sweet almonds, pounded, and two ounces of gelatin. Pour into a mold and set it into cold water; turn out and serve in a glass dish with thick cream.

MAIL CARRIER HADLEY

First Regular Aerial Postman For the United States

New York, June 5.—Uncle Sam has now a full fledged aerial mail carrier. Clinton Hadley was sworn into this service at the postoffice last evening. His run will be between this city and Washington.

At the rate of speed usual with him he ought to make the trip in about four hours. He has never been too heedful of weather in any machine, and the one he is to use officially is designed to keep its balance regardless of the direction or force of wind.

BERGER APPEALS TO WICKERSHAM

Regarding California Decision Against a Socialist

Washington, June 5.—The case of Judge Hanford of Seattle, who deprived Leonard Oleson of his citizenship on the ground that he is a Socialist and does not believe in the constitution as it now stands, is now formally in the hands of the department of justice, having been laid before the attorney general by Representative Victor Berger.

It is understood that both the department and the Socialist congressman have sent for more papers in order to go into the matter thoroughly.

Attorney General Wickersham began an immediate investigation of the complaint, and Representative Berger let it be known that he might make the case the basis of an attempt at impeachment proceedings against Judge Hanford.

ENGINEER ACTS WISELY

Saves His Passengers From Being Cast Into River

Waterville, Me., June 5.—Good judgment on the part of Engineer Nat Downs, in stopping his train gradually, rather than by applying the brakes suddenly, was believed to have saved the morning train to Portland from rolling into the Kennebec river when it was wrecked at Vassalboro station.

Five cars left the rails and were tipped at an angle toward the river at the top of a steep thirty-foot embankment. The passengers on board were badly shaken, but no one was injured.

The roadbed was torn up for 200 yards, and traffic was blocked a greater part of the day.

Speaks Up For Ettor

Boston, June 5.—At the annual meeting of the federation of churches and religious organizations of Greater Boston in Trinity church, Rev. Nicholas Van der Pyl of Haverhill declared that the permanent imprisonment of Joseph J. Ettor, leader in the Lawrence textile strike and now awaiting trial on the charge of being an accessory to the murder of Annie Lopizo, who was killed in a strike riot, would mark one of the most serious crises that will have to be met in the industrial situation. "Ettor was the least offensive of the strike leaders," he said.

Margaret Sangster Dead

Newark, N. J., June 5.—Margaret E. Sangster, poet and author, died at her home in Maplewood, a suburb. She was 74 years old and pursued an active literary career for more than half a century. Death was due to an attack of indigestion.

BOSTON IN STYLE

Has a Little Hotel Waiter's Strike of Its Own

Boston, June 5.—Waiters and bartenders at the Hotel Olympia in Roxbury, struck because the manager refused to employ union help.

The strikers declare that their action has no connection with the hotel strike in New York, as the Boston waiters are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor while the New York strikers are connected with the Industrial Workers of the World.

Representative Parks Resigns

Boston, June 5.—The resignation of Representative Joseph A. Parks of Fall River, representing the Tenth Bristol district in the lower branch of the legislature for nine consecutive years, was read and accepted by the house. Mr. Parks resigns because of his recent appointment by Governor Foss as a member of the industrial accident board.

57,000,000 NON-CHURCHGOERS

Presbyterians Give Figures and Condemn "a Number of Our Courts."

More than 57,000,000 persons in the United States are non-church members, and of the number 12,000,000 are children, according to a report of the committee on industrial conditions considered by the United Presbyterian assembly at Seattle, Wash.

The committee criticised the courts, saying they "seem too much engaged with legal forms and technicalities" and "not sufficiently concerned about the weightier matters of justice and mercy."

"There is a grave suspicion everywhere voiced," the report continues, "that corporate interests exert unwholesome influence over a considerable number of our courts and that they have displayed pernicious activity in the election and appointment of judges who would be in a large measure amenable to their control."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

It is claimed that cottage owners are much to blame for the conditions for they are very willing to let their cottages to this class of people.

Nerve Rewarded.

"Now, Billy," said the young man's father, "I've found a fine job for you—a job which will, if you attend strictly to business, give you a splendid chance to rise."

"What is the nature of the job?"

"You've seen some of the big buildings in course of construction, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Have you ever noticed how the great iron beams are lifted in their places?"

"Sure."

"Well, a friend of mine, who is a contractor, has agreed to use you to stand on the beams and balance them as they are hoisted. I told him about the splendid nerve you had exhibited in sitting around and permitting me to support you, and he agreed that you would be just the man for the job."—Chicago Record-Herald.

LOOSE SHOES.

Those Not Fastened Tight at the Instep Cause Foot Trouble.

Seven persons out of ten suffer excruciating pain at one time or another with their feet. A single corn no larger than a grain of sand can take all the "snap" and vitality right out of you.

Two-thirds of modern foot troubles are due to the fact that almost every one—man, woman and child—wears his shoe too loose. The shoe itself may be correct as to size and shape, but it is not fastened tight at the only point of control—namely, the instep.

When you set your foot upon the floor or pavement in the act of walking the shoe adheres, and if it be loosely fastened over the instep the foot pushes down into the toe of the shoe. At certain spots on the foot this slipping causes friction. These spots are the soles of the feet, the tops, ends and inner sides of the toes, the great and little toe joints and occasionally even the back of the heel.

When the friction thus caused is continued hour after hour and day after day one or more of these spots are almost sure to become inflamed and sore. A slight thickening, called a "callous," is formed. As the friction and pressure go on the resulting callous may thicken up unevenly; then it is called a "corn."—Woman's Home Companion.

Followed Suit.

This curious incident comes from Suhr, Switzerland: An inspector of schools, without any previous warning, visited the village school and found the elderly teacher asleep at his desk and the children departed, having apparently taken French leave. To give the teacher a great surprise and a bad quarter of an hour the inspector decided to wait until he awoke and seated himself on a bench in front of the culprit. The hours passed, and the inspector himself went to sleep. The teacher, on awakening and seeing who was sleeping before him, quietly left the school for home. Without entering the schoolroom the concierge locked up the school and the slumbering inspector. Several hours later the concierge heard a great noise and, arming himself, opened the door and was greatly surprised to find the angry inspector before him.

When He Went to the Front.

"Did you hear that George went to the front yesterday?" asked the brother of Ethel.

Ethel's face blanched. "Why, what do you mean, Jack? He never told me."

"Well, I saw him go," said the brother as he reached for his hat. "Don't you remember last evening, when he kissed you first on your right cheek and then on your left, and then didn't he go to the front?"—Ladies Home Journal.

STORY OF A CHURCH.

Curious History of an Unfinished Edifice In England.

There is a curious history regarding an unfinished church which stands at Hassall, near Sandbach, England. A former resident at the local hall, a Mr. Lowndes, painfully conscious of the lack of provision for the spiritual wants of the people in the neighborhood, determined to build a church at his own expense. After carefully choosing a site he gave instructions for the erection of a structure in the modern style capable of seating 400 or 500 persons.

Work on it was begun in the summer of 1836 and was pushed on steadily until the day on which Queen Victoria was crowned, by which time the building was well advanced. The crypts, about ten in number, had been put in, the walls and roofs were complete, and the scantlings for the floor were fixed. Indeed, partly in consequence of the national rejoicings and partly to celebrate the progress which had been made, the building was smothered in flags and decorations and was the center of local festivities.

Next day Mr. Lowndes was seized with an illness which quickly proved fatal, and with his passing all work on the church ceased. Though the building could have been finished at comparatively small cost, it was abandoned, and it has not been used since except by tourists, whose names "hallow and adorn it," as Mark Twain said of those on the ruins of Cain's altar, by the thousand.—Wide World Magazine.

WOLLASTON CHAMPIONS GRAMMAR SCHOOL LEAGUE BY AN EYEBROW

Westland's Error Costly in a Great Pitcher's Battle by Youngsters

Victors Celebrated by Parade and Bonfire in Own Bailiwick

Wollaston's team clinched the pennant in the grammar school league by defeating Adams at Merrymount Park Tuesday afternoon, 1 to 0. If Adams had won the game they would have tied in first place with Wollaston, Gridley Bryant and Lincoln schools.

It was a wonderful exhibition of base ball by youngsters and speaks volumes for the coaching they have received in the National game.

No big league grounds ever presented a more animated appearance than on this occasion of a climax contest between two school teams. The Adams gang lined up on one side and hte Wollaston rooters on the other side of the field and both rooted like all possessed for their representatives on the diamond.

It was a pitchers' battle in which Swain of Adams had the best of the argument as he retired the opposing batsmen without a single hit. An unfortunate error by Westland in the third inning gave the Wollastons the one run needed to win the game and the league championship. Otherwise the game would have gone extra innings. Williams of the Adams made the only base hit of the game.

The last half of the sixth inning Adams had a chance to win or tie the score, but was prevented by the superb control of Isbester who showed the coolness of a veteran at a most trying stage of the game.

Byron was given a pass. Laing struck out. Donald the next batter sent a grounder to Bedwell who shot the ball to Johnson and Byron died at second. Erwin batted a slow one down the third base line and beat the ball to first. Donald going to third. Then the excitement reached top notch. With a man on first and third a hit would mean the victory and a quadruple tie in the league. Isbester tightened up. MacDonald was not equal to the emergency and struck out and Adams lost a heart breaking game.

The features of the game was the playing of Isbester, Hamblin and Phelan for Wollaston and Williams and Erwin played good ball for the losers, and Swain pitched a masterly game.

The game closed a most successful baseball season. Dr. Smith who has worked hard for the success of the league, is elated by the splendid showing of the youngsters. Most of the games were close and the scores small.

The pennant will be turned over immediately to the champions and will occupy a conspicuous position in the new Wollaston school.

During the past two years the final game has been played by the Massachusetts Field and Willard teams. This year Wollaston forged to the front at the start and good playing secured the hold on first place.

CELEBRATED THE VICTORY.

Last night the pupils of the winning school assembled and headed by Capt. Hanlin and Manager Isbester, followed by the members of the team in uniform, paraded the Wollaston streets giving vent to enthusiastic cheers for the team.

After invading most of the district the lusty rooters returned to the school and a monster bonfire was set in the rear of the building.

This week the champions will be the guests of Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, physical director of the grammar schools and David H. Goodspeed, principal at one of the national league games. The interest the players have taken in the game is boundless and Dr. Smith and Mr. Goodspeed plan to do all that is possible to stimulate further interest.

PUBLIC UTILITIES BILL ENDORSED BY QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE

Members Not Agreed With Mr. Sochat on Attitude of Quincy Banks Helping Business Men

Frank F. Crane Spoke and Representatives Thanked for Faithful Services

The Board of Trade at the meeting Wednesday evening put itself on record as in favor of the passage by the present legislature of a bill providing for public utilities commission substantially along the lines as laid down by Foss or the so-called Barnes bill. Albin L. Richards of Boston was present and spoke at length on the question of the transportation problem.

Previous to his talk the board elected four new members, Lawrence W. Lyons, Arthur P. Russell, Maurice P. Spillane and Harry G. Studley.

Frank Fessenden Crane, chairman of the Water Ways committee submitted a report as follows:—

"On the location of the American Cotton Waste Co., in this city referred to the Chairman of this Committee, reports as follows:

It was found on investigation and inquiry that the by-product of said company would kill fish and had some odor and that a location would probably require the special permission of the Board of Health.

The Chairman of this committee informed the parties representing the company that we did not have at present a suitable building with power located in a place suitable to dispose of the by-product.

PANAMA CANAL.

As a representative of the Quincy Board of Trade the Chairman of this committee was one of the committee on resolutions at the National Rivers & Harbors Congress, and one of the resolutions unanimously carried at that Convention was that All Waterways and Canals built by the United States Government should be free of tolls to American Vessels.

On the question of the Quincy Public dock referred to this Committee on May 24th by the board of directors, we beg to report as follows:

The opinion of the committee is that the Granite industry of the city would at present be the one to be most benefited, and as Waterfront Commissioner of the City of Quincy the Chairman submitted to the Committee several questions which seemed to him pertinent to the matter in hand, with the result that the following letter was sent to the Granite Manufacturers' association, and that association has appointed June 18th as a date for meeting the Chairman and considering these questions:

May 29, 1912.

To the Granite Manufacturers' Association.

The Directors of the Quincy Board of Trade have directed its Waterfront committee to take such action as seems wise to that committee, for the early location and establishment of the Public dock. In our desire to cooperate with the city and the granite manufacturers, it will enable us to handle the matter more intelligently if you will give us the following information:

Question 1—How many months should that dock be available? All the year or nine months?

Question 2—What depth of water would be desirable for the best interests of the industry?

Question 3—What is the minimum amount of tons shipment that the granite manufacturers will guarantee if such dock is built?

Question 4—To what ports do you consider your firms would ship granite?

Question 5—What date can you assign for a special meeting, when the Chairman of this committee can meet with the Association and confer with them in regard to the above questions?

Very respectfully yours,
Frank Fessenden Crane, Chairman

In regard to the other Dock Question, the Committee are making inquiries and will report later."

Commissioner Crane also spoke of the meeting of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Commission to be held at New London in September and stated that a special train would be run. to New London by the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange. He urged that the Board of Trade be represented. It was voted that a committee be appointed to arrange for the accommodation of the Quincy delegation. This committee is made up of Frank F. Crane, Col. Henry L. Kincaide and Dr. F. E. Jones.

Hayman Sochat of the special committee in relation to the matter of a trust company reported that he had an interview with the directors of the Granite Bank, who stated that a Trust company would be of great benefit to the business men of the city as a trust company were given more leeway than a National bank. Mr. Sochat then went on to air his own grievance as to the bank. He claimed that the banks were not using the business men right and that all of their money was out. It was not right to confine the business to this company when a Boston company was ready to come in with plenty of money. He had ascertained that with one trust company established that it would be impossible for another to locate. He asserted that a person without a pull could get nothing at this bank. He also referred to a grievance he had with the Savings bank.

President Hearn stated that personally he had no fault to find with the Quincy banks.

Mr. Sochat then told of his experience in trying to get a note discounted which had been refused. There was room for another bank and it was needed.

Peter T. Fallon also of the committee rather disagreed with the chairman Sochat. His experience with the banks was that he had always been used first rate. He believed that the business men would be better accommodated with a trust company. He then told how the Granite bank had come to the rescue of the granite manufacturers when they had been hard hit by a failure last year. But for the bank there would have been a number of concerns in Quincy that would have gone under.

William E. Hingston, the handwriting expert and who is frequently called in bank investigations, told of many cases he has investigated where he had found where banks carried a lot of stock in western mines etc., but he had never found a case where the Quincy banks carried that kind of paper. He was not a customer of the Quincy banks but from what he had learned the banks were carried on as they should be.

President Hearn thought there was an undue amount of unjust criticism of the Quincy banks. He believed that they were ready and willing to extend reasonable credit to all as any institution should. He did not think any fair proposition had been turned down by the bank.

Mr. Sochat then made a motion that the Board of Trade see if another bank could not be established in Quincy. The motion was not seconded however and the matter was dropped.

It was then voted that the meetings of July and August be omitted, and the question of calling a meeting be left to the President.

PUBLIC UTILITIES BILL.

Albin L. Richards of Boston was then introduced and spoke at length on the Public Utilities bill. He explained in detail the bill introduced by Senator Barnes and the new bill of Governor Foss telling wherein they differed. Both were along the same general lines although he did not think that the Barnes bill covered as many details as did the Foss bill. He also told of some of the benefits that would come to the business men by the enactment of such a bill. He further said:

"Governor Foss, in the light of the discussion of the transportation problem which has arisen since he has been studying the subject, and since the drafting of his original bill has prepared a compromise measure upon which he hopes to secure favorable action by the present legislature. The act not only provides for a four-track tunnel through the City of Boston, connecting the New York, New Haven and Hartford System, at its center in Boston with the point from which the Boston and Maine system radiates upon the northern side of the city, and for the electrification of the steam railroads within the limits of the Metropolitan Parks District but the compromise bill also contains many of the most advantageous provisions contained in the Public Utilities bill as originally drafted upon the models of legislation in other states, under the supervision of Professor Wyman. The first part of the bill, which contains these Public Utilities bill provisions, creates a commission to be known as a public transportation commission, consisting of the present members of the railroad commission with two members additional and a counsel to be appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the council.

BOUTIN INJURED IN AUTO WRECK

Former Quincy Man Seriously Hurt, and May Die

DRIVER TRIED TO AVOID TEAM

Herbert Boutin, 45 years of age, formerly a well known citizen of Quincy, but now residing at 19 Front street, Weymouth, was seriously, if not fatally injured by the capsizing of an automobile which skidded down Old Colony hill, Hingham, Wednesday evening. Boutin was caught under the car as it turned completely over and was picked up from the wreck of its wheels. He was taken to the Hingham Police station, where it was found he had sustained a fractured skull and concussion of the brain.

He was removed to his home this morning. Boutin, in company with John Meshnisky, driver of the machine and Walter Cronin, both of Weymouth was returning from Nantasket. The automobile was going down the hill rather rapidly, when a team appeared. In an effort to avoid hitting the team, the driver swerved into the car tracks. The rear wheels of the automobile locked in the car tracks and turned the car completely over.

Meshnisky and Cronin were seriously injured but will recover. Boutin resided in Quincy for a number of years. For a long time he was in the employ of H. F. Doble, the West Quincy grocer. He conducted a pool room in the Hancock building, but sold out his interests more than a year ago. He is a widower and has two sons and two daughters. He was a billiard player of much note and at one time a profesional roller skater.

SLIGHT INCREASE IN POLL TAX PAYERS OVER LAST YEAR

Presidential Election May Mean Even Greater Gain in Various Wards of the City

Wards One, Three, Five and Six Gain. Two and Four Show Loss

The assistant assessors have completed their work for the year and their report shows that the total number of assessed polls to be 10,766. This is an increase of 47 over the total number of polls assessed during the year 1911. The comparison however is hardly a fair one as the total for 1911 includes all those assessed during the registration for the state annd municipal elections. Several hundedr were added at that time, yet in spite of this fact the figures even now show an increase. It is also safe to say that after the registrations the coming fall the number will show a still larger gain.

By the figures, which are given by precincts, in comparison with last year, it will be seen that Ward two is now the banner ward, with a total of 2071, and Ward one a good second, with 2062, annd Ward three a good third, with 2040, while Ward six continues to wag the tail.

Comparing the figures by wards it will be seen that Ward one has made the greatest gain with 108, Ward three a gain of 38, Ward five a gain of 73 and Ward six a gain of 37. Ward two shows a loss of 68, Ward four a loss of 141. The figures for the two years are as follows:—

Ward 1, precinct 1	832	843
Ward 1, precinct 2	1230	1111
Ward 2, precinct 1	1052	1072
Ward 2, precinct 2	1019	1067
Ward 3, precinct 1	1021	999
Ward 3, precinct 2	1019	1003
Ward 4, precinct 1	692	739
Ward 4, precinct 2	898	992
Ward 5, precinct 1	873	831
Ward 5, precinct 2	786	755
Ward 6, precinct 1	735	717

RARE BIRDS FOR OFFICIAL OUTING

Jacks and Jills Will Witnes Some Great Features

MIKE SHEA TO BAKE

A field day is being talked of by the City officials and clerks, employed at City Hall, the party to include the wives, sweethearts and "best fellars". While no definite plans have as yet been formulated the outline is to hold the affair some Saturday afternoon at Elcock's grove, Braintree.

If held, Mike Shea, will make the clam bake which will include clams, lobsters, etc. Then there will probably be something in the line of athletic sports. An opportuniy for bathing, which will afford an excellent chance for the City Treasurer to display that dinky bathing suit in which he startles the denizens of Adams Shore. Then there will be some boating.

It is also possible that the little fellow, who holds down the chair in the Tax collector's office will give one of his exhibitions of rapid consumption of food stuffs. In fact there ore numerous opportunities for special features that would be well worth going miles to see.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

How chivalrous for a young man to boast of having jilted a young woman and her offer to buy him back. In the south they had a neat and tidy way of treating such cases.

If Masciolis statement saved the woman then he did not die in vain.

Well what do you think of that? The New York chamber maids struck. If treated the way they are in some southern hotels, providing room and board on a small salary they would not want to work at all.

The board of health has stirred itself in an appeal to dealers to cover foodstuffs offered for sale.

An inspection of dumps and stagnant water with the same idea of health improvement might prove beneficial.

There are fault finders and fault finders but even they are preferable to the flatterer who slobbers over in his efforts to please.

There are times when taking a walk in City Square that you think you have struck a banana peeling when the sun has softened up the tar.

Boston had a record batch of marriage license applications Monday which probaby means more work for the divorce court.

While the illiteracy test has been impounded in the new immigration law by congress probably few people consider that illiterate immigrants are not in the greatest degree responsible for disturbances created in this country.

After months of weariness, now every one is perked up planning for a summer vacation which will tax their energy and send them back to their jobs more played out than ever.

Those cars in the yard of the car barn look as though they all had a good-sized skate on and were fixed signals of a small pox epidemic from the color of the paint.

GETTING TIRESOME.

If the truth was actually handed out by a majority of the people at the present time the verdict would be that they were heartily sick of the present political situation. The papers teem each day with the announcements and claims of various individuals. The sayings of some men are pumped from one end of the country to the other. They may not be particularly bright or brilliant, but a catchy phrase here and there delivered with marked study holds the attention a moment and then it must be sent broadcast, no matter what its weight or significance or whether it represents facts or fiction of present day politics. Obscure individuals, feeling the value of free advertising, rush into print with opinions or statements. No one ever heard tell of some of those leaders a few years ago and perhaps after this frenzied frippery politics has had its flying will never be heard of again. The people will decide in their own way whom they desire to elect and the foolish sputtering claims of the chairman of this or that chowder party or cigarette cadets club will not weigh very heavily on their minds. The people desire a more dignified and restful campaign. They are tired of this brag and bluster and will be heartily glad when the time comes that will relegate some of the self appointed leaders of the present tumult to the piazza seat of the post office in Five Corners where he can continue to whittle away on a pine stick with all the agility as of yore.

THE ENTERING WEDGE.

The entering wedge of what may ultimately prove the complete domination of Cuba by the United States was entered upon this week when United States troops advanced from their coaling station and penetrated the interior of the island republic for the better protection of the lives and property of United States citizens and others on the island. For a people who had gained their freedom after years of conflict and slaughter and tyranny from Spain, the Cubans as a whole showed a marvelous unrest and lack of appreciation of the great benefits thrust upon them. It isscarce fifteen years since their independence was declared yet on several occasions the United States has been felt called upon to intervene to maintain the integrity of the island government. Is it that the spirit of unrest and revolution was active for so many years that it has got into the blood and cannot be satisfied unless in constant action? Whatever it may be it really seems as if the neighboring republic sadly needed a guardian and whether the Cubans like it or not Uncle Sam would be the most natural candidate for this job under the circumstance. Then perhaps the Cubans may wake up and realize they did not fully appreciate the great powers and privileges they enjoyed.

THE SERVANT PROBLEM IN PLAY

King's Daughters Held Profitable Session

LED BY MISS SAMPSON

A reception was tendered the men Tuesday evening in the parlor of Bethany church under the auspices of the King's Daughters Unity Circle, Mrs. William G. Shaw, president, presiding and welcomed the guests very graciously.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Mary Sampson, who took for her subject, "A Helping Hand."

Miss Sampson led in prayer, all uniting in the Lord's Prayer. The hymn, "Pass it on," was sung, after which the reports of the different committees were given. $800 was given to Pond Home, besides useful articles, donation day, by the King's Daughters of Norfolk County.

A comedy, "The servant problem," under the direction of the entertainment and music ten was presented with the following cast:

Mrs. Seraphina Gray, mistress of house, Mrs. S. I. Wood.

Mrs. Angelina White, a guest, Mrs. William Wilson.

Mary O'Hooligan, Mrs. Gray's servant, Mrs. E. E. Miller.

Trudel Schmidt, Mrs. George Abele.

Annabelle Estelle Darling, Mrs. Edith Carey Page.

Hepzibah Strout, Mrs. Albert Hayden.

Maggie Callahan, Mrs. Fred Drake.

Lydia Ann Porter, Mrs. Charles Sampson.

The different situations were very amusing and the parts well taken. Mrs. Page sang a group of songs in her usual exquisite voice.

A social and informal hour was enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Forty-eight reproductions of Jean Baptiste Corot's paintings will be on exhibition at the library until June 24. These include most of his well known paintings. The period of his work was from 1826 to 1875. In reference to his art it is interesting to note that he did not begin the study for his life work until twenty-two years of age. He then became a pupil of Michallon, later of Berlin, and finally completed his studies in Italy.

His method was to work in the country in summer, early and late, in the open air, to catch those effects only to be seen at dawn, at sunset, and by moonlight, in which he delighted. He saw and portrayed nature with his own eyes in a manner replete with poetry and fancy, in which style he has found followers in Troyan, Diaz, and others.

A list of books on Gardening with appropriate pictures illustrating what may be done in that line, has been placed on the bulletin board.

Fitting Tribute at Entrance to Hall of Flags

ENDORSED BY G. A. R.

The Massachusetts Department Daughters of Veterans is to erect a memorial to the Massachusetts army nurses of the Civil War; and for that purpose the Army Nurses' Memorial Association has been incorporated.

The proposed memorial, which consists of two bronze figures mounted on a marble pedestal, is the work of the well-known artist and sculptor, Bela L. Pratt of Boston. The State Art commission has approved the design and the Massachusetts Legislature has accepted the memorial to be placed in the State House at the easterly side of the Senate staircase.

The memorial will cost approxmately $15,000 and contributions may be sent to Lee, Higginson & Co., 44 State street, Boston, trustees for the association.

PROGRESS AND OPPORTUNITY

Walk Hand in Hand in Successful Development

SAY CANADIAN NEIGHBORS

The associated Boards of Trade of the Eastern Townships of Quebec have submitted to the public a record entitled "Progress and Opportunity." It calls attention to the agricultural supremacy of this territory and invites a most thorough investigation by anyone interested in seeking a farming location where the prospects are bright and where progress is the central feature.

The town of Sherbrooke is headquarters of the association and a secretary is sending the literature pertaining to the section to all who make inquiries.

Manufacurers are invited to establish within this territory and reap its fruits of unexcelled advantage. Capitalists are asked to join in the development of mines and lands. Three rivers furnish opportunities for all purposes and an electric company has been established to supply power generated by the rivers.

Farmers with capital to establish on the fertile land are particularly desired. While the yield of all crops surpasses the majority of farm lands, the boards of trade especially want an increase in the productiveness of their territory. Farm workers are asked to respond to the urgent demand of farmers for more help, and skilled and unskilled workmen are needed to fill the positions created through the industrial and commercial expansion.

The region extends all the possibilities of rest and recreation and the lakes and rivers, hills and valleys, its fishing and hunting opportunities, hospitable hotels and homes, are most alluring to the pleasure seeker.

The hardy pioneers of the land were American Loyalists and discharged British soldiers. In one hundred years the improvement has reached satisfaction, but the combined earnestness on the part of the settlers means more progress.

Americans possessing integrity, of purpose and a willingness to do their part are invited to communicate with the Associated Boards of Trade, Sherbrooke, Quebec.

ALL STAR CLUB.

The officers of the All Star club held their first banquet at the president's home, 37 Cranch street, on Wednesday. True to all predictions every feature was carried out with great success, the members assembling promptly at 12 o'clock at the president's home.

Miss Helen E. Gurney, who had charge of the dinner is to be complimented on the excellent menu. The president's sister, Miss Anna Livingston was guest of honor.

The present officers are Donald Gurney, president; Walter Johnson, vice president; Thuri Swanson, treasurer and Albian Fornell, secretary. The club is only a few months old but the members undertake all work with such zeal and good-will that it promises to become a success in future years.

QUINCY GIRL TO BRYN MAWR

Miss Elcock Leaves Western Place to Come East

A WOODWARD GRADUATE

Word has been received in Quincy that Miss Mary A. Elcock, for the past eight years, director of physical training at Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wisconsin, has been appointed director of the gymnasium work in the Bryn Mawr Preparatory School at Baltimore. Her many friends are highly gratified over her selection for this position at one of the leading girls' seminaries in the country.

Miss Elcock is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Elcock of Marsh street. She is a graduate of the Woodward Institute and also from the Dr. Sargent's school at Cambridge. Shortly after her graduation from the latter she received the western appointment. There is a great deal of regret expressed at Kemper Hall because of the loss of a very popular instructor.

WEDDING BELLS.

On June 12, Miss Mary Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, Main street, and Police Officer J. Joseph Avery of the local force will be married at St. John's Church.

Miss Thompson is one of the popular young ladies in Quincy and is a prominent member of St. John's Church.

Officer Avery is a former sexton of the church and is at present patrolling the Adams street beat. He has recently erected a house on Lowe street.

WINGED BEAUTIES PRESERVED

Extermination of Wild Game Checked by Strong Effort

BREEDERS HELPED

A determined, sustained and successful effort on the part of the National Association of Audubon Societies, assisted by the Massachusetts branch and the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective association and many other scientific societies, resulted in the recent entactment of a law which will stop the wholesale extermination of grouse and woodcock.

Spring shooting and the sale of wild game has been one of the principal reasons that the birds have been gradually, but nevertheless surely, disappearing. Although the seasons have been shortened, the slaughter has continued, but after January 1, 1913, the sale of all game will be stopped.

While the bill will not stop the artificial propagation of game, it will make it necessary to raise what is required for sale, and in this way, a helping hand has been extended to the breeder.

Shore birds, wild fowl and game will hereafter increase and it is expected that the sturdy New England climate will once again be in the foreground because of its winged beauties.

HIGH SCHOOL.

Memorial exercises were held in the hall last Wednesday. Mr. Southworth and Mr. Phillips gave addresses and told of some of their own experiences on the battlefield. Mrs. Gould was present and represented the Woman's Relief Corps.

An exhibition of the industrial work of students of Quincy High school, during the past year, will take place in the High school gymnasium Friday afternoon and evening. The exhibition will be in order from 3.30 to 5.30 o'clock in the afternoon and from 7.30 to 9. 30 o'clock in the evening.

Headmaster James D. Howlett, assisted by the teachers and students in industrial work, will be on hand to receive the visitors, explain the work and exhibit tools, stock and products and later light refreshments will be served.

GRIDLEY BRYANT SCHOOL.

As a result of the Art exhibit held April 29th in Saint Mary's Hall for the benefit of the school, eight beautiful, high-class reproductions of famous paintings have recently been placed in the several grades as follows:—

Grade I. Village Choir by Lins.
Grade II. Maternity by Debat-Ponsan.
Grade III. Child Handel by Dicksee
Grade IV. Shepherdess by LeRolle.
Grade V. Christ and the Doctors by Hofmann.
Grade VI. Washington Crossing The Delaware by Leutze.
Grade VII. Sir Galahad by Watts.
Grade VIII. Horse Fair by Bonheur.

The pictures are all finished in sepia, framed in oak appropriately stained, and are approximately 22 x 28 inches in size.

In addition to the above, Grade V. won the prize picture offered for selling the largest number of tickets to the Art exhibit. This is a photograph in sepia, 20 x 24 inches, of the Grand canal in Venice, suitably framed.

Much credit for this valuable acquisition to the display of fine art in our schools is due to the work of the Parents' Committee who so ably assisted the teachers in promoting the Art exhibit.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL.

The graduating class at the Washington school make their annual historical trip under Mr. Pollard's guidance tomorrow. This excursion has been the custom at the Washington school for a good many years and the pupils have an opportunity to see during the day a great many of the historic places and exhibits that they have read about during the year.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

Preliminary registration has shown an unusually large enrolment for the Woodward Institute next year. The Freshman class will be by far the largest in the history of the school. This is probably the last year that girls will be admitted to Woodward Institute direct from the grammar schools by certificate. In order to limit the enrolment to the capacity of the building it is quite probable that next year and thereafter there will be entrance examination for admission which will result in raising the standard of the school very greatly. This plan is now followed in the Roxbury Latin school where the endowment conditions are very similar.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The committee on evening schools are planning another meeting in about two weeks for a further conference with representatives from the skilled trades with reference to evening industrial courses for the next winter term. The committee has only a limited sum to expend on the work and wishes all the suggestions possible in order that its expenditures may produce the best results. It is quite probable that another elementary evening school will also be opened in the Lincoln building and that school is to be equipped with electric lights with that end in view.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

A reception in charge of a committee of mothers, will be given to the classes of 1912 of the Wollaston and Massachusetts Fields schools. Friday evening, June 14, 8 o'clock, at the Wollaston school assembly hall. The classes will sing their graduation songs and enjoy a social evening.

The cup won by the baseball team is on exhibition at the school. The boys are very glad to have won it this year, especially since it is the first year in the new building.

The school will hold a candy and ice cream sale Tuesday to raise money to take the boys to an American League game. Boston and Chicago.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

Last year the residents of the Park and Downs were very proud of the beautiful lawn and flower beds around the Massachusetts Fields school. This year an endeavor will be made to continue the good work. Tickets at five cents entitling the holder to one share are on sale by the children of the school. In this way a garden and flower fund will be created. The boys of the baseball team are very glad to have won their last game. Their record was lost 9, won 2.

NORMAL SCHOOL REQUIREMENTS.

As a number of girls from Quincy enter the normal schools each year, it will be of interest to record that the requirements for admission to those schools on certificate has now been raised so that they are to be on a par with college entrance requirements. This has been done because of the crowded conditions of most of the normal schools and in order to raise the standard of scholarship and of the graduates.

LITERARY AND MUSICAL TREAT

For Women of the Riverside Club at Their Home

MRS. C. S. WILLIAMS HOSTESS

A large number of ladies, members of the Quincy Women's Riverside club were royally entertained at the club house on Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. C. S. Williams being the hostess. The affair opened with a musical program. The first number given was a violin and piano duet by Miss Violet Smith and Master Theodore Smith of Wollaston, who rendered a selection from the "Pink Lady", which was heartily applauded. This was followed by a musical monologue entitled "Abou Ben Adhem," given by Mrs. Williams, accompanied on the piano by Miss Smith, and was finely rendered. Miss Smith and her brother also played Traumeri by Robert Schumann. A vocal selection "Love's Coronation," was next in order and given by Mrs. J. Bingham, Miss Margaret Carruthers, accompanying her on the piano. This was heartily applauded and Mrs. Bingham sang for an encore "Down the Vale."

Punch and cake was then served, after which Miss Smith played the piano and an old fashioned Virginia reel was enjoyed by all who were there both young and old.

TANGLED THREAD LED FROM PATH

Circus Colored Woman Lost in Maze of Streets and

AGAIN PILOTED ON HER WAY

A colored woman who gave her name as Louise Martin was picked up by Officer Avery late Wednesday evening wandering about Hancock street Wollaston. The woman claimed that she was a lady's maid for one of the bareback riders of Barnum's circus. While the show was exhibiting in Brockton Wednesday she took a trip to Boston and became lost in the shuffle. Her money she had, became separated from her and had started to walk back to Brockton and had got as far as Wollaston when she became lost in the maze of streets.

Officer Avery sent her to the police station where she was a guest for the night. This morning she was taken to court but there was no complaint entered against her. Chief Burrell by some telephoning found that the circus was exhibiting at Providence, R. I. today and arrangements will be made to send her to that city.

LINEN SHOWER TO MISS HARDING

Prospective Bride Pulled String Cornucopia Did Rest

ALSO MISS READ'S BIRTHDAY

One of the prettiest affairs ever held in Atlantic, was at the home of Miss Maud Read, of Squantum street, on Tuesday evening. The occasion was a dual affair, the celebration of Miss Read's birthday and extending to Miss Annie Harding of Botolph street a linen shower. Miss Harding's engagement was recently announced and the numerous articles of linen received last evening will be carefully stored away for future use.

Hearts were played from eight until nine, trophies being awarded to Miss Harding and Mrs. Ralph Read of Ashmont. At nine o'clock, strains from a wedding march were played by Miss Margaret Read and the twelve young ladies, led by Miss Harding, marched into the dining room, where a supper of several courses was served.

Elaborate decorations of lavender crepe paper streamers, wisteria, individual lavender baskets and place cards made the room most attractive. A cornucopia suspended by lavender ribbon from the chandelier contained the articles of linen and at 10.30 o'clock, Miss Harding pulled the ribbons attached to her place, and the gifts came down with a shower in front of the prospective bride.

It took an hour to look over all the beautiful things, and at midnight the happy party broke up. Those present were; Miss Harding, Miss Lovejoy, Miss Baker, Miss Barber, Miss Woll, Miss Gladys Bartlett, Mrs. Albert Hall Mrs. Alva Beede, Mrs. Henry Malloch, Mrs. Ralph Read, Mrs. Harvey Holt, and Miss Read.

WOODWARD GIRL PASSED AWAY

Frances E. Lavelle Was in Poor Health. Gave Up Studies

REVERENCED BY CLASSMATES

The flag at the Woodward Institute was at half mast Wednesday out of respect for Miss Frances E. Lavelle, a popular member of the senior class, whose funeral took place in the morning from her late residence 29 Woodbine street, Wollaston. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, by the pastor Rev. John P. Cuffe. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral mass and the members of the graduating class of the Woodward Institute attended in a body.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished by the regular choir under the direction of organist Miss Louise Costello. Burial was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy. There was a profusion of floral tributes, conspicuous among them being a large wreath of sweet peas from the members of the senior class at the Institute.

The deceased was 19 years of age, and was widely known in Quincy. She was forced to abandon studies in the winter, owing to ill health. She had always endeared herself to a wide circle of friends who now share her parents in their bereavement.

BOARD OF TRADE

This public transportation commission is given jurisdiction over the railroads, street railways, steamship lines, express companies, and also takes over from the highway commission the jurisdiction over telephone and telegraph companies. The chairman of the State Highway Commission has in writing approved of the transfer of the jurisdiction of his commission over telephone and telegraph companies to the new commission, believing that the duty of regulating telegraph and telephone companies is foreign to the proper work of his commission.

The public transportation commission created by this act is granted mandatory powers to regulate the public utilities subject to its control. These powers include power to make an order directing any railroad or railway to increase the number of its trains or of its cars or its motive power, or rolling stock, or to change the time scheduled for the run of any train or car, or make any other suitable order that the commission may determine reasonably necessary to accommodate and transport the traffic, passenger or freight, transported or offered for transportation within the commonwealth, to determine and by order to prescribe and fix reasonable regulations for the furnishing and distribution of freight cars to shippers, for the switching of the same, for the loading and unloading thereof, for demurrage charges in respect thereto, and for the weighing of cars and freight offered for shipment or transported by any railroad or railway, to order the installation of side track connections where needed upon reasonable terms and to require and order the establishment and maintenance by any railroad or railway, of such passenger stations and freight stations, stopping places or discharging points as it may deem requisite for the service of the public."

Mr. Richards was asked a number of questions during his remarks which were readily answered. One pointed question was as to whom he represented. Mr. Richards was equally frank in answering and said that he represented the Governor.

Joseph Walker thought a commission that would compel the railroad to give the granite men of the city better facilities would be a good thing as did also James Joss.

After some further discussion ex-Representative Langelier moved that the Board of Trade go on record as being in favor of the passage of a bill by the present legislature substantially along the lines of these two bills mentioned. After some questioning however the motion was amended and as finally passed was:

"That the Board of Trade goes on record as favoring the passage of a bill by the present legislature for a public utilities commission substantially as laid down in the Gov. Foss or Barnes bill."

Commissioner Crane spoke of the good work that had been done in the legislature this year for the City of Quincy by Representatives Piper and Leslie. Practically everything that the city had asked for had been granted owing to their good work and he moved a rising vote of thanks to those two representatives.

Others wanted to include ex-Representatives Thomas and Langelier and they were included in the motion.

Before the vote was put however President Hearn took occasion to pay a personal tribute to the good work done by the two representatives. The motion was unanimously voted.

In response Representative Piper expressed the appreciation of his colleague and himself of this public commendation and also spoke of the hearty support that had been given him by the citiezns and Board of Trade.

A communication relative to the matter of foreign and domestic fire insurance was referred to a committee composed of William E. Barnes, W. H. Teasdale, Oscar F. Frisk and M. T. Sullivan.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Richards for his interesting talk.

A communication was received from the Ward Four Improvement association enclosing a communication it had received from the Bay State Street railway stating that the company had found it inexpedient to build the missing link of line so called between East Milton and Dorchester. It was placed on file.

Arthur B. Hultman moved that the City Council be asked to give a public hearing on the order for sidewalks which was voted without question or debate. The meeting then adjourned.

TRACK TEAM AT ARLINGTON MEET

Quincy Boys Will Try to Uphold Their Standard

The Quincy High track team journey to Arlington this afternoon where they will compete in a dual meet with the High school of that city.

The following athletes made the trip; Henry Trask, captain, Frank V. Gordon, (manager) Leon White, Fred Kingsbury, Ralph Prout, Arthur Williams, Walter Meade, Charles Holmes, Clarence Lundin, William Clark, Roswell Bill, S. Safford, Felix Favorite.

HIGH BALL TEAM DISBANDED.

The Quincy High school base ball team has disbanded for this season, as a result of six players falling below the required average in their studies. A game was scheduled for Wednesday afternoon with The Boston High school of Commerce, but was cancelled at the eleventh hour, as a result of a consultation beween Headmaster James D. Howlett and Coach Arthur Staff.

The failure of some of the players to keep up in their studies, has proved a great drawback to the team, especially during the last few games and it was only through the efforts of the Coach that these players were allowed to appear in the lineup.

The majority of the players under band are members of the senior class and as only a few school days remain, they will have to study hard to get their diplomas. Mr. Howlett dislikes very much to disband the team at this late day but he felt he was acting in the interests of the players concerned and the entire student body.

B. U. GRADUATE.

Miss Elizabeth Hallowell, daughter of the late Dr. Hallowell, received the degree of Master of Arts at the Commencement Exercises of Boston University on Wednesday. The subject of her Thesis was "The English pastoral; its origin and development."

ARCHBALD CASE CLOSED

Far as Testimony Before Investigating Committee Is Concerned

Washington, June 6.—Investigation by the judiciary committee of the committee of the house into the charges of improper conduct against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the commerce court is concluded in so far as taking of testimony is concerned. The committee will discuss the action to be taken in executive session.

Judge Archbald declined an opportunity to defend himself by going on the witness stand. The only defense offered was by his attorney, Colonel Worthing, who read into the record the judge's statement in court when he imposed a fine of $1000 on the officials of the wire trust who were indicted.

Taking every precaution to secure secrecy, the house judiciary committee has begun its consideration of evidence.

A report to the house is not expected until next week. Any conclusion the committee may reach is practically certain to be concurred in by the house.

Several committeemen, after digesting the evidence, declare impeachment proceedings will be brought in any event, putting it "up" to the senate to make a final decision after a full trial.

SURGICAL WORK CURES INSANITY

Woman Shot 13 Yea's Ago Declared Sane Now

Lynn, Mass., June 6.—Insane for thirteen years as a result of being shot by a former husband, Mrs. L. Grace Warren was declared absolutely sane at the Danvers asylum yesterday after an operation by Lynn surgeons. It was performed three weeks ago, and a large piece of her skull was sawed out.

Mrs. Warren is 34 years old. She is the wife of Albert Warren of Lynn. Her insanity dates back to the time she was shot by Edgar Stapham, her former husband.

A section of the woman's skull three and a half inches long and one-half inch wide was sawed away and removed by Drs. Gray and Lovell of Lynn, which brought immediate relief to the patient.

The operation revealed that the bullets had caused the skull to press upon the brain, the covering of which adhered to the skull.

FRIEND KILLS FRIEND

Boy Hunter Shoots as Companion Walks In Front of Rifle

Houlton, Me., June 6.—A bullet from the rifle of another boy with whom he was hunting woodchucks caused the death of Richard Smith, 14, son of Wilbur Smith of this town.

William Finnegan had raised his gun to shoot when the Smith boy stepped in front of him and received the bullet in his lung.

The authorities consider the shooting accidental.

The union will try to offer arbitration to the company, and if it cannot secure a conference it will write to President Bancroft and, if necessary, issue public statements so as to get its plans before the Elevated management and before the public.

GATHERING FOR CHICAGO FIGHT

National Committee Will Be First Battle Field

RESULT OF CONTESTS VITAL

Taft Adherents Confident They Will Control Committee—As They Swing Contests So Will Swing Convention—Newly Elected National Committeemen Will Not Be Seated—Teddy's Followers Have No Doubts

Chicago, June 6.—Confidence of the Taft men in the renomination of the president is the feature of the gathering of the Republicans here on the day of the meeting of the Republican national committee. Outside politicians and newspaper men pouring in the city by the dozens are a little surprised by the attitude of the Taftites, which apparently is genuine and based upon recent events. An inside canvass of the national committee discloses thirty-one out of fifty-three on whom it is believed the president can depend through thick and thin. The question until now has not been whether Taft commanded a majority of the national committee, for that fact never has been in doubt, but whether that majority was of the thick or thin variety. The Taft leaders now have made up their minds that it is. Roosevelt men appear equally convinced. Not only is the colonel declaiming over the brigandage of the enemy, but his friends in Chicago are trying to make a still louder noise in their efforts to make it appear that every adverse decision of the national committee is an act of piracy.

The attempt of the Roosevelt followers to seat newly-elected national committeemen has failed. William L. Ward, committeeman from New York and a leading Roosevelt lieutenant, admitted this on his arrival here.

"Do you consider that ruling good in the Nebraska situation where an attempt is being made to have the sitting member, Victor Rosewater, unseated?" he was asked.

"Mr. Rosewater is a legal member of this committee and will retain his seat during the lifetime of the committee," answered Ward with animation.

Senator Crane got busy as soon as he arrived in the task of sounding national committeemen. To friends in whom he confided he made it plain that the Taft forces were now certain that they had control of the convention and that they were prepared to "stiffen any weak-knee brethren."

For the first time since the Taft men have been in Chicago they were assuming a belligerant attitude today and the prospects of a fight to the finish grew better as the day wore on. It was made plain by everyone that would talk about the situation that there will be no suggestion of a compromise. Taft and Roosevelt will stand or fall by the action of the convention. They will fight it out together and it was certain yesterday that the La Follette delegates would be too few in number to hold the balance of power and force a deadlock.

WOMEN START RIOT

Men and Women Injured and a 13-Year-Old Boy Fatally Shot

Newark, N. J., June 6.—In a wild strike riot started by women at the Lackawanna railroad, which developed into a terrific battle between the reserves and 500 infuriated laborers, a 13-year-old high school boy was shot through the skull, the woman who led the strikers was hit in two places and five men were badly injured. It was a desperate fight from start to finish.

Among the injured were two noncombatants, a truckman and Albert Faulkes, besides the school boy. The boy is dying in the city hospital. Mrs. Feliminio Dauria, who led the women, is also expected to die.

Relative to Socialist Oleson Being Deprived of Citizenship

Washington, June 6.—Disagreeing with the decision of Federal Judge Hanford at Seattle, depriving Leonard Oleson of his citizenship because he is a Socialist, Attorney General Wickersham has instructed the United States attorney at Seattle to assist Oleson in reopening the case to seek a reversal of the decision.

It is said that an appeal probably will be taken direct to the supreme court if Judge Hanford refuses to reverse his decision.

Des Moines, Ia., June 6.—Senator Kenyon, progressive, will probably have a majority of 70,000 over Lafe Young, stand-pat Republican, in the state primaries.

PICKET LINE REDUCED

Clinton Strikers Have Been Very Quiet and Work In Homes

Clinton, Mass., June 6.—The picket line at the Lancaster mills is the smallest since the strike of 350 weavers was declared a month ago. The strikers turned their attention to the districts where the operatives live. No instance of intimidation was reported to the police. Fewer strikers than usual were on the streets or at the usual daily mass meeting.

Eugene O. Pratt, the only dealer in explosives in the town, said that the state police had taken charge of his magazine. This action, it is understood, is to guard against any of the explosives being stolen by the unknown persons who have threatened to blow up the Wachusett dam.

MORE OUT IN LAWRENCE

Police Clear the Streets of All Loiterers Around Mill

Lawrence, Mass., June 6.—About 300 employes of the combing-room at the Washington mills plant of the American Woolen company quit work out of sympathy with the 400 strikers in the combing and carding rooms. The operatives claim that the mill officials have refused to confer with their committee.

A squad of thirty police officers in charge of three sergeants was sent to the mill and cleared the streets. The strike originated over the discharge of an Industrial Worker of the World.

SOCIALISTS URGE BODY FOR PEACE

Workingmen Demand Full Rights of Suffrage

Brussels, June 6.—The force of public opinion has now been exerted to arrest the wave of sanguinary rioting, destruction of property and sacking of churches which spread over the country as an expression of Socialistic resentment at the government victory at the polls Sunday. The press is united in urging the people to abstain from violence. M. Vandervelde and M. Denis, the Socialist leaders appeal to their followers to refrain from rioting, and, if the general strike is not called, it is believed that the disorders will gradually die out.

The executive committee of the Socialist party has decided to issue an appeal exhorting the populace to be calm and asking the convocation of a congress on June 30 to receive a bill for the revision of the constitution.

The educational fight, which is the principal cause of the present disturbance, is explained as follows: The Belgian schools today are either church schools or public schools. The schools are managed and subsidized by the communes alone and in the non-clerical communes there is a tendency to subsidize only the public schools. The opposition urges that the church schools should be paid for by the church, not by the government.

The Liberals, who decided that what the industrial masses really craved was universal suffrage, consented to add this measure to the joint Liberal and Socialist program. This also included abolition of the plural system of voting, which has long been detested by the laboring elements. Many Belgians have two, even three, votes. The Socialists assert that this strengthens the Conservative, or Clerical force, at the elections at the expense of the masses of the people in the great urban and manufacturing centres.

Death of Senator Nixon

LARGER R. R. BOARD

Is the Demand of Governor Foss Before He Signs the Bill

Boston, June 6.—The bill to allow the Southern New England railroad, the New England branch of the Grand Trunk, to extend its lines to Worcester and Boston, won an easy victory and will reach the governor today.

Governor Foss declares that he will surely veto both the western trolley merger and the Grand Trunk bill unless the legislature sends him a bill providing for "proper supervision" of the transportation companies.

It is understood that the governor stands firmly for an increased membership of the railroad commission. Proper supervision seems to be his slogan at this stage.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED, by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Ten Feet Deep

By Clarissa Mackie

THE day I went crabbing with Captain Barnabas Fish I carried a basket containing all the dainties that I knew the good captain loved. He had become an enthusiast about club sandwiches, which he had not tasted before this summer when I first made his acquaintance, and so I was careful that there was a goodly supply of these toothsome "entire meal" sandwiches in the lunch basket. There was also a great square of frosted gingerbread, and wrapped in a napkin were several flaky plum tarts. In one corner of the basket was a tall bottle of dandelion wine. All these delicacies were produced by the skillful hands of Miss Maria Weeks, with whom I boarded.

Crabbing is a favorite pastime among the summer visitors at Quince Haven. One enters a sturdy flat bottomed skiff and, leaving the deeper waters of the bay, seeks the narrow channel leading into Little Quince harbor. This channel is navigable only at high tide, and if one is so unfortunate as to remain within the charming circle of Little Quince hills until the tide has ebbed it is only a three mile tramp around the beach to Quince Haven, with another trip back to the crabbing grounds for the skiff when the tide next serves.

Captain Barnabas Fish knew the tide as well as he did the wind and weather and the set of clouds, so we reached the little channel just as the tide flowed deep enough to carry us swiftly through its narrow width into Little Quince harbor. Once in here, Captain Barnabas allowed the skiff to drift quietly along the low shore among the tall, reedy salt grasses.

The crab nets were brought forth, and each of us took a long pole and warily dredged for the succulent crustaceans. Now and then one of us would bring up a pole with the net bag heavily weighted with the black wriggling creatures, or perhaps one lone captive would cling by a single claw to the netting.

As noon approached the pile in Captain Barnabas' big basket grew higher, and at last we gave up the sport and poled the skiff into the cool shadow of wild plum bushes overhanging from the high bank.

From under the bank little rills of ice cold water gushed from hidden springs, and here we washed our hands and returned to the skiff for lunch. Captain Barnabas wanted to broil some crabs on a hastily constructed driftwood fire, but I vetoed the suggestion, tempting as it was.

"A gigantic figure that gave vent to a snarling yell."

I presented one of his loved club sandwiches, and his gray eyes twinkled appreciatively.

"It's better 'n broiled crabs," he murmured from the midst of a huge bite of crisp toast, lettuce leaf, mayonnaise, chicken breast and tender bacon.

"You never tasted anything quite so delicious even on that treasure island of yours," I declared meaningly.

"Ho, ho!" roared the captain, slapping his knee vigorously. "I knew there was something back of that sandwich, Miss Telham! Now, I was going to tell you that story today anyway, so you might have kept all your bribes to home."

"Then you shall tell it all the better for the sandwiches," I returned, undaunted by his laughter. "I hope it's a story where you were cast ashore without even a bag of biscuits—they sound so dry and unpalatable. I'm sure bread fruit and cocoanuts are much more delicious."

"They're delicious, all right," agreed the captain amiably, helping himself to another sandwich, "but you get tired of eating fruit even on a desert island, and hardtack ain't to be despised even if it is washed down by stale water, not when you're hungry. Now, Ananias Slue ain't in this story, so I shall have to stick to the truth and tell you we were not cast ashore, but we rowed to the island right and proper in a ship's dinghy, with a keg of water and a bag of biscuits and some tins of salt horse stowed in the bow. We also took some picks and shovels and some guns.

"We knew the little island like a book. It was not far from the west coast of Central America and had been dug over from one end to the other by different treasure seekers, all after the same hidden gold and jewles. I can't stop to tell you the history surrounding the burying of the treasure by the oiliest old pirate that ever sailed the seas in the days before Captain Kidd. I can't tell you, either, of all the different expeditions that combed that island from end to end without success, and at last we folks aboard the Indus resolved to have a try at it one voyage when we was sailing light from San Francisco to Valparaiso, where we were going to pick up a cargo of nitrate.

"Four of us went ashore in the dinghy, and the minute we stepped on that shell strewn beach and heard the rustling of the palms and smelled the ripe fruit we knew right away that we were going to find that treasure. There was something in the very atmosphere of the place that hinted at adventure, and we had plenty of it before we left. Thank you, ma'am. I will take another piece of gingerbread. I don't reckon you made it?" he inquired.

I assured him that Miss Maria Weeks had concocted the spicy loaf, and I thought he looked tenderly reminiscent at the frosting before he removed a semicircle from his slice. I had a suspicion that in the distant past there might have lurked a tender romance between my companionable old salt and the rather grim spinster who "accommodated" me with room and board. I had my own plans for furthering this romance, and the delicious lunch I had brought was only one of little traps I had prepared for the gentle, unsuspecting captain.

"You went ashore"— I prompted him.

"Yes, ma'am, we went ashore and made a little camp among the palms, and after we had had some supper we started off at a run for the place where we had calculated the treasure was buried. Of course every man who ever went to that island had a different theory as to where it was hid, but we thought ours was a sure guess, for Louis Franck, a Finn who was one of our crew, had an ancestor who had actually sailed with this bloody old pirate away back before the Revolutionary war days. Franck could recite the legend that had been handed down by his ancestor so glibly that he could tell it the same every time, and so after awhile we got to believe it was really so, and that was how it happened we decided to stop there.

"Of course Franck was the leader and guide, for he said his ancestor had said that the chest was buried ten feet deep under a rock ten feet square.

"We found the largest rock on the island, and it was only three feet six by six feet two, and it looked thin, and Franck said he thought it had been worn off by the wind and weather during all that time. It was snow white coral rock too.

"The rock was set in a little grove of palm trees, and I suppose once it had rested on the sandy shore, but as the island grew larger and sand was washed up to form a new beach trees grew up around the stone until it really was about in the middle of the island when we found it.

"We worked away picking and prying at the loose sand around the rock and trying to get crowbars under it so as to lift it up when we smelled wood smoke."

"'What's that?' asked Franck.

"'The remains of our campfire,' I told him, but afterward I found out I was wrong.

"It soon grew dark, for we had been late in landing and we had not intended beginning operations until morning, but the thirst for adventure was strong within us and even while the shadows lengthened a full moon arose from the sea and we decided to continue the work by its light.

"We had just pried off the stone and sent it crashing into the undergrowth when there arose from our midst, apparently from the disturbed soil under the stone, a gigantic figure that gave vent to a snarling yell as he leaped into the moonlit space and faced us.

"Miss Telham," said the captain impressively, emphasizing his words with successive taps of a horny forefinger against his other palm, "Miss Telham, believe me, ma'am, when I tell you that that there figure was nothing more or less than the ghost of the bloody pirate who had buried the treasure!"

"Captain Barnabas!" I protested.

He nodded. "That's what Louis Franck, the Finn, said. He said the critter looked just like the description his ancestor had handed down of the pirate who had buried the treasure. He whispered it to us, for I'll confess, ma'am, we huddled together all at once under the shock of seeing him and hearing his yell. I don't know which was the worst. He was a crazy looking thing, sure enough, as he pranced around there, waving a ragged looking knife and shouting all sorts of gibberish that nobody understood.

"I told Franck it sounded to me like Finnish, but he said it was Italian, and Tony Laconti said it was German, and the mate, who was a Britisher, said it was pure French. From what I heard afterward I guess it was Irish. Well, as I was saying, the pirate was crazy enough in looks—he wore knee breeches and a loose white shirt and a red sash around his waist with all kinds of weapons stuck in it, and his hair was long and dark, and over his forehead was bound a red handkerchief knotted behind. We could see all this because the tropical moon made it like day there on the white beach.

"'How do you know it's a ghost?' I whispered to Louis Franck, who shivered beside me.

"He said the critter came from under the stone, and I couldn't deny it because it looked that way to me, and now as he capered around out there a sudden terror seized upon the whole four of us at once, and as we turned and ran he dashed into the thicket after us and away we went pell mell for the shore where we had left the boat.

"As we ran I could feel my hair bristling on my head, and cold shivers ran down my spine. All I wanted was to reach the boat and push off for the ship. We were all young chaps and had our share of sailors' superstitions, if an older head had been along things might have turned out different.

"We piled into the boat and pushed off, leaving all our stores behind. As we pulled toward the Indus—I was second mate on her then—we turned around and saw the ghostly pirate dancing at the water's edge. The knife flashed in the moonlight, and then all at once he disappeared, and there remained nothing save a belt of weird blue light that floated through the air in our wake.

"Where would you be, captain, if you had all that money?"

"Captain Sackville declared it was a corpse light, and as our boat was hoisted to the davits he had all sails bent, anchors up, and away we went clipping along before a fresh nor'wester and at last, to our relief, leaving the blue light behind with the island far astern."

The captain replaced the luncheon basket in the stern of the skiff, shifted the oars into the rowlocks and deftly shot out into Little Quince harbor. The blades of the oars rifled the placid surface in which the tall grasses were mirrored, and from a tall pine tree a red winged blackbird called.

"Well?" I asked impatiently. "Didn't you go back after the treasure?"

The captain shook his head solemnly, although I am positive his eyes twinkled amusement. He leaned forward, and the skiff shot into the channel that led into Quince Haven harbor.

"Miss Telham, when we arrived in New York months afterward we read in the papers that at last Little Island had given up her treasure to a bold Irishman from Hackensack, N. J. It told how this man, Sweeney, had pried up a flat stone and, together with his companions, had dug ten feet deep, mind you, Miss Telham, and found a chest of gold and jewels. If this Sweeney had not found us there and scared us away with his pretence of being a ghost of the pirate and afterward burning a blue signal light—why, I wouldn't be rowing you home across the bay this afternoon!"

"Where would you be, captain," I asked curiously, "if you had all that money?"

Captain Barnabas cocked an eye at the fleecy clouds, twisted his sunburned neck uncomfortably and finally spat reflectively over the side. At last he looked at me and grinned sheepishly.

"I reckon I'd be enjoying myself going crabbing with somebody or other," he said.

Night Light Machines.

Though the first match appeared in England as late as 1827, the idea seized a genius years before that date. This advertisement in a London Post of 1788 gives evidence: "For travelers, mariners, etc. Promethean fire and phosphorus: G. Watts respectfully acquaints the public that he has prepared a large quantity of machines of a portable and durable kind, with promethean fire, paper and match inclosed, most admirably calculated to prevent those disagreeable sensations which most frequently arise in the dreary hour of midnight, from sudden alarms, thieves, fire or sickness."

Difference In Speech.

Polly—You can never tell much about a man from his speech. Belle—That's right. There's Chollie, for instance, who stutters terribly. He proposed to me five minutes after we met, and it took Jack, who is the most voluble fellow in the world, three years.—Philadelphia Record.

MASCIOLI IS ELECTROCUTED

Paramour of Mrs. Cusumano Dies For Husband's Murder

LENA CUSUMANO COMMUTED

Mascioli Died at 18 Minutes After Midnight—Crime Was Committed In Hull, Mass.—Final Word Given Him Yesterday Afternoon—Mrs. Cusumano Has Death Sentence Commuted to Life Imprisonment

Boston, June 6.—Enrico Mascioli was electrocuted at Charlestown prison this morning for the murder of Frank Cusumano, killed with an axe at Hull, Sept. 18, 1910. He was pronounced dead at 12:18 o'clock.

Mascioli was led into the death chamber a few minutes past 12. He was placed in the chair, the electrodes applied and the straps fastened into place. Then Warden Bridges raised his cane. At the switch Edward Currier threw over the lever. The condemned man stiffened under the heavy voltage. Then the body relaxed and Medical Examiner Magrath and Dr. J. I. McLaughlin placed their stethoscopes upon the bared breast.

The final word that all hope for him was gone was told Mascioli by Rev. Father Murphy at his cell in the death house at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. This was after Mrs. Lena Cusumano, who had been convicted of the murder of her husband with Mascioli, had been told that her death sentence had been commuted by Governor Foss and the council to life imprisonment because they found there was doubt as to her guilt of murder in the first degree.

Her attorneys will now direct their efforts to secure her pardon.

Mrs. Lena Cusumano, saved from death in the electric chair by the unanimous vote of the executive council, was taken from the death house at Charlestown prison yesterday afternoon, and last evening sent by automobile to Sherborn to commence her life sentence.

The commutation of the woman's sentence culminated one of the most strenuous fights for a human life ever witnessed in this state. She is the first prisoner in the history of Massachusetts to leave the death house at Charlestown prison alive.

TO FINANCE OROZCO

State of Chihuahua Will Issue Bonds to Aid Rebel Leader

Chihuahua, Mex., June 6.—General Pascual Orozco came here from Bachimba to discuss certain subjects pending before the state legislature, now in session. One of the measures under discussion provided for the raising of needed funds, it being contemplated to issue short time interbearing bonds of small denominations. The payment of these will be guaranteed by the state and they may be used as currency.

The Mexican congressmen who have come here from Mexico City to talk peace with General Orozco say they represent a faction of the Mexican congress which will recognize Orozco if he lays down his arms.

GOMPERS NOT IMPLICATED

By Any Desire of Those Prosecuting Clarence Darrow

Los Angeles, Cal., June 6.—That the prosecution merely desired to place in evidence the fact, alleged by them, that certain sums of money aggregating about $200,000 had been sent to attorneys for the McNamara defense was stated by W. J. Ford, assistant district attorney.

"It is unfortunate that the impression was created," continued Ford, "that we intended to cast any reflections upon Mr. Gompers, Mr. Morrison or any other high officials of the American Federation of Labor. In producing the ledger account of Morrison as custodian of the McNamara defense fund in Washington, we only intend to prove that large sums of money were withdrawn and sent to Mr. Darrow."

NEW HAMPSHIRE MURDERER

Arrested by Farmer and Turned Over to the Sheriff

Canaan, N. H., June 6.—News of a homicide at Orange was received here. Henry Stimloski is alleged to have shot John McCough during a quarrel while the men were returning from a trip to Groton.

A farmer named Hubert, who witnessed the affair, captured Stimloski, and then notified the sheriff of the crime.

Roosevelt Gets 15,000

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 6.—Latest returns from South Dakota primary election indicate that the plurality for the ten Roosevelt delegates may reach 15,000. For governor, returns from about half the precincts in the state gave Byrne a lead of about 7000 over Egan. For congress, Thomas Sterling's friends claim his nomination over Senator Gamble by about 8000 plurality.

BROAD CHARGES OF SHIP MONOPOLY

Test Case On Brazil Business Started By Government

New York, June 6.—The national government has filed a civil anti-trust suit in the federal district court here against steamship interests alleged to have monopolized the transportation of passengers and freight between the United States and Brazil.

Sweeping charges of granting rebates, fixing arbitrary and unreasonable rates, and entering into conspiracies, combinations and agreements in violation of the Sherman law are made against the Prince line, Limited, the Hamburg lines and the proprietors of the Lamport & Hold line.

For five years, the government says, these steamship lines and certain of their officers or agents, who are named as individual defendants, have combined and conspired to destroy all competition in the traffic between the United States and Brazil.

The court is petitioned to declare the alleged combination a restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman law and to forbid the vessels of the defendants entering or clearing any port of the United States as long as the contracts, agreements and practices of which the government complains are continued.

Miss Ida F. daughter of Mr. Thomas M. and the late Mrs. Bridget Butler, passed away today at her home 57 Putnam street, after a long illness. Miss Butler was a graduate of the Quincy High school and Boston Normal school, and had received an appointment as a teacher in the new Cranch school, when she was offered a position in the Washington school, Boston. Her funeral will be held from her late home Saturday.

The family of Mr. Butler has been unusually sadly afflicted recently, as he has lost his wife and other daughter in the space of a few months. First came the death of his daughter, Mrs. Edmund W. Courtney, which was followed in a few months by his wife. Now his second daughter has been taken leaving only a sadly afflicted father and husband who has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his great bereavement.

WARSHIPS FOR CUBAN WATERS

Not For Immediate Use, But as Precautionary Measure

MARINES GUARDING PROPERTY

Caimanera, Cuba, June 6.—Four hundred and fifty American marines under command of Colonel Lucas were landed at Peseo Point, close to Caimanera, from which point they proceeded by train for Guantanamo City. The announced purpose of the movement is to guard American property and not for intervention.

Washington, June 6.—The marines referred to in the Caimanera report are said to be a portion of those in camp at the United States naval station on Guantanamo bay since the arrival there of the cruiser Prairie a week ago.

In response to repeated calls for protection from the planters, mostly Americans, between 400 and 500 of these marines have been sent to the city of Guantanamo, about fifteen miles inland from the American naval station and on the Cuba Eastern railway.

The large Santa Cecilia plantation is in that neighborhood. Some of its buildings have been burned and some of the livestock has been stolen by negro marauders nominally attached to General Estenoz's army of insurrectos.

The marines which left Caimanera for Guantanamo City will be divided into squads and assigned to the plantations exposed to danger.

Four American battleships will be rushed at once from Key West to Guantanamo, according to a decision reached by President Taft and the secretary of state, at a lengthly conference.

Secretary Knox said this step was decided upon in order to be in better communication with Guantanamo through wireless, and that additional marines might be ready if needed. He added that it was not believed that the marines would be required just now.

Knox laid special stress on the fact that the dispatch of the vessels did not mean any step toward intervention, but was merely a precautionary measure.

Havana, June 6.—Congress has authorized a law empowering President Gomez to suspend the constitutional guarantees, but only in the province of Oriente. The suspension of the guarantees in the other provinces was considered unnecessary and inadvisable, especially on account of the approaching elections.

It is now assured that there is no prospect of the abrogation of the Morua law, forbidding the organization of political parties on racial lines, during the continuance of the insurrection.

The town of Jarahueca, near Guantanamo, has been captured by the insurgents, who sacked and burned it. They also destroyed several coffee plantations nearby.

CONVICTED COMMISSIONER

Is No Wanted on Lawrence, Mass., School Board

Of Its Convicted Comissioner Is Desire of Lawrence Citizens

Lawrence, Mass., June 6.—The Ministers' association of Lawrence took active steps to have recalled from office School Commissioner John J. Breen, the politician who recently was convicted and sentenced to pay a $500 fine for "planting" dynamite to discredit the strikers during last winter's industrial war here.

The local papers all have called on Breen to resign, but the city officials have taken no step to relieve of his post the man who was convicted of a felony. And now the Ministers' association have voted to demand a recall action against Breen.

Championship cups will be awarded the winners of the tournament , the same to be the property of any team winning them three times. Suitable prizes will also be awarded the winners.

MILTON'S ANNIVERSARY.

On June 11th the Town of Milton will celebrate the 250th anniversary and a most popular feature will be the athletic events. The games have not received the sanction of the A. A. U. because only the entries of Milton boys will be considered.

Powell, one of the best runners in this section of the state and a resident of Milton cannot compete because he is flying the colors of the South Boston A. C. There is considerable disappointment expressed among the athletes and it seems to be the opinion that a sanction would mean athletic events with the best, now in training, on the mark.

WILL PLAY AT WEYMOUTH.

The Quincy A. A. will play the Norfolks at South Weymouth on Saturday afternoon. Manager Smith feels confident of victory and has arranged a schedule of strong games to be played on his open dates.

THIRTY IN ATHLETIC EVENTS.

The shot put held at the Fore River ship yard on Wednesday during the noon hour was contested by over 30 employees of the Machine shop.

The 12 pound shot was won by Eida, with a put of 33 feet, 11 inches, Barrett was second and Mattson third.

GRAZING AT SPRINGFIELD.

About one hundred members of Quincy Lodge Loyal Order of Moose are in attendance today at the Moose Field Day in Springfield. Past Dictator Leon C. Claflin is in charge of the local Moose who took the trip. They left for Boston shortly after six this morning and took a train for Srringfield about seven o'clock.

MR. WALSH SMILING.

John W. Walsh, the popular and efficient manager of Kincaide's Furniture store is receiving the congratulations of his many friends upon the arrival at his home Wednesday of a big bouncing baby boy.

BRUSH FIRE.

The alarm from Box 39 at 7.06 o'clock Wednesday was for a small fire in a pile of old rubbish on Liberty street. There was no loss.

FORD READY FOR TRIP

All arrangements have been made by Manager Ford of the South Quincy baseball team for the trip to the Provinces, where they will play the pick of the teams in that section. The itinerary includes Yarmouth, Halifax, Moncton, St. John's and Halifax. The team will leave July 29th and will take two weeks to cover the circuit.

The trip is of great interest to the Quincy fans since there are a number of local boys now in the limelight because of their fine showing with the Province teams.

The following are the players who are now appearing in that section: "Wes" Ganzel, "Monkie" Woods, "Patsy" Dugan, "Larry" Connelly, "Bob" Connelly, "Stan" Bates, "Dodo" Fitzgerald, Johnnie Murray and Jimmie Treap. Frank Hoyt left Quincy to play a week ago and Doc White the famous pitcher of the Boston Latin School is doing the honors at Halifax.

The South Quincy boys expect to come home with the majority of the games and are pleased that they will have a chance to play against local boys who went out of town to better their baseball prospects.

JOHNNIE KING THE ONE UMPIRE

Fans Appear to Like His Selection For the Game

UP TO HIM TO MAKE GOOD

Frequent discussion as to the merits of the double system of umpiring in the Quincy City Baseball League has resulted in a change and hereafter but one man will handle the game.

John J. King has been selected for the position and his work this season has demonstrated his knowledge of the game. He is a West Quincy boy and was prominent in athletic circles up to two years ago.

When the St. Mary's Society took a prominent part in the sports of the city, Mr. King was one of the leaders, and it was due to his efforts that the teams were so successful. His long connection with the basket ball teams of the city secured a reputation for good clean sportsmanship, and the fans will no doubt appreciate the selection of a man of such sterling quality.

CARS SMASHED, MANY ARRESTS MARK STRIKE

Conflicting Claims as to the Number of Men Who Went Out Today by Both Sides

Police Guard of 1,400 Drawn Around Elevated Property Strike Breakers from N.Y.

The strike storm of the Boston Elevated railroad employees broke over the city of Boston at an early hour this morning.

The claims of both sides as to the number of men engaged are conflicting.

Rioters gathered at various points and created much disturbance.

Many persons were assaulted and the police were busy making arrests.

It is claimed that 2000 men formed the first group of strikers but recruits were rapidly taken into the ranks.

Disorder broke out immediately upon the strike declaration. A car passing in Castle square was invaded and the strikers drove the crew off cut the trolley rope and took the controller handle.

About 1400 policemen were called out to guard the Elevated property throughout the city.

The strikers rushed to car barns and attempted to prevent any of the cars leaving the barns at the usual time.

More than 20 cars were smashed up in different parts of the city.

Reserves were called for a riot in State and Washington streets, where a mob of 200 attacked a car and smashed the windows. A policeman pulled his revolver and kept the crowd back until the reserve police arrived.

Four strikers were arrested in Roxbury when a mob attacked a Brookline car near the Lenox street car barns. The crowd fought with the police.

Three men were arrested at the Harvard square subway station.

Twenty police officers were at the scene of the Grove hall disturbance and one arrest was made.

Three arrests were made during a riot in Lechmere square, East Cambridge. Bricks shattered the windows of three cars.

Five men attacke d Otis Carpenter, one of the conductors, when he tried to fix his ttrolley. He defended himself but the men used him roughly.

QUINCY'S LEGISLATIVE RECORD FOR 1912 NEVER BEFORE EQUALLED

Neponset Bridge Thrown Down. May Meet Better Fate Next Year. Rep. Leslie and Piper Active

Dredging River and Channel, Great Boulevard Extension and Other Important Measures Passed

(Special to the Ledger.)

State House, June 6,—With the closing of this year's session of the legislature, which will come within a few days, the busiest year of legislation so far as Quincy is concerned is ended. Never in the history of the State has one session of its legislature been crowded with matters so important to Quincy, as has this one which is drawing to a close. It may be interesting to Quincy readers to briefly review the matters of local interest which have been acted upon during the past five months by the Great and General Court.

SEA GIRT.

At an early date, the bill which called for the establishment of the town of Sea Girt was given a hearing. This bill provided for the separation of Houghs Neck from the city of Quincy and its incorporation into a township to be known as Sea Girt. Severe opposition was met by the proponents of this piece of legislation and the committee on towns "killed" after giving it a hearing. The legislative concurred in the committee's report and so the bill was eliminated.

ELIMINATION OF PARTY DESIGNATIONS.

On the petition of City Solicitor Thomas F. McAnarney, which asked for the elimination of party designations on the official ballots used at the caucuses or elections for municipal offices in the city of Quincy, the committee on election laws followed the course it had taken on several similar bills relating to ballots used in other cities of the Commonwealth and reported "leave to withdraw" on it. This report was also sustained by the legislature.

FIREMEN'S RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

Representative Leslie's bill asking for permission to allow the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association to amend its charter so as to provide that present and future members of that organization might retain their membership in the association after they had ceased to be members of the cty fire department, met a better fate than the first two bills mentioned. The committee on insurance heard this matter and in executive session immediately afterwards reported favorably on it. It went through the legislative readings without debate and was signed by the governor on April 29 becoming a law at once.

FIRE CHIEF BILL.

Mayor Stone petitioned the legislature for action putting the office of Chief of the Quincy Fire Department under the civil service law.

This bill also received the recommendation of the committee which heard it, and went flying through the two branches of the legislature in "jig-time." Governor Foss put his signature to it on May 11. This matter does not become a law, however, until the voters of Quincy have ratified the action of the legislature because the bill provides for a referendum at the next municipal election. If the votes signify their approval of the bill at that election next December the act will then become a law.

CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING.

The bill which takes Quincy out of the tenth Congressional district and puts it in the fourteenth district along with Brockton and some twenty towns of Plymouth and Norfolk Counties has already been fully discussed in these columns. This bill was the subject of one of the bitterest and most acrimonious debates that ever took place on the floor of the House of Representatives. The Republican party was divided against itself on the matter. With a minor amendment which affects Quincy none, the bill was finally put through just as the special committee reported it and was signed May 29th. It becomes law on July 1st as stipulated in the bill.

NEPONSET BRIDGE.

A great deal of legislative "jockeying" was done on the bill which provided a new bridge across the Neponset River in the place of the one now connecting Quincy and Boston. The apportionment of costs of the original bill was the object of much dissension among parties interested. After much discussion, in which the city of Quincy made numerous concessions the bill finally failed in the House after being passed by the Senate. The opposition of the combined forces of the Mayor and the Finance Commission of Boston, which forces only combine on rare occasions, was the direct cause of the failure of the bill.

COMMISSION ON DEPENDENT WIDOWS, ETC.

A matter of vast interest among charitable organizations and social reformers was the resolve which provided for the appointment of a commission to study and investigate the question of the condition of widowed mothers and their dependent minor children. A Quincy woman, Mrs. Clara Park, was appointed on the commission being one of three and the only woman on the commission. Already the commission, which is an unpaid one, has done considerable work along the lines planned for it and its report next January will be a most interesting one. From that report will probably emanate some legislation that will provide State aid for the most worthy persons within the boundaries of the Commonwealth.

TOWN RIVER BILL.

By dint of hard and conscientious work on the part of the representatives from Quincy combined with that of Mayor Stone and members of the Board of Trade, the bill providing for widening, straightening and deepening Town River, and carrying with it an appropriation of $25,000, was piloted to success at this legislative session. It means a whole lot to the business interests of Quincy, and the backers of the proposition deserve great credit for having courageously fought for its success all the year. The Governor signed the bill late Wednesday evening. The bill calls for the construction of a public wharf on Town river to be erected by the city of Quincy at an approximate cost of $100,000. This project will be of great assistance

BAY STATE EXECUTIVES GUESTS IN QUINCY ON MONTHLY ASSEMBLY

Dined at City Hall and Norteman's and Enjoyed an Automobile Trip to Many Points

Mayor and Mrs. Eugene R. Stone With Others Received Distinguished Guests

The Chief Executives of Massachusetts cities, both present and past, who are members of the Massachusetts Mayors' club, are in Quincy today as guests of Mayor Stone. A larger part of the officials brought their ladies with them which added color to the affair. Some came by train but the larger part of the guests came by automobiles which when lined up in front of City hall made quite an imposing appearance.

As fast as the guests arrived they were received by Mayor Stone and Mrs. Stone and after registering were shown about the several offices in City hall.

The Mayor and Mrs. Stone were assisted in receiving by ex-Mayor John O. Hall who is the secretary of the club, the City Mesenger Harry W. Tirrell and City Clerk Emery L. Crane.

After the first greetings the guests were escorted to the Council chamber. Here tables had been arranged for a dainty lunch which was served a little after 11 o'clock by caterer Thompson. The young ladies of the hall had charge of the decorations of the Council chamber and under their direction the apartment was made to look very attractive with its numerous bouquets of flowers which had been arranged on the tables and in the windows.

Shortly after 11 o'clock the guests were escorted to the First church where they visited the sarcophagi under the portico where rest the remains of President John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives. They also saw the old hearse which was used at the funeral of President John Quincy Adams.

Going into the church proper there was a general desire of the party to sit in what is known as the Presidents pew. That is the pew occupied by the families of the Presidents.

Leaving the church the automobiles were taken to the birthplaces of the two Presidents. Arriving at the cottage of John and Abigail Adams now controlled by the Quincy Historical society they were shown about by the caretaker Benjamin King and Secretary Emery L. Crane of the society.

They also visited the other birthplace controlled by Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution.

Here several ladies of Adams chapter were in attendance to show the guests about.

Sometime was spent here in examining the many articles of historic nature which both houses contain. Then the automobiles were taken for the Fore River Ship yard. Here they were received by President Bowles and officers of the company who accompanied the guests about the works. Several hours could easily have been spent here but lack of time made it necessary to cut the visit somewhat short. They however had an opportunity to see the Argentine battleship Rivadavia, which when completed will

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Safe and sane advertising in the Ledger pays. The paper reaches every home in Quincy and is read, not skimmed, by every one.

The crippled Arkansas made a new battleship record. May her mission never be more war-like than that of her trial trip.

The Senate may condemn Capt. Smith of the Titanic but in the light of more recent developments the world public knows pretty near just where to place the blame.

With the New York chamber maids joining the strike the waiters must be of poor stuff indeed if they do not win out.

Every one breathes easier now that the state has not been saddled with the odium of sending a woman to the electric chair.

When will the love-lorn swain know enough to destroy letters written in th eday dream of a supposedly lasting passion when everything connected with the divinity has a golden sunset glow?

The Senate might just as well take up the Lorimer case first as last. The people will not stand for straddling this question until certain political matters have been adjusted so that the senators may vote without fear of political vengenance falling upon them. The time to act is now. The former white wash failed of its purpose and it is time that the members of the Senate stood up in their boots and were counted.

A hen lays an egg because if she dropped it, it might break.

Governor Foss and the legislature are still in the closing death grapple. The governor has the satisfaction of keeping the body longer in session than it anticipated however.

Congressman Fitzgerald is getting to talk as much as his namesake the mayor of Boston. Just at present the former is engaged in ridiculing that proposed watch tower for the Boston custom house.

United States have again put foot on Cuban soil. Does that mean that the limits of the Monroe doctrine are to be extended?

The Union employees and the Elevated officials are having a long distance conference at the present time. The public will judge of the affair later.

If you bathe in the Metropolitan park limits a Mother Hubbard will be preferable to a tight fitting costume according to the rules of the park commissioners.

Sheriff Quinn has never been married and never had a best girl. John really does not know how much fun he has missed in his life.

The Boston father who was instructed by his college son to entertain his bosom friend diligently performed the duty but it is not recorded which particular district of the Hub was visited during the process.

ALLEGED CHARITIES.

From time to time people have been detected in soliciting money for alleged charitable organizations and many organizations have been forced at times to announce that they are not responsible for persons soliciting in their name, but the State Board of charity even goes further than this in handling such cases in a recent report and as a result of a thorough investigation points out that fully 60 per cent of the so called legal charities are not carrying out their original purpose and are of no material benefit as charitable organizations. Of all the charities investigated, only about 40 per cent are well managed.

The board characterizes certain of those charities as only a blind or trick to deceive well meaning people, boards of directors are merely dummies and some collectors get 50 per cent of the receipts for their effort. In the main those charities assailed are for personal and private gain and to evade property tax.

The legislation with commendable wisdom in taking up this report recommended "No occasion for investigation."

Rather a pretty state of affairs indeed. A competent state board announces that the entire public is being preyed upon day in and day out by sharpers, yet the legislature in its rush to adjourn calmly announces that the subject is hardly worth consideration. Perhaps it may not be. The board of charity should even have gone further in its report and named every charity which it has arraigned and specify in what particular they are a prey upon the public without adequate charitable returns.

Even if the legislature did not think the subject worth further consideration, this report of the charity board should open the eyes of the deceived public as to the way in which people are being taken in and hereafter when applications for funds or other things are made the person solicited should make it a point to have full knowledge of the use to which the money is to be put, who is to be benefited and what proportion if any goes to the solicitor. The public being warned should govern itself accordingly in this matter.

WHEN JUDGES DISAGREE.

When doctors disagree who will cure the patient. In a different sense the same may be applied to judges of the courts. When they cannot agree upon the best manner of checking crime or punishing offenders then it is beyond the scope of the average layman to determine which is right and which is wrong.

The probation system was under discussion at a conference of judges, probation officers and some prosecuting attorneys. Judge Lummus of Lynn severely criticised the system which permitted the taking of minor cases to the superior court because some one had fared more leniently in the upper court. While he did not object to the principles of probation he could not endorse without qualification the system as now in operation. Judge M. J. Murray of the Boston court, strongly defended the probation system and cited many instances where it had operated to good advantage.

And so it might be said of most any situation, which people as well as judges are called upon to meet. For some the system works all right. Others it does not reach at all.

Some offenders against the law are penitent at their first offence and mean to do better. They really try to improve and in many cases succeed. Their brief court experience may have probably tended to check a downward career.

On th other hand some who are given a lift at the start do not appreciate it. They imagine they have been given a solar plexus blow by society, that they are outcasts and every man's hand is against them and theirhand is against every one. Such cases are hopeless.

The problem is truly a serious one, which requires deep study and consideration and an almost clairvoyant power to read human nature to determine what is best for the poor offender in each particular case, taking temperament, surroundings, education and everything having an influence upon him into consideration.

SCHOOL BOY HAS SAY.

Editor Quincy Ledger, Dear Sir:—

If any one feels like criticising the flag of the Coddington street school and claims that it is almost a disgrace to the U. S., said person has a chance to make good, remedy the evil and supply the school with a new flag.

Coddington Boy.

STRAWBERRY CARNIVAL.

There was a large attendance at the strawberry festival held Wednesday evening in Union Chapel, Houghs Neck, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. The affair was successful and was in charge of a committee composed of Mrs. George Higgins, Mrs. Franklin G. Saylor, Mrs. William Slaunwhite, Mrs. Clarence Rose, Mrs. Milledge LeCain, Mrs. William Downey and Miss Teresa Slaunwhite.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.

Holm Lea, the Sargent estate in Brookline, will be open to the public after one o'clock, June 8, and all day Sunday, June 9, for the annual display of rhododendrons and azaleas. Those visiting the estate by electric cars should take a Cypress-street car at Dudley street or at Brookline Village and ride to the end of the line. Carriages and automobiles will not be admitted to the grounds.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN

AT SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING

The Christian Endeavor society of the Wollaston Congregational church observed its semi annual meeting in the vestry Thursday evening with a supper, business meeting and entertainment.

Miss Ruth Taylor, president of the society presided at the business meeting at which reports were read by the chairman of the various committees.

Mrs. Bessie D. Ducey read the secretary's report and Sewall Sayward that of the treasurer. For the Lookout committee Miss Alice Thompson reported and for the prayer meeting committee Miss Marion Farwell did likewise.

Miss Madeline Morse read the report of the social committee and George Brown for the missionary committee and for the flower committee Charles Johnson reported.

A delightful stereopticon lecture on a recent vacation trip in Norway was delivered by George G. Clark of Boston. The views included many out of the beaten line of travel and were enjoyed by an appreciative audience.

The journey opened with a view of the harbor and city of Christiana about which many interesting experiences were related. The large keys provided at hotels and the midsummer daylight lasting nearly until midnight.

Many beautiful views of the fjords and glaciers were shown. The fish mart at Bergen was among the points of interest.

One of the interesting features of the journey was a trip to the North Cape for a view of the midnight sun. The lecture closed with a picture of one of the old Viking craft so suggestive of the daring spirit of the people.

Miss Mary Broughton Sewall Sayward, S. J. Hammel and Clifton Blake formed the social committee in charge of the evening.

DORCAS SOCIETY TO ENTERTAIN

The Dorcas society, composed of young ladies of the Swedish Lutheran church, will hold an entertainment in Faxon hall, Saturday evening and if the plans of the committee in charge can be taken as assurances, the affair will greatly eclipse any of those that have been held in the past. The program will consist of readings, song and dialogues. Every province of Sweden will be represented and the contributors to the program will give their respective numbers in their native dialect.

All will be dressed in Swedish national costumes and a leading feature will be singing of the National Folk songs by a chorus of forty-eight female voices. The "Smergas Bord" will constitute the refreshments and the "Skaninger Smolandinger" and other tribes of Sweden will be there in large numbers, while a cordial welcome to be present is extended to any one else who may be interested.

SIX STRADDLED THE GOAT.

Six candidates were initiated at the meeting of Maple Lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor, held Wednesday evening in Protection hall. Miss Nellie Cate presided and an exhibition by the degree team was a feature. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

YACHT CLUBS' CHANNEL.

The yachtsmen of the Wollaston and Squantum clubs will be favored by the passage of the bill which gives the Directors of the Port of Boston the orders to dredge their channel connecting the clubs' floats with deep water. The bill is an eminently fair one since the state work on the boulevard was in a great measure responsible for the filling in of the old channel.

MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS FUND.

Mayor Stone's petition for relief on the municipal debt came in at a very late hour. The petition however was in the same class as one from Lowell and similar to one from Lawrence. In all cases the financial problem which city governments are facing, due largely to negligence of former administrations, were found to be serious ones. The temporary debts of the city of Quincy had to be met, and his bill provided a scheme out of the difficulty by borrowing money outside the debt limit in anticipation of taxes and paying off the temporary debt in yearly payments of $15,000. Although the committee on cities was reluctant to grant the permission because several of its members thought the debt debt should be paid off by putting the amount in the tax levy, the bill finally received favorable action. The office of the Director of the bureau of statistics played an important part in the success of the bill, saying that the scheme propounded by the mayor's petition was a worthy one. This bill also received the official signature on May 29 and is now law.

THE BOULEVARD BILL.

Governor Foss signed this bill May 27. The metropolitan park district will be enhanced and the boulevard system of Quincy greatly enlarged if the bill receives the signature of the chief executive. It provides for an expenditure of $100,000 by the Metropolitan park commission for the construction of part of its proposed boulevard from the present Quincy shore drive to Hancock street. Also in this bill is the provision for the expenditure of $75,000 for the purchase of land for the later construction of the Old Colony boulevard along the water front and parallel to the railroad tracks from Neponset to Savin Hill. This will also help Quincy's boulevard.

From the foregoing it may readily be seen that Quincy has been very much in the lime-light on Beacon Hill this year. The success of almost all the important measures in the list reflects credit on Quincy's representatives and all the more so because they are both first year men. Both of them have been alive to the situations at all times and have worked and voted to Quincy's advantage in all cases.

—A year from next July will see a remarkable reunion on the field of Gettysburg, when the blue and gray will peacefully sleep and eat together. There was no disgrace at Gettysburg. They fought for what they honestly believed was right. Their sincerity has long been fully recognized by the victors. We believe this reunion will mark a new era in bridging over what sectional feeling still lingers in the hearts of the survivors of the two armies.—Milford, N. H. Cabinet.

KING ALBERT.

Ruler of Belgium, Who Faces Serious Crisis In Socialists' Riots.

BELGIUM STILL RESTLESS

King and Queen Refrain From Contemplated Move to Sea Shore

Brussels, June 7.—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth had planned to leave for Ostend for a stay at the royal villa on the sea coast, but the journey was abandoned because of the political situation resulting from the Socialist resentment at the Clerical victory in the elections.

At a meeting of 20,000 working men at La Louviere, a commune in Hainaut, where there are mines and extensive manufacturing plants, Socialist orators were hissed when they urged the strikers to return to work. The people of La Louviere and Mons are greatly excited but it is believed that the Socialist appeal to their followers to refrain from violence will be observed throughout the district of Liege.

One man was killed and twenty others seriously wounded at Massor, a commune in Luxemberg, during a fight between Clericals and anti-Clericals. Most of the inhabitants participated in the encounter, which lasted two hours. The Socialist leaders have lost control of the men in a part of the Walloon provinces, where the workmen declare that they wish to avenge their comrades who were killed at iLege.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Since Mr. Lindsay Morison began his summer stock season at Majestic Theatre a few weeks ago he has been deluged with requests from patrons for the presentation of certain favorite plays. The great majority of these requests was for "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and so frequent and insistent have they become, that Mr. Morison has finally decided to present a monster revival of this delightful rural piece next week.

The charming story of Mrs. Wiggs is generally familiar to theatregoers as well as to the thousands who have read the book on which the play is founded. It is one, however, that will bear innumerable repetitions, each repetition bringing even greater pleasure than its predecessor. The lovable character of Mrs. Wiggs is one which already ranks in stage history with Uncle Tom, Rip Van Winkle, David Harum, Joshua Whitcomb and others of the same genial type.

The play is a big favorite with the Morison Stock Company, for the members have often taken keen pleasure in portraying the quaint rural characters. As in former presentations of the play by Mr. Morison's company, the title role will be played by Rose Morison, who as a character actress has no equal in stock. Tall, lanky and funny Mrs. Hazy will be played by Edna Oliver who played the same role for Mr. Morison before. Howell Hansel will be seen in the rural character of Stebbins, while Anna Cleveland will essay the role of the poorhouse girl. The large cast will include all the other Morison favorites.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

A number of splendid comedy features, with just a dash of novelty to spice the whole, will be offered at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, the three principal features being new to Boston audiences. Sam Mann, the German comedian, will make his first appearance here in an original farce entitled "The New Leader." The scene is laid on the bare stage of a vaudeville theatre, on a Monday morning, and all the characters of denizens of the world behind the scenes. Mr. Mann has the part of the new orchestra leader, who makes his entrance through the audience and mounting to the director's chair, proceeds to give the audience an exact reproduction of a regular vaudeville rehearsal on a Monday morning. All the ludicrous quarrels and arguments common to these occasions are introduced with telling effect and a pretty love story runs through the playlet. "The New Leader" is described as a scream from start to finish. The big novelty will be the first appearance of the Brothers Mirano, the world's greatest equilibrists. These two brawny Italians are unquestionably the most daring and sensational balancers the world has ever seen. They employ a forty-foot pole, and one of the brothers performs the most startling feats at the top of this dizzy perch. Another newcomer will be Belle Clorey, a clever singer and comedienne, who has scored a tremendous success in New York. Charles and Fanny Van bring their amusing comedy, "A Case of Emergency," and other big features will be Mlle. Loretta and her wonderful posing dog, "Studies in Gold." Crouch and Welch, liveliest of dancers, and others yet to be announced.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The second week of "The Climax" begins at the Castle Square on Monday. This special production made by John Craig has achieved success. It is proving one of the most unusual of entertainments, and its combination of drama and music brings to it no small measure of popularity. The leading role is played by Florence Webber, a soprano singer of marked ability. During the court of the play she sings "The Song of the Soul," "Youth's appeal to Old Age," and "Even Song," and as these are brought into the plot they contribute not a little to the dramatic effect of the play. The leading character of "The Climax" is an aspiring young singer, and Miss Weber acts her with skill and insight. As young Golfanti, Mr. Christie is as good a piano player as actor—which is saying a great deal, and as the elder Golfanti Donald Meek has a notable character role. Thomas F. Fallen acts Dr. Raymond. All in all it would appear "The Climax" is starting on a run at the Castle Square.

CABARET AT PARAGON.

The tremendous success of the Cabaret Show at Paragon in the Palm Garden at Nantasket Beach has been fully demonstrated in the few days that it has been open for another season. The best test of this came on Thursday, Decoration Day, when the weather was anything else but propitious for the opening of a summer season at Paragon, but the magnet of the Cabaret in the Palm Garden was sufficient to overcome all rivalry of the elements. In spite of the dreary and rainy day, a day that prompted thoughts of staying at home rather than even going to amusements that kept one safe and dry indoors—the Palm Garden was filled to its capacity all the evening for the Cabaret that night. There are band concerts Saturdays and Sundays, and the Nantasket steamers run late boats back to Boston on these evenings, for the accommodation of those who wish to remain for the Cabaret show. Paragon, with its many new features replacing the section that was burned last fall, is more attractive than ever. The Park will be in full operation on Saturday, June 15th, and in the meantime there is the Palm Garden extending its hospitality daily, with the Cabaret as a special evening attraction, and the wonderful colony of 50 sea lions in the Lagoon.

EARLY CLOSING IN HIGH FAVOR

Movement Inaugurated by Kincaide Stores Popular

SHORTER HOURS FOR CLERKS

In the daily advertising of Henry L. Kincaide & Co., a movement towards earlier closing has been noted. It is learned that the Kincaide stores are gradually trimming down the late evening closing hours. It is the intention of these stores to close at 8.30 P. M. on Monday and Friday evenings and at 9 p. m. Saturday evenings. Mr. Kincaide believes that people would be very glad to do their shopping within those hours, if they realized that by so doing they were really helping the clerks to enjoy more life in the open. There is no question in our mind but what retail store hours are unnecessarily long. It is gratifying to know that the Kincaide stores are taking a step in the right direction—one that is in keeping with the times, and believe the buying public will quickly conform with this new schedule if it is universally adopted.

TREK THROUGH NOTED PLACES

Washington School Boys and Girls Enjoyed Trip

Members of the graduating class of the Washington Grammar school, to the number of forty, were taken on a historical trip to Boston and Cambridge Thursday afternoon. The trip was in charge of Principal Thomas B. Pollard, who on this occasion made his 25th annual inspection of historical points of interest with pupils of the graduating class of the school, and Miss Elizabeth G. Anderson, teacher of the class.

The party went to Boston by train and returned the same way. The pupils were highly pleased with the trip and the various historical places visited proved a great treat to all of them.

LECTURED ON ALASKA.

Instead of the regular prayer meeting, Rev. James A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Water street, gave a most instructive and interesting lecture on "Alaska" to a large audience Thursday evening. The affair was held under the auspices of the Women's Missionary society and thirty-six slides, illustrating the different parts of Alaska, gave those present a clear idea of things as they exist in the gold region.

COURT PROCEEDINGS START

John McArdle was arraigned before Judge Avery in court this morning for alleged assault on Alvah D. Innis at Quincy last Wednesday and the case was continued until June 15, for hearing.

According to the police the assault is alleged to have arisen over some stories which concerned a High School girl. It is alleged that McArdle lay in waiting on Cherry avenue Tuesday evening for Innis but did not see him. Wednesday morning it is alleged that he was on hand early and as the Innis boy came along with his school books under his arm McArdle stepped up to him and made an assault upon him. The affair was witnessed by several of the neighbors who rushed out and separated the parties.

INJURIES NOT SERIOUS

Mrs. Catherine McGregor of Hallowell, Maine, was considerably shaken up about seven o'clock Thursday evening as a result of falling from a trolley car while it was in motion, in the vicinity of Brooks avenue and Water street. It seems that Mrs. McGregor who is visiting Mrs. Alexander Souden of 317 Water street had given the signal to stop the car, but tried to get off before it came to a standstill.

Many of the passengers of the car at the time ran to the assistance of Mrs. McGregor. Dr. John F. Welch was called and said that Mrs. McGregor had been considerably shaken up, but sustained no serious injuries.

The delegates to the twelfth International Congress of Navigation who have been the guests of the city of Boston for the past two days paid a visit to the Fore River Company's plant Thursday. BIG "L" STRIKE IS PLANNED

Union Voting Will Probably Favor Quiting Work

COMPROMISE IS ABANDONED

Members of Recently Formed Union Have Been In Session Since Early Morning—Strike May Start Any Time Today—Railroad Company Has Gathered Hundreds of Recruits—Many Employes Remain Loyal

Boston, June 7.—The motormen, conductors, guards and brakemen of the Elevated railroad who are members of the union began early today to ballot on the question of ordering a strike on the big system.

It will be late before the result of the balloting will be announced, but from the expression of the voters and the views given by the national organizers, the conclusion at the meeting was that the vote to strike would be overwhelming. If this proves to be the final result, the strike will start almost immediately.

On many of the cars now operated in Boston there are extra men, evidently being trained for duty if the new union makes any attempt to tie up the system. The instant the union declares a strike, if it takes such action, the company will be ready to send out new conductors and motormen to run the cars, having assurances from a sufficiently large number of its present employes to feel warranted in opposing the demand of the new organization. It has approximately 5000 employes and operates in all the suburbs adjoining Boston, and immedately beyond. The company claims that most of these men will remain on duty if a strike is called, and the union claims that it has enlisted a majority.

One thousand men, gathered from Boston, New York and Philadelphia, and from the New England colleges were rushed to the instruction department of the road at 18 Bartlett street, Roxbury. There they were put through a course of training.

Students from Harvard, Boston university, Tufts, Yale, Dartmouth, Columbia, Brown and Colby are among the several hundred recruits that have been collected at seventeen different colleges of New England.

It is said the strike breakers are to receive $2.50 a day, and besides this $1 is to be allowed them a day for expenses.

Among the union it is thought that nothing can now interfere with a strike being called and that the quicker it is brought about the better it will be for them, as the arrival of the strike breakers shows conclusively that the L road is getting in a better position to combat a strike every day.

In a statement issued yesterday afternoon, the Elevated company declared that 90 percent of the 4300 men would be found loyal in case of a strike being declared.

DELEGATIONS CONTESTED

Fight Over Seating of Same Probably Help Mr. Taft

Chicago, June 7.—The revised list of the contests as announced by William Hayward, secretary of the Republican national committee, was as follows:

Alabama, 22; Arizona, 6; Arkansas, 16; California, 2; Florida, 12; Georgia, 28; Indiana, 10; Kentucky, 16; Louisiana, 20; Michigan, 6; Mississippi, 18; Missouri, 14; North Carolina, 18; Oklahoma, 2; Tennessee, 8; Texas, 28; Virginia, 20; Washington, 14; District of Columbia, 2.

It was the general belief of both Roosevelt and Taft leaders that the only contests that Roosevelt would win were in Washington state and possibly in Texas.

Laconia Mining Agent First Sends Money to Wife

Lowell, Mass., June 7.—Sylvester Kimball, 50 years old, a mining agent of Laconia, N. H., committed suicide by shooting. He left a letter for his wife who lives at Laconia, containing a $25 postal money order and a note which said his only comfort was the Twenty-third Psalm.

This was the Psalm chosen by Clarence V. T. Richeson, who died in the electric chair. Kimball died at the St. John's hospital. He opened an office in Laconia recently and attempted to sell mining stock, but met with poor success.

SUMMER DRESSES OF WHITE WASH SILK

Shantung or Pongee with Irish Lace Make Ideal Hot Weather Frocks.

ATTRACTIVE LACE ACCESSORIES.

With summer temperature fully upon us the primal love of woman for dainty white gowns will no longer be denied. Glistening green and blue bengalines, ravishing foulards and taffetas of many hues, display their charms in vain as she hastens by their counters, attracted by gleam of white Shantung, Japanese wash silk, batiste, linen lawn and the various soft and filmy fabrics which are used to make what we call the lingerie gown. Each year the fashion writers affirm the passing of the white wash frock, and instance the increased laundry bill as the bugaboo which frightens the economical soul of womankind from her legitimate hot weather attire, but always, when the summer solstice is upon us, the laundryman loses his terrors and we come into our own again.

There is no denying the fact that the lingerie dress requires frequent visits to the tub, and unless a woman is brave enough to arm herself with electric or alcohol iron and attack the washing problem herself, keeping clean will make serious inroads upon a slender purse. Many women in these days of general high prices have learned to "do up" their own shirt waists and simple white dresses, thereby justifying themselves in their right to wear as many dainty fresh things as they please. These women have been taught by their experience that the white Shantung and Japanese wash silks are a boon. They do not muss or soil so easily as batiste or swiss and they are very smart looking

Above is a good illustration of such a silk made in the popular one-piece fashion, trimmed with yoke and bands of imitation Irish crochet lace. For the silk dress, Irish or Venise lace is used in preference to the thinner Valenciennes or shadow laces which are more appropriate for batiste or lawn. This gown will be easily ironed and in its very simplicity will convey an idea of comfort on a hot August day utterly lacking in a frilly, fussy lingerie dress. Contrary to the popular impression, these light-weight silks are cool and comfortable, having none of the oppressive quality of the older, closely woven varieties of this product of the industrious silk worm. They have many desirable features to recommend them for summer dresses, and it is not strange that they are finding a ready sale this season.

Another material which will be popular this year, both for waists and costumes, is trellis cloth, a wide meshed, cotton cloth openly reminiscent of the architectural contrivance for which it is named. Trellis cloth undoubtedly grew out of the liking for marquisette and the desire to replace that dressy fabric with some cotton textile would go into the wash tub without proclaiming forever after, its experience of that catastrophe. It resembles in weave the old time canvas formerly used in crewel work and also in applying cross-stitch embroidery to broadcloth or silk, but it is soft and pliable, and especially when decorated with some of the effective new embroidery designs, makes very attractive summer frocks. The embroidery is done by working through the wide meshes with white or richly colored, heavy silk or linen floss. Applied in a design to the front of the waist and in bands on the sleeves and above the hem of the skirt, these dresses replace with perfect taste the more elaborate embroidered voiles and marquisettes sold last year in the shops at prices which caused the average woman to do a sum in calculation before she decided whether or no she was justified in the expenditure. The white embroidery is very handsome, but so is that done in rich Oriental hues, blending two or more harmonizing or contrasting shades with a careful selection of colors which an expert needleworker soon learns to do with consummate skill.

In all this summer's blouses the new cut of the armhole has been accepted with unexampled avidity, perhaps because women welcomed a change from long established custom, and partly, perhaps, because it gives that fashionable breadth of shoulder which is rather overdone by the kimono or body and sleeve in one effect. In our first illustration we have a conservative example of this style, showing the plain sleeve set into a well-extended shoulder. Some of them drop far down upon the arm and have the sleeves attached with fullness making a puff over the elbows, which, in turn is drawn in to a tight cuff snugly fitted to the lower part of the arm.

The shops are full of many pretty accessories which make the simple little wash frock a thing of beauty with small trouble and trifling expense. Lace collar and cuff sets, lace chemisettes, lace blouses, even, can be purchased all ready to wear or to be combined with only a few additional stitches with other materials in getting up a lingerie or wash silk gown.

In this dress we see the charming effect of such a lace blouse in a white pongee dress. The pongee forms the lower part of the waist, extending upwards, in front and back, in a sharp point. The skirt is in tunic effect above the pleated lower section, and both tunic and edge of the silk part of the waist are decorated with embroidery. If some other material besides wash silk be used for this lovely dress the embroidery may be done with beads and the lace half sleeves be finished with bead fringe to match, but if the dress is to go into the tub, as white pongee or Shantung must, sooner or later, some other medium besides the crystal beads must be employed to develop the embroidery pattern.

If one lives in a place where the lace waist cannot be bought, it can be easily fashioned for the dress from the beautiful allover Irish, Venise or Bohemian laces which are such immensely attractive additions to the lists of materials to be combined in the dress of the modern woman. By this clever device of making the trimming feature one with the construction of the dress, a great deal of labor is saved, and a certain orderly sequence is observed which is the secret of all beauty.

FOOL OR CRIMINAL

The Man Who Thought Hadley an Eagle or Tried to Wreck Him

Mineola, N. Y., June 7.—Some one near here who either mistook a headless biplane for an enormous eagle, or, knowing it to be an airship, tried to wreck it, shot at the machine driven by Clinton O. Hadley. The bullet broke a propeller blade and pierced the engine cylinder. As the aeroplane was 700 feet up, a deflection of a hundredth of an inch in the aim of the gun would have meant Hadley's death.

The machine was that of Dr. William W. Christmas of Washington, which was to have been started on the first official aerial mail-carrying trip between New York and Washington today.

Cobalt Badly Damaged

Gillies Depot, Ont., June 7.—Over $150,000 damage has been done in Cobalt by a fire that started in the Lyric theatre during a performance, when an oil stove exploded in a dressing room. The theatre was emptied without disorder. No loss of life has been reported. With the collapse of the theatre the flames leaped to the Cobalt hotel, which was valued at $47,000, and thence to other buildings.

Legislature Still Dilatory

Boston, June 7.—Prorogation does not look so near. The atmosphere of the governor's office is that it may not be reached until a week from Saturday.

The Fish Wore Diamonds

Philadelphia, June 7.—Howard E. Buzby was sorting fish when he noticed an odd bulge in the gills of one and tossed it aside as "defective." Later he examined it and found a diamond ring.

MEXICAN HORSE THIEVES

Arouse Ire of Ranchmen Who Pursue Them

Sanderson, Tex., June 7.—A posse of Terrell county ranchmen, headed by Sheriff Allen, is marching toward the border in an attempt to head off a band of Mexicans who are said to have stolen a herd of horses from ranches in this section. A fight may result.

Renewal of the bandits' activities on this side of the border is ascribed to the withdrawal of United States troops who had been patrolling the international line.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Opinion of Politicians Is That Roosevelt Made Mistakes

McGOVERN MAY OPPOSE ROOT

Fight For Temporary Chairman a Crucial Test—Rosewater Considered as Extremely Fair—Newly Elected Committeemen Will Not Be Seated—Coalition of the Roosevelt-La Follette-Cummins Delegates Desired

Chicago, June 7.—The Republicans are pointing to what they regard as two serious political mistakes made recently by the usually astute Roosevelt. One is his opposition to the selection of Elihu Root as temporary chairman of the national convention and the other the demand of his followers that R. B. Howell of Nebraska, elected to the national committee in the state primary, be permitted to take his seat immediately. A canvass of the national committee shows no sentiment whatever in favor of the seating of Mr. Howell before his time.

Rosewater, by the way, is not instructed by either side. As a presiding officer he visited Washington recently and had an interview with the Taft bureau lawyers who are in charge of the contested cases. It was said afterward that Rosewater in going over the points of law involved was fairer in his view than any prominent Republican that had been consulted.

The colonel's sudden ducking of the Root fight was taken to mean that he could not muster enough votes to defeat the New York senator. It was too startling an admission of the uncertainty of the Roosevelt cause to be let pass without action of some kind, so some of the colonel's supporters who realized the important bearing of the case on delegate sentiment made a suggestion. They said that Governor Hadley was a very good man and a capable politician, but that he could not command all the anti-Taft support, possibly no one could, except perhaps Governor Francis C. McGovern of Wisconsin. It was pointed out that practically all the last-ditch Roosevelt vote could be turned to McGovern, and that, in addition, it might be very hard to keep the thirty-six La Follette delegates from Wisconsin from voting for the governor of their own state particularly as he was the right kind of a progressive. It was hinted, too, that the ten Cummins delegates from Iowa might be interested.

The hesitation of the Roosevelt men is significant, the politicians believe, for it suggests, first, that the colonel and his counsellors, while treating the country to their strenuous predictions that "Roosevelt will win on the first ballot" are privately trying to learn whether they can elect an anti-Taft man temporary chairman of the convention. This hesitation is eloquent, moreover, in suggesting the possible potentiality of the La Follette-Cummins vote. In other words, it is tacit evidence, to the minds of many Republicans gathered here, that the Roosevelt forces have crying need of forty-six votes, and what is ten times more important, it points to the possibility of La Follette actually holding the balance of power in the convention.

BYRAN WOULD BEAT ROOSEVELT

Opinion of National Committeemen From New Hampshire

Chicago, June 7.—"If Roosevelt should be nominated by the Republicans, and W. J. Bryan made the candidate of the Democrats, Mr. Bryan would receive the support of thousands of conservative Republicans in the east."

This is the prediction of Fred W. Estabrook, Republican national committeeman from New Hampshire, a Taft leader and the representative of the conservative New England type of voter.

"If Mr. Roosevelt should be the nominee of our convention and the Democrats should nominate Mr. Bryan he would be accepted by the people of New England Republicans as well as Democrats, as the conservative candidate," said Mr. Estabrook.

"He would sweep every state in New England, including Massachusetts, which never has failed the Republican party in a presidential election and which always is a most important factor in the November results.

"I made the statement the other day that Bryan would carry every state in New England except Vermont, but two. Vermont Republicans heard me, and they stepped up and corrected me by saying he would carry it by one of the biggest majorities ever given any candidate if the lineup is Roosevelt and Bryan."

UNRULY SCOTCH STUDENTS

Greet Carnegie Like a Lot of Rowdies When Addressed

London, June 7.—Rowdy scenes marked the delivery of Andrew Carnegie's rhetorical address at Aberdeen university at Aberdeen, Scot.

The students, the number of whom was large, hurled chairs and rugs about the hall and kept up a constant din, singing and whistling, but finally permitting the ironmaster to proceed.

After he had begun the rowdyism was resumed, but the proceedings closed with rousing cheers for Mr. Carnegie and Mrs. Carnegie.

Mr. Carnegie advised the students to "remain tetotallers until you have become millionaires."

Treasurer Science Church Dead

GOVERNOR'S FATHER DEAD

Dies of Old Age In Presence of Wife and Two Famous Sons

Boston, June 7.—The death of George Edward Foss, father of the governor, was not unexpected. He was taken sick three weeks ago and the end came when he succumbed to a heart attack. With him at the time of his death were his wife and his two politically famous sons, the governor and Congressman George E. Foss, Jr., of Illinois.

Mr. Foss celebrated his 82d birthday last Saturday. He was remarkably active for his age up to the time of his last illness.

He was a sturdy New Englander and his two sons, powerful in opposite political parties, were born and brought up in St. Albans, Vt., where Mr. Foss lived after his marriage. He later moved to Chicago for twenty years, returning to be near his son, the governor, at whose summer place in Cohasset he was a frequent visitor.

Mr. Foss leaves a widow, now at the age of 77 years. Last February they had just passed fifty-six years of married life.

Mr. Foss leaves two sons, the only children born to them. The elder son, Eugene Noble Foss, the present governor, and George Edmund Foss, who has represented the North Shore district of Chicago in congress for nearly eighteen years.

Resolutions of sympathy and respect were passed by both houses of the legislature and ordered engrossed and flags placed at half mast on the capitol.

The funeral will be held at his residence, 8 Everett street, Jamaica Plain, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

NOT CERTAIN WHICH ONE

Mayor Stone received a letter from Senator Lodge this morning in reply to his letter requesting that a battleshiu be sent to Quincy, for the Fourth of July celebration. Senator Lodge wrote that he could not tell at present what vessels could be available at that time but that he would use every effort to have a vessel in Quincy waters that day.

TEAM BLOCKED TRAFFIC.

A large team loaded with contractors' supplies owned by Tite Bros. of Cambridge, became stuck on Neponset bridge this morning in such a way as to block the car tracks. An effort was made to push the team out of the way with a car. The car pushed the wagon along all right but too far so that the wheels of the contractors' team went into a hole in the bridge, blocking car traffic for an hour or two.

AUTOISTS SLOW UP.

The placing of signs on Beale street, near the new Wollaston school asking automobilists to reduce speed while passing is being agitated by Wollaston people. A large number of cars pass through at a high rate of speed and there have been several narrow escapes. It is the intention to establish proper safeguards before a fatality occurs.

HOUNDS SEARCH FOR LOST GIRL

North Brewer, Me. Miss Gone For Ten Davs

Bangor, Me., June 7.—A hundred men, with several local bloodhounds and one hound from the Maine state prison, are searching the woods of North Brewer for Helen Haley, who disapepared from her home in South Brewer May 29.

On Sunday last a young woman was seen in that neighborhood, and again on Monday night, and footprints have been found into which the missing girl's rubbers fit perfectly.

The woman seen in the woods is described as hatless, wearing a long coat like Miss Haley's, and as acting in a demented manner.

Bloodhounds, after getting the scent from the missing girl's clothes struck straight through the woods to the bank of a brook where were discovered the footprints which her rubbers fit, and then the searchers found that someone had slept in a barn close by.

LIGHT NEEDED ON NORTEMAN LOT

M. J. Conners Asks Pertinent Questions About It

OPPOSITION PREDICTED

M. J. Connors has forwarded an open letter to the chairman of the public buildings and grounds committee which is published for what it is worth.

Mr. Connors' letter is as follows:

Quincy, Mass., June 7, 1912.

Charles W. Bailey, Chairman, Public Buildings and Grounds Committee City of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—The "Daily Ledger" of Tuesday, June 4th, printed the following:

PLAYGROUND AT HOUGHS NECK

The Committee on Public Buildings reported an order for $3,000 to purchase the Norteman lot at Houghs Neck for a playground. Referred to Finance Committee.

I believe the public generally would welcome a little light on this subject. The Houghs Neck folks, I know, simply crave for it.

Will you kindly answer the following questions:

First—Why was the Norteman lot selected, and in what respects is it suitable?

Second—Why pay three thousand ($3,000) dollars for that which is assessed for one hundred ($100) dollars?

Third—Did your Committee, before recommending the purchase of this lot, ever give a public hearing to test public sentiment in regard to it? If so, when and by whom attended?

Fourth—Was the City Engineer consulted, and did the proposition have his approval? What estimates, if any, did he give as to the cost of improving the same for playground purposes?

Fifth—Did any considerable number of citizens ever express themselves to your Committee, by petition or otherwise, as favorable to the selection of Manet Lake? If so, when was this done, by whom, and in what manner?

Are you aware that the local sentiment is outspoken and strongly opposed to your action?

I can inform you that not one in a hundred is in accord with your order. Your proposition of creating a playground out of Norteman's Manet Lake, better known locally as the ice pond, in the opinion of experts is absurd and impractical.

Nine-tenths of the site is water. Reclaiming could only be accomplished at enormous expense; $20,000 would be lost in beginning the development.

It is admitted that the site is in some ways suitable for winter skating, and if it could be purchased for say $300.00, which is three times its valuation, no doubt it would meet with some favor.

In this transaction no one seems to be benefited except Mr. Norteman. He has for years liberally entertained members of the Quincy City Government at his Houghs Neck Dining Pavilion, and we are wondering if these annual banquets have had any hypnotic influence over the minds of some of the City Fathers.

We dislike to oppose improvements, because we need many of them, but the purchase of this pond, (3-73-100 acres, mostly water) assessed for one hundred ($100) dollars, looks like a very raw deal.

If this Order progresses any further it will surely arouse a storm of opposition.

There are many ideal locations for playground purposes . Let us show you some of the real ones, which are really desirable.

Respectfuly,

M. J. Connors, 76 Mears avenue.

HASTINGS—McKEAN.

COLONIALS AFTER SCALPS.

For the second time this season the Colonials will try conclusions with the strong Dedham A. A. team. The game takes place Saturday afternoon at Dedham. The local team won recently on the ward four playgrounds after a most stubborn contest. Manager McPherson feels confident that his team will again be victorious and then he will be ready to administer medicine to the vaunting Orients, who have yet to taste the bitter pill of defeat.

CUBA CAN HAVE NO EXCUSE NOW

If Unable To Quell Rebellion With United States Aid

1,500 MARINES ON GUARD

Cuba's Army Now Free to Meet Rebels—If Not Successful Intervention Will Follow—Four Battleships at Guantanamo—White Women Outraged and Relatives Killed—Cuban Federals Will Take No Prisoners

Washington, June 7.—President Gomez has informed the United States through American Minister Beaupre that he is forming a volunteer guard to protect foreign property, and asks that his recent order for Krag-Jorgensen rifles be increased from 5000 to 10,000 and that 2,000,000 cartridges accompany them. President Gomez urges the United States to make every effort to facilitate a quick delivery of the rifles and ammunition.

With four American battleships now off Guantanamo, the force of marines immediately available for the protection of foreign life and property in Cuba is increased to more than 1500.

The combined forces of bluejackets on all the ships which, however, would only be landed in the most pressing emergency, easily would swell the total force available to more than 3500 men.

It is estimated that 1000 American marines would be fully equivalent to five times that number of Cuban regular soldiers.

What is regarded as one of the most sinister phases of the situation in eastern and southern Cuba, as it has developed in the last few days, is the increase in the number of attacks on white women. Though no American women have been molested thus far, fear holds sway in every American family resident in the affected regions. It is stated that many foreigners, both American and others, are fearful of reporting the true condition of affairs to the proper authorities lest they provoke the worst outrages on the part of the negroes.

In one way the distribution of the American marines as plantation guards will serve to test the real purpose of the Cuban government. It is calculated that General Monteagudo's troops, being relieved in large part from the onerous duty of guarding plantations, will no longer have excuse for failing to move immediately and relentlessly upon the insurgent negroes.

There is grave intimation in recent tragedies that this may become an international duty if the Cuban government longer delays action. Minister Beaupre has reported an atrocity which occurred near Saviga, in Oriente, which is believed to be only one of many similar cases. His information, derived directly from the Cuban secretary of state, was to the effect that a band of negroes entered the house of a former white official of prominence, tied him and his son and outraged his wife and two young daughters before his eyes. The son was killed while endeavoring to break his bonds and rescue his mother and sisters.

Havana, June 7.—With President Gomez formally suspending constitutional guarantees in Oriente province, congress voted an appropriation of $1,000,000 to carry on a war of extermination against the negro revolutionists.

Captain Idlesias has taken the field in Oriente with a picked force of 250 sharpshooters, who are advancing against the rebels with instructions to shoot them down.

"Take no prisoners," was the order given Captain Idlesias.

The government plans to depend on the American marines to protect foreign property along the southern coast, while the whole force of the government troops will be urged forward in the campaign of extermination.

ARLINGTON HAD TO TRAVEL SOME

To Beat Quincy High in Dual Games at Former Place

TRASK THE LOCAL STAR

In a dual meet that was considered one of the most warmly contested ever held in Arlington, the members of the Arlington High school track team defeated Quincy High, Thursday afternoon, 43 points to 29. The home team captured first place in all but two of the events. The track was rather heavy, owing to rain, which fell much of the time.

Not one of the events proved an easy victory for either side, but the general team work of the Arlington boys enabled them to distribute the points equally, while Trask was the one performer who did the bulk of the point winning for Quincy. He got one first, two seconds and a third.

The summary:

100-yard dash—won by Lowe, Arlington; Trask, Quincy, second; Reycroft, Arlington, third. Time, 10 3-5s.

220-yard dash—won by White, Quincy; Adams, Arlington; second; Reycroft, Arlington, third. Time, 24 4-5s.

440-yard dash—won by Adams, Arlington; Kingsbury, Quincy, second; Trask, Quincy, third. Time, 55 2-5s.

880-yard run—won by Landall, Arlington; Goldsmith, Arlington, and Kingsbury, Quincy tied for second. Time 2m. 12s.

Mile run—won by Goldsmith, Arlington; Kingsbury, Quincy, second; Zwinge, Arlington, third. Time, 5m 8 2-5s.

High jump—won by Trask, Quincy; Ober, Arlington, second; Jardine, Arlington, third. Height, 5ft. 2 in.

Broad jump—won by Rowse, Arlington; Trask, Quincy, second; Favorite, Quincy, third. Distance, 18ft 3in.

attacked at City square, Charlestown, windows being smashed, trolley rope cut and the headlight thrown into the street and smashed. The conductor and motorman stuck to their posts although jeered by the crowd.

"We will stick if you murder us," said the conductor.

Thousands of people had to walk part way to Boston or were delayed because of the numerous tieups.

The suburban train service was taxed above its capacity.

The cars on the Quincy-Dudley street line are running through today although subject to more or less delay. Under the arrangement the cars are operated in Quincy by Quincy men who take them as far as Neponset bridge where Elevated crews takes them in charge.

It is reported that the Quincy men will refuse to handle cars coming from Boston after today for the reason that all of the Quincy men belong to the union and will not handle cars that have been operated by non union men.

MAKARIAS AND SOUTH QUINCYS

Rivals in Warm Game Promised For Saturday

MAY BE PITCHERS' BATTLE

A warm game of base ball is promised for Saturday afternoon at the Water street grounds, where the South Quincy team crosses bats with Charlie Ganzel's Makaria combination. Both teams are connected with the Quincy City Base Ball league and since this is the first time they have met this season, a large crowd bids fair to be on hand to witness the contest. The rivalry between both aggregations is very keen and this alone will have a tendency to draw out the rooters in large numbers.

Only last Saturday it took the strong Concord town team sixteen innings to defeat South Quincy by a score of 2 to 1, while the week previous the local team battled in gruelling order with the much heralded United Shoe Machinery team at Beverly for eleven innings, losing out finally by a close margin in one of the best games ever witnessed at Beverly. Commolli, who has been doing the bulk of the slab work for South Quincy, is travelling at a fast clip and has been effective in every game thus far.

Both teams are of an even calibre and the game is sure to be marked by many features. Either Commolli or "Lefty" Ford, whose work in the box is too well-known for him to require any introduction to the fans of Quincy, will be in the points for South Quincy, while "Phil" Rice, who has yet to lose a game this season, will do the honors for Makaria. The game will be called sharply at 3.30 o'clock and Johnnie King will handle the indicator.

BAY STATE EXECUTIVES

resemble more a floating palace than a battleship.

From the Fore River yard the automobiles were again taken, the objective point this time was Houghs Neck. where the party was entertained at dinner at the Quincy Yacht club house. The dinner was of the typical shore variety and was served by Norteman which was enough to guarantee its being of the best. It was about 3 o'clock when the party reached the club house and an hour or more later before the dinner was over. It was not proposed to have any speechmaking at the dinner as it is the intention to make it a purely social function.

Before the party left City Hall to visit the Adams birthplaces Mayor Stone called out the central station fire apparatus for exhibition. Superintendent of Wires Gavin pulled in Box 26 at 11.57 and a minute later Chief Litchfield dashed through City square closely followed by the auto chemical and a minute later by the central station combination, steamer and ladder truck. Shortly after Hose 4 of Quincy Point pulled into the square. District Chief Packard who lives handy to the box was the first however to pass in review. The apparatus went down as far as the Adams academy and then turned about and came back through the square where a short stop was made in front of City Hall.

After viewing the Adams houses it was found there was sufficient time so that the party made a visit to the Dorothy Q. house.

The Mayoralty party included:

Hon. and Mrs. George H. Carter of Chelsea.

Hon. and Mrs. William E. Blodgett of Woburn.

Hon. Harry C. Howard of Brockton.

City Engineer Thomas R. Feelan of Brockton.

Hon. and Mrs. A. H. Linscott of Woburn.

Work of Scholars in All Departments Showed Care and Attention to Detail and Perfection

Pratt and Brown Manipulated Wireless Station Showing Receipt and Sending

More than a thousand visitors witnessed the exhibition of the industrial work of the Quincy High pupils during the past year, held Friday in the school gymnasium. The display opened in the afternon at 3.30 o'clock and continued for two hours. It opened again for a period of two hours in the evening beginning at 7.30 and was acknowledged by all to have been the best and most successful in the history of the school.

The work of the pupils in all departments was of a character that gave every evidence of application and careful and persistent effort. A feature of the exhibition was a wireless station which was erected at one side of the gymnasium and which proved the centre of attraction for all who attended. William G. Pratt '13 and Arthur Brown '15 manipulated the device and gave demonstrations on it, showing how messages were sent and received and explaining to all interested the various parts and their workings. STEAM CAR TRAFFIC GAINS BY ELEVATED STRIKE

Elevated Cars Running From Quincy to Neponset Bridge Without Interference

Rumor That Bay State Men Will Ask Increased Wages

Contrary to expectations the trolley cars of the Bay State Street Railway continued to be run today to the Dudley street terminal in Boston. It was said Friday that the Quincy motormen and conductors, all of whon are affiliated with the Street Railway Men's union, objected to taking cars from strike breakers at Neponset Bridge. No formal protest was raised however and as a consequence nothing out of the ordinary occurred.

Should the cars cease to go from Quincy to the terminal, it is said that the local company will be confronted by another unfavorable situation, owing to the fact that it has made an agreement with the Boston Elevated company to have local cars run to the elevated and if such cars should now cease to run, the lease would be broken and the contract under which both companies are now operating cars violated.

Starter Charles Austin stated this morning that elevated cars to Quincy are running on much better time than Friday. In fact, he added, that today they are running on the regular scheduled time, although the traffic has considerably decreased. No trouble has been reported as far as the Quincy motormen and conductors are concerned, but it was rumored this morning on reliable authority that in event of the strikers in Boston being successful in their demands, a request will be made to the Bay State Street

DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS MET UNPLEASANT SURPRISE

Presented Bills From Which Treasurer Deducted Amounts Due the City

Treasurer Child Starts Campaign Without Fear or Favor

If there is any one city official who deserves the commendation of the citizens at large, for faithful performance of his duty it is Tax Collector Child. He is an official who does his duty without fear or favor and Mayor Stone is to be congratulated upon having secured the services of a man for Tax Collector, who is making such a persistent effort to get in taxes. Of course there is some criticism, but all such criticism will be found to emanate from those who should have paid their just taxes long ago, and who are now being pressed by Mr. Child to come up and settle their just obligations to city. While collectors in other years have made an honest effort to get in the taxes it was not until the advent of the present collector that a systematized effort has been made to get in some of the taxes long overdue. The law gives him the right to seize upon any mony in the city treasurer's office, that may be due to a person from whom taxes are due and present collector has taken advantage of this law. The result has been that some people have met with an unpleasant surprise when they went to collect what the city owed them, to learn that they must also pay up what they owed the city. There is no valid reason why any man should collect several hundred dollars from the city when he owes the city a hundred or more dollars for taxes long overdue.

Then again in the matter of overdue poll taxes the collector has the deputy collector sharp after them and not a few have been given the alternative of paying up or being subjected to arrest. It is these men from whom the adverse criticism of the collector come while from the fair minded business man comes words of commendation, and it is the latter that are congratulating Mayor Stone on his wise selection of Tax Collector.

FITTING FINAL TODAY'S OUTING

Mayors' Club Ate at Norteman's Then Looked Upon the Sea

PRANDIAL EXERCISES BRIEF

Members of the Massachusetts Mayors' club who held an outing in Quincy Friday wound up the day on the piazzas of the Quincy Yacht club house in social intercourse. When the party arrived at Houghs Neck they found Mine Host Norteman all ready to receive them and their automobile ride had sharpened their appetities.

The dinner was served in his large dining room and was most excellent. The only criticism heard of the dinner was that although hungry he gave head table were Mayor and Mrs. Stone them more than they could eat. At the ex-Mayor William F. Davis of Woburn, and Mrs. Davis, president Hearn of the Board of Trade and Mrs. Hearn. Mrs. J. R. Richards, Representatives Piper and Leslie, and City Solicitor McAnarney.

There was but little speaking after dinner. All were too full for utterance. Mayor Stone briefly welcomed the guests saying that this was the first opportunity that he had had to meet with them, but that he should try and attend future metings. He then introduced President Davis of the club who expressed the thanks of the members for the most hospitable manner in which they had been entertained.

An adjournment was then made to the yacht club where the party sported on the piazza overlooking the deep blue sea until time to go home.

"GRADS" TOLD THEIR FATE

At Prophecy Party of the Woodward Institute

GIRLS DANCED. NO BOYS

A reception, which took the form of a prophecy party, was tendered the graduating class of the Woodward Institute by the members of the junior class in the school hall Friday evening. The class prophecy was read by Miss Nelson of the senior class and every one of her classmates came in for her full share of joshing and rapping. The class history was read by Miss Emily Dinegan, also of the graduating class and was the producer of loud applause.

The hall was very prettily decorated for the occasion and a large number of Japanese lanterns played a prominent part in this department, and the grounds in the rear of the school were made decidedly attractive by numerous lanterns suspended from the trees and wires stretched from tree to tree.

During the early part of the evening a procession of members of the junior class took place. Games of all sorts were indulged in and the affair was most enjoyable.

Fate cakes were handed out to two of the seniors and a teacher at the school. Miss Mary Beale received a cake containing a one cent piece, Miss Mary Merriam was presented with a baby ring, while the cake given to Miss Grace Burke, a teacher at the Woodward institute revealed a button and a pin. Refreshments were served and the event concluded at eleven o'clock with dancing, the music being furnished by Miss Dorothy Lavery of the junior class. The committee in charge comprised Misses Edith Ames, Lucy Waite, Beryl Turner and Dorothy Lavery.

HENRY MULLANE'S MANGLED BODY FOUND BESIDE THE CAR TRACK

Mystery as to Which Train Dealt the Fatal Blow or How he Came There

Made the Trip from Boston on the Last Train Friday Night

The body of Henry H. Mullane of Oak street, employed at the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company, was found on the railroad tracks just north of the Quincy depot at 3.30 o'clock this morning by the crew of a freight train. Just what train it was that ran over the young man has not been ascertained and there seems to be some mystery about his death.

Officers Farrell and Olsen who are on duty in City square nights, were near the spot where the body was found at 3 o'clock this morning having walked down the track a short distance from the depot. They saw nothing of the body. A half an hour the crew of the freight train found the body on the inner track. The body was quite badly mangled. The police were notified and the body was removed to Hall's undertaking rooms. At that time however the identity of the body was not known. This morning the young man's brothers positively identified the body.

From what can be learned the young man was in Boston Friday night and came to Quincy on the last train. His movements from that time however are not known.

Mullane resided on Oak street, and was single. In 1910 he was one of the assistant assessors under ex-Mayor Shea.

The dead man is survived by a mother, who resides at South Walnut street and two brothers, William, a letter carrier at the Quincy Post Office and formerly a well-known hundred-yard-dash runner, and Charles, a foreman in the Rice & Hutchins shoe factory, at one time a pitcher of much note. Henry himself was a great athlete annd attended Boston College at one time.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The storm has broken and the Boston Elevated railroad men ore out on strike. The burning question now is which side will be the first to weaken?

No doubt many people share the sentiment of the Manitoba judge, who declared he would shoot an automobilist, who run him down if he had a weapon on him, but do not care to be so frank on the subject.

That is not a bad idea that the street railroad company issue tickets now that prepayment cars are coming into favor. It would save making change and possibly the company would do as is done in Washington sell six tickets for twenty-five cents.

What is this the weather man sending out false reports. Under the circumstances and conditions the past few days he is to be forgiven if he delivered favorable predictions in order to keep up hopes.

Some one is getting the surprise of a lifetime at the Chicago situation.

Chairman Dixon says that all talk of a bolt from the Chicago convention is "Junk." The Colonel however may say "Fudge" to Dixon's "Junk."

Brooklyn women have taken the bull by the horns and pull down the horse that keep the high prices up, putting thirty butcher shops out of commission.

For fear the air navigators have not natural troubles enough a Mineola man shot at one thinking his machine was a bird on the wing.

Director Sanderson of the White Star line may stick to his opinion that boats sufficient to care for all people on Atlantic liners are not needed but the people of the world think differently and Sanderson may soon find himself a lone voyager on his big fleet if he carries out his ideas.

The last straw in the food upheaval has been reached. The price of Boston beans have been advanced.

"Mother, May I go out to bathe in the Metropolitan park district?" "Yes my dear, put on your Mother Hubbard and automobile coat. Do not forget your tag, be sure and have your veil properly adjusted and then take a short walk along the edge of the wavelets."

Thomas W. Lawson has been invited to auction off ten bachelors. Most people would rather he would give them a tip on stocks.

Cubans and Americans may complete what was only begun by the Spaniards, exterminate the black race in Cuba. It is about time to hear a vigorous protest at the landing of American troops in Cuba by some busybody society who is miles away and safe from the outrages which prevail on the island.

The Wakefield Item thinks that the name of the city or town should be placed on sign boards of the public streets of every municipality. The idea is not a bad one and its adoption in our city would do much to advertise Quincy. In riding through the country in an automobile we have often wondered what town we were in. If the post office sign said "Quincy Post Office or city hall was "Quincy City Hall" it would convey much information to passersby.

GRADUATING CLOTHES.

The time may even come when it will not be good form for a girl whose father gets $2 a day to have a $50 graduating outfit! Such a state of public sentiment seems almost a dream, but there are more and more people who think so.

One of the great reasons why so large a proportion of High school pupils drop out before graduation, is the dreaded bill for clothes and other expenses connected with the final scholastic pomposities.

There was a time when one gown would enable a girl to "get by," and as the dress was wearable for a number of years, the net cost was not so very big.

Then came the custom of "Proms" and class days and social functions outside the exercises of distributing diplomas, for which, according to some esoterie reason, the graduating gown was wholly unsuitable, and one or more additional became necessary. And that was only a preliminary to trimmings of bouquets, gloves, dance tickets, souvenir gifts, etc.

The worst of it has been that the largest amounts of money were often spent by the families that could least afford it. Rich girls were known to have all kinds of finery hanging up at home. Any old thing was good enough for them. The poor girl must make a bluff at being well off, and the Old Man drew from his feeble savings bank account to tide the family over the crisis.

How enormously our American cost of living, for which we overturn the mighty from their seats, and hold conventions and spend money on investigating committees, is due to the common desire to pass for something we are not!

In the days of Poor Richard's Almanac, thrift was counted as a virtue, like temperance, charity, and chastity. Now it seems to be regarded as a vice.

Recognizing this situation, school boards and school teachers are working all over the country to persuade the girls and their parents to agree to dress simply for graduation. Such a resolution would do more to help a lot of young people get an education than an elaborate equipment of laboratories and apparatus.

WHY NOT REMOVE IT?

We doubt if there is any one who will not agree with us that the Coddington street corner would be much improved by the removal of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., building. Stand in front of the flower store on Hancock street or Temple street and look across at the new Court house and what spoils the effect—that little building. Come down Depot street from the train and look toward the Library and what spoils the effect—that little building.

The building in itself is all right, tidy, well painted, etc., but it looks out of place. We would not advocate removing it and throwing it into the Library grounds but would favor extending Temple street, making a large intersection of Coddington, Washington and Temple strets.

As Mr. Crane as done so much for the city in the beautiful Library and grounds it is really up to the city to do something. It should not let a few thousand dollars stand in the way of so great a public improvement—we might say public necessity.

Our councilmen should make another move in this direction and buy the Insurance company out at any price.

BOSTON'S BLACK FRIDAY.

Yesterday was one of the blackest Fridays in the history of Boston.

Neither The Boston Elevated railroad officials or the police anticipated any such conditions as prevailed in Boston on the first day of the strike inaugurated by the union employees of the road. If they had no doubt they would have been better prepared to meet the situation than they were. That the street car traffic of the city and the many surrounding suburbs was seriously crippled is now well established. Property was destroyed, lives endangered and mail cars smashed. The propriety of such a course of action may be brought more forcibly to the minds of the striking car men now that they have had twenty-four hours in which to consider the problem. It is a serious matter to riot, destroy property, endanger the lives of people and interfere with the passage of the United States mail.

The police were powerless to successfully cope with conditions which existed. A continued interference with mail cars may mean that the United States government may take a hand in the adjustment of the present difficulties. Boston with its crooked and narrow streets offers greater facilities for tying up traffic, destroying property and endangering life and limb with greater facilities for the escape of the offenders than in cities with wide streets laid out in regular order. This is unfortunate but cannot be remedied at this time to make matters any better. Will the work of Friday be continued? If so how long will unoffending citizens, engaged in peaceful traffic consent to have their lives endangered without making such protest that cannot fail to be state wide in its scope and effect.

VARIETY IN COSTUMES WORN

At Christian Endeavor Party at Wollaston Park

COLONIAL DRESS A WINNER

A most enjoyable costume party was held by the Christian Endeavor society in the vestry of the Park and Downs church on Wednesday evening which was attended by a large number.

All styles of costumes were in evidence including Japanese girls colored mammies Spanish and Gipsy characters. The immortal George was among those present and a rainbow costume was attractive.

The evening opened with an elaborate grand march in which the prize winning costumes were selected by a committee consisting of Rev. William B. Ayers and William Kershaw.

In an extreme costume of the modern society belle Artemus Dingwell was easily the winner for the men. His hobble skirt, bandeau and marvelous wig were the cause of much merriment.

Mrs. E. S. Lyons was the winner for the ladies. She affected the dress of an aged grandmother of the Colonial period. The prizes were most acceptable, the gentleman receiving a fine pongee shirt and the lady a fine white kid bag.

Games were enjoyed and refreshments were served later in the evening. The affair was under the direction of the officers of the Christian Endeavor Society, Mrs. Boynton and Mrs. F. J. Brown being in charge of the refreshments.

MR. AND MRS. FURNALD MARRIED FOR 62 YEARS

Couple Prepared to Greet Friends at Their 62d Anniversary Sunday

Mr. Furnald Made Great Record as Detective Capturing Noted Criminals

A distinction that is enjoyed by very few people will be the happy lot of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon B. Furnald, of 90 Washington street, Sunday, when they will have passed through 62 years of married life. A feature of their long wedded career is that both were born in Quincy, and have always resided here, having lived in their present homestead for half a century. The knot which bound them together for such a long lapse of years was tied in the First Universalist church, June 9, 1850, by Rev. W. W. Dean, who is now located at Washington.

Napoleon Bonaparte Furnald was born August 24, 1828, and was the last of a family of ten children. His wife, who was Elizabeth Fowles Dodge before her marriage, was born May 20, 1832. Both Mr. and Mrs. Furnald are hale and hearty at the ages of 84 and 80 respectively, and give promise of rounding out a number of years. They were busy today preparing for the large number of callers who will undoubtedly shower their congratulations upon them and they are ready to extend the glad hand to all visitors in the same manner that has characterized their hospitality during their many years of wedlock.

Few men can boast of such a record as Mr. Furnald has attained. Forced to leave school at the age of 12, he worked at various occupations until 1854, when he engaged in repairing furniture. He worked at this ocupation for a number of years and on July 5, 1872, was appointed by the Governor to the state constabulary force. For a long time afterwards he did considerable detective work and it was in this capacity that he gained a widespread and most enviable reputation.

As a detective he had charge of many notable cases. One of the most important of these was the Langmaid case, in which he discovered and arrested the murderer and subsequently by finding the knife with which the miscreant had severed his victim's body from her head, securing the evidence to convict him. He was the leader in the capture and conviction of James Henry Costley for the murder of Julia Hawk, a case which was pronounced by Judge Devens to have been one of the most interesting murder cases in the history of the country.

It was entirely through his efforts that James MacKenney was convicted and sentenced for life for the death of William McCormick of Braintree. State officers and detectives had given up the case, the medical examiner had given alcoholism as the cause of death and the body of the victim had been buried a week when Detective Furnald began his labors that resulted in clearing the mystery.

In 1891 he made a famous capture of George Green, a notorious robber and burglar, who had looted no less than 100 houses between Quincy and Brockton. Hearing that Green was in seclusion in the Braintree woods, Mr. Furnald set upon him at one o'clock in the morning and after a gruelling struggle succeeded in placing his man under arrest. It was learned at the trial that Green was an escaped convict and had the worst record in the history of the police at that time. Green was given a sentence of 42 years for his burglary. Mr. Furnald was given a reward by the Town of Braintree and was presented a handsome sum by numerous citizens for the capture of Green.

Mr. Furnald is a member of Mt. Wollaston Lodge and Manet Encampment, I. O. O. F., Amana Lodge, Daughters of Rebecca, Mahantom Tribe, I. O. R. M., Knights and Ladies of Honor. Both Mr. and Mrs. Furnald are prominent members of the First Unitarian church. Three children have been born to them, Thomas E., Mary L., and Henry Plumer, all of whom are well known in Quincy.

Mr. Furnald is still a justice of the peace and finds time to perform marriages and other duties incumbent upon that office.

CREDITABLE EXHIBIT

tector which had been loaned through the courtesy of the Long Distant Instrument company aded greatly to the wireless display.

The work in chemistry also took up considerable space and the specimens exhibited showed that there is much talent in this line among students at Quincy High school. It was at first planned to have experiments, but none were given owing to the fact that it was deemed advisable to have nothing to do with heat and thus avert any possible danger of fire. The greatest progress of all departments was noticeable among the work of students whose curriculum includes penmanship.

A sample of the handwriting of each pupil was taken at the first of the year and this was exhibited with the sample written at the close of the scholastic term. In each case marked improvement was discernable and it was clearly proven by the specimens of handwriting that much diligence and practise were exercised by those whose work was on exhibition. In addition the work in bookkeeping was greatly conspicuous and was in general of such a high order that it would have reflected credit upon a bookkeeper of long experience. Various designs artistic in every detail, the result of movement exercises, commanded much attention.

The success attained by the class in penmanship was attested to by the diplomas that hung on the wall of the gymnasium. From a class of 60 applicants, diplomas for handwriting were awarded to 35 by a Philadelphia company which gives merit for efficient work and which only grants a diploma to one who writes very legibly. The neatness and accuracy of both penmanship and bookkeeping work were the subjects of favorable comment on the part of those who viewed the exhibition.

The greatest skill and work of girl students were displayed in the dressmaking department. Drawings, original in makeup, were exhibited and the results from these patterns were shown together. Wearing apparel for ladies of almost every description was shown and from the work in the dressmaking department it looks as if many an enviable prospective housewife is now attending Quincy High school. Designs of a varied character occupied conspicuous positions and the eyes of the mothers and ladies who were present did not fail to linger a long while on the work that appertained to the dressmaking department.

Collars, shirt waists, aprons, dresses and centre pieces were shown in abundance, while the stencil work and lettering played prominent parts. The carpentry work, comprised numerous designs and specimens and were the results of talented abilities. The work of some stood out more conspicuously than others, such as their specimens were large and of a more difficult type to m Included among these was a bookcas made by Harry Malnati, a plan of a boat house by Maurice Blackmur and piano stools by Harold Seavey and Wesley Brown.

Not the least interested at the exhibition was the party of mayors, wives and friends who were the guests of Mayor Eugene R. Stone. In addition to the work mentioned there were exhibits of cooking and other industrial necessities were shown to great advantage.

Headmaster James D. Howlett was in charge of the exhibition and was assisted in explaining the work by the teachers of the different industrial departments.

The following teachers were in charge of the work exhibited by their respective classes:

Sewing—Miss Harriet B. Whitaker.

Drawing, including manual training and free-hand—Arthur Ray, assisted by Isaac Goddard, Arthur Staff, Emdor Van Amburg and Miss Frances M. Whitcomb.

Penmanship—Robert S. Schoonmaker, Miss Edith Abbott and Miss Edith Grant.

Chemistry—Ivan G. Smith.

Physics—Miss Evaline A. Salsman.

Cooking—Miss Mary Douglass.

ORDERS TROOPS FOR CUBA

5,000 Army In Addition to Marines Now There

FOUR BIG ARMY TRANSPORTS

Intervention For Peace Must Take Place—Too Many Lives and Valuable Property at Risk—Negro General Arrested For Conspiracy—Fighting Near Home of American Minister—More Marines Landed

Washington, June 8.—The general staff of the army has issued preparatory orders for the dispatch of a military expedition of 5000 troops to Cuba. The four big army transports now at Newport News were ordered to be put in commission, provisioned and supplied. Orders also were sent to the army posts from which the troops will be drawn to have them in readiness for the movement. The troops will be taken from Plattsburg barracks, Forts Potter, Niagara and Governor's island, New York, and Forts McPherson and Oglethorpe in Georgia.

President Gomez was notified last Wednesday that the United States would intervene in a substantial military way to restore order in Cuba unless his own army made some immediate progress.

At the war department it was emphatically stated that if the expeditionary force did go to Cuba, it would not be with any thought of political interference in the affairs of the island government.

Havana, June 9.—Juan Ducasse, who was a prominent negro general in the war of the revolution, has been arrested at Havana, charged with conspiracy to support the present negro insurrection. P. Galvez, leader of the negro party in Pinar del Rio, also was arrested.

A skirmish at Marianas showed at least one rebel band within ten miles of the capital. The place is the home of the American minister, Mr. Beaupre.

Colonel Orestes Ferrara, speaker of the house of representatives, suddenly sailed from Havana for the United States by way of Key West. The object of Ferrara's visit to the United States is not known. It is believed he is acting as the special agent of President Gomez to Washington.

Following reports of violence on the part of negroes in the suburbs of Havana, President Gomez has issued a manifesto calling every man in the island to arms to protect property and prevent outrages, in order to avoid intervention by the United States.

Santiago, June 9.—The United States gunboat Paducah landed fifty additional marines under Lieutenant Philip Torrey at the El Cuero mines and sixty marines under Captain Gulia at Punta de Sal. These garrisons will be increased as soon as possible as they are considered to be insufficient at present for the protection of the property there.

Fighting In Middletown Causes Governor to Send Militia

Middletown, Conn., Junea 8.—In response to an appeal from Sheriff Johnson, Governor Baldwin and Adjutant General Cole ordered Troop A, cavalry, of New Haven, to proceed here to assist in controlling the riotous striking employes of the Russell Manufacturing company, the majority of whom are Italian women.

A dozen strikers and police officers were injured in a riot at the South Farms mills of the company, about 400 of whose employes are on strike for an advance in wages and readjustment of certain working conditions.

One of the strikers, a woman, was so badly injured that she had to be sent to a hospital. The police were cut and bruised by bricks, stones and other missiles thrown by the strikers. State Policeman Jackson was struck over the head and cut severely by a piece of metal pipe.

Bangor, Me., June 8.—The body of Helen G. Haley, the South Brewer stenographer, whose strange disappearance on May 29 baffled the best detective skill in Maine, was found in the Penobscot river, not 200 yards from her home.

It was found floating, head down, alongside a lumber boom. Every indication points to suicide.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Which Cannot Dance, Harvard or Radcliffe?—Collegian's Scrap Enlivens Frivolous Hubbites—Lovely Woman Who Cannot Get Off a Street Car Properly, Thiks She Can Navigate An Aeroplane—New England Young Men Have Opportunities for Loyal Service with Boston's Model Traction Company—Commencement Gayeties Fill Back Bay Streets.

That the fair sex is nowadays up in everything is proved by the names of several women aviators among the expected participants in the annual Boston Aviation Meet, which is to open June 29. The opportunity to see how a woman who may or may not be able correctly to step off a street car will manage a many planed airship will make the event this year well worth the price of admission. Preparations are under way for the nine days of spectacular flying and workmen are working like bees on the Harvard Aviation Field at Squantum. It is expected that the course will be the best in the country after all is in readiness, and the hangars have been so arranged with wire backs that the public will have a chance to get close views of the big machines. Plans for the presence of at least fifteen of the greatest flyers in the world are being closed, including possibly three foreigners and as before stated, several women. Women have been notable in several meets which have taken place abroad, but this is probably the first time that they have been included as a part of the program in American aviation.

A polite scrap between the collegians of Radcliffe and Harvard is on—an amusing war of the sexes. A horrid thing who writes for the Radcliffe magazine has claimed that Harvard men should take dancing lessons, in order that they may learn how to deport themselves on the dancing floor. The boys, however, have a champion in their dancing teacher of long standing who says that the Radcliffe girls are notoriously poor dancers and that the boys have to put up with such poor dancing at the Radcliffe social functions that they in many cases can no longer be prevailed upon to attend them. So it goes, but it is notable that the complaints have not been forthcoming from either side until the season is well night over, so there is no harm done for this year at least.

White gowns, black gowns, bouquets and diplomas lend gayety to the highways these days. What with Tech, Boston University and the Medical School leading the list, and several smaller institutions swelling the numbers of capped and gowned students and their gaily dressed friends, the good old town is in a buzz and chatter all the time. The "Pops" have their annual influx of Harvard Night, Technology Night, Williams Night, and so on, when the students and others get together in a celebration that is hugely enjoyed by all. Harvard's Commencement week comes earlier than usual, from the 16th to the 22d. The music schools' festivities come rather later than most of the institutions, but they make up in quality for the necessary waiting. It is in the late spring days when the schools and colleges send forth their graduates that Bostonians realize most keenly the vast number of students of various branches which are gathered together from all over the world to take advantage of the facilities offered by the modern Athens.

A training school of loyal service would be a good title for the new school of instruction for surface car motormen and conductors which has just opened in the Roxbury district. Loyalty, at any rate, is the term on which Instructor C. S. Ching rings the changes in his introductory address to the young men from every part of New England who are anxious to get a job on the cars. The preachment is timely just now because outside organizers are at work among some of the younger and less experienced employees of Boston's model traction company, hoping apparently to stir up trouble and possibly such a strike as has disturbed several cities outside of New England. The older men are almost to a unit loyal to the company's interests. Part of the plan of the new school seems to be to increase the sense of responsibility among the new recruits. This lesson in faithfulness to the employer they will learn while they are being coached in the more mechanical parts of their calling—the motormen in the handling of the brakes and controller and the correct solution of problems that constantly rise in crowded streets; the conductor in the necessary passages of the rule book and the methods of courteously and efficiently taking care of his passengers. Most people do not think of the candidate for a street railway position having to go to school again but it has been the Boston Elevated Company's experience that class room teaching helps to give the new man a real understand ing of the seriousness of his responsibie job. The applicant, very often a young man from northern New England or a Canadian province, first passes a severe physical examination. If successful, and if his credentials are all right, he is admitted to the school where he learns the theory and practice of his job before going out into the street on a car.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER

PROLOGUE.

It was in the woods that the girl of the Limberlost found her education, her love, her happiness and other good things, so, rightly, the air of the trees is in this story of her life. Here is a tale for lovers of the woods and for others who like a simple story well told by one who knows the forest, can tell about "home folks" and can find the interest in everyday lives. Through these pages flutter the brilliant butterfly of tangled romance, the more sober butterfly, no less beautiful, of noble, quiet lives, well lived, and the gray moth of sorrow borne needlessly for many years. And if you listen closely you may hear the buzz of the little, busy existence of Billy, a youngster worth your knowing.

CHAPTER I.

Wherein Elnora Goes to High School.

"ELNORA COMSTOCK, have you lost your senses?" demanded the angry voice of Katharine Comstock as she glared at her daughter.

"Why, mother?" faltered the girl.

"Don't you 'why mother' me!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You know very well what I mean. You've given me no peace until you've had your way about this going to school business. I've fixed you good enough, and you're ready to start. But no child of mine walks the streets of Onabasha looking like a play actress woman. You wet your hair and comb it down modest and decent and then be off or you'll have no time to find where you belong."

Elnora gave one despairing glance at the white face, framed in a most becoming riot of reddish brown hair, which she saw in the little kitchen mirror. Then she untied the narrow black ribbon, wet the comb and plastered the waving curls close to her head, bound them fast, pinned on the skimpy black hat and started for the back door.

Mrs. Comstock watched the girl down the long walk to the gate and out of sight on the road in the bright sunshine of the first Monday of September.

"I bet a dollar she gets enough of it by night!" Mrs. Comstock said positively.

Elnora walked by instinct, for her eyes were blinded with tears. She left the road where it turned south at the corner of the Limberlost, climbed a snake fence and entered a path worn by her own feet. Dodging under willow and scrub oak branches, she at last came to the faint outline of an old trail made in the days when the precious timber of the swamp was guarded by armed men. This path she followed until she reached a thick clump of bushes. From the debris in the end of a hollow log she took a key that unlocked the padlock of a large weather beaten old box, inside of which lay several books, a butterfly apparatus and an old cracked mirror. The walls were lined thickly with gaudy butterflies, dragon flies and moths. She set up the mirror, and, once more pulling the ribbon from her hair, she shook the bright mass over her shoulders, tossing it dry in the sunshine. Then she straightened it, bound it loosely and replaced her hat. She tugged vainly at the low brown calico collar and gazed despairingly at the generous length of the narrow skirt. She lifted it as she would have liked it to be cut if possible. That disclosed the heavy leather high shoes, at sight of which she looked positively ill and hastily dropped the skirt. Locking the case again, she hid the key and hurried down the trail.

She followed it around the north end of the swamp and then struck into a footpath crossing a farm in the direction of the spires of the city to the northeast. Again she climbed a fence and was on the open road. For an instant she leaned against the fence, staring before her, then turned and looked back. Behind her lay the land on which she had been born to drudgery and a mother who made no pretense of loving her. Before her lay the city, through whose schools she hoped to find means of escape and the way to reach the things for which she cared. When she thought of how she looked she leaned more heavily against the fence and groaned. When she thought of turning back and wearing such clothing in ignorance all the days of her life she set her teeth firmly and went hastily toward Onabasha.

She approached the great stone high school building, entered bravely and inquired her way to the office of the superintendent. There she learned that she should have come the week before and arranged for her classes.

"I finished last spring at Brushwood school, district No. 9," said Elnora. "I have been studying all summer. I am quite sure I can do the first year work if I have a few days to get started."

"Of course, of course," assented the superintendent. "Almost invariably country pupils do good work. You may enter first year, and if you don't fit we will find it out speedily. Your teachers will tell you the list of books you must have, and if you will come with me I will show you the way to the auditorium. It is now time for opening exercises. Take any seat you find vacant." He was gone.

Elnora stood before the entrance and stared into the largest room she ever had seen. The floor sloped down to a yawning stage, on which a band of musicians, grouped around a grand piano, were tuning their instruments. Every one else was seated, but no one paid any attention to the white faced girl stumbling half blindly down the aisle next the farthest wall. So she went on to the very end facing the stage. No one moved, and she could not summon courage to crowd past others to several empty seats she saw. At the end of the aisle she paused in desperation as she stared back at the whole forest of faces, most of which were now turned upon her.

In one burning flash came the full realization of her scanty dress, her pitiful little hat and ribbon, her big, heavy shoes, her ignorance of where to go or what to do, and from a sickening wave which crept over her she felt she was going to become very ill. Then out of the mass she saw a pair of big brown boy eyes three seats from her, and there was a message in them. Without moving his body he reached forward and with a pencil touched the back of the seat before him. Instantly Elnora took another step, which brought her to a row of vacant front seats.

She heard the giggle behind her. The knowledge that she wore the only hat in the room burned her. Every matter of moment and some of none at all cut and stung. She had no books. Where should she go when this was over? What would she give to be on the trail going home!

Before she realized what was coming every one had risen and the room was emptying rapidly. Elnora hurried after the nearest girl and in the press at the door touched her sleeve timidly.

"Will you please tell me where the freshmen go?" she asked huskily.

The girl gave her one surprised glance and drew away.

"Same place as the fresh women," she answered, and those nearest her laughed.

Elnora stopped praying suddenly, and the color swept into her face. "I'll wager you are the first person I meet when I find it," she said and stopped short. "Not that! Oh, I must not do that!" she thought in dismay. "Make an enemy the first thing I do—oh, not that!"

She followed with her eyes as the young people separated in the hall, some climbing stairs, some disappearing down side halls, some entering doors near by. She saw the girl overtake the brown eyed boy and speak to him, and he glanced back at Elnora, and now there was a scowl on his face. Then she stood alone in the hall.

Presently a door opened and a young woman came out and entered another room. Elnora waited until she returned and hurried to her. "Would you tell me where the freshmen are?" she panted.

"Straight down the hall, three doors to your left," was the answer as the girl passed.

"One minute, please—oh, please!" begged Elnora. "Do I knock or just open the door?"

"Go in and take a seat," replied the teacher.

"What if there aren't any seats?" gasped Elnora.

"Classrooms are never half filled. There will be plenty," was the answer.

Elnora removed her hat. There was no place to put it, so she carried it in her hand. She looked infinitely better without it. After several efforts she at last opened the door and, stepping inside, faced a smaller and more concentrated battery of eyes.

"Be seated," said the professor in charge of the class, and then, because he saw Elnora was desperately embarrassed, he proceeded to lend her a book and to ask her if she had studied algebra. She said she had a little, but not the same book they were using. He asked her if she felt that she could do the work they were beginning, and she said she did.

That was how it happened that three minutes after entering the room she was compelled to take her place at the blackboard beside the girl of the hall, whose flushed face and angry eyes avoided meeting Elnora's. Being compelled to concentrate on her proposition, she forgot herself. When the professor asked that all pupils sign their work she firmly wrote "Elnora Comstock" under her demonstration. Then she took her seat and waited with white lips and trembling limbs as one after another the professor called the names on the board, while their owners arose and explained their propositions or flunked if they had not found a correct solution. She was so eager to catch their forms of expression and prepare herself for her recitation that she never took her eyes from the work on the board until clearly and distinctly "Elnora Cornstock" called the professor.

The dazed girl stared at the board. One tiny curl added to the top of the first curve of the "m" in her name had transformed it from a good old English patronymic that any girl might bear proudly to Cornstock. Elnora stared speechless. When and how did it happen? She could feel the wave of smothered laughter in the air around her. A rush of anger turned her face scarlet and her soul sick. A hot answer was on her lips. The voice of the professor addressed her straightly:

"This proposition seems to be beautifully demonstrated, Miss Cornstalk," he said. "Surely you can tell us how you did it."

That word of praise saved her. She was tall, straight and handsome as she arose.

"Of course I can explain my work," she said in natural tones. "What I can't explain is how I happened to be so stupid as to make a mistake in writing my own name. I must have been a little nervous. Please excuse me."

"Did you really let that gawky piece of calico get ahead of you?"

She went to the board, swept off the signature with one stroke, then, without a tremor, rewrote it clearly. "My name is Comstock," she said distinctly. She turned to her seat and, following the formula used by the others, made her first high school recitation.

The face of Professor Henley was a study. As Elnora took her seat he looked at her steadily. "It puzzles me," he said deliberately, "how you can write as beautiful a demonstration and explain it as clearly as ever has been done in any of my classes and still be so disturbed as to make a mistake in your own name. Are you very sure you did that yourself, Miss Comstock?"

"It is impossible that any one else should have done it," answered Elnora steadily.

"I am very glad you think so," said the professor. "Being freshmen, all of you are strangers to me. I should hate to begin the year with you feeling there was one among you small enough to do a trick like that. The next proposition, please."

When the hour was gone the class filed back to the study room, and Elnora followed in desperation because she did not know where else to go. She could not study as she had no books, and when the class again left the room to go to another professor for the next recitation she went also. At least they could put her out if she did not belong there. Noon came at last, and she kept with the others until they dispersed on the sidewalk. She was so abnormally self conscious she fancied all the hundreds of that laughing throng saw and jested at her. When she passed the brown eyed boy walking with the girl of her encounter she knew, for she heard him say, "Did you really let that gawky piece of calico get ahead of you?" The answer was indistinct.

After noon she returned to the high school, followed some other pupils to the coatroom, hung her hat and found her way to the study where she had been in the morning. Twice that afternoon with aching head she faced strange professors in different branches. Once she escaped notice, the second time the worst happened. She was asked a question she could not answer.

"Have you not decided on your course and secured your books?" inquired the professor.

"I have decided on my course," replied Elnora; "I do not know who to ask for my books."

"Ask?" the professor was bewildered. "I understood the books were furnished," faltered Elnora.

"Only to those bringing an order from the township trustee," replied the professor.

"No! Oh, no!" cried Elnora. "I will get them tomorrow," and gripped her desk for support, for she knew that was not true. Four books, ranging perhaps at a dollar and a half apiece! Would her mother get them? Of course she would not, could not.

Did not Elnora know the story by heart? There was enough land, but no one to do clearing and farm. Tax on all those acres, recently the new gravel road tax added, the expense of living and only the work of two women to meet all of it. She was insane to think she could come to the city to school. Her mother had been right. The girl decided that if only she lived to get home she would stay there and lead any sort of life to avoid more of this torture. Bad as what she wished to escape had been, it was nothing like this. She never could live down the moment that went through the class when she inadvertently revealed the fact that she had expected her books to be furnished. Her mother would not get them. That settled the question.

But the end of misery is never in a hurry to come, for before the day was over the superintendent entered the room and explained that pupils from the country were charged a tuition of $20 a year. That really was the end. Previously Elnora had canvassed a dozen wild plans for securing the money for books ranging all the way from offering to wash the superintendent's dishes to breaking into the bank. This additional expense made the thing so wildly impossible there was nothing to do but hold up her head until she was out of sight.

YOUNG STOLE MARCH ON GANG

Memory Played Him False But Judge Set Him Right

A QUIET WEDDING

William H. Young, one of the long time conductors on the Bay State street railway, stole a march on his fellow employees last Monday when he took a day off and journeyed to Boston where he met one of Augusta, Me., fair daughters whom he made his wife. "Bill" somehow forgot that he must give the City Clerk a five days' notice of his intention to get married, or overlooked the fact owing to his anxiety to keep the affair quiet. Faint heart however never won a fair lady and when he found he was up against a proposition he was for a few minutes at loss just what to do.

The obliging City Clerk however, gave him a gentle hint and "Bill" was soon closeted with Judge Avery at the court building.

His Honor being a kind hearted gentleman consented to help "Bill" out and a few minutes later armed with the proper authority he jumped onto a car and flashing his red employees pass to the conductor sped toward Roxbury. Here he met the lady of his choice, Mrs. Virginia M. Carlin of Augusta, Me., and Rev. C. A. Young had soon said the words that made them one. It was the second venture for both the bride and groom. Bill is back again on his car just as though nothing had happened.

HENRY MULLANE

He was the youngest son of Mrs. Mary and the late John J. Mullane and moved to Quincy when quite young, from Somerville, where he was born. He had made his home at 1 Oak street ever since and was one of the most popular young men of this city. He enjoyed the acquaintance of a wide circle of friends, to whom he had always endeared himself by his affable manner and pleasing characteristics. All of his friends were shocked this morning when they learned of his untimely death.

He was one of the finest types of athletes ever turned out in Quincy and was especially proficient in the national pastime. He was a member of the famous Quincy team, which won the championship in 1898 and later played with his brother Charles, a pitcher, on the Stoughton town team. He was considered one of the finest ball tossers on the South Shore league.

The deceased came from a family of well known athletes. One of his brothers played in New England league and the Poughkeepsie team of the Hudson River league. His brother William, a letter carrier connected with the Quincy Post office, was also a famous athlete, being trainer at one time of "Piper" Donovan, who made a professional record for the 100 yard dash.

The deceased was a member of the Brookline Country club, of Company K. Fifth Regiment M. V. M., and of the Ward two democratic city committee. He was appointed an assistant assessor under Mayor Shea. He was affiliated with a number of associations in Quincy. Funeral service will be held Monday morning.

The body is now at Bean's undertaking rooms to be prepared for burial.

BRAINTREE BOY MAKES GOOD.

Harold E. Bean a Braintree boy, 1915 Phillips Andover Academy entering class, is making a reputation in base ball as well as in his studies at this famous educational institution. He has helped his associates to achieve the heretofore unaccomplished feat of winning the class championship and the numerals which go with that honor.

The class series comprised nine games. Young Bean pitched six of these games winning 5 and tieing 1. He was put on the varsity squad, and has a chance to get into the big Exeter. game to be played today. Harold did not pitch in three of the games, two of which were lost and one won. In a five inning game this week he struck out 13 of his opponents, duplicating the total strike outs obtained in another game of 9 innings which he had won. In the series Bean batted for over 500.

HIGH SCHOOL HONOR PUPILS

Excellent Scholarship Rewarded By the Selection

SEXES DIVIDE HONORS

Headmaster James D. Howlett of Quincy High school announced Friday that the honor pupils, who are to be the speakers at the graduation exercises, are Miss Olive Barnicoat, Miss Elizabeth Howard, Oswald Reinhalter and Chester K. Allen. To be a speaker at the closing exercises has always been a most enviable position and the announcement of the above speakers was received with great favor among the student body.

Miss Olive Barnicoat who is to speak on "Practical American Girls" graduated from the Adams school in 1908, and has always been very proficient in her studies. She has won a number of prizes during her four years' course at Quincy High school and is considered one of the brightest girls the school ever turned out.

The subject of Miss Elizabeth Howard will be "Glimpses at Girls over the Seas." Miss Howard has attended Quincy High school for four years and has distinguished herself in various branches both there and at the Everett Grammar school, Boston, from which she was graduated in 1908. Like Miss Barnicoat, she is very athletic and is very popular among the students.

Oswald Reinhalter, who is to speak on "The Future of Quincy" comes from a family of scholars, all of whom have acquitted themselves to great advantage while students at Quincy High. He is a graduate of the Gridley Bryant school, class of 1908, and has frequently captured prizes for high marks in studies. He is well liked by the students at the school and is very favorably known throughout the city.

Chester K. Allen, a graduate of the Cranch school, class of 1908, will talk on "The Parcels Post" and the fact that he has taken such a subject for his theme is sufficient proof of his ability as a scholar. He has frequently carried off honors in studies and has always taken an active part in all movements at the school. All of the speakers are talented, and have gained wide experience in the theatricals that have been held from time to time.

DEMANDS IMPEACHMENT

Victor Berger Stands on His Rights Relative to Judge Hanford

Washington, June 8.—Impeachment of Federal Judge Cornelius P. Hanford of Seattle for annulling the naturalization papers of Leonard Oleson has been demanded in congress by Representative Berger.

In his "specifications" Berger charges among other things:

"That the annullment of Oleson's certificate was unlawful and an usurpation of power. On trial the defendant denied he was an anarchist, and no tesstimony to the contrary was introduced. He admitted he was a Socialist. On the ground of these admissions, and wholly without warrant of law, Hanford arbitrarily cancelled Oleson's certificate.

"That Hanford's reputation for rendering corrupt decisions is a matter of common and long standing notoriety.

"The charge of habitual drunkenness in court and of moral and temperamental unfitness to hold a judicial position will be sustained by sworn testimony."

The impeachment demand follows repudiation by President Taft and Attorney General Wickershom of Hanford's decision in the Oleson case. Berger says the president has directed Wickersham to secure a new trial.

DESIRES TO SQUARE ITSELF

Ready Print Trust Negotiates With the Department of Justice

Washington, June 8.—Negotiations between the department of justice and the Western Newspaper Union to reach a friendly settlement of the government's anti-trust investigation of that company have been begun.

The action of an agreement to square the corporation with the Sherman law, in accordance with the government's views, was discussed at a conference between Attorney General Wickersham, assistant to the attorney general, Mr. Fowler, and representatives of the union.

The concern supplies ready printed insides and boiler plate to country newspapers all over the country. The attorney general has been investigating its business through W. T. Chantland, his special assistant.

GLEANERS PLAN MANY EVENTS

The regular monthly meeting of the Gleaners of the Swedish Baptist church was held at the home of Miss Florence Lund, Davis street, Norfolk Downs. The attendance was not as good as usual, some of the members being at the High school exhibition.

Plans were formulated for a fall concert to be given at the church the latter part of September. Arrangements will be made to make it a most successful entertainment. Steps were also taken to carry on some special work beside the giving of money to foreign missionary work. The society also plans to supply the pulpit with flowers every Sunday.

After the business, refreshments of delicious lemonade and cake were served by the hostess. A delightful evening was enjoyed, and concluded with music and singing.

PISTOL USED BY DORR

Revolver Picked Up on Mud Flat Answers Description

Lynn, Mass., June 8.—The revolver which, it is alleged, William A. Dorr killed George E. Marsh, the Lynn soap manufacturer, has been found by John Williams, a clam digger, under six inches of mud near the scene of the crime.

The police are convinced it is the weapon because its number is identical with that of the one purchased by Dorr in Stockton, Cal., previous to his trip east.

The gun was found only a quarter of a mile from the spot on which Marsh's dead body was found. They have searched long and carefully for it.

Day service fair, night service omitted on surface cars. Ten men deserted the strikers. Percussion caps placed on tracks at several points. Car stoned and woman hurt. Big parade and mass meeting planned for tomorrow.

Local street railway men deny the rumor published in the Boston papers Saturday to the effect that it was possible that the employees of the Bay State street railway were considering the going out in sympathy with the strikers on the Boston L. John C. Faircloth, president of the Quincy division of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric street railway employees stated Saturday night that there was nothing to the rumor. President Faircloth said that his union had a two years' agreement with the Bay State street railway company and that they proposed to stand by that agreement. This means that there will probably be no trouble on the Quincy cars. The through line of cars to Dudley street have been running as usual although the through service has been discontinued at night.

Quincy men do not run the cars in the City of Boston. The Quincy crew takes the cars as far as the Neponset terminal where they leave the cars. A crew of the Boston Elevated then takes them through Boston. On the return Elevated employees bring the cars to Neponset where they are taken in charge of by Quincy men.

The story Saturday was that Quincy men would refuse to run cars that came from Boston which had been operated by non union men. According to president Faircloth however it would seem that no such action had been contemplated.

Extra trains were run Saturday night and Sunday on the New Haven railroad at frequent intervals between Boston and Braintree to accommodate the unusual heavy traffic. All of these trains were heavily loaded for many refrained from patronizing the street cars in Boston fearing harm from the mobs. Trains were run all night Saturday night at hourly intervals.

WORKING FOR 4TH CELEBRATION

Committees Getting Busy and Citizens Taking Interest

SUCCESS ALMOST ASSURED

The meeting of the Fourth of July celebration Association at the Board of Trade rooms Saturday evening was the largest attended of any this year and was most enthusiastic. Mayor Stone, president of the association presided and stated that everything was going along smoothly and that there seemed to be more interest than in other years and he had no question but what funds would come in better. He also believed that the City council would give the committee the amount asked for.

ODD FELLOWS MEMORIAL

John Hancock Lodge Held Service for Dead Members

ADDRESS BY MR. MARSHALL

There was a large attendance at the memorial services held Sunday evening at the Washington Street Congregational church under the auspices of John Hancock Lodge, No. 224, United Order of Odd Fellows.. Members of the lodge, under leadership of Noble Grand James Thomas marched to the church in a body.

The services opened up with a processional, the music being rendered by the John Hancock Lodge Orchestra. This was followed by an invocation, recitation of the Lord's Prayer, a hymn, a reading and an anthem by William E. Brown, assisted by the choir. The scripture reading was followed by a prayer.

A solo, "Abide With Me." was rendered by J. W. Hendry. Then came the proclamation and the in memoriam services for the following deceased Odd Fellows, all of whom died in Quincy: C. J. Hazelton, of Saccarappa Lodge, No. 11, Westford, Maine; Charles Needham, of Cambridge Lodge No. 13, of Cambridge, John L. R. and Mt. Pleasant Lodge, No. 16, of Dover, New Hampshire; Edward A. Folsom of Putnam Lodge, No. 81, of Roxbury and George H. Wey of Ligonia Lodge, No. 5, of Portland, Maine.

An anthem was next sung by the choir. The orchestra rendered the offertory, which was followed by a hymn. The memorial address, which was eloquently delivered by the pastor of the church, Rev. Charles P. Marshall. After another hymn the serivce closed with benediction, the recessional by the orchestra and the singing in unison of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Rev. Mr. Marshall took for his subject "Brotherhood America's message to the world." Text—"For he loved him as he loved his own soul." I Sam. 20-17.

He said in part: Different peoples and nations have been called on to bear different messages to the world.

The Hebrews had a talent for religion. Their's was the task to bear to the world the great truth of a one God. Through all their long history, from the time of their great law-giver Moses through judges, seers, prophets, priests and kings they were above every thing else children of Jehovah, their God. Their God was their king their kings were prophets, their literature is religious, their national festivals were not holidays but holy days.

Their religion, a one, holy, righteous God, who hates sinners but loves and is a father to the sinner is the religion of the world people today.

The Greeks too had their message.

SILENT BURGLAR MADE GOOD HAUL

Invaded House of William Mues and Secured $45 in Money

ONLY CHILDREN IN HOUSE

One of the boldest burglaries ever committed in Quincy took place early Saturday evening when one of this fraternity entered the house of William Mues on Quincy street, and walked off with $45 in money. The house is situated near the sewer dumping station off Hancock street, near the street railway car barn. Saturday night Mrs. Mues started up town to do some shopping leaving her daughter Grace at home in charge of the babies. About 9.30 the daughter who is 11 years of age heard footsteps and went into the hall to see what they were. Here she met a strange man. She asked him what he wanted but received no reply. The man then continued to walk up stairs where he began a search of the rooms on the second floor, securing a pocketbook containing $45 in money. He then came down and walked out without saying anything to the girl. As soon as he had gone the girl ran to Irwin's restaurant where she told her story. Mr. Irwin and George Troup one of the street railway men went back with her. They also telephoned the police. Mr. Troup remained in the house until Mrs. Mues returned. Mrs. Mues says that she saw a heavily built man standing in front of the house when she returned and that when she asked him what he was doing that he turned and ran off.

CONDEMNS SOCIALISTIC WORK THAT DESTROYS HUMAN SOCIETY

Fr. Scannell Expresses Strong Sentiment on Subject to Men of Holy Name Society

Destruction of Home Possible if Such Views Gain Ascendency

"The Evils of Socialism" was the subject of a most instructive discourse delivered Sunday evening in St. John's church to the members of the Holy Name by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, spiritual director and assistant pastor. It was the first of a series of talks on socialism and the speaker strongly condemned those socialistic workings which tended to destroy human society.

The speaker talked at length upon the recent strike in Lawrence and took occasion to score the methods that were now being used to arouse public sympathy for those men who were now in prison awaiting trial. Fr. Scannell added that the storekeepers who were displaying placards in their windows, calling the attention of the public to the injustice to certain individuals, must be ignorant of the true state of affairs or else in accord with the movement. Fr. Scannell said it was the duty of the courts to administer justice in the matter.

He said that the Catholic church was the great bulwark against the evil tendencies of socialism and added that it was against the Catholic church that the socialists were making their most vehement attacks.

The destruction of the home, in the event of socialistic free love gaining a foothold was also considered by the speaker at length. Fr. Scannell declared that the leaders among the socialists are mostly atheists and thus know no law or order.

At the close of his address, Fr. Scannell officiated at benediction, which was followed by a business meeting of the society.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

It is funny how some Democratic editors are taxing their grey matter advising the Republicans as to the best presidential candidate. They have plenty of chance to perform similar service for their own party in a few days.

It was a wise judge who decreed that the blowing of a horn or whistle does not give an automobile driver the right of way over a highway.

Abington is liable to lose the mighty John L. Sullivan as one of the celebration attractions, as rheumatism has delivered to him a solar plexus for the present.

No wonder money is tight with five men controlling the entire banking interests of New York city. They could easily create a panic at any time for their own enrichment.

Boston seems to be having a whole lot of trouble at the present time. Its docking facilities are not up to date, the railroad service is claimed to be inadequate and to add to the drawbacks comes the street car strike.

Any more senatorial candidates to be heard from? The crop has been unusually modest and retiring lately.

Restaurant keepers plan to charge for bread and potatoes served with orders now. Every one thought they were paying for those things right along.

By the time Senator Kerns has finished his speech on Lorimer the country will almost have forgotten the nature of the Chicago boss's offence.

It is said that Thomas W. Lawson has sidetracked everything even his senatorial ambitions and is paying strict attention to the tape. What's in the wind now?

Carnegie must have been so dumbfounded at that student rough house demonstration that he forgot to exclaim "Hoot mon, Hoot."

The New York judge has decreed that doctors could exceed the speed limit in the race with the stork acknowledged that he was a bran new father.

If it takes, as Mayor Fitzgerald claims, a week to get a meeting of the directors of the port, how long will it require for that body to bring Boston harbor to a state of commercial perfection?

Congressman Sulzer has something to say about the taking of Columbia lands for the Panama canal which comes pretty close to "National brigandage."

Pay up your taxes and help the city. Do not grumble at the city treasurer he is only doing his duty. If he held a private job he would have to do that or get out. He is working for the citizens as a whole and why should any of them find fault if he tries to give faithful service with adequate returns. Go to it, Mr. Taxpayer and settle at the hall.

Few outside of those mad for rapid expenditure of public funds can find anything useful or ornamental in the proposed watch tower of the Boston custom house. Of course in another case of a Paul Revere ride it might come in handy.

NO DODGING, PAY UP.

Tax Collector Child undoubtedly came in for a goodly portion of criticism by his attitude in deducting from the amount which the city owed some people taxes which those people owed the city. That the Collector was correct in his attitude is accepted by all fair minded people. Large business concerns which have financial transactions strike a balance in settling accounts. Why should not the city do the same when settling with those who are its creditors. Money is needed to conduct the affairs of the city and taxes are just bills, the proceeds of which go towards that end.

The collection of poll taxes is a problem in every city. Enormous amounts are carried on city books from this source alone year in and year out. Certainly the privileges which a city offer are worth the two dollars per year which poll taxes payers are required by law to pay. Many people incline to the belief that the elimination of the payment of a poll tax as the prerequisite for voting was a mistake. Be that as it may. The mistake or whatever one chooses to call it has been made. It is doubtful if it could ever again be enacted.

But to the collection of taxes we must again turn.

The Collector is a paid official to perform certain work. If he was collector for a private concern and failed to perform his duty, his efficiency would be questioned and his connection with that concern would be at an end.

People should be more careful in their judgment. An official who performs his duty is a rare bird. He should not be criticised for doing so but should receive the moral support of the community. Officials are too prone to be lax in their methods to gain the uncertain prestige of being a good fellow and popular. When an official is found who will perform his duty without fear or favor he should be honored for it and encouraged to go on.

Laxity in public office is just as prone to bring disaster as laxity in private business.

So people should not criticise the Collector. They should not attempt to dodge, but pay up their taxes and the city will reap the financial benefit and be able to meet its obligations. No doubt if all the poll tax money due the city was paid up a considerable portion of the municipal debt could be wiped out by this means.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES.

The time is drawing near when the pupils of the Quincy High school will go forth upon another mission. Some of them may be fortunate enough to enjoy the privilege of a higher education in other fields. Others will be called upon to enter upon life's burdens immediately after the doors of the high school close behind them. In whichever pathway the lines of those graduates lay we can feel assured by the high standard they have attained in their local school life that they will not bring discredit upon the city or its traditions but will honor it and the school from which they pass into another realm.

Quincy feels just pride in her high school and in the boys and girls who have gone out into the world from it.

Unlike many cities of the Commonwealth there is no militant auxiliary to it, with gold braid and the social functions, which, it is regrettable to say, unfits pupils for honorable yet laborious tasks in their new sphere of life. The boys and girls of Quincy are given a good wholesome practical education, in fine schools, under able and efficient instructors. They realize that they have a standard to maintain, later and labor to the end that the standard will not be lowered. The present class is no exception to those which have gone before. We join with the citizens in general in wishing those boys and girls Godspeed in their new careers and may they grow up useful men and women, true to their school, their city and the parents who have done so much for them.

DEDICATED TO GOD'S WORK.

There is nothing so beautiful in the highest acceptance of the term than the dedication of children to the work of the Master. God said "Suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." So that when in this delightful June season, when everything is blooming, incense filling the air, God laden vapors surround everything and all nature is in tune and sends up its silent but eloquent tribute to the Creator of all things, what more fitting than those little ones, God's own chosen, should be dedicated to his work here on this earth.

It is a touching service. One that appeals to all, when the children of today, who will be the men and women of tomorrow and in time take up their cares and burdens of life, its joys and sorrows, labor and happiness are consecrated to the Most High. Many may fall by the wayside. Weak ones may be unable to bear up under the trials which they have to meet, but the fact remains that an all wise and merciful Providence will bear with all, the strong as well as the weak. We all have our lives carved out for us by Him who knows what is best. We should accept our lots, however burdensome, with a realization that the reward awaits us at the proper time and He who knows it all will deal justly with us and portion our joys in full measure to what is our just dues. We must not be too quick to find fault with our lot. Patience and fortitude will bring their own joyous harvest at the proper time.

SUMMER ADVERTISING.

Much can be learned of the science of advertising for the average merchant, by studying the methods of the great department stores. These emporiums have been built up solely by advertising, and they pay high salaries for the best brains in the advertising business. Their conclusions, as may be seen in the methods actually employed, represent the results of exhaustive experiments in the art of selling goods through newspaper space.

Itis then, highly significant, that the great department stores spend a lot of money through the summer in advertising.

One reason for this policy is no doubt that a steady trade is the most economical. Where advertising is allowed to drop, or to be cut down, trade drops too.

The result is that the force of clerks is not profitably employed. Moreover, there is a loss of trade that will never be made up. People will wear their old clothes, and spend the money thus saved on amusement and travel, which otherwise would go to the home stores or new clothes for themselves and their children, new house furnishings, and better food.

In some cases where trade drops, through failure to advertise, it no doubt comes in at a later date, but very likely all in a bunch in a way that the clerks cannot handle it efficiently.

One great end and aim of advertising is to persude the public that a merchant has enterprise and intelligence. If the merchant's name is not seen in the advertising columns for a period of weeks, the impression of previous advertising is largely effaced.

In many places the consumption of commodities in the summer is very large, so that a big potential trade is merely waiting to be solicited. People require large outfits for vacation use, they need clothing, eatables, and house furnishings, peculiarly suited to warm weather. The merchant who drops his advertising in summer says in effect to the public that he is indifferent to their needs during a period of liberal spending.

While some people are out of town for short vacations in summer, many others are visiting here. They are at leisure, and they enjoy shopping while on a visit. Don't neglect the possibilities of their trade!

ARNOLD—GREEN.

Sunday evening, June 9, at eight o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gooding, 251 Middle street, Braintree, Miss Lillian Gertrude Green and Henry Stedman Arnold were united in marriage, the Rev. Charles R. Bowers, of Randolph officiating. Only the immediate families were present. The bride was charmingly gowned in white tussah silk and carried a shower bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Miss Louisa Caroline Green, sister of the bride was maid of honor. She was dressed in pink satin with overlay and wore gold beads. Master Charles Gooding was ring bearer. The room was prettily decorated with wild flowers.

Following the wedding there was a reception during which refreshments were served. Amid a shower of rice and confetti the happy young couple departed in an auto (13890) for Boston and by train to the White Mountains, Gorham, N. H., will be their destination. After the trip of two weeks Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will reside at 244 Middle street, Braintree, with the groom's parents Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Arnold. They will be at home to friends after Sept. 1.

COLUMBUS IN STATUE

Unveiling of a Beautiful Memorial at the National Capital

Washington, June 10.—Christopher Columbus is now enrolled in the American republic's hall of fame. In the shadow of the Capitol a majestic memorial fountain, wrought around a heroic statue of the discoverer of the new world, was unveiled with a nation paying tribute.

President Taft pronounced the country's eulogy upon the intrepid sailor. "The greatest mariner in history," was President Taft enconium.

The ceremony was attended by a huge demonstration. The greater part of the pageant was composed of Knights of Columbus.

Philander C. Knox, secretary of state, presided at the unveiling exercises. The Marquis Cusani Confalonfear, the Italian ambassador, released the American flags which hid the statue.

Murray, who represented the mayor in the negotiations.

FOURTH OF JULY ASSOCIATION

On account of the illness of Albert L. Whitman, the chairman of the music committee as well as chairman of the purchasing committee it was decided to appoint a temporary chairman of these two committees. Thomas Griffin was appointed temporary chairman of the music committee and Joseph Carruthers chairman of the purchasing committee.

The chairmen of the several collection committees made brief reports. In Ward one it was announced that J. C. Hearn had declined to serve as chairman and Leon C. Claflin was appointed.

In Ward two the collectors had begun their canvassing and good results were looked for.

In Ward three George Gauthier said that he had seen a few parties on his way to the meeting and that he had secured $10 with but little effort.

In Ward four it was announced that the collectors would meet Monday evening and that the ward would be divided up into sections and each collector given certain streets to canvas.

George B. Curren of Ward five reported that he believed that his ward would do better than last year and that his canvassers were getting down to business.

Secretary Arthur W. Stetson stated that he had received a check for $10 from Theophilus King.

On motion of James H. Elcock the following appropriations were made; Fireworks, $550; bands, $300; parade, $150. These sums it was stated was only a starter and that if collections came in well that additional sums would be appropriated later.

The President announced that Col. I. L. Kincaide had consented to assume the chairmanship of the automobile parade and this feature was an assured success.

It was also announced that posters advertising the celebration would be out out this week.

As many as possible were urged to attend the hearing before the State Board of Charity this afternoon on the hearing on granting the association a charter.

Capt. George A. Wardwell chairman of the parade stated that he had great hopes of securing the Roxbury Horse Guards for the parade and should they come they would probably camp on Merrymount park the night before and that the rough rider squad would give an exhibition in the afternoon.

He also announced that the Spanish War Veterans would turn out with upwards of fifty men in uniform. The Red Men would probably be represented in the parade by a feature float.

It was voted that the committee meet every Saturday evening from now on until the celebration.

HARVARD OLYMPIC CONTESTS

Three World's Athletic Records Are Broken and One Equalled

Cambridge, Mass., June 10.—Over 32,000 people gathered to witness the Olympic tryouts in Harvard Stadium.

Marc S. Wright, an athlete from Dartmouth university, broke the world's record for the pole vault. He lifted his body cleanly and clearly well over the bar when it was 13 feet 2¼ inches above the ground.

Abel R. Kiviat of the Irish-American Athletic club of New York made a new world's record for a race at 1500 metres (1640 yds 15 in) when he ran the distance in 3 min 55 4-5 sec.

H. P. Drew of the Springfield high school, a mere lad, equalled the world's Olympic record of 10 4-5 seconds in the 100-metre (109 yds 12 in) event—which corresponds most nearly to our 100-yard dash. Besides that he beat Ralph Craig of Detroit, considered the greatest sprinter in the world.

Billy Kramer of the Long Island A. C. broke his own world's record in the 10,000-metre (6 miles 376 yds) by about half a minute, 32 m 12 4-5 sec.

Harry T. Worthington, an Exeter leaper, beat Albert L. Gutterson of the B. A. A., rated as the world's best broad jumper (22 ft 11 ½ in). George Horine, the world-famed Pacific coast high jumper, was a failure, not nearly equalling his own marks. "Mel" Sheppard and "Tel" Berna came back to form, Shepard winning the 800-metre (874 yds 2 ft 8 in) race corresponding to our half-mile, in 1 m 55 sec, and Berna taking the 5000-metre (3 miles 188 yds) event in 5 m 8 2-5 sec.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

On Sunday, June 2d, it being the last regular session of the Sunday School, the children's pennies which they have contributed during the year, were counted and apportioned as is the custom, to various charities especially for children. This year $25 will be sent to the Floating Hospital, $25.00 to the Country Week Fund, and $50.00 will be added to the General Charity Fund of the Sunday School to be used for the benefit of any needy children in the community, whose names are given in during the year.

This Charity Fund was begun some years ago, and is administered by a Committee made up of teachers and pupils chosen each season by the schol—and has enabled the children to do a great deal of good, teaching them to feel a responsibility for those less fortunate than themselves.

There will be a meeting of the Teachers and Officers of the Sunday school this evening, at 7.45. This is the annual meeting with the usual election of officers for the ensuing year.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Children's Sunday was observed yesterday at Wollaston Congregational church with an audience that filled the auditorium. He said in closing: "God who has His way in the making and unfolding of the flowers, has His way in the making of human life. Flowers perish, but the little life, unfolds into something very precious, to bloom forever in the garden of God."

The Christian Endeavor Meeting at six o'clock was led by Miss Alice G. Thompson. The subject of the meeting was "Happy Memories: how to make sure of them."

The regular mid-week service on Friday evening will be in charge of Rev. Edward Norton and he will speak on "A Walk about Zion."

Following this service a special business meeting of the church will be held, at which the letter of acceptance will be read from Dr. I. W. Sneath of New Haven, Conn., who has received a call to the pastorate of the church.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

This church accepts the Religion of Jesus, holding, in accordance with his teaching, "that practical religion is summed up in love to God and love to Man." All are cordially invited to its fellowship who are in sympathy with its spirit of perfect freedom, its ideal of perfect truth, and its practical aims of the worship of God and the service of Man.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Jacobs, 255 Safford street, their daughter Clara Jean, born Feb. 1', 1911 was christened by the Rev. Charles W. Casson of Dorchester, assisted by Rev. Carl G. Horst.

The floral decorations of the Church in charge of Mrs. Richard D. Jacobs and Mrs. William H. Boynton were beautiful and called out many words of praise.

Just before reading a poem yesterday, Rev. Mr. Horst called attention to the fact that our poets are among the best religious teachers and urged upon parents to have their children learn by heart Bryant's poem. "To a Waterfowl."

The musical program yesterday morning was as follows:

Prelude, Barcarolla—Offenbach.
Gloria in E.
Anthem "He shall come down like rain"—Dudley Buck.
Anthem "God is a Spirit."—William L. Bennett.
Response, "Father, hear thy children call"—Burdett.
Postlude, Priests' March from Athalia—Mendelssohn.

The pastor preached in the morning from the text, "Blessed are the merciful", Matt. 5, 7, his subject being "Kindness to Animals." He said: "Animals have rights that we must respect, and we have duties toward them that we cannot disregard. A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast and if we expect to obtain mercy we must show ourselves merciful. The bible teaches us to open our mouth for the dumb and poets like Coleridge, Cooper, Wordsworth, Longfellow and others in our time have written of kindness to animals. The Golden Rule applies to animals as well as men. We should be kind because they are so much in our power and because we owe them so much. I know of no more devilish sport than to wantonly take the life of our song-birds, which is done by boys and older boys, so-called men, who ought to know better. But the worst enemies besides the men and boys, that the birds have, are the women, who insist on wearing aigrettes. The herons used to gather in large colonies on the coast of Florida, but are now practically extinct there. As a recent writer says:

"If every woman who wears an aigrette or plume of the white heron, would read the latest circular of the Audubon society, she could no longer thus proclaim herself as either ignorant or stupid or cruel. The statement often made by milliners, probably in good faith, that these plumes are manufactured is simply untrue. Human skill cannot produce such a feather. Every aigrette thus worn has been torn from the body of a mother bird, whose younglings have been left to starve. Some one has truly said: A garden without flowers, childhood without laughter, an orchard without blossoms, a sky without color, roses without perfume, are the analogues of a country without song-birds. I appeal to you therefore to be merciful and to heed .

The Birds' Petition.

O'er the glorious land from sea to sea,
We come in peace, with no angry words,
And pray you to spare all the bonnie birds.
We ask no help, we have pleasure to give:
All that we want is the right to live.
Ye beautiful ladies, so kind and true
We present the "Birds' Petition" to you:
Let no bonnie birds on your hats be worn,
No more sweet singers to be mangled and torn.
There's stain of blood on every bonnet
Which has an aigrette stitched upon it."

Our local court has lately been preaching most affective sermons from the fourth commandment which reads "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy."

Walter M. Hatch Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith, Fred M. Rollins, Mrs. William H. Boynton and J. Harry Hooper are the committee appointed to have full charge of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Wollaston Unitarian Church, January 31, 1913.

Sedgwick, the superintendent had charge of the Sunday school which was well attended as was evidenced from the Secretary's report. Mr. Sedgwick summed up the lesson by the use of the blackboard illustrating the difference between building upon the sandy and firm foundation, and thereby urging the cvhildren and all to be sure to build upon the solid rock. He spoke of the necessity of doing as well as hearing.

On account of the concert at six o'clock the Junior league and Epworth league services were not held as usual.

He told the story of a great tree, which was gradually eaten into by insects until it fell to the ground, although to a casual observer it appeared still to be round and whole. He likened the first lie to the first of these insects, soon followed by other lies and worse sins, it gradually eats into a life until it destroys it, although people think you are beautiful and pure until the crash comes.

The Christian Endeavor meeting was held at 6.15 o'clock. The subject was "Happy memories: How to make sure of them."

ANYBODY'S FIGHT IN CHICAGO

Both Sides Are Playing a Deep Game of Bluff

TWO DARK HORSES READY

Taft Column Awarded 48 More Delegates—Does Not Increase Claims Already Made—162 Delegates Yet In Dispute and Roosevelt Needs 120—President's Supporters Not Personally Ardent—Dark Horses in Shade

Chicago, June 10.—Forty-eight Roosevelt contestants from Arkansas, Florida and Georgia were rejected by the Republican national committee. This adds seventy-two to the president's column and assures him of 450 delegates, within ninety of the number needed to nominate. There are still162 contests to be decided.

The tally now stands: Taft, 450; Roosevelt, 420; La Follette, 36; Cummins, 10; in dispute, 162. Taft needs 90, Roosevelt needs 120; necessary for choice, 540.

With the national convention ten days off and nearly 200 contests yet to be heard by the national committee the outcome of the bitter factional quarrel in the party is difficult to forecast.

It is easy enough to say the president will be renominated or the colonel will wrest the convention prize from his former friend, but to produce the evidence to prove either contention is something that no one has yet done.

There is a good deal of bluffing on both sides. Senator Dixon, the Roosevelt manager, and Congressman McKinley, the director of the Taft campaign, are both ignoring the old admonition, "Don't prophesy unless you know." It's part of the game, and much of the claims handed out at both headquarters is pure buncombe.

Colonel Roosevelt has some able and resolute lieutenants in his army of insurgents. They are fighters from the drop of the hat, and if the colonel will say the word they will neither ask nor give quarter.

The one great weakness of the Taft movement is the apparent lukewarmness of many of the president's supporters. Many members of the national committee are only half-hearted in their support of the president. Several who are standing up and voting to seat the Taft delegates in the contested cases take little pains to conceal their dislike at the way in which the president has treated them since he has been in the White House.

La Follette is ready for the convention lightning to strike him; he will not be greately surprised if it does not do so this time, but he has the knowledge that he and "true progressiveness" have more votes than last convention and still are growing, notwithstanding the efforts of Roosevelt and Wall street to "ditch" the progressive movement.

Senator Cummins, the other dark horse, standing under the tree, patiently waiting for the lightning to strike, is considered today a more likely selection in event of the convention going afield for a candidate. La Follette stands for too much; he is still four or eight years in advance of his day, it is thought. Senator Cummins is not kicking up much dust now. He reasons very calmly. He tells his friends there is nothing to do but to sit and let things run their course. That it will come, if it comes, and that anything they may do will not change the course of the lightning a bit.

The nomination seems to be the primary consideration with Cummins. With La Follette it appears to be wholly secondary. He and his forces intend to push forward their principles. They believe that the principles must ultimately win. La Follette is willing to go along with them, but they are first and without compromise, because they stand paramount. The line of opposition to Roosevelt is uncompromising. He is considered the greatest of all menaces to the progressive movement.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

"COUNTY FAIR" AT BRAINTREE

After months of preparation by the Friendly Aid Society of Braintree, during which time the president Mrs. Willard E. Dow assisted by committees from all churches in town, the board of selectmen and the members of the Philergians, the long heralded "County Fair" was given on French's common last Saturday from 1 P. M. until 6 o'clock with an enormous attendance. It was billed on the posters as an "amazing aggregation of animated attractions" and there was something doing every minute.

The "brazen ballyhoo barkers" reminded one of Coney Island with their stentorian announcements of the various "shows." The parts were cleverly taken by Delcevare King of Quincy, Harold M. Gage and George H. Hamblett of Braintree. Their effort added greatly to the financial success of the afternoon session.

The executive board of the affair consisted of the president of the society Mrs. Willard E. Dow, Mrs. Arthur W. Hoe, secretary and Miss Leta Weston, treasurer. Each of the eight churches sent two representatives who selected their committees to aid them in carrying out the day's program.

The First Congregational church was represented by Mrs. George H. Hamblett and Mrs. Benjamin F. Wallis; South Congregational church, Mrs. George H. Day, Mrs. James H. Kilbrith; South M. E. church, Mrs. Warren W. Sylvester and Miss Leta Weston; Baptist church, Mr. E. W. Chamberlain, Mrs. Arthur W. Hoe; Emmanuel Episcopal church, Mrs. Caroline A. Bill and Mrs. Gerald G. E. Street; All Souls' church, Mrs. F. A. Bower, Miss Jennie Edgcomb; East M. E. church, Mrs. Augustus T. Johnson and Mrs. George A. Remick; St. Francis Catholic church, Mrs. W. H. J. Fitzgerald and Mrs. C. A. Sullivan.

The attractions at the fair were many and varied and furnished amusement for all. Among them was the picture gallery where the world's art was vividly portrayed while you wait. It was in charge of the committee from the Baptist church assisted by Mrs. Arthur W. Hoe, Mrs. J. Frank Ellis, Mrs. George W. Burton, Mrs. Clinton Ellis and Mrs. R. L. Barker. A tea garden direct from Japan, with geisha girls transported one to the land of cherry blossoms and lent a genuine Oriental flavor. Those in charge were Mrs. Day and Mrs. Kilbrith assisted by Mrs. Harry C. Thayer, Mrs. W. Austin Torrey, Mrs. Ralph L. Wiggin, Miss Maude Rogers and Miss Olive Robbons.

The Hopedale tonic and lemonade booth was well patronized. (Oh you sassyparliler) and was managed by Mrs. Caroline A. Bill and Mrs. Street assisted by Mrs. Charles A. Hobart, Mrs. Frank Sherman, Mrs. C. S. Hannaford and Mr. C. A. Hobart, all of the Emmanuel church.

Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Sullivan assisted by Dr. C. A. Sullivan as representatives of the St. Francis church operated a genuinne Chinese laundry under the firm name of Hop and Sing, Mongolian manglers.

Moses H. McGaughey lent valuable assistance and drew the coin with the ball and pail game.

Sweetest of all and a great money maker was the confectionery booth managed by four fetching young ladies from each church. They were Mrs. Humphrey Smith, Miss Helen Cuff, Miss Ina Condon, Miss Florence Burnham, Grace Wheeler, Alice Johnson, Florence Parkhurst, Anna Mae Thayer, Pauline Orcutt, Dorothy Loring, Gladys Gould, Ada Mack, Frances Close, Lora Emerson, Kisbro Burton, Ruth Holbrook, Mae Fitzgerald, Helen Smith, Annie Anglim, Sadie Rudderham, Mabel Wilson, Mattie B. Deland-Mabel Johnson, Mildred Nickerson, Harriet Shaw, Edna Conway and Mrs. George Anderson.

Ice cream found a ready sale in spite of the cool breezes. It was dispensed by Mrs. Sylvester and Miss Weston of the South M. E. church assisted by Mrs. I. Wendell Gammons, Mrs. Harry S. Snow, Mrs. Robert T. Elliott, Mrs. Henry H. Snow, Mrs. Mary Charmock, Mrs. Lester A. Johnson.

The fragrant wares of the lavender girls were much in demand. They were gowned in white with lavender sashes and sold sweet English lavender. They were the Misses Frances Street, Esther Close and Bertha Tripp and this feature was in charge of Mrs. Caroline A. Bill.

The venders of souvenirs and banners did a rushing business. This enterprise was conducted by Mrs. Augustus T. Johnson assisted by Mrs. Charles Remick and Mrs. L. F. Johnson of the East M. E. church.

The First Congregational church had provided for a fortune teller but the scheme was not carried out because of illness. The committee was Mrs. George H. Hamblett, Mrs. B. F. Wallis.

Braintree has many fine cooks who contributed some of their best recipes to the cake table. This was under the direction of Mrs. Mary Thayer, aided by Mrs. Charles F. Luce. Mrs. Charles E. Gilman, Mrs. George R. M. Bestick, Mrs. Thomas Donney, Mrs. Carrie M. Allen, Mrs. Alice M. Kane and Mrs. Ruth Collier.

No fair is complete without a cane board with its chances for a lucky shot. This attraction was supplied by a committee from All Souls' church, Mrs. Frank A. Bower, Miss Jennie Edgcomb and other members of the society. The headquarters tent where important information could be secured was in charge of Mrs. Willard E. Dow, Mrs. Arthur W. Hoe, Miss Leta Weston, and the visiting nurse Miss Anna D. Dwyer.

Some of the attractions announced by the barkers were Mr. and Mrs. Pumpernickel, from Hiram Corners, Maine, who were on hand to greet old friends. Mrs. Pumpernickel was cleverly impersonated by Mr. George S. Young while her husband was acted by Aubrey Hilliard.

Iz Fuller Bumps billed as the well-known high wheel wonder bestride a bone-shaker created much merriment. Mr. Bumps is perhaps better known as Joseph G. Spear of Hayward street, East Braintree.

Tonio Spagatarelli from North Square was present with his hand organ and a "monk." Even his nearest friends failed to recognize Mr. W. P. Battles of Weymouth who is a very talented amateur actor.

One of the most amusing characters was the monkey. This difficult part was taken by A. Humphrey Smith and his monkey shines were so clever as to create roars of laughter, the children being especially interested.

Two farmers, Lowell Norris and Herbert Mann figured in the afternoon's festivities.

Toward the close of the day, a parade was formed headed by Chief of Police Amos J. Loring and officers Horace Hunt and J. H. Gallivan. In the parade were noticed the little clown impersonated by Master Sherwood Williams and accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Silas Pumpernickel was their youngest in a perambulator, four little Japanese children, Harold and Russell Thayer, Evelyn and Lillian Tenney, George Woodsum as a negro, and all the other chief characters in their disguises including Miss Gladys Gould and Miss Dorothy Loring who were very artisticaly attired in Indian garb and represented respectively Hiawatha and Minnehaha.

At 2.30 those interested in athletics were entertained with a program of sports. The events and the winners are as follows:

Race for boys, ten years of age and under, won by Elwin Sylvester.

Peanut race—Kenneth Murray.

Race for boys of fourteen years, won by Leman Hirtle.

The winners of the first centipede race were Harry Annis, George Pratt, Eilis Condon, John Gallivan and John Ferguson.

Those winning the three legged race were John Gallivan and George Dunkerley.

Second centipede race, George Dunkerly, Miller Bestick, Ray Murphy, John Gallivan.

Obstacle race, Harry Annis won the first heat, George Bernard the second, and Harry Annis the final.

Cracker contest—C. Ray Smith.

The committee on sports—I. Wendell Gammons, Rev. A. Lowell Ryan, Dr. C. A. Sullivan, William Dyer, Walter Howland, Fred B. Watson.

The prizes for the winners were Ingersoll watches and banners.

At the conclusion of the program on the common, many adjourned to Parish hall of All Souls' church where a bountiful supper was served from 5 to 8 to over 250 people. Tickets were sold at the door by Mrs. Charles Hickey. Mrs. Frank A. Bower had charge of the supper arrangements and was assisted by a committee of ten from All Souls' church who constituted the kitchen committee. They were—Mrs. Eben Prescott, Mrs. George S. Young, Mrs. William A. Norton, Mrs. William R. Drake, Mrs. George W. Andrews, Mrs. James Singleton, Mrs. J. Franklin Perry, Mrs. Sarah E. Allen, Mrs. William G. Benham.

Miss F. M. Thomas was head waitress and was in charge of a corps of assistants from the various churches as follows:—Miss Helen Cuff, Mrs. W. H. J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. C. A. Sullivan, Mrs. E. P. Brooks, Mrs. H. R. Smith, Mrs. L. M. Clark, Miss Ada Mack, Miss Marion McKenney, Mrs. C. H. Brown, Mrs. A. A. Cook, Mrs. C. A. Arnold, Mrs. Edward A. Haskell, Mrs. George H. Hamblett, Mrs. B. F. Wallis, Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer, Mrs. George H. Day and Mrs. James H. Kilbrith.

In the evening a dance was held from 8 to 10 o'clock in Cochato hall, music being furnished by a hurdy gurdy. The coolness of the air made dancing most enjoyable and the affair was liberally patronized by the young people. The floor was in charge of James G. Cuff assisted by a corps of aids selected from the several churches.

Tags selling at ten cents each were worn by the citizens and the receipts from the sale of these furnished considerable revenue. The executive board are very grateful to all who generously gave of their time and money to promote the success of this gigantic undertaking.

A good advertising scheme were the banners displayed across the highways calling attention to the fair. They were furnished and placed by courtesy of the selectmen. Carroll M. Bill of Hollis avenue originated the unique posters. They were cleverly worded and very original and were a big factor in booming the scheme.

The organization known as the Friendly Aid Society was formed March 4, 1911. There is an associate membership list at a nominal fee and it is hoped that ultimately the dues will be sufficient to defray all the expenses. Much has been already accomplished in the way of alleviating distress and suffering and the society has won a lasting place in the hearts of the citizens. The proceeds of the fair will be used toward the support of the visiting nurse, Miss Anna D. Dwyer, whose services may be secured through physicians or by a personal application.

In June of last year was held the "Home travel day," an entirely successful undertaking. The second annual event, "The County Fair," gained great financial return thanks to the co-operation of all, irrespective of creed and public interest in the scheme will bring the townspeople into closer bonds of fellowship and unity.

CHAPTER II.

Wherein Is Told Something of Elnora's Family History.

DOWN the long corridor alone among hundreds, down the long street alone among thousands, out into the country she came at last. She sat on a log and began to sob in spite of her efforts at self control. At first it was physical breakdown, later thought came crowding. She must go home to feed chickens, calves and pigs, wear calico and coarse shoes and pass a library with averted head all her life. She sobbed again.

"For pity's sake, honey, what's the matter?" asked the voice of the nearest neighbor, Wesley Sinton, as he seated himself by Elnora. "There, there," he continued, smearing tears all over her face in an effort to dry them. "Was it so bad as that, now? Maggie has been just about wild over you all day. She's got nervouser every minute. She said we were foolish to let you go. She said your clothes were not right and that they would laugh at you. Were your things right, Elnora?"

The girl broke into hysterical laughter. "Right?" she cried. "Right! Uncle Wesley, you should have seen me among them! I was a picture! They'll never forget me. No, they won't get the chance, for they'll see the same things tomorrow!"

"Now, that is what I call spunk, Elnora. Downright grit," said Wesley Sinton. "Don't you let them laugh you out. You've helped Margaret and me for years at harvest and busy times. What you've earned must amount to quite a sum. You can get yourself a good many clothes with it."

"Don't mention clothes, Uncle Wesley," sobbed Elnora. "I don't care now how I look. If I don't go back all of them will know it's because I am so poor I can't buy my books."

"Oh, I don't know as you are so poor," said Sinton meditatively. "There are 200 acres of good land, with fine timber as ever grew on it."

"It takes all we can earn to pay the tax, and mother wouldn't cut a tree for her life."

"Well, then, maybe I'll be compelled to cut one for her," suggested Sinton. "Anyway, stop tearing yourself to pieces and tell me. If it isn't clothes, what is it?"

"It's books and tuition. Over $20 in all."

"Humph! First time I ever knew you to be stumped by $20, Elnora," said Sinton, patting her hand.

"It's the first time you ever knew me to want money," answered Elnora. "This is different from anything that ever happened to me. Oh, how can I get it, Uncle Wesley?"

"Drive to town with me in the morning and I'll draw it from the bank for you. I owe you every cent of it."

"You know you don't owe me a penny, and I wouldn't touch one from you unless I really could earn it. For anything that's past I owe you and Aunt Margaret for all the home life and love I've ever known. I know how you work, and I'll not take your money."

"Just a loan, Elnora; just a loan for a little while until you can earn it. You can be proud with all the rest of the world, but there's no secrets between us. Is there, Elnora?"

"No," said Elnora, "there are none. You and Aunt Margaret have given me all the love there has been in my life. That is the one reason above all others why you shall not give me charity. I won't touch your money, but I'll win some way. First I'm going home and try mother. It's just possible I could find secondhand books, and perhaps all the tuition need not be paid at once. Maybe they would accept it quarterly. But, oh, Uncle Wesley, you and Aunt Margaret keep on loving me. I'm so lonely, and no one else cares."

Wesley Sinton's jaws met with a click. He swallowed hard on bitter words and changed the thing he would have said three times before it became articulate.

"Elnora," he said at last, "if it hadn't been for one thing I'd have tried to take legal steps to make you ours when you were three years old. Maggie said then it wasn't any use, but I've always held on. You see, I was the first man there, honey, and there are things, you see, that you can't ever make anybody else understand. She loved him, Elnora. She just made an idol of him. There was that oozy green hole, with the thick scum broke and two or three big bubbles slowly rising that were the breath of his body. There she was in spasms of agony and beside her the great heavy jog she'd tried to throw him. I can't ever forgive her for turning against you and spoiling your childhood as she has, but I couldn't forgive anybody else for abusing her. Maggie has got no mercy on her, but Maggie didn't see what I did, and I've never tried to make it very clear to her. You be a patient girl and wait a little longer. After all, she's your mother, and you're all she's got but a memory, and it might do her good to let her know that she was fooled in that."

"It would kill her!" cried the girl swiftly. "Uncle Wesley, it would kill her! What do you mean?"

"Nothing," said Wesley Sinton soothingly. "Nothing, honey. That was just one of them fool things a man says when he is trying his best to be wise. You see she loved him mightily, and they'd been married only a year, and what she was loving was what she thought he was. She hadn't really got acquainted with the man yet. If it had been even one more year she could have borne it and you'd have got justice. Having been a teacher, she was better educated and smarter than the rest of us, and so she was more sensitive like. She can't understand she was loving a dream. So I say it might do her good if somebody that knew could tell her, but I swear to gracious I never could. I've heard her out at the edge of that quagmire calling in them wild spells of hers off and on for the last sixteen years and imploring the swamp to give him back to her, and I've got out of bed when I was pretty tired and come down to see she didn't go in herself or harm you. What she feels is too deep for me. I've got to respectin' her grief, and I can't get over it. Go home and tell your ma, honey, and ask her nice and kind to help you. If she won't, then you got to swallow that little lump of pride in your neck and come to Aunt Maggie, like you been a-coming all your life."

"I'll ask mother, but I can't take your money, Uncle Wesley, indeed I can't. I'll wait a year and earn some and enter next year."

"There's one thing you don't consider, Elnora," said the man earnestly. "And that's what you are to Maggie. She's a little like your ma. She hasn't given up to it, and she's struggling on brave, but when we buried our second little girl the light went out of Maggie's eyes, and it's not come back. The only time I ever see a hint of it is when she thinks she's done something that makes you happy, Elnora. Now, you go easy about refusing her anything she wants to do for you."

"Uncle Wesley, you are a dear," said Elnora—"just a dear! If I can't possibly get that money any way else on earth I'll come and borrow it of you, and then I'll pay it back if I dig ferns from the swamp and sell them from door to door in the city. I'll even plant them, so that they will be sure to come up in the spring. I have been sort of panic stricken all day and couldn't think. I can gather nuts and sell them. Freckles sold moths and butterflies, and I've a lot collected. Of course I am going back tomorrow. I can find a way to get the books. Don't you worry about me. I am all right."

As Elnora neared her own door her mother said:

"What kept you so? I expected you an hour ago."

Elnora looked into her mother's face and smiled. It was a queer sort of a little smile and would have reached the depths with any normal mother.

"I see you've been bawling," said Mrs. Comstock. "I thought you'd get your fill in a hurry. That's why I wouldn't go to any expense. If we keep out of the poorhouse we have to cut the corners close. It's likely this Brushwood road tax will eat up all we've saved in years. Where the land tax is to come from I don't know. It gets bigger every year. If they are going to dredge the swamp ditch again they'll just have to take the land to pay for it. I can't, that's all."

Elnora again smiled that pitiful smile.

"Do you think I didn't know that I was funny and would be laughed at?" she asked.

"Funny!" cried Mrs. Comstock hotly.

"Yes, funny—a regular caricature," answered Elnora. "But there's always two sides. The professor said in the algebra class that he never had a better solution and explanation than mine of the proposition he gave me, which scored one for me in spite of my clothes."

"Well, I wouldn't brag on myself."

"That was poor taste," admitted Elnora; "but, you see, it is a case of whistling to keep up my courage. I honestly could see that I would have looked just as well as the rest of them if I had been dressed as they were. We can't afford that, so I have to find something else to brace me. It was pretty bad, mother."

"I haven't a cent, and can't get one!"

"Well, I'm glad you got enough of it!"

"Oh, but I haven't!" hurried on Elnora. "I just got a start. The hardest is over. Tomorrow they won't be surprised. They will know what to expect. I am sorry to hear about the dredge. Is it really going through?"

"Yes, I got my notification today. The tax will be something enormous. I don't know as I can spare you, even if you are willing to be a laughing stock for the town."

"I have had two startling pieces of news today," said Elnora. "I did not know I would need any money. I thought the city furnished the books, and there is an out of town tuition also. I need $10 in the morning. Will you please let me have it?"

"Ten dollars!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "Ten dollars! Why don't you say a hundred and be done with it? I could get one as easy as the other. I knew what you would run into! But you are so bulldog stubborn and set in your way I thought I would just let you try the world a little and see how you liked it!"

Elnora pushed back her chair and looked at her mother.

"Do you mean to say," she demanded, "that you knew, when you let me go into a city classroom and reveal the fact before all of them, that I expected to have my books handed out to me? Do you mean to say that you knew I had to pay for them?"

Mrs. Comstock evaded the direct question.

"Anybody but an idiot mooning over a book or wasting time prowling the woods would have known you had to pay. Of course, I knew you would come home blubbering! But you don't get a penny! I haven't a cent, and can't get one! Have your way if you are determined, but I think you will find the road pretty rocky."

"Swampy, you mean, mother," corrected Elnora. She arose white and trembling. "Perhaps some day God will teach me how to understand you. He knows I do not now. You can't possibly realize just what you let me go through today, or how you let me go, but I'll tell you this. You understand enough that if you had the money and would offer it to me I wouldn't touch it now. And I'll tell you this much more. I'll get it myself. I'll raise it and do it some honest way. I am going back tomorrow, the next day and the next. You need not come out. I'll do the night work and hoe the turnips."

It was 10 o'clock when the chickens, pigs and cattle were fed, the turnips hoed and a heap of bean vines was stacked by the back door.

WARSHIPS AND ADMIRAL SAIL

Intervention If Cuba Is Not Quiet In a Week

MIGHT REMAIN PERMANENTLY

Washington, June 10.—In one week it will be determined whether the United States will intervene in Cuba to the extent of an occupation of the island and an assumption of the duties of the Cuban government.

If President Gomez shall not have crushed the rebellion within the one-week period, or demonstrated that the government of Cuba is able to cope with the situation, the 5000 troops of the regular army now waiting marching orders will be sent to Cuba and the United States will occupy the entire island.

The note of warning sent by President Taft to President Gomez, June 6, was the last word of the United States. The next warning Cuba will receive will be an order to the United States marines now in Cuba to take the aggressive, run down the rebels and brook no interference from the Cuban administration. The sending of this order will be the signal for the starting of the army to Cuba.

If the army is ordered to Cuba the 5000 men now ready will be but the vanguard. An army of 10,000 men will follow. Such an occupation of Cuba would be indefinite.

No official of the administration will vouchsafe an opinion as to how long the United States would remain in the event of an aggressive occupation. Some officials were inclined to the opinion that if this government is again forced to take up the duties of administering government for Cuba, the United States will put into operation a territorial form of government.

Admiral Osterhaus is now on his way from Key West to Havana with one dispatch ship and his flagship. These orders were issued by the state department after the receipt of a dispatch from Minister Beaupre reporting that conditions in Havana and suburbs of the city had assumed the character of a race war.

Minister Beaupre's message said that conditions in and around Havana had been menacing since Friday night.

Caimanera, Cuba, June 10.—Colonel Lucas, in command of the United States marines, has decided that ten more companies are needed to protect foreign interests between Guantanamo and San Luis. These properties are owned by French, British and Spanish companies.

It will also be necessary to place a guard along the Guantanamo Western railroad. The insurgents are becoming more active in that region.

NO REASON FOR IT

You are Shown the Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of serious kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. The following is convincing proof.

Calvin Porter, 150 Beaulah street, Whitman, Mass., says: "I am sorry that Doan's Kidney Pills did not come to my attention sooner for if they had, I would have been spared a great deal of suffering and expense. I suffered from a weak back for years and there was a constant, dull pain in my loins. I had to pass the kidney secretions too frequently, especially at night. As soon as I began to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt better and by the time I finished the contents of four boxes, I was entirely free from my troubles." (Statement given Oct. 6, 1908.)

A CONFIRMED ENDORSEMENT

Mr. Porter was interviewed by our representative on June 27, 1911 and he said: "I am always pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and you are welcome to continue the use of my former statement. I know that this remedy can be relied upon."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Nicholson Refused to Pay Fare, Assaulted Brakeman

RESISTED OFFICER REILEY

Murdock Nelson was arraigned in court this morning on two complaints. One charging drunkenness and the other for alleged assault on a brakeman on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Acording to the evidence of the brakeman who on this night was acting as baggage master, he started through the smoking car to collect fares. When he came to Nicholson who was dozing in his seat he asked him twice for his fare. Instead of getting his fare Nicholson struck him twice. This assault took place as the train was passing Savin Hill station. When the train reached Wollaston Nicholson was turned over to officer Reiley with whom he put up quite a fight before he was subdued.

After hearing the evidence the court dismissed the case for assault on the ground that the assault took place outside of the jurisdiction of this court. On the complaint for drunkenness a fine of $15 was imposed and the sentence suspended until September 12. Nicholson was also ordered to reimburse the railroad the sum of twelve cents for his car fare.

VOTE ON LORIMER

Unless Congress Adjourns Before That Date, July 6

Washington, June 10.—The senate will vote on the question of unseating Senator Lorimer of Illinois on July 6. This date was agreed upon at a conference at which the views of both the pro-Lorimer and anti-Lorimer senators were voiced.

The agreement, however, was with the understanding that in the event of the adjournment of congress earlier than July 6 the voting time would be advanced so that the case would be finally disposed of at this session of congress.

Miss Gertrude Randall of Andover was the week end guest of Miss Clara Pearce at her home on Franklin street, South Quincy.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

FIRST CHURCH.

The annual floral festival, or children's Sunday at the First church was held Sunday morning the attendance being unusually large. The service opened with an organ prelude followed by the processional during which the Sunday school marched in headed by Superintendent Charles H. Johnson.

Then came the rite of baptism the following children being baptized by Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson. Clarice Kincaide, Herbert Holton Holmes, Harold Paul Madison, Gertrude Rogers, Olive Little Rogers, Howard Marcellus Rogers, Leighton Purdy Rogers, Sears Lafayette Hallett, Jr., Theodora Oxenbridge Hallett, Lucille Ethel Morse, Frank Packard Morse, Lawrence MacQuarrie, Eal Dunham.

This was followed by sciptural reading, song "Spring and Summer", prayer and response, responsive reading, and song "Summer Days". At the short service in loving memory of Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, the pastor Rev. Mr. Hudson spoke briefly and feelingly of the death of the beloved pastor, and of how much his wise council was mised.

The Sunday school led by the Superintendent, Charles H. Johnson repeated the 23d psalm and recited the Lord's prayer in unism.

The school sang "It singeth low in every heart" and Rev. Mr. Hudson, spoke of the importance of Sunday school work and urged all affiliated with the church to attend the sessions of the school.

The reports of the Sunday school officers were most encouraging and that the present enrollment of the school was 205. Then came the presentation of diplomas for attendance. Dorothy Edwards and Allan Miller were given books for constant attendance for six years and William Nichols a book for attendance for four years.

Diplomas were also presented to the following for good atendance:—

Blanche Hayden, Richard C. Weixler, Edith M. Nicoll, Edith G. Pettee, Allan P. Miller, Phillip W. Weixler, Charles H. Putnam, William E. Smith, Arthur C. Nichols, Ruth Dunham, Dorothy E. Edwards, Harlow Schenkelberger, Marjoie Gaudet, Milded E. Stoddard, Alfre Nicoll, Frederic Schenkelberger, Marion Nicoll, Raymon F. Stodard, Isabella F. Stoddard, Isabella M. Putnam, Robert A. Putnam.

The Superintendent announced that instead of the usual picnic this year there would be a field day the latter part of September and that the summer sesions of the school would be omitted. The service closed with a song "On our way rejoicing".

THIRD FATAL FOR MAKARIA

S. Quincy Pranced and Cinched Game in That Session

WEIRD PLAYING AT TIMES

South Quincy defeated Makaria on the Water street grounds Saturday by the close score of 4 to 3. It was the first game of the season for the winners and all who saw them perform were of the opinion that they will be in the running for the championship all through the season.

Ford's tossers succeeded in blanking the "friendship" aggregation for seven innings and it looked like a purity bath for the Makarias.

But with opportune hitting, aided by a couple of errors, they were enabled to break the hoodoo in the eighth session.

Commolli who was in the points for the winners, twirled effective ball and seemed to have the greatest control at most critical moments. He was greatly aided by the fine support given him by his team mates. In fact, despite the five errors which appear against them, the work of the South Quincy team was of a most commendable order are the article of ball displayed was about the best that has been witnesed since the league started.

Rice who made an enviable record with the High school team last year, occupied the mound for the losers, and acquitted himself in a creditable manner. He was touched up quite freely in the foruth inning, but two weird errors by Ganzel and Jenkins figured largely in the three runs which South Quincy scored.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd and proved to be one of the most interesting that has been played in Quincy this season.

Nixon, who played right field during the greater part of the game, but who went behind the bat when the Makarias looked dangerous, carried off the batting honors, while McCarthy featured in the fielding department. Gillis also played a steady game and his throwing to bases was very accurate.

For the losers, Artis, who has been doing well all along, covered himself with glory and was conspicuous at all times. "Mil" Chapman contributed the sensational play of the game, when he pulled down crescent drive with one hand.

With this victory, South Quincy is now tied with Quincy A. A. for first place and as the two teams will furnish the attraction next Saturday a warm contest is bound to be in order. The score:

ODD FELLOWS MEMORIAL

"Beauty and philosophy." They gave the vehicle that carried the religious ideas of the Jews to the world. Alert, sensitive, lovers of beauty of mind and matter, dwellers in a wonderful land situated between the east and west their contribution to the world was next only to that of the Hebrews.

The one God was to be a world God and He needed a world to work in and the Romans gave that world, Law, a world law, Rome's message.

Then there were the Teutons with their message of freedom.

We of this day and country have a message, I call it brotherhood. Some one says we are the melting-pot of the world. All races are here. Can we unify them? America is an example of fraternity. About one quarter of the Union army during the Civil war were foreign born. Massachusetts is more than half foreign born. We must learn brotherhood.

Man lives by service. The question is not, Shall I serve? but, How shall I serve? for serve I must. Is it to be forced service, slavery, paid service, wages, or free service,, brotherhood. Many are examples of, or strivings after fraternity.

Even our much abused combinations of business are much more fraternal than old fashioned cut throat methods. Division of labor brought about by factory system and machinery may have brought about many evils, but it taught co-operation.

Three hundred and fifty tradesunionists are an expression of brotherhood. Show a belief in a common cause and a wilingness to sacrifice for a common belief.

The vice of socialism tells us that men believe in something bigger than caste, bigger than even geographical and race lines in the brotherhood of man.

We represent another of the expressions of brotherhood not peculiar to this country but finding great opportunities here. The secret society benevolent order, lodge, or by what named called. There are over 275 different orders in this country.

Over seven million members. Banded together for mutual helpfulness, having found that man cannot live by self alone. That alone man may get through the world all right but in the complicated conditions of this century men, and especially women and children, are almost helpless in faceofaccident, sickness, out of work, old age and specially death. Alone he is almost sure to be defeated but united as brethren in a big family he can look even the dread monster in the face.

Brotherhood is the oldest tnd strongest appeal in the world. The contribution of Jesus to the world—Universal Brotherhood.

The world believed in Brotherhod before his day. Man always believed "Love thy neighbor as thyself." The trouble was before Jesus man did not know who his neighbor was. The Bedouin or Arab knew that he must love his fellow clansman but he hated everyone else. So the Jew was neighbor to a Jew. But the thought of Jesus was expressed in that most wonderful story that we all know. "A man went down to Jericho and he fell among thieves."

Here is the text for our work. The mesage we bring to the world. The task set for our doing. The world is crying, "Every man for himself." But it does not believe it. It is trying to live it but it finds it imposible. No man can live alone. No man can get along alone. He can't own a railroad all to himself. He must have pasengers and freight or not get dividends.

He can't run a factory, a store, a shop or a quarry alone. He needs others. He neds co-operation. What kind will it be?

Jesus did not appeal to man for himself. It was man for others.

The Priest and Levite were religious for their own souls. The Good Samaritan was after the soul of his neighbor.

Now this Twentieth century American world of ours is full of Jericho roads and it has lots of David's need in Jonathans. And Jericho roads need Good Samaritans.

Your and mine is not only the task of helping the man who is left for dead. If there is any dangere in the lodge today it is that it will be content to do just this. I see a tendency now for them to do more and I am glaid of it. We want not to relieve suffering and poverty but we want to try and get rid of it. Our economic and social system is such that many men will be robbed and left for dead and we will need to cloth and feed and care for the victims but would it not be well worth our while to organize and expidition and go down on the Jericho road and clear out the robbers. Instead of building places of refuge on the side of the road make it so safe that even the women and the children might walk. This is the task that is before us. This is the call of the age.

NO ADMITTANCE FROZE THEM OUT

But Quincy Party Stuck to Their Posts Like Heroes

OUTSIDE HEARING ROOM

A dozen or more members of the Fourth of July Celebration corporation attempted to attend the hearing before the State Board of Charity, Monday, in relation to its petition for incorporation. A small party had entered the room where the hearing was to be held before the arrival of the first mentioned group and when it was called they seemed surprised that no more members were present. They went on with the hearing however and there was no opposition.

After the hearing the Quincy men on the inside started out and were very much surprised to find a dozen or more waiting outside. The waiters had arrived in time to attend the hearing but when they entered the corridor they ran up against a sign which read, "No admittance." They therefore stayed outside.

Secretary Stetson was one of those that were on the inside, and when he found out the situation he went back with those on the outside just to show the commission that there was some interest. The commission stated that it did not see why it was necessary to come before them. It is probable that the charter will be issued in a few days.

GOOD START FOR 1st PARISH CLUB

President's Glowing Picture of Organization Work

REV. A. L. HUDSON CHOSEN

Meeting of the First Parish club for the purpose of completing its organization was held Monday evening in the chapel of the First church and was attended by upwards of one hundred men. Henry M. Faxon presided and the first business was to hear the report of the committee apointed to draft a constitution. This was read after which it was adopted.

REV. ADELBERT L. HUDSON
First President First Parish Club.

The primary object of the club as stated in the constitution is the promotion of good fellowship. It provides for monthly meetings, the third Tuesday in each month from October to April inclusive. The yearly dues to be $5 which shall include seven dinners to be served at each meeting and to be followed by some speaker.

The following were proposed as officers of the club:

President—Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson.

Vice President—George E. Pfaffmann.

Secretary—Henry W. Porter.

Treasurer—C. Eaton Pierce.

Executive Committee the above with Edward B. Marsh, H. Everett Crane, Henry M. Faxon, Henry R. Holden, William B. Nichols, Russell A. Sears.

They were unanimously elected. The constitution also provides for membership and other committees which will be appointed later.

Rev. Mr. Hudson on taking the office of President said this was to be a layman's club and that he should therefore be considered in the light of a layman. The club has a great work to do and he asked the earnest co-operation of all members. He had found in his short stay in Quincy that there was a great need of men getting together for the building up of the life of this beautiful city, commercially, morally and civicly. The most important thing is the development of good fellowship and mutual co-operation.

He did not want the members to divide themselves into groups but to circulate and get acquainted with other members of the club and see that they also become acquainted with each other. In this way one would find

BATTLESHIP FOR THE FOURTH

Washington Advices Assure Quincy a Big Craft

WHICH ONE NOT KNOWN

A United States battleship will be in Quincy waters for the Fourth of July celebration. Which of the dogs of war of Uncle Sam will drop anchor hereabouts is unknown as that will depend wholly upon the vessels which are on service in the present demonstration in Cuba.

The Fourth of July association through the president, Mayor Eugene R. Stone wrote to Senator Lodge requesting that he exert his influence to have a ship come here for the Fourth.

Senator Lodge replied that he had taken the matter up with the Secretary of the Navy and felt assured that a naval vessel would be ordered here for the day, but could not say which one, as that depended entirely upon the vessels available at that time.

Now comes the assurances direct from Washington, evidently given out by the navy department, that Quincy would have its war vessel on the Fourth but with the same element of uncertainity as to just which vessel would be dispatched here.

At any rate there is no doubt now but what the vessel will come and Quincy people will be grateful to this prompt response to their request.

ST. MARY'S LAWN PARTY.

A meeting of the general committee having in charge the lawn party of St. Mary's parish met Monday evening in the music room of the church. The lawn party is to be held Saturday, July 13, and plans for the affair were outlined. The committee on the affair will be appointed at a later meeting.

FOUR MEN PINNED IN VESSEL'S HOLD AS BULKHEAD CRASHES ON THEM

One Man Picked up Dead, Two Others Seriously, If Not Fatally Injured, the Other Internally Hurt

Comrades Worked With Feverish Haste to Raise the Great Steel Bulk in Effort to Save Lives of Those Beneath It

DEAD

VICHICTA PASCIOLINA, an Italian, aged 32 years,60 Brackett street

INJURED

A. BRYNHILDEN, a Norwegian, aged 27 years, of the Richmond House Quincy. At Fore River Hospital in a serious condition. Left thigh and jaw croken. Left arm amputated.

JOHN C. McDONALD, an American, aged 30 years, of 43 Chestnut street, Quincy. At the Quincy City Hospital, with broken ribs contusion of the back and possible internal injuries.

JOSEPH YERRI, a Syrian, of 138 South Walnut street, Quincy. In a serious condition, removed to Grace Hospital, Boston. Hip fractured and contusions about the head.

One man was killed outright and three others seriously injured at the Fore River shipyard shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, when a heavy bulkhead which was being lowered into the hold, a molasses boat fell with a loud crash crushing the four men who were at work in the hold of the vessel forty feet below.

The men were preparing to put the heavy mass of steel, composing the bulkhead in position. A crane made fast to the great sheet of metal and it was swung over the opening of the vessel. Just as the word was about to be given to lower, three bolts on the fall snapped and down went the heavy mass.

The men below were looking up at the time but so quickly did the accident happen that before they had time to get out of harm's way the steel sheet fell upon them crushing them to the floor.

Fellow workmen hearing their cries rushed to their assistance but it was sometime before they were able to remove the mass. In the meantime the groans of the injured men were heartrending.

One the mass was removed it was found that Vichicto Pascilolina of 60 Brackett street was dead.

The other two men were unconscious from their injuries and the fourth although seriously injured was conscious but appeared to be suffering great agony.

The injured men were Andrew Brynhilden a Norwegian, 27 years old of the Richmond house, Quincy.

John C. McDonald, 30 years old, of 43 Chestnut street, Quincy.

Joseph Yerri, a Syrian of 133 South Walnut street, Quincy.

They were hurried to the Red Cross hospital at the yard where they were attended by Dr. Blanchard the surgeon in charge, who was assisted by Medical Examiner Frederick Jones, Dr George M Sheahan and Dr John P. Reynolds.

Here the physicians found that Yerri was suffering from a fractured hip and numerous contusions about the face and head. He was taken to the depot in the police ambulance and thence to the Grace hospital Boston being accompanied by Dr. Reynolds. He was badly cut and bruised and appeared to be suffering agony.

The fourth man was John C. McDonald, married of 42 Chestnut street. He was the least injured of the four but he also is in bad shape. He suffered the fracture of several ribs, and numerous contusions about the body. He was removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The June weather conditions have pronounced edict enough on the peek-a-boo waist.

Holy Ghost and Us Society Sanford is playing a harp in the prison orchestra. Must seem different to him from the strings he usually pulled.

And some of the Roosevelt delegates are to get a place in the Chicago convention .

One poor green motorman had a trying time near the Northampton station on a surface car. The fuse blew out and he was stalled for fifteen minutes. The crowd jeered him and many told him the herring were running and he would make more money at home than on the elevated cars. He stood the gaff in silence.

Scientific instruments are not necessary to indicate that icebergs are a plenty off the New England coast.

Automobiles and canoes are gathering in an exceptionally large harvest these June days and nights. When will people learn to exercise due care in the operation of both?

Abington, Whitman and Rockland 200 years young. May they continue to enjoy peace and prosperity.

Every one will be glad when the Lorimer incident is ended and possibly none more so that the blonde Chicago boss himself.

It is a long call from Oyster Bay to Chicago but the Colonel does it every day over his private telephone wire.

The Crimson will have its inning this week and the chap with the cap and gown will be the cynosure of many admiring female eyes.

Dr. Wiley pays the health of Boston a compliment when he declines to take charge of affairs.

London's charity ball is said to be all in a muddle owing to a disagreement of some of the lady managers. Usually the way. When politics or social supremacy figure in an event of this kind a worthy cause is lost sight of by the jealous bickerings.

City planning is all right. Commissioner Gallivan of Boston read a delightful paper on the care of streets but how about a practical demonstration along the water front thoroughfares.

That Norteman lot must be some marine park when it requires a lighthouse, life boats, rubber boots and other things.

That poor little royal dummy of Spain is probably paying the wages for some of the shortcomings of his ancestors.

"What will the platform be?" is a good chorus for the Chicago delegates. When it comes down to cases the delegates know as little about the platform as they know of last year's crop of beets.

And speaking of beets, now that there has been no blizzard from Oyster Bay for a few days, it looks as though the Senator was "Root"-ed to the chairmanship.

Roosevelt hailed as the greatest politician of the age must have had some bad advisers when it is considered how the wiley Tafties put it all over his gang at Chicago.

LITTLE PROFIT IN MEAT.

Retail dealers deny that they are responsible for the high cost of living and undoubtedly there is much truth in their contention. The question which the public would like to have answered to their satisfaction is, "who are the guilty wretches?" Investigations by congressional committees, magazine articles by writers of highly colored articles appear insufficient to answer the problem. Then it may be reasonably asked in all fairness who is responsible for a condition which is making it more difficult each day for the people living on a moderate income to make both ends meet and supply proper food for the family. At the most the family man with a moderate salary is living a hand to mouth existence.

It cannot be justly claimed that the wages of men employed in the great meat establishments require a high price for the product. Else if such was the case how is it that American meats of good quality can be purchased on the other side of the Atlantic at a much less cost than in the home market. And this in view of the added cost of freight and transportation to those distant shores. This cannot be denied. It is a fact which men interested in meat prices have satisfied themselves upon by actual experience.

In 1903 rump steak could be purchased for 25 cents a pound and then it was considered high. Now the price ranges from 38 to 42 cents. Other grades of meat show a similar if not greater ratio of increase, and the back of the rump roast shows an increase of 200 per cent.

It is claimed that the prices are maintained because there is a lack of stock raising on the part of the stock raisers in the west. If that is so why does not the European market show the same price condition. There is something radically wrong somewhere. The people are paying the price. They are compelled to do so. From time to time their minds are distracted by politics or some other disturbance which takes their mind of this other greater subject of interest and the evil is permitted to grow unmolested. How long will it be permitted to last? It is a grave problem that presents itself before the American people this extreme cost in the price of food stuffs. It is of greater moment than the choice of candidates at either national convention. Yet this latter is kept before the people to the extent that their mind is diverted from the greater and more personal subject. Some day there will be an awakening.

HOUGHS NECK PLAYGROUND.

The citizens of Quincy show a commendable interest in the measure before the City Council for the purchase of the Norteman lot at Houghs Neck for a playground. Judging from what is heard by citizens and taxpayers in general, as a body they are not hugging the proposition to any appreciable degree. There is little, if any opposition, to the acquirement of the lot, for the purposes mentioned, provided it can be done so at what may be considered a fair figure but every one balks at the price suggested $3,000. No one interested in the welfare of the city desires to go on record as disapproving improvements. But such matters must be considered from a business point of view. The land it is claimed is assessed for $100 and that a goodly portion of the proposed purchase is under water. If this is a true statement of fact then the price suggested is very much in excess of the actual value. Not alone that, but the cost of filling in, grading and properly fitting the land for the purpose planned would be another large item of expense which must be counted in the total cost.

The people of Houghs Neck are just as deserving of a playground reservation as those of any other section of the city. But if the facts as set forth by many, who claim to know the actual conditions, are borne out they will not be tumbling over one another in their favor of a proposition which in the end will mean a substantial increase in the tax rate.

It is reasonable to assume that the members of the City Council will look into this matter thoroughly before they commit themselves and pledge the city to the purchase of a lot of land which on the face of it seems placed at a pretty high value and which will carry with it additional and unknown expense in case it is secured. The citizens undoubtedly have confidence enough in their representatives at City hall to feel certain that the city's interests will be safeguarded and if a purchase is made it will be at a reasonable and equitable value and not before a knowledge, based on estimates by a competent engineer, has been secured to form an adequate idea of the ultimate cost of the undertaking.

PARISH FIELD DAY OF ST. JOHN'S

Committee Organized to Hold Affair on School Grounds

DATE TO BE FIXED LATER

A large number of parishioners attended the meeting held Sunday afternoon in the assembly hall of St. John's Parochial school, for the purpose of making arangements for a parish field day. The committee organized with Patrick J. Driscoll, chairman and Miss Jennie Griffin and Miss Mary E. Costello, secretaries.

Rev. John J. Coan, the pastor was present and addressed the gathering Many plans were discussed and a general committee on arrangements was appointed. It was decided to hold the field day on the grounds of the school building. The program is to include track athletics and dancing, which will be enjoyed in the school hall.

The question of the date was discussed but no definite action will be taken until the next meeting, which has been called for Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the school hall. All parishioners are urged to be present in order to make the affair meet with the greatest possible success.

LIGHTHOUSE FOR MARINE PARK

Life Boats and Other Life Saving Appliances Suggested

ON THE NORTEMAN LOT

The order before the City Council for the purchase of the Norteman lot at Houghs Neck has stirred up a considerable sentiment and started people to looking into the matter somewhat. Charles W. Bailey, Chairman of the Public Buildings and Grounds committee says it needs a lighthouse and other accessories for marine adventure if it is to be turned into a playground. This committee approved the purchase of the lot but Mr. Bailey did not vote in favor of it. The matter is now before the Finance committee. In a communication to the Ledger Mr. Bailey has something to say upon the subject which is right to the point. His letter is as follows:

Boston, June 8th, 1912.

Editors Quincy Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass.

Gentlemen:—I read with much interest in your edition of Friday last the open letter addressed to me, which was headed "Light Needed on Norteman Lot." It occurred to me that it should have been head "Lighthouse Needed on Norteman Lot."

The order which has been referred to the Finance Commitee was approved by a majority of the Buildings and Grounds Commitee. I did not favor it and so stated to the Committee. If by any accident this order meets with the approval of the Finance Committee I think it would be well for some of the Councilmen from Ward One to advise an appropriation for the purchase of life boats, rubber boots and the erection of a lighthouse, for I think that all of the Councilmen who recently dined at Mr. Norteman's will be glad to do what they can to protect the children of "Sea Girt" who will be likely to use this play ground.

Yours very truly,
Charles W. Bailey.
Chairman Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

many good fellows. Adopt the rule of mixing. This is a most important thing. It is not every man who has the disposition to push himself into the company of men he would like to become acquainted with. It is these men we want to make acquainted with each other.

With the help of the members he believed there was a splendid year before them. That we will have a club of men who are to know each other and splendid success of the club could be made by starting right.

There are many problems that threaten this beautiful city. They are difficult to overcome and he believed that the club could do much in this line. He wanted the club to start right. If each will bear in mind that they were to have a good time and get acquainted success is assured.

At a recent meeting of the junior laymen's club they voted unanimously to offer their services as waiters. They are a fine set of young fellows and it is to be a good thing for them to get acquainted with you and a good thing for you to see the splendid co-operation these young fellows have shown.

There was no honor that he esteemed more than having been elected as the first president of this club and he would do his best to make it a success. All he asked was the co-operation of the members.

As outlined now the members would come right from business to the meetings. They would enter by the door on Temple street to the room below where there would be an opportunity to lay aside garments and meet socially, while waiting for the announcement that dinner was ready. The dinner would be served in the vestry and the usual door leading to the chapel from the church yard would be closed. It was planned to serve a good hot dinner. Everything was to be entirely informal. Any man appearing in evening dress was likely to be thrown out of the window. Following the dinner, would be speaking. It was planned to have a variety of speakers. That is, there would be no special theme for the speakers but they would be on topics of general interest. Any suggestions as to speakers would be gladly received.

Before the meeting adjourned it was announced that the membership of the club was now over 170 and as the limit was 200 there is but little doubt but that at the first meeting next October the limit will have been reached.

Atlantic Machine Skidded to Curb Breaking Wheel

FIREMEN JUMPED IN TIME

The alarm from Box 56 at 5.15 Sunday afternoon was for a fire on the roof of A. L. Baker's house on Winthrop avenue. Fire had been started in an open grate and sparks set fire to the roof. The Wollaston apparatus responded on a still alarm and someone rang in the alarm. While responding to the alarm Combination No. 2 of Atlantic came near being smashed up. As the apparatus with its three horse hitch approached the corner of Beale street and Winthrop avenue they were going at a good clip and in turning the corner the rear wheels brought up against the curbing with a bang smashing the wheel. Several firemen riding on the apparatus seeing the smash coming jumped off and saved themselves. The fire loss was $50.

McHARG TALKS LIKE BOY

Commenting on the rumored intention of the National Committee to unseat the entire Roosevelt delegation from California on a technicality, Ormsby McHarg, who has charge of Col. Roosevelt's interests in the contests before the committee is credited with the following statement:—

"If we are robbed of any delegates there will be a political revolution in this country. We have had offers by telegraph of 1,000 crack shots from Oklahoma to march right down to the Coliseum and clean out the whole caboodle of those who could dare to do such a thing.

"If a man robs me of what is mine I will come pretty near seeing that he is punished for his crime. Let the National Committee attempt such a thing and you'll see this city in a riot in no time."

SANE UNIFORM SIGNAL LAW

For Automobiles and Co-operation Favor Machine

M. C. Moore, president of the Wisconsin Automobile Association in discussing signals said:

"Just one thing will finally end public antagonism toward the automobile, and that is intelligent co-operation between driver and non-motorist.

"The public ought to realize that most motorists dislike the noise of the signal quite as much as the public does. On the other hand all motorists should be compelled by law to use the signal only when necessary to warn.

"The city should know that unnecessary signal noise is made by only a few motorists of the 'joy-riding' type, and that the only solution of the difficulty is the suppression of these motorists, not of the signal itself. But here again the motorist can lend a hand by warning or reporting these noisemakers.

"Restricting the efficient signal in favor of the weak-toned bulb horn does no good. In fact it makes the automobile unsafe. A signal must be sharp and abrupt.

"The efficient signal is here to stay. Recognize its necessity and regulate its use, that is the only way. Make this sane law uniform throughout the country. A few cities have done this. It is time for the rest to act."

FOUNDER'S DAY.

The annual event of the school year at Thayer academy, always anticipated with especial interest is the exercises of Founder's day, given under the direction of the senior middle class. Last Saturday afternoon at two o'clock the relatives and guests of the members of the class gathered to enjoy the excellent program which had been prepared. Hunt's orchestra of Weymouth rendered musical selections with much expression, offering the following program.

Fifth Nocturne—Leybach.

Cello solo, 2nd Mazurka—Wiemawska. This number played by Mr. William Windsor Ward displayed great understanding and ability and was a musical gem.

Remembrance—Maurice Telma.

The address of welcome was delivered by the class president, Miss Edith Kimball, her subject being the life of General Sylvanus Thayer the founder of the academy. This was followed by a declamation by Karl Sherwood White, entitled "True Americanism", by Carl Schurz. It was rendered in a very able and natural manner.

The address of the afternoon was given by Rev. Samuel C. Bushnell of Arlington who talked most interestingly of the Monitor and Merrimac. His remarks were of a personal nature and he spoke with authority, his father having built the Monitor at his shipyard in New Haven, Ct., using the model of the famous Swedish inventor, John Ericsson. The speaker disclosed many interesting facts which are not in any published work on the subject.

Some of the most interested auditors were nine members of General Sylvanus Thayer Post 87, G. A. R. of Braintree, who were especially invited to hear the address.

They were the guests of honor and were thanked in very pleasing language for attending by Dr. William Gallagher, the head master.

After the final very appropriate musical selection "Remembrance," the audience adjourned to the grounds, where the ivy was planted in accordance with the usual custom.

Afterward dancing was enjoyed to the music of the orchestra.

SENIOR MIDDLE CLASS.

Sentence of Suffragettes Reduced

London, June 11.—The sentences on the militant suffragettes, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, were modified and the prisoners will finish as first class misdemeanants the term of nine months' imprisonment.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

INDIANA LOST TO ROOSEVELT

Even His Friends Admit Flimsiness of Contest

TAFT'S SECRET'Y CLAIMS 577

Indiana's Six At-Large Go to President—Hilles Claims All Taft Delegates Will "Stand Without Hitching"—Roosevelt Men Say Individual Delegates Will Act Independent—Cummins Opens Headquarters

Chicago, June 11.—The Taft steam roller, with Murray Crane of Massachusetts as pilot, crushed the Roosevelt forces at the Republican national committee meeting and for the first time showed beyond any possible doubt the strength of the factions.

When the committee convened it was understood that the California contests would be taken up first, but when the case was called, ex-Senator Dick, the Taft contest leader, urged its postponement, saying that important documents had not arrived and intimating that the case involved the legality of election of others for the California delegates.

The national committee voted to give Indiana's six delegates-at-large to Taft, with six others.

"Conceding Mr. Roosevelt every delegate to which he had the slightest legal title, this including California, Washington and Dakota districts where the contention is technical, the delegations to this convention will be divided on the initial roll call as follows: Taft, 577; La Follette, if he retains his strength, 36; Cummins, 10; Roosevelt, 455."

That was the message Secretary to the President Hilles sent to his chief over the carefully guarded long distance telephone wire from his quarters in The Blackstone. It represented, it was claimed, the most careful analysis ever made by a campaign manager and was the result of long distance telegrahic communications which consumed most of the day and night. It was the last word of the Taft camp and they claimed every single delegate would "stand without hitching."

The Roosevelt leaders insisted that while these might be the figures from standpoints of the individual state leaders who are for Taft, they did not represent the individual delegates. They insisted that the individual delegates from many of the states where the Taft people were building their heaviest hopes would be a great surprise when they arose in their places to cast their ballots in the convention. Their smallest estimate of the delegates that they will control was 700 and they insisted that as soon as the calling of the roll on the first question that is raised in the convention is well started there will be such a rush to "climb on to the band wagon" the Taft forces will hardly be able to hold 200 of their delegates.

The standard of Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa for Republican presidential nominee has been raised by his colleague, Senator Kenyon, who arrived from Iowa full of enthusiasm for the Hawkeye candidate, who now has ten delegates pledged to him. Headquarters in the hotel where the Taft and Roosevelt headquarters are located were engaged by Senator Kenyon and the Hawkeye club of Chicago assumed charge. Before leaving for Washington Senator Kenyon said: "Friends of Senator Cummins believe the rank and file of the Republican party are tired of the present controversy and tired of personal politics. We present in him a man who can unite the party and lead it to an old-time victory. His candidacy is not for the purpose of injuring any one or punishing any one."

ANNIHILATES REBELS

Mexican Federals Succeed In Outflanking Them

El Paso, Tex., June 11.—Mexican Consul Lorente nas received word that the rebel forces of Generals Campa and Argumendo were routed at Nazas, fifty miles east of Torreon, by General Blanquet and 1500 federal cavalry, who are said to have the remnant of the rebels surrounded.

The confirmation of this report means the end of the rebel movement toward the rear of Huerta's columns, a harrassing expedition that has been causing the government commander no little worry.

Boston Americans Lead

St. Louis, June 11.—By defeating the St. Louis Browns yesterday, 3 to 2, while the New York Highlanders were taking a 5 to 1 victory from the Chicago White Sox, the Boston Americans took the lead in the American league race.

Strikes at General Wood

Washington, June 11.—The senate after a bitted debate, voted, 27 to 24, to agree to the conference report on the army appropriation bill carrying amendments which will legislate Major Leonard Wood out of his office as chief-of-staff on March 4, 1913.

PRESIDENTIAL DELEGATES

An Unbiased View of the Actual Standing Today

Chicago, June 11.—The vital importance of the decisions of the national committee upon the contests is apparent to any one studying the lists of delegations. Such study incidentally discloses the great weight which may attach to the twenty-six delegates from Wisconsin and ten from North Dakota, instructed for La Follette, and the ten from Iowa, instructed for Cummins. There is no reconciling the conflicting claims of the Taft and Roosevelt managers regarding the respective strength of their followings; each is figured into his tables delegations emphatically claimed by the other on the strength of convention indorsements, alleged pledges and other grounds. Reasonably dependable, however, seem the figures collated by The Associated Press, from which can be derived what may be described as the "bare bones" of the situation. These figures, which are unofficial, and by no means guaranteed, are as follows:

Whole number of delegates, 1078.

Necessary for nomination, 540.

Instructed for Roosevelt and uncontested, 411.

Instructed for Taft and uncontested, 201.

Instructed for La Follette (no contests), 36.

Instructed for Cummins (no contests), 10.

Uninstructed (including New York's 90), 166.

Dust with pulverized sugar and put into oven until light brown.

When it comes to the boiling point take it off the fire. Beat the yolks of three eggs a little; then, with a quarter of a cupful of granulated sugar, stir these into the thickened milk. Cook for a minute, flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla and pour into a baking dish. SYNOPSIS

Wesley Sinton walked down the road a half mile and turned in at the lane leading to his home. His heart was hot and filled with indignation. He had told Elnora he did not blame her mother, but he did. His wife met him at the door.

"Did you see anything of Elnora, Wesley?" she questioned.

"Most too much, Maggie," he answered. "What do you say to going to town? There's a few things has to be got right away."

"Where did you see her, Wesley?"

"Along the old Limberlost trail, my girl, torn to pieces sobbing. Her courage always has been fine, but the thing she met today was too much for her. We ought to have known better than to let her go that way. I ought to have gone in and seen about this school business. I'm no man to let a fatherless girl run into such trouble. Don't cry, Maggie. Get me some supper and I'll hitch up and see what we can do now."

"What can we do, Wesley?"

"I don't just know. But we've got to do something. Kate Comstock will be a handful, while Elnora will be two, but between us we must see that the girl is not too hard pressed about money and that she is dressed so she is not ridiculous. She's saved us the wages of a woman many a day. Can't you make her some decent dresses, Maggie?"

"Well, I'm not just what you call expert, but I could beat Kate Comstock all to pieces. I know that skirts should be plaited to the band instead of gathered and full enough to sit in and short enough to walk in. I could try. There's patterns for sale. Let's go right away, Wesley."

"Well, set me a bite of supper while I hitch up."

They drove toward the city through the beautiful September evening, and as they went they planned for Elnora. The only trouble was not whether they were generous enough to get what she needed, but whether she would accept what they got and what her mother would say.

They went to a large dry goods store, and when a clerk asked what they wanted to see neither of them knew, so they stepped to one side and held a whispered consultation.

"What had we better get, Wesley?"

"Blest if I know!" exclaimed Wesley. "I thought you would manage that. I know about some things I'm going to get."

At that instant several schoolgirls came into the store and approached them.

"There!" exclaimed Wesley breathlessly. "There, Maggie! Like them! That's what she needs! Buy like they have!"

Before she knew it Margaret was among them.

"I beg your pardon, girls, but won't you wait a minute?" she asked.

The girls stopped with wondering faces.

"It's your clothes," explained Mrs. Sinton. "You look just beautiful to me. You look exactly as I should have wanted to see my girls. They both died of diphtheria when they were little. If they had lived they'd been near your age now, and I'd want them to look like you. I know a girl who would be just as pretty as any of you if she had the clothes, but her mother does not think about her, so I got to mother her some myself."

"She must be a lucky girl," said one girl.

"Oh, she loves me," said Margaret, "and I love her. I want her to look just like you do. Please tell me about your clothes. Are these the dresses and hats you wear to school? What kind of goods are they and where do you buy them?"

The girls began to laugh and cluster around Margaret. Wesley Sinton strode down the store with his head high in pride of her, but his heart was sore over the memory of two little faces under Brushwood sod. He inquired his way to the shoe department.

"Why, every one of us have on gingham or linen dresses," they said, "and they are our school clothes."

For a few moments there was a babel of laughing voices explaining to the delighted Margaret that school dresses should be bright and pretty, but simple and plain and until cold weather they should wash.

"I'll tell you," said Ellen Brownlee, "my father owns this store. I know all the clerks. I'll take you to Miss Hartley. You tell her just how much you want to spend and what you want to buy, and she will know how to get the most for your money."

"That's the very thing," agreed Margaret. "But before you go tell me about your hair. Elnora's hair is bright and wavy, but yours is silky as hackled flax. How do you do it?"

"Elnora?" asked four girls in concert.

"Yes; Elnora is the name of the girl I want these things for."

"Did she come to the high school today?" questioned one of them.

"Was she in your classes?" demanded Margaret without reply.

Four girls stood silent and thought fast. Had there been a strange girl among them, and had she been overlooked and passed by with indifference because she was so very shabby? If she had appeared as much better than they as she had looked worse would her reception have been the same?

"There was a strange girl from the country in the freshman class today," said Ellen Brownlee, "and her name was Elnora."

"That was the girl," said Margaret.

"Are her people so very poor?" questioned Ellen.

"No, not poor at all, come to think of it," answered Margaret. "It's a peculiar case. Mrs. Comstock had a great trouble, and she let it change her whole life and make a different woman of her. She used to be lovely, but all she does now is droop all day and walk the edge of the swamp half the night and neglect Elnora. If you girls would make life just a little easier for her it would be the finest thing you ever did."

All of them promised they would.

"Now tell me about your hair," persisted Margaret Sinton.

So they took her to a toilet counter, and she bought the proper hair soap, also a nail file and cold cream for use after windy days. Then they left her with the experienced clerk, and when at last Wesley found her she was loaded with bundles, and the glint of other days was in her beautiful eyes. Wesley carried some packages also.

"Come on, now, let's get home," he said.

CHAPTER III.

Wherein Elnora Procures Her Books and Finds Means of Earning Money.

ALL the way home Wesley and Margaret Sinton discussed how they should give Elnora their purchases and what Mrs. Comstock would say.

"I am afraid she will be awful mad," said Margaret Sinton tremulously.

"She'll just rip," replied Wesley graphically. "But if she wants to leave the raising of her girl to the neighbors she needn't get fractious if they take some pride in doing a good job. From now on I calculate Elnora shall go to school, and she shall have all the clothes and books she needs, if I go around on the back of Kate Comstock's land and cut a tree or drive off a calf to pay for them. Why I know one tree she owns that would put Elnora in heaven for a year. Just think of it, Margaret! It's not fair. One-third of what is there belongs to Elnora by law, and if Kate Comstock raises a row I'll tell her so and see that the girl gets it. You go to see Kate in the morning, and I'll go with you. Tell her you want Elnora's pattern, that you are going to make her a dress for helping us. And sort of hint at a few more things. If Kate balks I'll take a hand and settle her. I'll go to law for Elnora's share of that and then she can take her share."

"Why, Wesley Sintoff, you're perfectly wild."

"I'm not! Did you ever stop to think that such cases are so frequent there have been laws made to provide for them? I can bring it up in court and force Kate to educate Elnora and board and clothe her till she's of age, and then she can take her own share."

"Wesley, Kate would go crazy!"

"She's crazy now. The idea of any mother living with as sweet a girl as Elnora and letting her suffer till I find her crying like a funeral! It makes me fighting mad!"

When Wesley came from the barn Margaret had four pieces of crisp gingham, a pale blue, a pink, a gray with green stripes and a rich brown and blue plaid. On each of them lay a yard and a half of wide ribbon to match. There were handkerchiefs and a brown leather belt. In her hands she held a wide brimmed tan straw hat having a high crown banded with velvet strips, each of which fastened with a tiny gold buckle.

"It looks kind of bare now," she explained. "It had three quills on it here. The price was two and a half for the hat, and those things were a dollar and a dollar and a half apiece. I couldn't pay that."

"It does seem considerable," admitted Wesley, "but will it look right without them?"

"No, it won't!" said Margaret. "It's going to have quills on it. Do you remember those beautiful peacock wing feathers that Phoebe Simms gave me? Three of them go on just where those came off, and nobody will ever know the difference. They match the hat to a moral, and they are just a little longer and richer than the ones that I had taken off. I was wondering whether I better sew them on tonight while I remember how they set or wait till morning."

"Don't risk it!" exclaimed Wesley anxiously. "Don't you risk it! Sew them on right now!"

"Open your bundles, while I get the thread," said Margaret.

Wesley set out a pair of shoes. Margaret took them up and pinched the leather and stroked them.

"My, but they are pretty!" she cried. "What else did you get?"

"Well, sir," said Wesley, "I saw something today. You told me about Kate getting that tin pail for Elnora to carry to high school, and you said you told her it was a shame. So I just inquired around till I found this, and I think it's about the ticket. Decent looking and handy as you please. See here, now!"

Wesley opened the package and laid a brown leather lunch box on the table. Inside was a space for sandwiches, a little porcelain box for cold meat or fried chicken, another for salad, a glass with a lid which screwed on, held by a ring in a corner, for custard or jelly, a flask for tea or milk, a beautiful little knife, fork and spoon fastened in holders and a place for a napkin.

Margaret was almost crying over it.

"How I'd love to fill it!" she exclaimed.

"Do it the first time just to show Kate Comstock what love is!" said Wesley. "Get up early in the morning and make one of those dresses tomorrow. Can't you make a plain gingham dress in a day? I'll pick a chicken, and you fry it and fix a little custard for the cup, and do it up brown. Go on, Maggie, you do it!"

"I never can," said Margaret. "I am slow as the itch about sewing, and these are not going to be plain dresses when it comes to making them. There are going to be edgings of plain green, pink and brown to the bias strips and tucks and pleats about the hips, fancy belts and collars, and all of it takes time."

"Then Kate Comstock's got to help," said Wesley. "Can the two of you make one and get that lunch tomorrow?"

"Easy, but she'll never do it!"

"You see if she doesn't!" said Wesley. "You get up and cut it out, and soon as Elnora is gone I'll go after Kate myself. She'll take what I'll say better alone. But she'll come, and she'll help make the dress. These other things are our Christmas gifts to Elnora. She'll no doubt need them more now than she will then, and we can give them just as well. That's yours, and this is mine, or whichever way you choose."

Wesley untied a good brown umbrella and shook out the folds of a long brown raincoat. Margaret dropped the hat, arose and took the coat. She tried it on, felt it, cooed over it and matched it with the umbrella.

"Did it look anything like rain tonight?" she inquired so anxiously that Wesley laughed.

"And this last bundle?" she said, dropping back in her chair, the coat still over her shoulders.

"I couldn't buy this much stuff for any other woman and nothing for my own," said Wesley. "It's Christmas for you, too, Margaret!" He shook out fold after fold of soft gray satiny goods that would look lovely against Margaret's pink cheeks and whitening hair.

"Oh, you old darling!" she exclaimed and fled sobbing into his arms.

General Monteagudo replied that he considered their aid unnecessary at present, but he may accept it later.

Caimanera, Cuba, June 11.—Two more companies of the United States marine corps were dispatched from here to Guantanamo City.

A company of marines from the battleship Missouri under command of Captain James J. Meade, is on the way to Baracca, on the northeast coast of Oriente province on board the Culgoa.

Washington, June 11.—American marines are available for service in Havana now. The cruisers Washington and the battleship Rhode Island have reached Havana.

The gravity with which this government regards the situation is indicated by the fact that Rear Admiral Osterhaus, commander of the Atlantic fleet, is aboard his flagship, the Washington, to observe the conditions in Havana first hand. The remainder of the third division of the fleet remains at Key West and can join the flagship in a few hours.

Havana, June 11.—The United States minister to Cuba, Arthur M. Beaupre, sent a note to the Cuban state department in which he stated that the arrival of the cruiser Washington and the battleship Rhode Island, under the command of Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, was merely a visit of courtesy. Manual Sanguilly, the Cuban secretary of state, replied to Mr. Beaupre's message with appropriate acknowledgement. All the members of the cabinet were summoned to the palace to be present at the official visit of Admiral Osterhaus.

LONDON STRIKE ENDING

Possible That the Government Will Enact Arbitration Bill

London, June 11.—There is a general belief that the middle of the week will see the resumption of work by the dock strikers, 20,000 of whom held a demonstration at Tower Hill. The leaders in their speeches declared it was their opinion that the employers at the conference would acquiesce in the government proposals.

In the event of their failing, however, a national strike would inevitably be called. It is understood that should the employers still refuse to yield, the government will forthwith introduce a bill in parliament looking to the establishment of a joint board of arbitration.

Negro K. P.'s Win

Washington, June 11.—The supreme court of the United States has set aside the decree of the supreme court of Georgia, which enjoined negro men from incorporating a lodge in that state, under the name of Knights of Pythias. Chief Justice White announced the opinion. Justice Holmes announced a dissenting opinion.

Dewey's Staff Chief

Washington, June 11.—Rear Admiral Benjamin Peffer Lamberton, 68, United States navy, retired, who, as Admiral Dewey's chief of staff, received the surrender of the officers of the Spanish fleet after the battle of Manilla, is dead at his home here. He leaves a widow and son.

GRANDFATHER OF THE BRIDE

Officiated at Burchsted-Shelley Nuptials in Brooklyn

WOLLASTON MAN GROOM

Quincy friends were interested in a wedding solemnized Saturday evening in Brooklyn, New York, the bride being Miss Doris Marguerite Shelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Edward Henry Shelley of 218 Garfield place, and the groom Algernon Raymond Burchsted, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Burchsted of 219 Beale street Wollaston.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride at eight o'lock by Rev. R. S. Rowe of Baltimore, grandfather of the bride, assisted by Rev. J. M. Farrar of the First Reformed church of Brooklyn. E. R. Halton of Altoona, Pa., was best man and the bride's sister Mrs. Irving Giles Douglass was the matron of honor.

There were six bridesmaids, all college friends of the bride. They were Miss Georgina Berrian of Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., Miss Catherine Walther, Mount Vernon, N. Y., Miss Amanda Loughren, Elizabeth, N. J., Miss Gladys Esten, Brooklyn, Miss Martha Ballot, Brooklyn, and Miss Grace Allen, Brooklyn. There was also a little flower girl, Winifred Virginia Shelley, younger sister of the bride.

The bridesmaids carried ropes of smilax which formed a circle about the bridal party and an aisle for them to enter the room. The effect was very pretty. Pink peonies were used effectively for decoration,, combined with ferns, smilax and palms.

The bride looked very girlish and sweet in a gown of white satin veiled in lace and chiffon, hand embroidered in crystal. The veil was caught with orange blossoms and the shower bouquet was of white sweet peas and moss rosebuds. All the bridesmaids wore white lingerie gowns and the matron of honor was also in white, her gown being of white satin, veiled with white chiffon embroidered in pearls. The only color was the gown of the flower girl which was of pink silk veiled in white chiffon and lace. She carried a basket of pink rosebuds and the bridesmaids large bunches of pink roses.

A reception followed the ceremony the parents of the bride and groom assisting them in receiving their friends. Mrs. Shelley wore a black satin gown with rose silk bodice covered with shadow lace. Mrs. Burchsted wore a lavender messaline with black marquisette overdress.

A wedding supper was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Burchsted left on a few weeks' trip to the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec, the White mountains and Boston. They expect to be in Quincy about the eighteenth for a visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Burchsted, after which they go to Belle Island, Conn., for the summer.

The bride was graduated from Barnard college on Thursday and the groom is a graduate of Adams academy, Quincy, and of Lehigh college, Penn.

PEACEFUL DAY DISTURBED NIGHT

Boston Strike Becomes Turbulent After Dark

ARBITRATION BOARD TO ACT

Appeals to Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald Bring Results—More Shots Are Fired Into Trains—Unions Will Seek State Investigation of Elevated's Shortcomings—Parade to Faneuil Hall Today

Boston, June 11.—President Bancroft of the Boston Elevated Railway company has agreed to confer with the state board of conciliation and arbitration on the street car strike

The strike leaders, while pleased at the concession of President Bancroft, refused last night to make any statement.

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, arrived in Boston today to assist in the strike. He may speak at the Faneuil hall meeting this afternoon.

Following an interview with President Bancroft Mayor Fitzgerald issued the following statement last night:

"Mayor Fitzgerald had a conference this afternoon with General Bancroft, and asked him to agree to a conferee with a committee composed of the president of the International union, Mr .Mahon, and a committee of the striking employes. General Bancroft said in reply: 'I understand that you have asked the state board of arbitration to take up this matter and I will be glad to confer with them as soon as I hear from them.'"

Both Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald have been brought into the Elevated railway strike situation. Their respective offices were sought by organized labor outside of the strikers in the interest of conciliation between the Boston Elevated Railway company and its striking conductors and motormen. The mayor says he will ask for a conference with President William A. Bancroft of the Elevated.

Four days of this railway strike have extended its influence, involving new unions and brought out new issues. It already is far reaching in its effect, but neither party has exhausted its resources and both are showing a determination to battle. The courts are being filled with criminal cases, and both sides are employing counsel to carry on litigation to the fullest extent.

Representatives of the Stationary Engineers called on the strike committee and pledged the co-operation and support of the organization to the carmen, and stated that they were in consultation with other organizations with a view to calling on the state legislature to investigate the alleged refusal of the Elevated to comply with the state law providing for a 2½-cent fare for school children and other alleged violations on the part of the Elevated.

It was stated by Organzer Fred Fay, the local leader of the strike, that between 4000 and 4500 strikers would assemble this afternoon on Boston common and march in a body to a mass meeting to be held in Faneuil hall. This demonstration of numbers, according to Organizer Fay, is to show the public how many men are really out and to refute the statement of the Elevated officials that only a few of the men, comparatively, have struck.

The cars are being operated with fair regularity and the Elevated road appears to have plenty of men to run them. The strikers tried to influence men to go out whenever they could and claimed to have made some gains, while the company say many former employes who struck are returning to work.

Five thousand men and boys surrounded the Dudley street terminal last night and made things interesting for the strike breakers operating street cars.

Several shots were fired at an elevated train at Forest Hills about 10 o'clock last night. Windows were shattered, but no one was injured.

Some cars were stoned and a few windows broken.

Strike sympathizers on house roofs near Egleston square threw stones at elevated trains.

A large force of police were unable to prevent stoning of cars near the car house at Field's Corner. One motorman was hit on the head and rendered unconscious.

QUAKERS VICTORIOUS.

The Quaker A. A. defeated the Bay Sides of Quincy Point Saturday 16 to 6. The game was close to the fifth inning when Swain hit a two-bagger with a man on first and third making the score 5 to 4 in favor of the Quakers. The Quakers got seven runs in the sixth, Hayden pitching for the Bay Sides was taken out and Mahoney went in to pitch. It didn't take the winners long to find Mahoney's curves. Swain got seventeen strikeouts and gave three passes. Gilcoine who played second for the losers was the lone star for that team. The batteries were for the Quakers, Swain and DeLenso, for the losers Hayden Mahoney and Gladstone.

The Quakers are willing to challenge any team 12 to 14 years old. Blackfoots, U. P. Church, Christ Church Boys Club preferred. J. Wixen, manager, Summer street, Quincy.

STANDING BROAD JUMP.

In the second event of the series at the Boston Gear Works yesterday noon, J. Carlson was first with a broad jump of 8 feet 3 inches, J. Martin was second with 8 feet 5 inches, L. Flatbrum was third with 8 feet 4 inches.

Owing to the high wind the baseball throw for distance was postponed to next Tuesday.

NORFOLKS LOST.

The Quincy A. A. baseball team kept up its winning streak by defeating the strong Norfolks of Weymouth on the latter's home grounds Saturday by a score of 4 to 2. Hebert pitched for the winners and was effective at all times. Twice during the game the Norfolks had the bases full, with none out, but steadiness on the part of the Quincy pitcher, aided by fine support kept Norfolks from scoring.

TEN BUILDINGS PREY TO FIRE $25,000 LOSS AT N. WEYMOUTH

Hotel and Garage Caught, but Were Saved by Strenuous Labors of Weymouth and Quincy Firemen

Valuable Power Boats Whipped up in the Pathway of Flames in Their Fierce Progress

Ten buildings, and six valuable launches were totally destroyed, a hotel and garage were in great danger of sharing the same fate, entailing a loss of about $25,000 by a fire which swept Fore River avenue, Hunts hill, North Weymouth at an early hour this morning.

Weymouth's entire fire department was called out to stem the tide of the rapidly moving flames and Hose No. 4 of Quincy rendered valuable aid.

Undoubtedly the lack of wind prevented the flames from a greater spread and saved the town from a most disastrous and widespread conflagration.

The cause of the fire is unknown.

The alarm from Box 76 in Quincy was pulled in by Officer Thorne at 1.15 o'clock. The fire started in the old Porter Keen shipyard at North Weymouth, now operated by Leonard C. Embree. Officer Thorne was on duty at Quincy Point and heard the two alarms in Weymouth and saw the blaze. Thinking it wise in face of the call for help that was being sounded he rang in the alarm from Box 76. Hose 4 crossed the bridge and went to the scene of the fire and rendered valuable aid. When Chief Litchfield arrived at the Point bridge however and found the fire in Weymouth and that Hose 4 had gone to the scene he turned the Central Station apparatus back and sounded the recall.

The fire started in one of Embree's shops and spread rapidly to his house adjoining thence to the dwelling, general store and boat house of John Veader all of which were destroyed. The fire than communicated to the cottages of John Haley, Capt. John Clark, Jeremiah Pitts, Leonard Stenston and Capt. Peterson all of which were burned. The roof of the Bay Side hotel also took fire as well as the roof of a near by garage. These buildings were saved however with but little damage. Two alarms were sounded in Weymouth calling out nearly its entire department. Valuable aid was also rendered by Hose 4 of Quincy.

In Embree's boat house was the power boat Elstar owned by Arthur Albee of Hyde Park, and valued at $2,000. Also another power boat, the Rhonea said to be even more valuable with three more boats that were under construction. There was also a power boat in Veader's boat house valued at $800, which was to have been launched today.

The fire made a bright illumination and as the buildings are situated on the water's edge the fire could be seen all along the north shore.

There was a large attendance. Rev. Fannie Austin, the pastor was unable to be present on account of illness. Rev. Dr. William H. McLaughlin of Chicago, general Superintendent of Universalist churches of the United States was expected to be present but was unavoidably detained.

ANDREW BRYNHILDEN SECOND VICTIM OF TUESDAY'S ACCIDENT

Shock of Amputating Left Arm Too Much for the Man in His Shattered Condition

McDonald and Yerra Have Good Chances of Recovery. First Victim Buried Today

Death claimed another victim of the terrible accident at the Fore River Company shipyard Tuesday morning, when Andrew Brynhilden succumbed in the afternoon.

The other two men who were injured are still in the hospital are expected to recover from their injuries but that they are still in a serious condition is conceded.

The correct name was not given of the Italian who was killed outright when the bulkhead fell to the bottom of the hold of the molasses steamer Nelson. At first it was reported that his name was Vichicta Pasciolina.

It is learned that the man's correct name is Giovanni Dechiloa.

Andrew Brynhilden was badly bruised and his left arm so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate it. This was done but he did not survive the shock. He resided at the Richmond house at Quincy Point where but little is known of him. As far as known he was not married. He was a Norwegian by birth and had been in Quincy for some months.

John C. McDonald who suffered several fractured ribs as well as numerous contusions and possible internal injuries was in a serious condition Tuesday night at the City Hospital. This morning however, it was said at the hospital that he was as comfortable as possible considering his condition and that there was a fair chance for his recovery.

The fourth man was Joseph Yerra who was taken to the Grace hospital Boston is doing well as could be expected. He has a fractured hip and various contusions about the head. At the hospital this morning it was said that he was fairly comfortable. He has a good chance of recovery.

The funeral of Giovanni Dechilon the Italian who was killed outright will be held this afternoon from his late home 60 Brackett street. He left a widow and several children.

FEAST OF SACRED HEART.

Special devotions will be observed in all the Catholic Churches of the city Friday, it being the Feast of the Sacred Heart.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The money probe in New York is bringing out some interesting things about Tennessee Coal and Iron and Perkins one of the leading Roosevelt backers is said to have behind the move to force one bank out of business. That is representing the interests of the people with a vengeance.

We welcome the anniversary number of the Rockland Standard. It is a credit to the town and all who had any hand in presenting to the people such a fine, interesting and valuable a source of information upon the great event.

The contest for delegates up to the present time appears to be somewhat of a great big tempest in a tea pot.

The base ball fever has even struck the congressional gang. While they are playing ball they are certainly not passing injurious legislation.

It is an open question now as to who won out in the railroad fight, Governor Foss or the legislature.

Senator Tinkham is stirring up quite a rumpus according to his own views. What particular office is he training for that he is jumping so rapidly into the limelight and a warm wave expected.

Boston American base ball team at the top of the heap and every one in Boston is proud and hoping they will stay there for the balance of the season.

May Yohe, destitute and a probable suicide seems to give credence to another link in the chain of ill fortune that has always marked the presence of the Hope diamond.

Mayor Fitzgerald announces that he will conduct his senatorial campaign on "horses necks." For the uninitiated this drink is made of ginger ale and the lemon peeling carved from the full round of the lemon. Many would like to know if Martin Lomasney gained his power by the promiscuous use of "Ward eights."

German telephone lines are owned by the government. If the government owned them here the politicians in power would have a cinch getting inside information.

When Rockefeller attends church the remarks of the pastor are forgotten and the Oil king's alleged religious drivelings are widely quoted.

From an Amsterdam bank to a New York candy factory is a long stride, but when followed by arrest it is even a greater fall.

The people will soon wake up and realize that the loudest champion of their cause is the biggest fakir.

Steam roller tactics are all right when we approve of them but when applied by the other fellow without our approval they have a disturbing effect.

Cheer up the worst is yet to come.

The working newspaper man is whisking around the country and as usual talking all the time with his right eye focussed on Baltimore.

PARCELS POST.

Everybody is so much upset by the political tumult of the present day that it is small wonder that they can find time or opportunity to consider other matters. It is perhaps this too absorbant interest in politics engendered by the rival claims of candidates which makes it easy for the real politician to work his will in matters which are of more vital interest to the people at large than candidates. Thus it often happens that measures are slipped through by greased wheels which benefit the few to the detriment of the large mass of people and it is not until the mischief has been done that the people realize that once again they have been buncoed and something which they would not actually stand for on sober second thought is pushed through while they have been listening to the appeals of demagogues and wiley office seekers. Possibly the people are blinded by the glittering claims of some of the aspirants only to wake up later and find that they are all promises easily broken.

A matter which concerns the people in a large degree is the proposed parcels post of the post office department. In other countries the undertaking has been successfully accomplished and the people have reaped the benefits in the reduced cost of transportation of articles. Of course the large carrying companies of the country are not in favor of the measure President Taft has announced himself as heartily in favor of such legislation. Senator Bourne after much research with experts of the department has framed a bill which appears to meet every exigency and has the approval of the post office department. President Taft has placed himself on record as approving the measure. Under those circumstances it seems that there is no excuse for delay and that congress should immediately enact a law which will create the postal parcel delivery. There is no doubt but such legislation will be beneficial, be the means of saving a great deal of money to the people of the country and will become popular. Aside from this it will be the means of furnishing lucrative employment to a great many men and women.

WOMEN AS BUILDERS.

The Master Builders Association of New York will open a school to train women for the occupation of master builders. This has been brought about by the insistent demand of daughters of well-to-do parents for a chance to train themselves in occupations affording opportunity for out door work which is considered more healthful.

Women have demonstrated their ability to hold their own with men in positions, of a less strenuous character where men were looked upon as the dominating factor. It remains to be seen if they will be able to hold their own in this new undertaking.

Naturally a few sore fingers, bruised and broken nails and other minor mishaps will attend the maiden efforts of the Eve carpenters.

However they have the chance to make good. If they do then look out for things. We may expect to hear of the lady bridge builder, the woman's carpenter craft, the female stone cutters and female workers in other branches of industry.

We will then be getting back to the usages in vogue among the primitive red men and at present in full operation in some of the parts of darkest Africa.

May be the women will have their unions, strikes, leaders, and all the accoutrements of a well-developed trades union. More power to them. May they succeed in their venture.

But taking the situation seriously. Does it not look as though there was just a tinge of stretching the field of woman's operations when they actively engage in such enterprises?

If women are forced to earn their living are there not channels enough open to them without going so far afield? It does seem as though this was stretching their prerogatives a little.

Aside from those who are forced to seek employment in the channels already ably occupied by women the real place is the home, home building, the care and fostering of home ideals, all that makes home dear to son or daughter is far above having the woman of the family a possible toiler with hammer and pick or drill. It would hardly be compatible with our advancement and boasted ideas of the eternal fitness of things to have the male members of a family come home to the noon day or evening meal and have to wait until "ma," who was at work building a house or a bridge, or road, or something else of the kind, who had been delayed by the boss wanting to finish up the job, before the repast was served. Woman has her place, but we do not yet believe that it is on the construction platform of a bridge or building.

GIVING TO CHARITY.

It has often been asserted that to give charity indiscriminately, as to beggars in the street or at the door, is unwise because of the danger that it will reach the undeserving. From a recent report of an inquiry by the state board of charity it is almost as bad to give to organized charity, or what appears to be such. The board examined 169 institutions organized ostensibly to aid the sick poor. It found that 20 were pure fakes, 17 badly managed, 68 fairly well and 64 all right. Some of the fakes and frauds discovered were startling and worse than the meanest mendicant who ever collected alms on the street. They were formed to work the public for the benefit of their promoters, and according to the board, have done so. It is a pity that the report does not tell who the frauds are. There will be a demand for that publicity, and it will come from institutions which may feel that they are included in the board's bad list.—Framingham News.

MARRIED IN CHICAGO.

Cards have been received in Quincy announcing the marriage at Chicago June 4, of Lieut. Albert Monmouth Jones of the 10th United States Infantry to Miss Barbara Viola daughter of Hon. and Mrs. Henry C. V. LeVatte of Chicago. They will be at home after July 10, at Camp Otis Canal Zone Panama. Lieut. Jones is a son of the late Frederick L. Jones of this city and a brother of Medical Examiner Frederick E. Jones.

COMMENDABLE ENTERPRISE.

Our friends and neighbors the publishers and editors of the Rockland Standard arose equal to the occasion of the celebration in their town by issuing a souvenir celebration edition of their paper last Friday.

The paper had forty-four pages. In addition to the usual news pages there were thirty-six pages devoted to much general information about the town of Abington and its offsprings, Whitman and Rockland, many fine half tone pictures of famous points of interest and prominent citizens and the publication as a whole was a most creditable one. As a source of information to future generations it should be preserved by the families of the present day to hand down to those who come after them.

BIKERS' SEND OFF FOR CHAS. REED

Wollaston Man Dined on Eve of European Trip

KENDALL'S SPEECH A HIT

Continuing its time honored custom of giving a "send off" to each of its members about to start on a long trip, the Boston Bicycle club tendered a farewell banquet at the Hotel Sorrento, Saturday evening to C. W. Reed of Atlantic a member of the club for 34 years, who sails this week for an extended trip to Europe.

It was a most enjoyable occasion, enlivened by old time songs, reminiscenses of the days of the high wheel and encomiums of the evening's guest, brought to a climax by the remarks of the club Captain, Dr W G Kendall, also of Atlantic who spoke as follows:—

"I have been somewhat amused, as well as interested, in listening to the good things that have been said of one guest tonight, because I realize how little any of you know the real Charlie Reed.

Conditions, such as living in the same village, and being interested in some of the same sports, have given me the privilege of knowing him better than any of you and enable me to inform you that you honor yourselves even more than you are aware of by honoring him tnight

The Charlie Reed that you know is modest, unassuming, conspicuous only from his physical proportions, and the last man whom you would take to be a fire eater, although some of you are aware that he is a veteran of the greatest war the world has known.

You would never learn it from his lips, but that man is entitled to wear upon his breast on his trip abroad a decoration such as not even the generals who have commanded our armies could wear and which would make look ridiculous the target shoot medals that will be worn by some of the tin soldiers who also will go abroad from here in the near future.

As you know, every patriotic nation has its one order into which no conceivable amount of wealth or influence can procure admission, where the only "open sesame" is conspicuous valor on the field of battle.

England has its order of the Victoria Cross, Germany that of the Iron Cross, and Russia, France, Italy and even Japan have each their one special order of like nature.

That "republics are ungrateful" is a stock phrase, but our own country is in line with the others in this one respect for we have the order of the Congressional Medal Of Honor which takes its name from the fact that each recipient of its decoration has it conferred upon him only by special act of Congress for some unusually meritorious deed of gallantry upon the field of battle.

Therefore, as you can imagine, this order is very limited in numbers, characterized by the quality rather than the quantity of its membership.

Charlie Reed would never tell you of it, and I suppose that my life will not be worth a moment's purchase after divulging the secret, that the United States Congress years ago by special enactment bestowed upon him this most desired of all decorations for conspicuous bravery on the battlefield of Gettysburg.

BARGE SIDES CONTRACTED

Expanding She Could Not Get Through Draw

BRIDGE EXTRAS REMOVED

The old saying that "what has been done can be done again," got an awful bump in East Milton, when the big steel barge No. 742 of the Reading Coal Company tried to pass through the draw of the Old Stone bridge, across the Neponset river.

Reading barge 742 was towed up through the bridge with 1000 tons of coal or more on board and docked at Godfrey's wharf. The unloading finished, the boat started down the river on her return trip.

When the bridge was reached the barge refused to go through the draw The tug drew it into the opening, and then it stuck. The tender got out a steel tape and made a few measurements.

It was found that the barge was five inches wider than the passageway. As the barge had once gone through with a full cargo, it seemed as if the bridge must have shrunk.

"The cold weather has contracted the river," said one; "the barge is four days older and has grown that much," were two contributions to science offered by wise ones.

Carpenters removed the guard rails before the trip to sea could be made. Shipping experts explain that the weight of the coal along the keel caused the sides of the barge to spring inboard and when the coal was removed the steel frames returned to their normal position, increasing the beam of the barge at least half a foot.

PANAMA CANAL WORLD HELPER

An Engineering Feat That Will Never Be Forgotten

WILLIAMS EXTOLS ENTERPRISE

(Special.)

Washington D. C., June 12.

"The opening of the Panama Canal will be a grand world-helper, the glorious credit of which will belong to the United States," said Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, in a conversation about the big enterprise and the method of its operation,

"It has been a splendid engineering feat, which will never be forgotten, but the greatest of all things in connection with its building is in the contemplation that its importance reaches, like the beams of the sun, far beyond the range of the immediate local benefits which we as a commercial nation may enjoy. It will draw the family of nations closer together, to a better understanding of each other, and consequently and necessarily will stimulate international trade anew.

While I do not look for any marvelous returns on the investment at any time in the near future, believing that the advantages will accrue more in sentiment than in substance, yet the accomplished fact will everywhere on the globe 'speed the plow,' as did the discovery of America with the imaginations of all the old world radiant with visions of vast treasures to be found.

"I think there should be no difficulty in operating the canal. Certainly a people— our people who can so perfectly and grandly solve the problem of construction will not fail to work out in good time a sound business plan of operation. We shall have done a great thing for ourselves, and the best part of the great thing is that we have done it for the world.

"I am in favor of allowing our coastwise ships free passage through the canal, with a reasonable toll charge for other vessels. It may be we have not been as vigilant as we might profitably have been in caring for our coastwise merchant marine. I would be willing also to permit the railways to operate steamships to and through the canal, provided they were subject as to rates to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The transcontinental railways ought by now to have ceased to harbor apprehensions that the operation of the Isthmian canal will harm them. This continent is now so well settled, and so surely on the way to continued filling up with thrifty populations, that the land carriers need never lack for business; certainly they will always be transporters of perishable freight. The canal will see the passage of freight in bulk for all the world.

"I say again the completion and operation of the Panama Canal will be a great world-helper. Why should any interest in this country fear for the future in that connection?

"With the great Canal completed, the problem of operation fairly settled as to all interests, we can then go forward doing the best we can to perfect a national system of river and harbor improvement and an ever-watchful maintenance of navigation. A wise and enlightened regulation of our interstate and foreign commerce, as we are advised in our national Constitution a sensible and inflexible care for the interests of the public in the essential matter of terminal facilities—these are agreeable things to contemplate and hope for and have irridescent dreams about in what the future may yet have in store for American engineering genius, American commercial prowess and American statesmanship."

FIVE DAYS OF BOSTON STREET CAR STRIKE AND SOME FEATURES

Claims of Both Sides as to the Number of Strikers Hardly Accord With True Facts

Tuesday marked the close of the fifth day of the great Elevated railroad mens strike in Boston.

The parade yesterday demonstrated that the Company's claim was too small and the Union leaders claim too large as to the actual number of men out on strike.

In the city proper they are not noticeable in the day time.

The greatest trouble is in the night time in outlying districts.

Surface cars were run on all branches and good schedules maintained up to a late hour last night.

Boston Elevated Railway Companyannounced that 1500 men have been hired and that a total of 4500 men are at work, almost the normal number.

Strikers held a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall and filled it to overflowing. In the parade which followed nearly 2000 men were in line.

Boston Elevated Company ran an increased number of cars during the daylight hours, but at night made another large curtailment in the service.

Boston Central Labor Union executive board adopted resolutions calling upon its 80,000 affiliated members and their families to refrain from riding on the cars and to refrain from any acts of violence.

More than 200 strike-breakers arrived from New York.

Boston Elevated Company voted to insure its employes under the provisions of the Workingmen's Compensation Act.

Brighton police arrest a striking conductor on the charge of participating in a conspiracy to blow up the company's tracks on Commonwealth avenue with dynamite.

Committee on strikers call on Gov. Foss in relation to the alleged action of police in suburbs that strikers were forbidden to assemble to hold meetings.

First act of violence occurred in East Boston last night when a bottle was thrown through a car window, cutting one of the passengers.

Twenty-six cases were prosecuted in the various courts of the district for disturbances and misdemeanors in connection with the strike. One year in the House of Correction and a fine of $75 were new high records for severity.

FLING FLAGS TO THE BREEZE

Every One Should Show Their Patriotism Friday

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION

Owing to the graduation exercises and the closing of the schools for the year, no special program has been arranged in the schools for Flag Day, which has been set aside for Fridey, June 14. All who can, however, are urged to observe the day in a fitting manner and it is hoped that the laxity, noticeable in the past in Quincy when owners of flags have failed to comply with the significance of the day, will not be repeated.

Every owner of a flag should have it flutter to the breezes on Friday and those who have not flags, if unable to purchase them, should endeavor to commemorate the occasion by recalling to mind and pondering over the meaning of the flag and what the stars and stripes have done for theinterests and welfare of this great republic.

Governor Foss, ever mindful of such an event and ever ready to bring stirring scenes of thrilling deeds before the attention of the public has issued a proclamation for the occasion and wants every man, woman and child to take part in the proper observance of Flag Day. The proclamation reads as follows:—

"Under authority of Chapter 5, Resolves of 1911, I hereby designate and set apart Friday, June 14 as Flag Day, to be observed as the anniversary of the adoption of our National Flag by the Continental Congress in the year 1777.

The American Flag should be conspicuously displayed on that day; all persons having opportunity to do so should honor the day by some special act or observance in harmony with the anniversary.

Children should be told again the ringing stories of the American patriots and inspired to a patriotism as enduring as theirs.

The people of the Commonwealth may well take time, on that day to renew their own resolutions of personal service to the people and nation.

The flag is emblematic of all that we hold true and honorable in human government. But the government itself is in the keeping of the people; its emblem expresses to the world the principles which are fundamental to our form of government to the exact degree that we maintain those principles in practice.

The highest use to make of Flag Day is to resolve upon a more active and determined part in solving every civic problem; to put these resolutions into effect; and thus ensure to coming generations a government—and a flag which shall inspire an undiminished loyalty and devotion.

Signed
EUGENE N. FOSS.

Continues Hanabury Case to Find if He Has a License

Elmer H. Hanabury, engineer at Reed & Vandrits polishing mill was in court this morning charged with running a steam engine without a license. He claimed that he had a second class engineer's license and that someone stole it from the wall in the engine room. The state inspector however claimed that it was not an engineer's license that Hanabury held but a second class firemen's license.

The court continued the case a week that the matter might be traced out to see whether Hanabury or the state inspector was right.

ALASKA VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS

Revenue Cutter Rescues Total Inhabitants of One Village

Seward, Alaska, June 12.—The first direct news of conditions on Kodiak island which was almost devastated by the eruption of Katmai volcano, was received when the tug Printer arrived, bringing Lieutenant Searles of the revenue cutter Manning and with J. E. Erskin, a merchant of Kodiak, who appealed for assistance for the stricken people on the island.

Lieutenant Searles said that the food supply at Kodiak was sufficient to last only fifteen days. All the crops on the island were destroyed and millions of fish were killed by the sand and ashes that fell into the water. At a mass meeting of the citizens a committee was appointed to handle relief funds for the stricken villagers. An appeal was sent to congress asking that $2000 be placed at the disposal of the revenue cutter service to buy food. Messages were also sent to Governor Clark urging him to send all the revenue cutters on duty in Alaskan waters to the islands laid waste by the volcano. The tug Printer will return to Kodiak with all available supplies.

Kodiak and Woody Island villages are buried under a foot of ashes as a result of the eruption which began Thursday afternoon and lasted forty-eight hours. No lives have been lost at Kodiak but many other settlements near the volcano must have suffered indescribably.

The revenue cutter Manning was in port there when the eruption began and furnished refuge for all

KENTUCKY CONTESTS TO TAFT

Barnes Will Lead Any Movement to Defeat Roosevelt—Mead Headquarters, as Well as Sherman, Are Opened—Justice Hughes and Senator Cummins Favorites In the Compromise Talk

Chicago, June 12.—The Republican national committee voted 38 to 11 to seat the four Taft delegates-at-large from Kentucky.

The Taft delegates from the first Kentucky district were also seated by the national committee.

One delegate for Colonel Roosevelt, the first awarded him since the national committee began the hearing of contest cases last Friday, and seventeen for President Taft were the net result of yesterday's session of the Republican national committee.

In all 101 delegates have been accorded President Taft since the committee opened its hearings.

In some of these the Roosevelt men have acquiesced; in others they had mustered a vote of from 11 to 17 against the Taft decisions.

Within three hours after he arrived in Chicago, William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Republican state committee of New York, had been precipitated into the centre of the stage.

He has been commissioned by the Taft forces to defeat Roosevelt, and he can use any methods he desires to attain that result, even though the ultimate outcome should be the abandonment of President Taft as a candidate for renomination

With the bitterness engendered by the work of the national committee in throwing out all of the Roosevelt delegates who had tried to get on the convention rolls through contests, came renewed talk again of a compromise candidate. Most of this came from the "A" floor of the Congress hotel, where Senator Kenyon had opened headquarters for his colleague, Senator Cummins of Iowa.

The first Simon-pure vice presidential headquarters to be opened was in charge of D. H. Lamberton of Rutland, Vt. He was booming Governor J. M. Mead of Vermont for second place on the ticket. Vice President James S. Sherman, who is a candidate to succeed himself, will open his headquarters today.

In the conferences which are in progress at the Blackstone hotel between the Roosevelt leaders and at the Congress hotel, where all the capatins in the Taft camp were in session, talk of compromise is rife. The only names that have been mentioned in connection with such a compromise are those of Senator A. B. Cummins of Iowa and United States Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes. The name of Senator Cummins has figured in the discussions in both camps; that of Justice Hughes confined to the Taft leaders.

Aside from the one-sided battle in the national committee, the most interesting feature of the Chicago situation concerns the purposes of La Follette's people. The Taft managers have practically given up all hope of doing business with the Wisconsin progressive leader, and they would not be surprise if a combination of Roosevelt, La Follette and Cummins forces is consummated.

Walter L. Houser of Wisconsin, La Follette's national manager, gave out a statement in which he declared the Wisconsin senator would hold the balance of power when the convention gets down to business. He said the La Follette strength, counting upon the ten delegates instructed for Senator Cummins, would be at least 100. He said there would be at least this number who would vote for neither Taft nor Roosevelt.

Houser admitted that if La Follette controlled enough votes to deadlock the convention on candidates he would force into the platform a plank favoring scientific revision of the tariff; the initiative, referendum and judicial recall and his own ideas regarding the regulation of trusts, makng it possible for a man or firm to recover if forced out of business by a trust.

SHAW FOUND GUILTY

His Affinity Also Held by Suffolk County Jury

Boston, June 12.—Verdicts of guilty were returned against A. W. Shaw and Mrs. Georgia M. Stuart in the Suffolk superior criminal court by a jury before Judge Crosby. Shaw was convicted of the larceny of $15,000 from the A. W. Shaw corporation and the Cumberland County Shoe company, and Mrs. Stuart was found guilty of receiving the stolen property.

Following the report of the jury, which returned sealed verdicts at 9:30 o'clock, Assistant District Attorney Lavelle asked that the bail of the defendants be increased in view of the verdicts. Judge Crosby increased Shaw's bail from $9000 to $12,000 and in default of the extra bonds the convicted man was remanded to jail. Mrs. Stuart's bail was $4500 and the court refused to increase the bonds in her case.

KING OF GREECE

Is Tired of the Crown and Desires to Abdicate Next Year

Athens, June 12.—King George has arrived home from Copenhagen, where he attended the funeral of King Frederick of Denmark, his brother.

Concurrently with his arrival the newspaper Acropolis states that the king will abdicate in favor of the crown prince in 1913, when he will complete half a century's reign.

His majesty has long wished to leave the throne, but has postponed abdication for reasons of state.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE INSISTENT

Demand Suffrage Plank In Republican Platform

Chicago, June 12.—If a bolt of the Republican national convention comes from no other quarter, it may be furnished by the women suffragists.

Mrs. Catherine W. McCulloch declares that unless a plank favoring equal suffrage is included in the national platform, the guns of the women's party will be trained on the Republicans .

The threat, according to the women, should cause serious consideration on the part of the delegates, as their refusal might mean the cost of five or six states which have instituted equal suffrage, with over a million votes.

Miss Jane Addams has been selected to argue for the plank before the platform committee. If it is refused, the suffragists will work for their cause on the floor of the convention, chiefly through Mrs. Isabella W. Blaney, delegate-at-large from California.

AFTER VILLISCA MURDERER

Bloodhounds Take Up the Trail of Slayer of Eight

Villiasca, Ia., June 12.—Bloodhounds arrived and were immediately taken to the Moore home where eight persons were murdered. Within ten minutes they found a scent from a hidden handkerchief which took them over a circuitous route to the edge of the town and thence over several miles of rough timberland in the Nodaway bottoms.

Because a company of militia had kept the crowds from going within several hundred feet of the Moore place, it was hoped the hounds might be able to accomplish much, as the grounds had not been trodden over.

AIR CLAIMS TWO MORE

Army Officer and Operator Were the Victims

College Park, Md., June 12.—Lieutenant Leighton W. Hazlehurst, Seventeenth infantry, U. S. A., of Macon, Ga., and A. L. Welch of Washington, D. C., were killed here at 6:13 o'clock last night when a new army aeroplane of the Wright type, in which they were flying, fell to the ground at the army aviation school and was wrecked. Death to both was instantaneous.

Welch was flying the machine and Lieutenant Hazelhurst was a passenger. They had ascended to a height of about 200 feet when they dipped to come down and go up again. When about thirty feet from the ground and going at a tremendous speed, estimated by eye witnesses at between fifty and sixty miles an hour, the machine collapsed and dashed to the earth with terrific force. Apparently the weight of the engine and the two aviators caused the collapse.

Fifteen flights had been made in the machine at College Park without accident. Both Lieutenant Hazlehurst and Welch had separately made successful trips in the biplane earlier in the afternoon.

Welch, whose home was here, had been for three years in the employ of the Wright brothers and was said by Orville Wright to be one of their best teachers.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

At 4 o'clock next morning Elnora was shelling beans. At 6 she fed chickens and pigs, swept two of the rooms of the cabin, built a fire and put on the kettle for breakfast. Then she climbed the narrow stairs to the attic she had occupied since a very small child and dressed in the hated shoes and brown calico, plastered down her crisp curls, ate what breakfast she could and, pinning on her hat, started for town.

"There is no sense in your going for an hour yet," said her mother.

"I must try to discover some way to earn those books," replied Elnora. "I am perfectly positive I shall not find them lying along the road wrapped in tissue paper and tagged with my name."

She went toward the city as on yesterday. Her perplexity as to where tuition and books were to come from was worse, but she did not feel quite so badly. She never again would have to face all of it for the first time. She had been through it once and was yet living. There had been times yesterday when she had prayed to be hidden or to drop dead, and neither had happened. "I guess the best way to get an answer to prayer is to work for it," muttered Elnora grimly.

In an Onabasha book store she asked the prices of the list of books that she needed and learned that $6 would not quite supply them. She anxiously inquired for second hand books, but was told that the only way to secure them was from the last year's freshmen.

"Do you wish these?" asked the clerk hurriedly, for the store was rapidly filling with school children wanting anything from a dictionary to a pen.

"Yes," gasped Elnora, "oh, yes! But I cannot pay for them just now. Please let me take them, and I will pay for them on Friday or return them as perfect as they are. Please trust me for them a few days."

The clerk looked at her doubtfully and took her name.

"I'll ask the proprietor," he said. When he came back Elnora knew the answer before he spoke.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but Mr. Hann doesn't recognize your name. You are not a customer of ours, and he feels that he can't take the risk. You'll have to bring the money."

Elnora clumped out of the store, the thump of her heavy shoes beating as a hammer on her brain. She tried two other houses with the same result and then in sick despair came into the street. What could she do? She was too frightened to think.

There it stood in a bank window in big black letters staring straight at her:

> Wanted.—Caterpillars, cocoons, chrysalides, pupae cases, butterflies, moths, Indian relics of all kinds. Highest scale of prices paid in cash.

Elnora caught the wicket at the cashier's desk with both hands to brace herself against disappointment.

"Who is it wants to buy cocoons, butterflies and moths?" she panted.

"The Bird Woman," answered the cashier. "Have you some for sale?"

"I have some, but I do not know if they are what she would want."

"Well, you had better see her," said the cashier. "Do you know where she lives?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "Would you tell me the time?"

"Twenty-one after 8," was the answer.

She had nine minutes to reach the auditorium or be late. Should she go to school or to the Bird Woman? Several girls passed her walking swiftly and she remembered their faces. They were hurrying to school. Elnora caught the infection. She would see the Bird Woman at noon. Algebra came first and that professor was kind. Perhaps she could slip to the superintendent and ask him for a book for the next lesson.

As she went down the long hall she noticed the professor of mathematics standing in the door of his recitation room. When she came up to him he smiled and spoke to her.

"I have been watching for you," he said, and Elnora stopped, bewildered.

"For me?" she questioned.

"Yes," said Professor Henley. "Step inside."

Elnora followed him into the room, and he swung the door behind them.

"At teachers' meeting last evening one of the professors mentioned that a pupil had betrayed in class that she had expected her books to be furnished by the city. I thought possibly it was you. Was it?"

"Yes," breathed Elnora.

"That being the case," said Professor Henley, "it just occurred to me as you had expected that you might require a little time to secure them, and you are too fine a mathematician to fall behind for want of supplies. So I telephoned one of our sophomores to bring her last year's books this morning. I am sorry to say they are somewhat abused, but the text is all here. You can have them for $2 and pay when you get ready. Would you care to take them?"

Elnora sat suddenly, because she could not stand another instant. She reached both hands for the books and said never a word. The professor was silent also.

At last Elnora arose, hugging those books to her heart as a mother grasps a lost baby.

"One thing more," said the professor. "You can pay your tuition quarterly. You need not bother about the first installment this month. Any time in October will do."

So Elnora entered the auditorium a second time. Her face was like the brightest dawn that ever broke over the Limberlost. No matter about the lumbering shoes and skimpy dress just now—no matter about anything, she had the books. She could take them home. In her garret she could commit them to memory if need be. She could show that clothes were not all. If the Bird Woman did not want any of the many different kinds of specimens she had collected she was quite sure now she could sell ferns, nuts and a great many things. Then, too, some one moved over this morning, and several girls smiled and bowed. Elnora forgot everything save her books and that she was where she could use them intelligently—everything except one little thing away back in her head. Her mother had known about the books and the tuition and had not told her when she agreed to her coming.

"Who is it wants to buy cocoons, butterflies and moths?" she panted.

CHAPTER IV.

Wherein Elnora Meets the Bird Woman and the Sintons Are Disappointed.

At noon Elnora took her little parcel of lunch and started to the home of the Bird Woman. She must know about the specimens first, and then she would go out to the suburbs somewhere and eat a few bites. She dropped the heavy iron knocker on the door of the big red log cabin, and her heart thumped at the resounding stroke.

"Is the Bird Woman at home?" she asked of the maid.

"She is at lunch," was the answer.

"Please ask her if she will see a girl from the Limberlost about some moths?" inquired Elnora.

"I never need ask if it's moths," laughed the girl. "Orders are to bring any one with specimens right in. Come this way."

Elnora followed down the hall and entered a long room with high paneled wainscoting, old English fireplace with an overmantel and closets of peculiar china filling the corners. At a bare table of oak, yellow as gold, sat a woman Elnora often had watched and followed covertly around the Limberlost. The Bird Woman was holding out a hand of welcome.

"I heard!" she laughed. "A little pasteboard box or just the bare word 'specimen' passes you at my door. If it is moths I hope you have hundreds. I've been very busy all summer and unable to collect, and I need so many. Sit down and lunch with me while we talk it over. From the Limberlost, did you say?"

"I live near the swamp," replied Elnora. "Since it's so cleared I dare go around the edge in daytime, though we are still afraid at night."

"What have you collected?" asked the Bird Woman as she helped Elnora to luncheon.

"I am afraid I am bothering you for nothing and imposing on you," Elnora said. "That 'collected' frightens me. I've only gathered. I always loved everything outdoors, and so I made friends and playmates of them. When I learned that the moths die so soon, I saved them especially, because there seemed no wickedness in it."

"I have thought the same thing," said the Bird Woman encouragingly. "Then because the girl could not eat until she learned about the moths the Bird Woman asked Elnora if she knew what kinds she had.

"Not all of them," answered Elnora. "Before Mr. Duncan moved away he often saw me near the edge of the swamp, and he showed me the box he had fixed for Freckles and gave me the key. There were some books and things, so from that time on I studied and tried to take moths right, but I am afraid they are not what you want."

"Are they the big ones that fly mostly June nights?" asked the Bird Woman.

"Yes," said Elnora. "Great gray ones with reddish markings, pale blue, green, yellow with lavender and red and yellow."

"What do you mean by 'red and yellow?'" asked the Bird Woman so quickly that the girl almost jumped.

"Not exactly red," explained Elnora, with tremulous voice. "A reddish, yellowish brown, with canary colored spots and gray lines on their wings."

"How many of them?" It was the same quick question.

"Well, I had over 200 eggs," said Elnora, "but some of them didn't hatch, and some of the caterpillars died, but there must be at least a hundred perfect ones."

"Perfect! How, perfect?" cried the Bird Woman.

"I mean whole wings, no down gone and all their legs and antennae," faltered Elnora.

"Young woman, that's the rarest moth in America," said the Bird Woman solemnly. "If you have 100 of them they are worth $100, according to my list. I can use all that are whole."

"What if they are not pinned right?" quavered Elnora.

"If they are perfect that does not make the slightest difference. I know how to soften them so that I can put them into any shape I choose. Where are they? When may I see them?"

"They are in Freckles' old case in the Limberlost," said Elnora. "I could not carry many for fear of breaking them, but I could bring a few after school."

"You come here at 4," said the Bird Woman, "and we will drive out with some specimen boxes and a price list and see what you have to sell."

"Oh, I do need the money!" said Elnora.

"Do you live in that beautiful cabin at the northwest end of the swamp?" asked the Bird Woman.

"Yes," said Elnora.

"I remember the place and a story about it now. You entered the high school yesterday?"

"Yes."

"It was pretty bad?"

"Pretty bad!" echoed Elnora.

The Bird Woman laughed.

"You can't tell me anything about that," she said. "I once entered a city school straight from the country. My dress was brown calico and my shoes were quite heavy. What is your name, my girl?"

"Elnora Comstock," answered Elnora. "Yesterday on the board it changed to Cornstock, and for a minute I thought I'd die, but I can laugh over that already."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Presence Reassures All on the Cuban Isle

MAJ. GENERAL WOOD WANTED

Necessity of Intervention Is Disappearing—Presence of American Troops and Ships Has Reassuring Effect—Rebel Leader Wants U. S. Representative as Witness—Report General Ivonet Is Cornered

Washington, June 12.—The presence of American warships in Havana harbor may be regarded as greatly diminishing the likelihood of intervention in Cuba, according to the construction placed upon that fact by the administration. It is felt that the mere presence of the two warships will restrain the restless and excitable element of Havana. Secretary Knox, who all along has lost no opportunity of declaring against any purpose to intervene politically in Cuba unless absolutely driven to do so by the failure of the Cuban government to uphold the law and protect life and property, felt called upon to renew thta asurance to the Cuban people through Orests Ferrara, speaker of the Cuban house of representatives. And he also let it be known to the American people, not only that the United States does not contemplate intervention, but that he believed that the Cuban government would be able itself to suppress the insurrection.

The feeling is growing stronger here that Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff, would be the man to send to Cuba to settle the present troubles. It is pointed out here by those familiar with Cuba that he has the full confidence of every Cuban. It was further declared that the statement of General Estenoz, the rebel leader, several days ago, that he would not make peace with the government unless the settlement was witnessed by a representative of the United States, gives weight to the belief that General Wood is the man. However, the United States has taken no steps towards mediating in the present crisis.

General Ivonet, with 700 insurrectos, is said to be cornered about twelve miles from Sagua de Tanamo, on the north coast of Oriente. This information was received here through the American legation at Havana. It is believed here that the negro revolution in Oriente province will be short lived.

The Guantanamo and Western railroad reports the burning of the station, stores and dwellings at Carrera Larga, the cane dwellings and buildings at Renito, as well as the town of Palmar, near Jamaica. The American marines are apparently having the intended effect, for the messages add that estates given marine guards are quiet. The Atlantic Fruit company, in reporting the situation at Sama, declares that the Cuban government is making no effort to protect the company's property. The Nashville has landed marines at Woodfred for the protection of the Spanish-American Iron company's property.

Santiago, June 12.—A guide belonging to Captain Garriga's guerilla corps brought in to town a number of ears cut from negroes' heads. He was arrested and is to be tried by court martial.

CRASH AT CLINTON

Two Seriously Injured and Six Others Hurt In Railroad Wreck

Clinton, Mass., June 12.—Two persons were seriously injured, six others were hurt and about thirty passengers were badly shaken up when a passenger train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad crashed head-on into a freight train near the Union station here.

The most seriously injured were J. H. Garland of Marlboro, conductor of the passenger train, and John Morley, fireman. Conductor Garland suffered internal injuries, and at the hospital it was feared he might die. The fireman had both of his ankles broken and was badly cut and bruised.

The engines of both the passenger and freight trains were demolished, several of the freight cars were derailed and the mail car attached to the passenger train was thrown against a water tank. The front trucks of the forward passenger car left the track, but none of the other passenger coaches was derailed.

Commerce Court Abolished

Washington, June 12.—Only the signature of President Taft now is required to abolish the commerce court of the United States. The legislating out of existence of that tribunal, created only two years ago, and which the supreme court of the United States recently declared had exceeded its powers, finally and definitely was determined upon when the senate by a vote of 36 to 23 defeated an amendment to make provision for maintaining the court in the legislative executive and judicial appropriation bill.

STONE GOOD SAMARITAN

Son of Mayor Took Injured People to Hospital

LOCAL AUTOS FOR CHILDREN

Frank Stone, son of the Mayor, was a most welcome arrival at the scene of the trolley car accident on Massachusetts avenue, Boston, shortly after eight o'clock Tuesday morning. He was driving his father's automobile at the time and was on his way to participate in the automobile outing given to the poor children of Boston under the auspices of the Automobile Association.

There were no machines in the vicinity at the time and young Stone carried two of the men who were seriously injured, to the Boston City Hospital. He then proceeded to take part in the automobile procession. A large number of children were given a happy treat and Quincy automobile owners came in for their full share of credit for making the little ones happy.

The Quincy men who loaned their cars for the occasion included Mayor Eugene R. Stone, Representative Walter E. Piper, Charles Dow, Frank Chalmers, W. G. Shaw and Charles P. Gould.

For some unknown reason the horse took it into his head to run away. He ran into Depot street dragging the weight along with him. It looked as though he was going to go onto the railroad tracks but instead of so doing he turned in back of the old stable where he was captured none the worse for his episode.

BRAVES SAVED FROM WALLOPS

Police Base Ball Schedule Broken Up By Strike

The Massachusetts Police Baseball League has been compelled to suspend its schedule on account of the elevated strike. Cambridge, Somerville, Newton Chelsea and Everett are among the cities affected by the strike, and owing to the extra duty imposed on the officers, their superiors have found it impossible to grant them any time off to play baseball. They are also forbidden to leave their respective cities during the strike. The schedule will be re-arranged as soon as the strike is setled.

This probably has saved Burrell's Braves from their regular walloping the past few days.

CHOIR BANQUETTED

Mr. Davison acted as toast master, and at the close of the supper, called on Mr. Apollonio to say a word.

Mr. Apollonio read a poem in presenting a beautiful baton to his associate in music.

Mr. Ward responded in a very touching way, expressing his appreciation of the democratic spirit of the church and the hearty co-operation of the music committee and choir.

Deacon Blake said that when he first came to the church he was one of the bass singers, and that there was such an improvement now from the old days that the choir was a big attraction to the church, and their singing was such that it appealed to any who heard it.

Deacon French expressed his appreciation of the faithfulness of the singers, especially Miss Readand Miss Harding, who had sung for so many years.

Dr. F. W. Crawford said that the spirit of the church and choir had appealed to him from the very first time he came to town.

At the close of the evening's enjoyment the choir sang "Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem."

The committee in charge of the supper were Mrs. Sarah Butler, Mrs. Harry Read, Mrs. E. E. Willey, Mr. George Height, Jr, Mrs. Robert Harding, Mrs. B. F. Thomas, and Mrs. Roger Wilde.

BATHS AND PLAYGROUNDS.

Park Commissioner George E. Pfaffmann announces that the bath house in Ward Two will open, Monday, June 17 and the supervised playgrounds in Wards three and four will open Monday July 8.

WOULD RESCIND MOTION

Friends of General Wood and Others Will Make Fight In Senate

Washington, June 12.—A movement to have the senate reconsider its adoption of the army appropriation bill conference report which would legislate Major General Leonard Wood out of his office as chief-of-staff of the army was begun and gave promise of success.

Senator Martine promised to move for reconsideration if enough votes could be mustered to justify the action. Friends of General Wood claim they have been promised enough support to defeat the proposition when it comes up again.

HOUSE FAVORS TROLLEY MERGER

Senate Has Only One or Two Votes Balance

Trolley Merger Comes Before Senate Today

Boston, June 12.—Governor Foss' veto of the western trolley merger bill was overthrown in the house yesterday by a vote of 157 to 68 amid attacks upon the governor and a renewal of charges of a "deal" between the governor and the New Haven road.

The bill comes up in the senate this morning, where it hangs by a narrow margin of one or two votes.

Yesterday the foes of the governor went scouring through the state house archives for a precedent showing that a legislature may wind up its year's work without official action on the part of the governor. The best that could be done would be an adjournment from time to time. The governor could put an end to this by transmitting messages to the legislature which must be aced upon.

LUST OF BATTLE STIR QUAKERS

But it is in Peaceful Conflict They Would Engage

Here is an appeal preluded by an announcement of victory from the Quaker sent to the Editor. Can you beat it? If it is possible little Quakers you will have a chance to demonstrate your right to the juvenile championship on July Fourth as it is the unalienable right of every American boy to show his prowess in one way and another on that day. The subject will be presented to the managers of the celebration athletic games.

"The Quakers beat the Baysides by score of 16 to 6 on the Penn's Hill grounds.

Batteries—Bryon p, Desenso c, for Quakers. Hade p, and Griffin c for Baysides, umpire Smith.

Capt. J. Wren of the Quakers wants games with all 12 year old Base Ball teams in Quincy.

He wants to play his team in the junior games on July Fourth for the champion 12 year old nine of Quincy. Will your paper fix it with the 4th of July committee on games for us.

P. Bryon, manager
John Wren, captain."

SWEET GIRL GRADUATES OF WOODWARD RECEIVE PARCHMENTS

Eloquent and Instructive Address Delivered by Rev. Dr. Bush on Knowledge

The Pathway to Grander Possibilities in Their Future Lives Pointed to the Girls

With the applause of delighted friends ringing like sweet music in their ears the thirty graduates of the Woodward Institute received the diplomas which marked the completion of their prescribed course of study at that seat of learning in the hall of the building Wednesday night, from the hands of Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson chairman of the Board of trustees.

As the sweet girl graduates all dressed in white without a particle of coloring in their costumes, their cheeks flushed and rosy by the success which had marked their efforts culminating in the certificate denoting their departure from the institute they were looked upon with much pleasure by the hundred other pupils who anticipated some day standing upon the same platform and going through the same program.

THE WOODWARD INSTITUTE,
From Which Thirty Girls Graduated Wednesday Night.

It was a time of rapturous delight to the graduates, a period of anticipatory pleasure to those they left behind and a moment of pride to the friends and relatives who shared their triumphs.

Every available seat in the large hall was occupied.

ORDER OF EXERCISES.

The order of exercises for the evening was as follows:

Music by the school

After the audience had been seated, Miss Amy Fallon one of the graduates took her place at the piano and played a spirited march as the pupils of the school marched in and took their seats.

The front rows had been reserved for the graduates. A pause and then the graduates marched in and took their places amidst a very effective round of applause.

The first number was a chorus effort by the school under the direction of Mr. John D. Buckingham. As the fresh young voices swelled forth on the evening air, they seemed in perfect tune with nature which had done her best on this occasion to offer as her tribute weather of the most perfect kind, fitting in perfect harmony with the time and event. It was a thrilling, delightful chorus of perfect harmony and melody, creditable alike to pupils and director.

Miss Esther Dasha, one of the graduates contributed a vocal solo, a trio of sweet and harmonious songs in good voice and excellent expression. The young lady's powers as a vocalist were a revelation to her hearers. She mastered the most intricate voice movements, reaching the high notes without a tremor and they rippled and swelled through the hall in perfect melody and accord. Her voice is one of exceptional range and power for one so young and possesses great possibilities for future development.

Miss Amy Falion, another graduate performed on the piano, playing a most difficult selection of Liszt, with a confidence and power which stamped her as a piano soloist of no mean ability. Her touch interpretation of the music and technique were pleasing and showed power. While the selection was a difficult and long one there was no tremor or faltering from start to finish. It was a most delightful treat. She shared with good grace and most deservedly the musical honors of the evening with Miss Dasha.

The class then sang "Ave Marie," its sweet, tender, pleading cadence being carried along with exceptional skill and harmony.

"The Shepherd Lady," the last musical number was more lively and rollicking, yet rendered with the same power, intelligence and confidence. Miss Dasha had another opportunity to display her musical talent in the solo parts of this number which she did in a most creditable manner.

Each number was deserving of the generous applause it received. The appreciation of the audience was manifested in a manner which left no doubt as to the pleasure and gratification of those present.

The graduating class marched from the hall out through the corridor and made their appearance on the stage, for the final movement in this their last Woodward Institute day, through the door at the center, amidst another note of appreciation from the audience.

When they were seated, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D., and Principal Horace W. Rice took their places on the platform.

PRINCIPAL RICE.

Mr. Rice in introducing the speaker of the evening, said they were fortunate in having with them a gentleman whose experience in the schools of his own city made him a student of educational problems. A progressive man with ideas and a knowledge of the aims of education. He presented Rev. Dr. Bush to audience and class.

REV. DR. BUSH'S ADDRESS.

The address of Rev. Dr. Bush was a masterly effort, full of wisdom, sound common sense, suggestion for the future and an admonition to establish high ideals and live up to them. He emphasized the fact that "I can't" was never successful while "I will," indicated a perseverence and power to do things which seldom

HOUGHS NECKERS NOT IN FAVOR

Many of Them Oppose Purchase of Norteman Lot

DISCUSSED BY ASSOCIATION

There was a lively debate on the Norteman lot, the proposed playground site for the residents of Houghs Neck, at the meeting of the Houghs Neck associates Wednesday evening in Associates hall. Henry W. French, president of the improvement association was in the chair and was kept busy during the session of animated discussions.

An order is before the city council calling for an appropriation for the Norteman lot to be used for a playground and although no definite action either in favor or against the proposed site was taken by the associates, enough was said on the proposition to give evidence of the fact that the opposition seems to be stronger than the sentiment in favor of the lot.

A petition is in circulation against the lot and if the present arguments advanced continue to wax warm, it is not improbable that another situation, such as occurred when the people of Houghs Neck were divided on a school house site will be presented. Those in favor of the lot claim that it is most ideal, inasmuch as it can be used to advantage in both the summer and winter seasons.

Those in opposition to the lot claim that it is not a desirable piece of property and that it would entail an expenditure of thousands of dollars on the part of the city to place it in the proper condition. In addition the remonstrants say that there are a number of other places in Houghs Neck which are more suitable. The lot is the topic of much talk among the Houghs Neck residents and promises to give rise to many interesting developments.

PARK AND DOWNS CHURCH NOW DEDICATED TO THE WORK OF GOD

Energetic Pastor and Loyal Parishioners Witness Culmination of United Effort

Visiting Clergy Bring Greetings and Good Cheer from Other Churches and Congregations

The new Park and Downs Congregational church was formally dedicated on Wednesday evening in the presence of a large congregation. After several years of unceasing effort and sacrifice, under the personal direction of their energetic pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers, the loyal parishioners saw consummated the final act in their realization of a new building.

The afternoon exercises opened with a piano prelude by Miss Henrietta C. Gram and the singing of "Holy, holy, holy" by the congregation.

The church interior never looked more beautiful than in the quiet dusk of the afternoon, the few lights in the chancel adding a comforting glow to the exercises.

The floral decorations were beautiful, being arranged so as to harmonize with, but not conceal the architecture of the church. Along the altar rail were clusters of peonies and other cut flowers while behind the speakers' stand was clustered a large bank of green.

Owing probably to the threatening weather conditions and the time of day, the church was not packed, but a goodly number attended to hear the addresses and join in the services of the afternoon.

A large number of delegates was present from over the Suffolk South association which includes churches in Roxbury, Dorchester, Roslindale, Atlantic, Milton, Neponset and other surrounding neighborhoods.

The speakers included Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, pastor of Bethany Congregational church, Quincy; Rev. William Ewing D. D., of the Congregational Sunday School association; Rev. Asher Anderson D. D., secretary of the National Council of Congregational churches; and Rev. William E. Strong, D. D., of the American Board of Missionary associations.

On account of illness Rev. Edwin H. Byington pastor of the South Evangelical Church of West Roxbury was unable to attend. The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers.

Dr. Asher Anderson read the scriptures and delivered an ardent prayer of inspiration and progress.

Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott in delivering the first address of the afternoon brought the greetings of Bethany church. This was his first attendance at a dedication.

"Socially we are in the midst of a great unrest" said Mr. Willmott. "There are forebodings and people are fearful about the future.

"Into such an atmosphere we have been ushered and are to live—a condition of life that gives every thoughtful man and woman much anxiety.

"Into this the church is born and as we look on this church it seems to almost take on an aspect of personality for unto it are grafted the devotion and faith, the sacrifice and love of these men and women.

"In the language of St. Bernard What doest thou hear.' The day has a thousand cries for the church. A thousand men are calling upon you to sanction their program.

While the political problems of the community should be tackled it behooves the church not to be a catspaw to pull the burnt chestnuts out of the fire of political strife.

"There are demands on us as churches and it is well to recognize these functions. We represent something that no other organization can possibly represent. We can best minister to the life of any community by ministering that which is spiritual.

"We need a church that recognizes Christ as the Redeemer. Any church that does not minister to the lost, the weak, the fallen, does not deserve the name of church. We need a church that stands for the God of new beginnings."

Taking for his subject, "The work of the Sabbath school." Dr. Ewing remarked upon the provision that had been made for teaching the young in this beautiful new structure.

The Sunday school however should not be over emphasized. There is nothing more helpful than to have a child present in a worshipping congregation of adults. Here the youth of the land may be taught reverence for parental authority, reverence for the law of the state, reverence for the laws of Almighty God."

Dr. Anderson congratulated the congregation upon the fulfillment of its dreams. "I am not a prophet, nor yet the son of a prophet," said he, "but I will say that inside of ten years you will be selling this property to another denomination and building a larger house of worship for a larger parish that this house will not be able to hold.

"This parish is capable of many immense possibilities and there is no reason why the Park and Downs Congregational church should not be the cathedral church of Wollaston."

Dr. Anderson brought greetings of fellowship from 6048 Congregational churches and 738,000 members of the Congregational faith in the United States.

Speaking on "The larger fellowship" he mentioned Autonomy and Fellowship as two things to be kept in mind by his audience as Congregationalists.

Autonomy is the right inhering in the local church to administer its own affairs.

It is the outgrowth of the spirit that fought with kings and church dignitaries and planted its faith on the soil of Massachusetts.

Fellowship was referred to by Dr. Anderson as the larger word. The fellowship between one church and another was dealt with as was that of minister and parish.

Dr. Strong in speaking on "The larger service" told of missionary work for the cause in other lands.

"In these days," said the speaker, "when so much is said of the decadence of the church it is a good thing to be reminded by such occasions as this dedication, that the church is still with us and growing in the world.

"The Eastern religions are governed by fear. It is the fellowship of service to lift that pall of fear and to show through Jesus Christ the loving face of the Heavenly Father."

Dr. Strong told of the many new churches being built solely by the natives in Turkey and other eastern countries. In closing he urged a fuller conception of the gospel.

Between the addresses, congregational singing was indulged in and solos were rendered by Mrs. S. J. Ripley entitled "The Lord is mindful of his own" and "Oh rest in the Lord." She was accompanied by Miss Henrietta C. Gram.

At 5.30 a delicious supper was served in the vestry to visiting clergymen, delegates and others. The tables were resplendent with bunches of different colored fleur de lis.

A large committee of the combined women's societies attended, headed by Mrs. Alonzo Bissett and Mrs. James D. Willson.

The committee was composed of Mrs. L. I. Mosman, Mrs. J. A. Zwicker, Mrs. A. R. Muir, Mrs. Louis Shay, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Baxter, Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Mrs. Letson and Miss Marion Brown; assisted by Mrs. A. W. Ryder, Mrs. F. C. Knowlton, Mrs. Charles Richardson, Mrs. C. A. Boynton, Miss Fannie Fraser, Mrs. Charles L. Gilliatt, Mrs. Arthur F. Capen, Mrs. Fred Robinson, Mrs. J. A. Boone, Mrs. Fred Bussler, Mrs. E. S. Lyons and Mrs. A. J. Podbury.

The evening service opened at 7.30 with a piano prelude by Miss Emily Bjorkman followed by the processional of the vested choir.

This was composed of Mrs. S. M. X. Tanner, director, Miss Geraldine Scott, Miss Hazel Jones, Miss Clara Mansfield, Miss Ethel Turner, Miss Marion Hicks, Miss Nellie Palmer, Mrs. J. A. Zwicker, Miss Hazel Henry, Miss Stella Henry, Miss Miriam Breen, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Lena Kilpatrick, Miss Cummings, Miss Lydia O'Neil, Miss Myrle Daniels, Miss Marie Brown, Miss Ethel Axberg, Dr. J. A. Zwicker, Charles Richardson, Allen Painten, Artemus Dingwell, Charles A. Tanner.

Responsive reading was lead by the pastor Rev. William B. Ayers. Rev. Thomas W. Davison of the Memorial Church, Atlantic read the scriptures and delivered an inspiring invocation. The choir responded.

A selection by the choir "The King of love my shepherd is" with Mrs. S.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Bryan wanted it 16 to 1. Roosevelt had to be satisfied with only 18 to 1 of the Kentucky district delegates.

Lillian Russell is again a bride. It is no novel venture now for the fair Lillian as she has embarked many times on the sea of matrimony.

She still has a chance to equal the record of a woman who took for better or worse her sixth husband the other day.

And now the hello girls are on the verge of a strike. What would we all do if they all left the switch?

Dynamite is figuring in the Boston car strike. It now remains to be proven that it was not planted.

Every one will commend the efforts of the State Board of charities to starve out the fake charity leeches.

A walk across the library grounds from the court house to the post office would be a great convenience and would not detract from the beauty of the library surroundings.

Given a choir master's baton in verse is another form of presenting a club rhythm.

May Yohe may not be able to get an engagement but she has not forgotten the art of free advertising and keeping her name before the public.

It was a demure Mrs. Tom Pierce etc., who figured in the New York court the other day for kicking out a window of a taxi and creating a scene in Maxims. In Salem she carried everything before her but somehow in New York the high jinks of this kind can be carried too far even for a cafe proprietor.

The Woodward girls bid adieu to their alma mater yesterday. They appreciate the bounty of the worthy donor of the school.

It is rather a sad spectacle to see the Adams Academy silent and deserted with so many school children passing to and fro in front of it each day.

Big Bill Barnes and Bill Flinn will make two picturesque figures on the floor of the National convention. If the worst comes to the worst one would like to know who will be the third man in the ring.

If McHarg one of the Roosevelt managers is quoted correctly about the possible gunmen episode in the Republican national convention, he talks like a primary school boy. It brings to mind a picture in one of the funny papers some time ago of two children with handkerchiefs over their faces approaching the bedside of their mother with the startling announcement "We's mas'd burdlers, where do you teep the suder bowl."

Another screech from Oyster bay.

FOR SECOND PLACE.

Here it is within only a few short days of the two great party conventions and hardly a squeak has been heard about the second place on either ticket. No one has heard any one offer or suggest the name of James S. Sherman the present vice president for the runner up position on the republican ticket, Senator Borah was mentioned by the Roosevelt wing, but he promptly shut off the boom that some would start for him.

The second place on the Republican ticket it is accepted as a foregone conclusion will be filled to meet the circumstances which may develop.

If Roosevelt wins it will be good bye to James Schoolcraft as it would hardly do to have both candidates from the same state. With the Taft element in control it would be policy to nominate Sherman or some other strong Republican from the Empire state. Would Root accept it? It hardly seems possible. Still in case the party and managers demanded it he might sink his personal feelings in an effort to maintain the integrity of the party.

Some one has come forward with the proposition that the Democrats put the name of the man having the second largest number of votes for President on the second place on the ticket. That might be an easy way out of the dilemma but would the man seeking the first place be content to play the second fiddle to a more successful candidate? At any rate both sides are so absorbed in the big show that they have little time or inclination to permit their thoughts to wander to something else except it be in the concoction and launching of schemes to beat the other fellow for first place.

WALK ACROSS LIBRARY GROUNDS.

Some folks may object to it, but viewing the matter from a convenience standpoint there could be little objection to a concrete walk across the Thomas Crane Public Library grounds from Coddington street to Washington, the terminals at points opposite the new court and post office buildings respectively. If this should not meet with general approval it could be modified to have the walk start from Coddington street and proceed to a point where it would intersect the walk now extending from the library building to Washington street. Either of those plans would prove of great convenience and save many steps.

At present in going from the court house to the post office or vica versa one has to proceed around the Insurance building or make the circuit of the library grounds.

Such a walk would not injure any one. It would not mar the beauty of the library grounds, indeed it would seem to give it a more perfect balance than it has at present with an immense green sward on one side of the main walk to the library building and a jib piece ont he other. Such a walk would give symmetry and balance to the fine green expanse which is lacking now. There is no one but will agree to the convenience it would prove to thousands of people every day in the year. An expression of public sentiment on the proposition will do no harm.

THIRTY PRIZES FOR PARADE

The Ward Six people are planning a fine celebration for the Fourth. The big parade will be the feature of the day and thirty cash prizes will be offered for the prettiest, most original and funniest features. Organizations or individuals may enter. PRESIDENTS' HILL.

There seems to be a lively demand for real estate in the city, not only for investment but for permanent homes. The Presidents' Hill Land Co., reports much activity in their holdings on Presidents' hill, hardly a day passing without a call from prospective buyers. The sightly location and restrictions on the land make it the most desirable in the city and it is only a question of a short time when all the lots will be sold and the hill covered with beautiful estates.

failed. But why attempt to convey impressions of his thoughts, ideas and advice to those young women. The address speaks for itself. It is worthy of perusal and consideration. After expressing his pleasure at being present and congratulating Quincy upon having schools which had produced presidents he said:

"If we search out the choicest expressions of sentiment in our American literature, many of these cluster about the 'little old red school house.'

"And such expressions tell of the joys of young life: the games and sports we shared before our playgrounds were usurped by the mill or factory or busy marts of trade.

"But they speak also a deeper and more significant language. They voice our conviction of the wisdom of our enormous expenditures for our public schools;—our justification of those who established our system of compulsory education and our feeling that knowledge adds to the joy of our individual lives and contributes to the public welfare.

"The early colonists of New England placed great emphasis upon education. It is wonderfully significant that so early Harvard College was founded at Cambridge and 'William and Mary' in Virginia.

"Most of the pioneers who open up new lands are merely seekers after wealth but those who came to these shores were in search of something other than material gain. Many of them were college graduates who brought their libraries with them. What they desired most was liberty and they were convinced that knowledge was essential to the attaining of their ideals and the ends they had in view. Since their day we have gone forward in the path they marked out for us with marvellous success. We have placed our nation in the forefront and amassed unparalleled wealth and waked the admiration and envy of all the world.

"But we have come in our day to the most crucial age and condition since the dawn of time. Our system of education is for the most part responsible for what we behold and it is a most wonderful state of affairs. There is no noise or strife but a new influence has been set in motion which has already reached Japan and Russia and even Turkey and China and in time it will shake every kingdom and try the stability of our own Republic.

"And as we begin to apprehend to what we have been leading and take note of the dangers that confront us many grow faint hearted and think that other times were better than our own. They imagine they would rather have lived in Greece in the days of Pericles; or in Rome in the fulness of her glory; or in England in the Elizabethan era or in France in the age of Napoleon, or in Italy when her master painters and sculptors wrought with consummate skill.

"But not so for me. I might wish for reincarnation a thousand years from now but I find no golden ages in the past. Neither am I suspicious of modern school methods, although the whole system has been changed in these later years. True the higher standards of the colleges press down upon our High schools and the grades and make our problem a difficult one, but we have better text books and more rational instruction than ever before. Naturally there is much criticism of our modern schools and criticism is good when it comes from those who really know what they are talking about but in most cases it is from those who are not conversant with what is being done and a city or town is fortunate when even its School Board has any adequate grasp upon the problems with which it is dealing.

"The modern system is often characterized as one of Fads and it may be so in certain cases, but these are the exception.

"It is affirmed that we cover too much ground and everything is spread out thin, but we have only to examine our pupils to find that they know far more than we did when we were at the same stage and that the more scientific use of time and material enables them to take more subjects and yet cover them thoroughly.

"But most urgent perhaps is the complaint that our graduates go forth with too extravagant ideas of what they are to be and do. There are multitudes who smile at their anticipations or sneer at their dreams. But while we who are older know there will be much to dampen the ardor of youth, yet the hope of the world is in those very dreams 'Where there is no vision the people perish.'

"I would pray that I might never wake longings and expectations which should serve in any way to rob one of the joy of life. I would guard the young from being puffed up with the pride of a little knowledge. I would free them from the idea that fame and fortune will come from simply rubbing an Aladdin's lamp.

"There may be possible exceptions, but the law of life is that each, in the long run—gets about what he or she has earned or merited. The greatest genius is the capacity for hard work. It is better to trust to Faithfulness than to Fortune. He who is not adding to he betterment of the world is a vagrant.

"But I lay it down as abundantly proven that there is far more of unhappiness and failure resulting from lack of high ideals than from overwearing ambition. There is none can tell what heights he is capable of reaching, and in this land that counts neither color nor creed there is abundant chance for each.

"Yet notwithstanding our privileges, many fail to apprehend and lay hold of their opportunities and it would be well if we might rouse the egotism in hosts of people. 'I can't' is a weakling but 'I will' can do wonders.

"And we ought not to consider simply our own personal well being and emolument. It is truly said that in our day individualism has run mad. We need to recognize that each of us is a part of a community—a state—a nation—that we are mutually interdependent and each owes something to those around him.

"And I would point out to you that in our modern times we are threatened most by a lack of obedience to law and order arising from the failure to show deference to what is traditional and sacred and it is in this field that education must accomplish most.

"And simply to enlarge the field of knowledge—simply to teach facts and figures is not enough. France tried this and bred a race of criminals. Neither is a merely technical acquisition sufficient. There is much in the modern call for the 'Practical',—the education of the hands, with which I am in closest sympathy, yet there is a phase of 'commercialism' connected with it—a tendency to jump at what yields most just that minute, but shuts out the chance for better things.

"We today are altogether too eager to get at money making. We need to learn that there is something more valuable than gold. And the present situation in our land demands wise attention but it need not be considered as hopeless. Great hosts have mistaken License for Liberty, but Communism, Nihilism and Atheism are only transient. Our public schools will after a while make clear the meaning and use of Freedom and convert our incomers into patriotic citizens.

"For above all the best product of education is Character. What we are making first, last, and all the time, is true and worthy men and women.

"We have reason to be proud that in our land the schools first opened to the masses. Fundamental, free people, must know something. To the knowledge of facts must be added Moral Incentive—the spur to Integrity—to Fraternity and to Righteousness for there is no true success in business life and no perpetuity of our national institutions except with all our getting we acquire the wisdom to which Solomon directed of old.

"And now young lady graduates of this Institute I come to you with an expression of hearty congratulation. Knowledge is joy, the companionship of great minds of all ages. Knowledge is power. Without it no one can be truly great. Lincoln is an example which points to us the way to greatness. Many without schooling have become great. Yes, but they have not become great without knowledge. Knowledge is a virtue. Socrates proclaimed that at least it leads to virtue. Knowledge brings responsibility.

"For what the city and state have done for you, you owe them something..

"This is a woman's age. All fields are open to her. But the best attainment is true womanhood. And true womanhood means true motherhood. I cannot do better than say to you what Burns has so aptly written: 'The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world.'

"Pure sweet womanhood is the highest attainment. The future of our country will be shaped by its homes. There is nothing greater or more potent than motherhood. A pure sweet womanhood and motherhood represents the greatness of our country.

"Your education is not finished. It is only just begun. You have passed this milestone. There are others further on. You are never fully educated until all the virtues and graces of character are developed to the utmost. And in this closing I wish you Godspeed in the attainment of what is good and womanly." (Great applause.)

REV. ADELBERT L. HUDSON

Rev. Adelbert Lathrop Hudson, chairman of the board, in conferring diplomas on the graduating class, reminded the graduates that their education was not finished; rather it was just the beginning.

"From this Institute," he said, "you are graduating into the larger school of life, where you will face a grim old master called 'Experience.' He has won for himself a hard name; but, harsh and disagreeable as he is, I want to say for him that, in the long run and upon the whole, he will impose upon you the very lessons you most need, and will give you just about such wants as you desire.

"If you have caught the real spirit of your instruction here, and have understood that the most important lesson this or any other school can teach you is the supreme value of character, you will have no trouble with your new teacher but will be fitted in that larger school you enter today, to win those permanent prizes which are the sure reward of noble womanhood."

He called the name of each graduate and as she stepped forward to receive from his hands the coveted parchment, each one was greeted with a round of applause.

THE GRADUATES.

The girls receiving diplomas were—Mary Perkins Beal, Esther Elizabeth Beckford, Mary Carmel Brogan, Martha Helen Burch, Frances Gertrude Cain, Helen Louise Croucher, Esther Helen Dasha, Emily Mary Dinegan, Amy Elizabeth Fallon, Mary Ellen Finn, Eva Mildred Frazier, Elizabeth Mary Golden, Marion Gertrude Green, Grace Hazel Hunter, Edith Marie Kolstad, Alice Lakin, Mary Alice LeCount, Ruth Irene McConnell, Lillian Eleanor McDonnell, Miriam Lee Miller, Alma Sophie Nelson, Mary Frances O'Brien, Mildred Turner Polk, Jeanie Cameron Russell, Bertha Elizabeth Schultz, Harriet Waterhouse, Marion Adlene White, Ella Maude Whitehead, Marion Loring Whitmarsh, Irene Dyer Williams.

The graduating exercises were most successfully carried out. All the details were attended by the most minute care and attention.

The exercises closed the school girls marched out and later the audience departed, many however making a trip to the second floor to inspect the exhibit of drawing and needle work in rooms five and six.

The platform was decorated with a fringe of potted palms and ferns.

Over the entrance an American flag was draped and at the back of the stage so that every one could behold it was a fine picture of Ebenezer Woodward, the man whose generosity made the founding of the school possible.

The following young ladies of the class formed an efficient corps of ushers making it their business to see that everyone was comfortably seated before the exercises opened:—

Edith Ames, head usher, Lucy Waite Margaret Goodspeed, Margaret Reed, Ethel Thomas, Alta Grant, Dorothy Lavery, Natalie Scott, Katherine Merrill.

ERROR OF MIND AND BROKEN ANKLE

Christian Scientist Suddenly Remembers Her Faith

Philadelphia, June 13.—Vehemently insisting that she was a Christian Scientist, Mrs. Elizabeth Dunsel, 61 years old,, walked out of the Roosevelt hospital after signing her own release, and limping perceptibly from the effects of a broken ankle, hobbled up the street on one good foot.

When Mrs. Dunsel fell she was at first unable to rise, but later went to the hospital. Dr. Floyd Bryant found the woman had a bad fracture of the ankle, applied the necessary treatment and sent her to bed.

After a few hours repose between the sheets, Mrs. Dunsel suddenly bethought herself that she was a Christian Scientist. She called the nurse and informed her that her ankle was not broken, and the supposed trouble in that portion of her anatomy was merely an error of mind.

Finally, when Dr. Bryant could not restrain Mrs. Dunsel, nor prevent her from leaving the hospital, he caused her to sign her own release and permitted her to go.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

Today was the closing school day for the grades throughout the city and masters and teachers have been busy throughout the day attending to the necessary promotions, making up the records, caring for the text books, filling out the necessary returns for the school department office and the numberless minor matters that are incident to the closing down of the school system for the long vacation.

Friday morning at 8 o'clock the 460 graduates from the grammar schools will assemble at the high school for the final rehearsal and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the graduation exercises will take place.

At the exercise assistant superintendent J. E. Burke of Boston will deliver the address to the class and the parents. Many of the graduating classes are leaving behind them or the school a picture or some other gift in the name of the class.

In some instances exercises are also to be held in the school house as well as the union exercises in the High school hall.

The new division lines that have been established between some school districts in the north end of the city will relieve conditions at the Quincy school materially for the time being as more than 200 pupils will be taken away and placed in the new Montclair district.

This year the graduating class at the Quincy school is the largest in the history of the city with the Wollaston class close second.

As the Atlantic district is growing rapidly and it is quite likely that in two or three years the Quincy school will be filled even more. Just what the conditions will be at the Massachusetts Fields school it is difficult to foretell.

Only a small part of this district was taken away and it is not unlikely that the normal growth of the district during the summer may compel the school committee to take some further action in the fall to secure the desired relief.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The Quincy High school graduation will come on Wednesday evening of next week, at eight o'clock. There will be essays by four of the students from the senior class as follows: "A Parcels Post for United States," by Chester K. Allen, "Quincy of the Future," by Oswald Reinhalter, "Practical American Girl," by Olive Barnicoat, "Glimpses of Girls Over the Seas," by Elizabeth Howard.

Professor Marshall L. Perrin of Boston University will deliver the address to the senior class.

Mr. John L. Miller, chairman of the school committee will present the diplomas to the graduates.

The other functions pertaining to graduation will be held as usual.

CODDINGTON SCHOOL.

Tuesday afternoon the pupils of the sixth grade presented a dramatized version of "William Tell," before the assembled school. The sketch comprising five scenes, portraying the struggle of the Swiss for freedom from Austrian oppression was much enjoyed by the audience. The historic scene in which William Tell shoots an apple from the head of his son was loudly applauded. The children taking part were enthusiastic and showed good dramatic feeling.

The Class of 1912 of the Coddington school had a delightful outing Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert Reed, Adams shore.

The class took the 3 o'clock car and proceeded to Mrs. Reed's house where she received them. They played games on the beach, and then ice cream and cake were served on the veranda.

After this followed a presentation of presents to Miss Whitcher and Mr. Perkins by the pupils. Miss Whitcher's present consisted of a straw suitcase which was presented in behalf of the class by Veronica Cheverie, vice president. Mr. Perkins received a humidor which was presented by the president, Leon Biganess.

A short business meeting followed in which a vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Reed for her kindness and to Mrs. Cyrus Sherman for making a beautiful class cake.

The committee in charge of affairs consisted of Lester Jones, Joseph McDonald, Mabel Jilbert, Isabel Crane and Isther Mahoney.

At the close of the business meeting Leon Biganess, presided at the piano and rendered several selections much to the enjoyment of all.

A most interesting game of ball in which the boys and girls participated was enjoyed.

Everybody had a most delightful time and the last meeting of the class of 1912 will long be remembered by all.

THE CLASS PICTURE.

It is a custom every year for the graduating class to leave a picture of some kind to the school.

This year the Class of 1912 left a large, handsomely hand colored picture of Washington's home at Mt. Vernon.

The picture is a most beautiful piece of work and adds greatly to the adornment of the room. It is now hanging in the Eighth Grade room.

THE STEREOPTICON

The Stereopticon which the school purchased has been used this year a great deal by the school.

The eighth grade has used it in connection with history and geography.

The teacher has shown views of all parts of the world. This week pictures of New England were shown The closing pictures which were shown Wednesday were on the White Mountains.

POST OFFICE 50 YEARS AGO

L. S. Richards a Minor Conducted the Office in 1852

The address of Charles L. Hammond Postmaster of Quincy, before the Quincy club a short time ago reminds us of Lysander S. Richards, now living at Marshfield Hills, Mass., who was act-postmaster of Quincy over half a century ago, from 1852 to 1854. He was oo young, being a minor, to have it carried on in his name, hence his father's friend, Francis Williams of Quincy, doing business in Boston, was appointed. But Mr. Wlliams had nothing to do but sign his name to official returns once in three months to be sent to Washington by young Richards. At that time there was only five or six thousand inhabitants.

The expenses at that time, including Richard's salary and rent of office was less than a thousand dollars. At first the office was located in the town hall building, lower floor, on the street corner opposite the Hancock tavern, occupied now by the town clerk. The expenses in carrying on the post office now, the postmaster has said, is about forty thousand dollars.

The office afterwards was moved into the little building lately occupied by John Holden's jewelry store. A half century ago there was only one delivery office at the center, except at Quincy Point, and their mail bag went first for delivery at the Central office. At that time the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance company was organized and that office and the old Granite bank sent out the largest lot of letters. Five cents was the postage on letters, ten cents from California.

The Quincy Savings' bank was then located in Josiah Brigham's store, where now the Quincy Ledger office is located. The late Israel Munroe was treasurer and the late Horace Spear assistant. The late John C. Randall was cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank and Josiah Brigham succeeded Lemuel Brackett, grandfather of the present Jeffrey Brackett. Lysander Richards, father of Lysander S. was the first president of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance company and was succeeded by William S. Morton, Esquire. A Mr. Bates was secretary and was succeeded by the late Charles A. Howland who was Mr. Bates' assistant.

CHURCH DEDICATED

M. X. Tanner in the solo part was followed by a prayer of thanksgiving repeated by the congregation in unison. A hymn followed.

A long and fervent prayer of dedication was raised by Rev. B. F. Hamilton, D. D. in which he prayed for the futherance of the aims of the church. A solo "Consolation" by Mendelssohn was sung by Arthur F. Capen.

The act of dedication, taken part in jointly by the pastor and congregation, proved a most impressive ceremony in which all consecrated themselves anew to the high ideals for which the church stood.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow," was sung with a new fervor and meaning as the act of dedication came to a close.

A solo by Arthur F. Capen, "How amiable are Thy dwellings" was followed by an address from Henry T. Richardson, representing the Congregational Church Union of Boston and vicinity.

Mr. Richardson had the pleasant task of bringing the greetings and congratulations of the sister churches. He said: "The work of the church was a common work not an individual work and the sooner the churches realized it the better.

"The work of the Congregational Church Union was described by the speaker. The local church should realize the larger field of service opened up by the new building.

"The real test of efficiency however does not depend on a handsome or poor church, beautiful or simple singing, brilliant or ordinary preaching. Given the spirit of service and ministration and the others do not count for much."

"Pray for the peace of Jerusalem," a selection by the choir, with solo part by Charles Tanner was given and an offering was taken for the building fund.

"Is religion a permanent or passing epoch in human life?" questioned Rev. Clarence A. Vincent D. D. of Roxbury in the sermon of dedication.

"Will religion pass away like the fire before the Indian's tepee, or will it like that same fire reappear in a thousand ways more effective?

"In other words is it worth while to build a church and in so doing are you making a permanent contribution to human society?

"Will education ever take the place of religion? The modern educator will tell you education rests on three fundamentals: a teachable spirit, man's talents to be used to their best advantage, the person to be kept in the presence of the best.

"What are these principles but points in religion. What is the teachable spirit but the reverent one; what is the second but the teaching of responsibility. Do we not hear the last preached from the pulpit every Sunday?

"If true religion passed from the earth education would die or become the servant of greed or hate.

"If education is not to take the place of religion cannot science? All science is based upon two principles—the unity of the human race and the principle that all things are for use.

"These two principles unity and use mean a mind behind and this mind means God, and so all modern science lies in religion and could not do without it.

"If science is not to take the place of true religion cannot sociology? If there is anything we want it is love and care for one's neighbor.

"Beneath this work for others there is a certain principle, the value of human nature. What is this but the religious belief that God made man in his own image.

"If we blot out religion, humanitarianism would die. It doesn't go deep enough to keep itself alive.

"Will modern morality ever take the place of true religion? Back of this there are three principles—that of conscience, that the universe is moral at its core and that each individual has a responsibility for others.

"What is the first of these but the religious principle of the spirit of God moving in man, and the second but the doctrine of the kingdom of God. The third you hear constantly from the pulpit.

"These principles are all Christian principles—the things emphasized by Jesus. It has taken Jesus Christ 1900 years to make education, science, sociology and ethics responsive to his spirit but no one can tell what the future may bring forth.

"He who lives 25 years will see more reforms and will see more accomplished than in the last century.

"Here is the nature of the churches work. With such a wealth of experience they should not do less but more.

"The primary work of a church is to lay the foundation. But it is not enough to teach in Sunday schools and proclaiming a high standard of morality.

"You should lead people to dedicate their lives in serving God and bringing in the kingdom of Heaven on earth.

"When the church of Jesus steps off and lives we will have the solution of the whole problem. You may make a multitude of laws but we must have the spirit that carries them out:

"The time to lay the foundation is in childhood. The prime business of the church is to bring men in relation with God.

"You should lay the foundation for individual and social life then no matter what changes may come you can make no mistake.

"God, Christ, faith, love, righteousness and the eternal love will always be the same. If the church stands for that type of religion creeds may change but the church will make no mistake and the building in this community will be on a permanent foundation."

The hymn and recessional "Onward Christian Soldiers" closed the service and the benediction was pronounced by the pastor.

YOUTHFUL TRAVELLER.

Quincy people, were interested in reading about a Walter Ramsay, 10 years of age, purporting to belong in Quincy, and who has the reputation of having made two voyages to India from London and several across the Atlantic He has been credited with being the son of a Quincy man but all investigation has failed to reveal any family by the name of Ramsay living in Quincy

A family by that name did live in Wollaston at one time but moved away years ago. The youthful traveller arrived on the SS Numidian this week and it was said that upon landing he came to Quincy to visit his father. Evidently the statements have been misleading as no one in Quincy seems to know the lad who has travelled a distance of 30,000 miles over the briny deep at the age of ten years.

One of the features in the parade at Abington today will be that of William Cashman of Quincy. Wednesday afternoon Mr. Cashman pased through Quincy on his way to Abington with his exhibit. It was drawn by six large and handsome bay horses each of which must have weighed in the vicinity of 1700 pounds.

In addition to the team of six horses there were two handsome horses of about the same weight that will be used as outriders. The team was photographed in City Square.

ONE SERIOUS ACCIDENT ON 'L'

Car Jumps Switch and Eight Persons Are Injured

DOUBLE PAY FOR LOYALISTS

Report Current Men on Night Cars Are Armed—More Strike Breakers Arrive, Totalling 1500—Union Men Will Run Barges—Cars Running on All Lines and Night Service Given—Uunion Sympathizers to Walk

Boston, June 13.—A collision caused by an open switch on Dudley street, which resulted in the serious injury of eight boy students of the Mechanic Arts high school of whom seven were rushed to the City hspital, while many other men, women and boys required the attendance of physicians before returning to their homes, was the only serious disturbing feature of the strike the past twenty-four hours.

Unionists have made arrangements to run barges from South Boston and from Roxbury to transport those who have declared a boycott on the Elevated until the strike is settled.

According to several of the Elevated strike breakers all of the imported men are armed at night. In addition every car has five or six so-called "gun men" riding as passengers to protect the crew in case of violence.

"We are not looking for any trouble," said one of them, "but we are not ducking it."

The regular men who have remained loyal to the company are getting double pay and each one had a present of $5 given to him yesterday, pay day. Strike breakers are getting $3.50 and $4 a day according to whether they sleep in car barns or not.

Two strike breakers were found guilty of assaulting a starter at the Fields Corner barn in the Dorchester police court. The trouble arose over the number of fares collected. Both were placed on probation.

More strike breakers to take the place of the Boston Elevated conductors and motormen who are out for higher wages and better working conditions, continue to come to Boston from New York. This makes more than 500 strike breakers who have arrived here since Sunday, and a total of about 1500 since the strike began.

William H. Shandberg, arrested for conspiracy to place dynamite on the car tracks on Commonwealth avenue, pleaded not guilty before Judge Barnard in the Brighton municipal court. He was held in $5000 and his case continued for a hearing June 20.

Cars are running on all lines. On most the service is the best yet since the strike began, according to passengers. In the Cambridge subway only two car trains are running in place of the usual three or four car trains, however.

Quiet prevails throughout the city and there are fewer distburbances than usual. All night cars were operated for the first time since the strike began.

The executive board of the Boston C. L U. has issued an appeal requesting the 80,000 union men who work in Boston to refrain from riding on the cars of the Elevated company until the strike is settled. They also ask the families of union men to keep off the cars and use the railroad trains or walk.

Although the legislature turned down two resolves calling for an investigation of the strike, an effort will be made by officials of Boston unions to force the law-makers to take the matter up. Plans are under way to call a general mass meeting of Boston citizens on the common at which time the legislature may be petitioned to investigate the strike.

Heavy Rain In Alaska Create Sulphuric Acid Which Burns

Cordova, Alaska, June 13.—Although six days have passed since the Katamai volcano burst forth in eruption there has been little relief here from the volcanic smoke and ashes which hang low over the mountains.

The first real danger here from the volcanic action was made apparent when a heavy rain began to fall, the water mixing with the ashes in the air forming sulphuric acid which burned painfully whenever it came in contact with any one's face or hands.

Before the cause was realized many persons received painful burns in the eyes, although none were severely injured. Analysis of the drinking water showed that it contained sulphuric acid, and physicians directed householders to use lime water as a counter irritant.

Failure of Dock Strike

MINISTERIAL REPORT UPHELD

Beaupre Sustained By Cable of Admiral Osterhaus

TASK OF POLICING A LONG ONE

Officials at Washington Believed Beaupre Exaggerated—Fleet Admiral's Views Coincide With Reports Made—Various Auxiliaries Ordered to Support Fleet—Cuban Government Asserts Fake Rumors Afloat—Guantanamo is Threatened

Washington, June 13.—Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, who is now in Havana on board his flagship, the Washington, has cabled that, in his judgement, the Cuban situation is very threatening and it would be advisable for him to remain at Havana for the present. The report, which he makes after investigation, is regarded here of importance, because it indorses the previous reports sent here by Arthur M. Beaupre, the American minister, which suddenly have become the target of sharp criticism.

Senor Antonio Martin Rivero, the Cuban minister here; Senor Orestes Ferrara, speaker of the Cuban house of representatives; William Sulzer, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the house, and members of the state foreign relations committee here have united in declaring their belief that Mr. Beaupre was sending alarmist and exaggerated information to Washington.

Naval officers are clearly of the opinion that their task of policing eastern Cuba will be a long one, for the orders show that colliers are being made ready to carry coal and other supplies to the vessels in Cuban waters sufficient to meet their needs for many weeks to come. The collier Hector is scheduled to leave Hampton Roads next Monday for Key West, and the Celtic is under orders to leave Boston within a fortnight. The gunboat Petrel, en route from New Orleans, will receive orders at Key West to proceed to some Cuban port. Aside from these vessels, the navy department does not contemplate ordering any more ships to Cuba unless the disorders should extend. That this, however, may be the case is indicated by a report from the commander of the gunboat Paducah that great uneasiness exists at Santiago and vicinity, while the reports of the early day were of ominous movements on the part of the insurrectos and of appeals for help from plantation owners.

From one source came a rumor that touched the integrity of the Cuban government, to the effect that Cuba itself had fostered the insurrection for certain political purposes, but that the movement had now gotten beyond its control. The state department declares it knows nothing to confirm this rumor, but it is certain that the report is finding wide circulation on the south coast of Cuba.

Santiago, June 13.—The headquarters of Colonel Machado, commanding the Cuban troops, and Lieutenant Colonel Lucas, commanding the marines at Guantanamo, have been fired upon the last two nights. The troops are kept under arms in the expectation of an attack, which, however, has been confined to desultory firing. The mayor of Guantanamo has received a letter from the rebel leader, Estenoz, declaring his intention to burn the city. A skirmish has occurred near Lamaya, in which two rural guards were killed. Trains from the Guantanamo district are crowded with refugees.

The demands for the marines to guard the vardious foreign properties are so great that the marine band was detailed for guard duty at Guantanamo. A large number of Porto Ricans who have been employed on the plantations in this district have taken refuge at Santiago. They are in a destitute conditon.

A detachment of government troops fought a battle wth the insurgents near El Cobre, ten miles to the west of this city. The rebels were defeated, losing ten killed. The government troops are now pursuing the insurgents.

FLOWERED ORGANDIE FOR MID-SUMMER

Robespierre Collars are a Feature of the Present Fashions

RUFFLES AND FRILLS TO THE FORE

An interesting bit of information about women's clothes which leaked recently from the rooms of an exclusive dressmaker was that the lovely flowered organdies are to be worn again and that numbers of them are being made up for those smart women who like to appear at the midsummer resorts in something which has not been announced in the early bulletins. Nothing more truly feminine is to be found than these fine, sheer materials, besprinkled with roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, wistaria or other beautiful blossoms all softened and subdued in tint by the limpid quality of the fabric. To give the design its best value, the dress must be worn over a silk or cambric slip of some delicate shade—not always, be it noted of the color of the flowers in the pattern. More often the best results will be obtained by the use of the complementary color, or some deftly contrasted shade underneath, which intensifies the hue of the flower and gives it that transparent gleam which relates it more to nature than to the textile art. Later in the season many of these organdie dresses will be seen, made doubtless with the ruffles and draped tunics whose adoption has become matter of common rumor. Just now a fore-shadowing of their coming is seen in the sprigged muslins and doted lawns which proclaim the formal entry of summer.

This illustration shows one of the daintiest of the latter made with an over-waist of the thinnest of eyelet embroidery, and an inner vest of all-over Irish crocheted lace. Sleeves and skirt are trimmed with wide bands of the eyelet embroidery. In its thinness and coolness it is an ideal toilette for the American summer, which in its torrid heat sets at naught all the French rulings for high collars, long sleeves and conventional lines of dress in general. These do very well in the climate of France or England, and with the best intentions in the world American women follow these commands in the spring and early summer, but 'tis not in human, at least not in feminine—endurance, to adhere to them in the months when the ascension of the thermometer is the chief topic of conversation in all circles.

In those days the wish expressed by the old hymn "that this, too, too solid flesh would melt" becomes a fear, and the relief of low neck and short sleeves is subconsciously justified by that other favorite of an older generation, "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" At any rate pride is thrown to the winds and the necessity of climate makes a virtue of the collarless blouse to the great gain, both in comfort and in looks, of the feminine world.

The Dutch neck, or round neck, of the last two or three summers, is no longer in favor with the best-dressed women. It has been replaced by the V neck, which offers a far less trying line, even to the young and pretty face, and is a boon to the older woman and the woman who has lost the slenderness of her youth. The real objection to the collarless blouse, and there is undoubtedly some to be urged, has led to the designing of various styles of collars which will be cool and comfortable and yet relieve the woman whose neck is no longer pretty from the necessity of exposing an undesirable feature.

Of chief interest among these new accessories is the Robespierre collar, named for the great French statesman who gave distinction to that particular style of dress. High in the back and well boned so that it is deprived of its tendency to become limp in hot weather, it comes together in a low point in front, leaving uncovered the soft curves of the throat, usually the prettiest part of a woman's neck. It rolls over in pointed ends on the breast, but is deeply indented to show as much as possible of the full lace frill which falls well down over the bosom and is the distinctive feature of the dress of the period. The Robespierre collar is a most attractive accessory to any dress, and affords opportunity to give a touch of charming style even to the plainest costume. Robespierre collars and frills of many kinds are to be had in the shops, ready to wear with different dresses, but good patterns are also to be had which reduce the making to the simplest science, and give more scope for the exercise of individual taste in adapting materials of collar and costume to each other.

In this pretty figure we see the charming effect of a blue satin Robespierre collar with a simply made dress of blue-and-white striped chiffon taffeta. The collar, with its lace frill, is the only trimming used on the dress but so chic and elegant is its appearance that one scarcely realizes the fact unless attention is specially called to it: A wise provision in making such a dress is to have two or more collars of different styles and materials to give the necessary change from the monotony so many women tire of, as well as to make the dress fit for occasions of differing degrees of formality. This last consideration is of value to the woman whose circumstances limit the expression of her taste in a variety of gowns.

This is seemingly the day of the separate collar and of frills. No dress is complete without the full jabot or the neck fril and the sleeve frills. Softening and becoming to every hand, the frills of lace or net are sewn into the wrists of the sleeves and in many cases carried along the opening from the wrist to the elbow. Some collars, known as the Pierrot collars are made entirely of frilled lace or net, one row standing above a narrow velvet or ribbon band, the other falling below it around the neck. Besides the one named for the great Frenchman there are many other beautiful designs which have some of the desirable features of the Robespierre, though none, perhaps, the perfect ease and comfort combined with style afforded by that model.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

The Bird Woman arose and kissed her. "Finish your lunch," she said, "and I will get my price lists and take down a memorandum of what you think you have, so I will know how many boxes to prepare. Never mind the calico dress and the coarse shoes. Dig into the books, and before long you will hear yesterday's tormentors boasting that they were once classmates of yours!"

She laughingly left the room and Elnora sat thinking, until she remembered how hungry she was, so she ate the food, drank the hot chocolate and began the process of getting a grip on herself.

Then the Bird Woman came back and showed Elnora a long printed slip giving a list of graduated prices for moths, butterflies and dragon flies.

"Oh, do you want them?" exulted Elnora. "I have a few and I can get more by the thousand, with every color in the world on their wings."

"Yes," said the Bird Woman. "I will buy them, also the big moth caterpillars that are creeping everywhere now, and the cocoons that they will spin just about this time. I have a sneaking impression that the mystery, wonder and the urge of their pure beauty are going to force me to picture and paint our moths and put them into a book for all the world to see and know. We Limberlost people must not be selfish with the wonders God has given to us. I will pay good prices for all the moths you can find, because, you see, I exchange them with foreign collectors. The banker will buy stone axes, arrow points and Indian pipes. There was a teacher from the city grade schools here today for specimens. There is a fund to supply the ward buildings. I'll help you get in touch with that. They want leaves of different trees, flowers, grasses, moths, insects, birds' nests and anything about birds."

Elnora's eyes were blazing. "Had I best go back to school or open a bank account and begin being a millionaire? Uncle Wesley and I have a bushel of arrow points gathered, a stack of axes, pipes, skin dressing tools, tubes and mortars. I don't know how I ever will wait three hours."

"You must go, or you will be late," said the Bird Woman. "I will be ready at 4."

After school closed Elnora, seated by the Bird Woman, drove to Freckles' old room in the Limberlost. One at a time the beautiful big moths were taken from the interior of the old black case. Not a fourth of them could be moved that night, and it was almost dark when the last box was closed, the list figured and into Elnora's trembling fingers were paid $59.16. Elnora clasped the money closely.

"Oh, you beautiful stuff!" she cried. "You are going to buy the books, pay the tuition and take me to high school!"

Then because she was a woman she sat on a log and looked at her shoes. Long after the Bird Woman drove away Elnora remained. She had her problem, and it was a big one. If she told her mother would she take the money to pay the taxes? If she did not tell her how could she account for the books and things for which she would spend it? At last she counted out what she needed for the next day, placed the rest in the farthest corner of the case and locked the door. She then filled the front of her skirt from a heap of arrow points beneath the case and started home.

* * * * * * *

With the first streak of red above the Limberlost Margaret Sinton was busy with the gingham and the intricate paper pattern she had purchased. Wesley cooked the breakfast and worked until he thought Elnora would be gone, then he started to bring her mother.

"Now you be mighty careful," cautioned Margaret. "I don't know how she will take it."

"I don't either," said Wesley philosophically, "but she's got to take it some way. That dress has to be finished by school time in the morning."

Wesley had not slept well that night. By the time he reached the front gate and started down the walk between the rows of asters and lady slippers he was perspiring, and every plausible and convincing speech had fled his brain. Mrs. Comstock helped him. She met him at the door.

"Good morning," she said. "Did Margaret send you for something?"

"Yes," said Wesley. "She sent me for you. She's got a job that's too big for her, and she wants you to help."

"Of course I will," said Mrs. Comstock. It was no one's affair now lonely the previous day had been, or how the endless hours of the present would drag. "What is she doing in such a rush?"

Now was his chance.

"She's making a dress for Elnora," answered Wesley. He saw Mrs. Comstock's form straighten, and her face harden, so he continued hastily. "You see Elnora has been helping us at harvest time, butchering, and with unexpected visitors for years. We've made out that she's saved us a considerable sum, and as she wouldn't ever touch any pay for anything we just went to town and got a few clothes we thought would fix her up a little for the high school. We want to get a dress done today mighty bad, but Margaret is slow about sewing, and she never can finish alone, so I came for you."

"And it's such a simple little matter, so dead easy; and all so between old friends like, that you can't look above your boots while you explain it," sneered Mrs. Comstock. "Wesley Sinton, what put the idea into your head that Elnora would take things bought with money when she wouldn't take the money?"

Then Sinton's eyes came up straightly.

"Finding her on the trail last night sobbing as hard as I ever saw any one at a funeral. She wasn't complaining at all, but she's come to me all her life with her little hurts, and she couldn't hide how she'd been laughed at, twitted and run face to face against the fact that there was books and tuition unexpected, and nothing will ever make me believe you didn't know that, Kate Comstock."

"If any doubts are troubling you on that subject, sure I knew it! She was so anxious to try the world I thought I'd just let her take a few knocks and see how she liked it."

"As if she'd ever taken anything but knocks all her life!" cried Wesley Sinton. "Kate Comstock, you are a heartless, selfish woman. You've never allowed Elnora any real love in her life. If ever she finds out that thing you'll lose her, and it will serve you right."

"She knows it now," said Mrs. Comstock icily, "and she'll be home tonight just as usual."

"Well, you are a brave woman if you dared put a girl of Elnora's make through what she suffered yesterday and will suffer again today and let her know you did it on purpose. I admire your nerve. But I've watched this since Elnora was born, and I got enough. Things have come to a pass where they go better for her or I interfere."

"As if you'd ever done anything but interfere all her life! Think I haven't watched you? Think I, with my heart raw in my breast and too numb to resent it openly, haven't seen you and Mag Sinton trying to turn Elnora against me day after day? When did you ever tell her what her father meant to me? When did you ever try to make her see the wreck of my life and what I've suffered? No, indeed!"

"Kate Comstock, that's unjust!" cried Sinton. "Only last night I tried to show her the picture I saw the day she was born. I begged her to come to you and tell you pleasant what she needed and ask you for what I happen to know you can well afford to give her."

"I can't!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You know I can't!"

"Then get so you can!" said Wesley Sinton. "Any day you say the word you can sell $6,000 worth of rare timber off this place easy. I'll see to clearing and working the fields cheap as dirt, for Elnora's sake. I'll buy you more cattle to fatten. All you've got to do is sign a lease to pull thousands from the ground in oil, as the rest of us are doing all around you."

"Cut down Robert's trees!" shrieked Mrs. Comstock. "Tear up his land! Cover everything with horrid, greasy oil! I'll die first!"

"You mean you'll let Elnora go like a beggar and hurt and mortify her past bearing. I've got to the place where I tell you plain what I am going to do. Maggie and I went to town last night, and we got what things Elnora needs most urgent to make her look a little like the rest of the high school girls. Now here it is in plain English. You can help get these things ready and let us give them to her as we want"—

"She won't touch them!" cried Mrs. Comstock.

"Then you can pay us, and she can take them as her right"—

"I won't!"

"Then I will tell Elnora just what you are worth, what you can afford and how much of this she owns. I'll loan her the money to buy books and decent clothes, and when she is of age she can sell her share and pay me."

Mrs. Comstock gripped a chair back and opened her lips, but no words came.

"And," Sinton continued, "if she is so much like you that she won't do that I'll go to the county seat and lay complaint against you as her guardian before the judge. I'll swear to what you are worth and how you are raising her and have you discharged or have the judge appoint some man who will see that she is comfortable, educated and decent looking!"

"You—you wouldn't!" gasped Mrs. Comstock.

"I won't need to, Kate!" said Sinton, his heart softening the instant the hard words were said. "You won't show it, but you do love Elnora! You can't help it! You must see how she needs things. Come, help us fix them and be friends. Maggie and I couldn't live without her, and you couldn't either. You've got to love such a fine girl as she is. Let it show a little!"

"You can hardly expect me to love her," said Mrs. Comstock coldly. "But for her a man would stand back of me now who would beat the breath out of your sneaking body for the cowardly thing with which you threaten me. After all I've suffered you'd drag me to court and compel me to tear up Robert's property. If I ever go they carry me. If they touch one tree or put down one greasy old oil well it will be over all I can shoot before they begin. Now, see how quick you can clear out of here!"

"You won't come and help Maggie with the dress?"

For answer Mrs. Comstock looked about swiftly for some object on which to lay her hands. Knowing her temper, Wesley Sinton left with all the haste consistent with dignity. But he did not go home. He crossed a field and in an hour brought another neighbor who was skillful with her needle. With sinking heart Margaret saw them coming.

"Kate is too busy to help today. She can't sew before tomorrow," said Wesley cheerfully as they entered.

That quieted Margaret's apprehension a little, though she had some doubts. Wesley prepared the lunch, and by 4 o'clock the pretty dress was finished as far as it possibly could be until it was fitted on Elnora.

TWO GIRLS TRY BLACK HAND

Physcian Sets Trap With a Decoy Check

Lewiston, Me., June 13.—Mary Gurklis, 18 years old, and her sister, Anna, 15, are in jail charged with having sent a so-called Black Hand letter to Dr. Joseph W. Scannell, a physician of this city.

The arrest occurred in Riverside cemetery, near Dr. Scannell's residence, as a result of a "trap" set by the physician.

A letter demanding the payment of $2000 to be put into a tin can and buried in Riverside cemetery not later than yesterday, was received by Dr. Scannell. After arrangements with detectives a dummy check was placed in a can and buried.

The two girls went to the cemetery and were seen by one of the detectives who had remained in hiding all night. It is claimed that he saw one of them withdraw the check from the can and hide it in her clothing.

The two girls are believed to have been used by a third person who planned the affair.

BUFFALO, WYO., WRECKED

Cloudburst Sweeps Down Upon the Little City In Canyon

Sheridan, Wyo., June 13.—A wall of water from a cloudburst in the mountains swept down Clear creek canyon onto the town of Buffalo, partly wrecking the place and causing a number of deaths.

Buffalo has about 2000 inhabitants and is situated in the Cleark creek canyon, the sides of which are steep and high.

While only a few blocks wide, the town is more than a mile long. The telephone operator at Buffalo called Sheridan and reported a great wall of water had swept down the canyon, carrying away several brick blocks. Many people had been drowned, the operator said, but no idea of the number was obtainable.

"The water is now flowing into this room through the second story window, and ——" Here the wires went down and no further communication was possible. Automobile relief parties were made up here and started for Buffalo, which is forty miles from Sheridan.

Railroad Laborers Strike

Providence, June 13.—The work on the Southern New England railway in this city was interrupted by a strike of about 120 laborers.

TROLLEY VETO SUSTAINED

Senate Fails to Pass Bill Over the Governor's Head

Boston, June 13.—A minority of the senate sustained Governor Foss' veto of the trolley merger bill, after a debate remarkable for its intensity and the veiled charges hurled back and forth across the chamber.

Of the forty senators, twenty-three voted to pass the bll over the governor's veto and sixteen to sustain it. As a two-thirds majority is necessary to pass a bill over a veto, the bill was rejected, despite the fact that the bill was passed over the governor's veto by the house 157 to 68.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WILLIAM FLINN.

New Republican Leader In Pennsylvania, Who Is Leading Colonel's Fight.

BOMB AT TAFT FORCES

Roosevelt Group Explodes One of Great Power

FIGHT IN ELECTORAL COLLEGE

Chicago, June 13.—That, even though President Taft is the choice of the regular Republican convention, which assembles here next week, Colonel Roosevelt, and not the president, may be considered the regular Republican nominee in all of the direct primary states, was the bombshell thrown into the Taft camp by the Roosevelt forces.

Although it had been expected, its explosive effect was so great that the T. R. leaders went into immediate conference to consider what they would do to meet the contingency.

The ultimatum from the Roosevelt forces was given out by Senator Flinn of Pennsylvania and Governor Glasscock of West Virginia from the former's room in the Congress hotel.

"We won't bolt," said Flinn, thrusting out his under jaw in a way that reminded one of the only living ex-president. "We don't have to. If the national committee steals the roll call, then thirty out of the thirty-eight electors of the state of Pennsylvania will vote for Roosevelt. It won't make any difference who is nominated by the convention. The will of the people of my state cannot be thrust aside.

"We are not going to allow the national committee to destroy the Republican party in Pennsylvania," said Mr. Flinn. "We don't intend to stand idly by and lose ten or fifteen congressmen and the legislature. We propose to protect ourselves at home. We don't propose to allow delegates from the southern states and the insular possessions to dictate a presidential nomination to the great Republican states. The time has come when political rebellion is necessary for self-protection of the Republican states."

Governor Glasscock said that the entire electoral vote of his state is for Roosevelt. We don't have to put Taft's name on the ballot," he pointed out, "and the Taft people have no legal way of getting their name on the ballot. We'll revive the electoral college."

One of the sensations of the Republican national committee meeting was the vicious attack made by Francis J. Heney on the committee in which the name of Senator Murray Crane figured.

"I apepal to you, Senator Murray Crane," Mr. Heney said, when the chairman told him to address the committee in proper terms. "I am addressing a member of the committee whom I believe has no respectability to lose," Mr. Heney replied.

"Are you here to argue this case?" demanded Mr. Clubb of Florida.

"No," shouted Heney. "I have come here for the purpose of apprising the president that he is accepting stolen goods if he takes these delegates when you give them to him."

And when the committee, despite Heney and Johnson's defi, seated the two Taft delegates from the California district, they were bluntly told by Senator Borah that they were making it impossible for a Republican president "to preside at the White House during the next four years."

The last contests settled favored President Taft, as follows:

Arizona, delegates-at-large, 6; California, Fourth district, 2; Louisiana, delegates-at-large, 6; First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh districts, 14; Michigan, delegates-at-large, 6; Mississippi, delegates-at-large, 4; First district, 2; total, 40.

TOO SHARP DIP

Caused Collapse of Biplane and Death of Hazelhurst and Welsh

Washington, June 13.—Lieutenant Hazelhurst, the army aviator, and Arthur L. Welsh, the Wright pilot, who were killed in the collapse of an army aeroplane at College Park, Md., probably met death as the result of Welsh's anxiety for the speedy 2000

Officers of the army signal corps point out that the collapse of the aluminum wings of the big plane probably was caused by an unusual strain thrown upon them when Welsh sharply increased the speed of his machine and suddenly shot the nose of the plane upward at a terrific speed. Eye witnesses say the dip and upward turn were taken at a terrible rate. It was the first army machine to be equipped with metal wings and having no canvas and their strength was more or less an unknown quantity.

OWN A HOME AT NEWCOMB TERRACE

The settlement of the estate of the late Emeline A. Newcomb has caused the beautifully situated land on Adams and Common Streets, which has been owned by the Newcomb family for nearly 100 years, to be placed on the market.

This land gently sloping to the streets has rich soil, is high and dry, and commands a fine view of the surrounding country. It extends about 450 feet on Adams street, the finest residential street in Quincy, and 1100 feet on Common street, which runs parallel with Furnace Brook Parkway, a beautiful pleasure road for all time. From every lot on Newcomb Terrace there is a fine view of the Parkway (to complete which $100,000 has just been appropriated), the beautiful meadow lands beyond, and the Wollaston Hills. It is within 10 minutes' of the Reservoir grounds, and stand-pipe on Third Hill. These lots are bound to greatly increase in value.

Newcomb Terrace contains 42 lots from 5000 to 8000 square feet each. Every lot will be sold at Auction to the highest bidder. That all may have an equal chance they will be sold for $25.00 down and $5.00 a month till paid for. To those who pay cash, a discount of 10 per cent will be given.

BURIED IN QUINCY.

There was a large gathering of Quincy people at the funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Flanagan, of 49 Church street East Milton, which was held this morning from St. Gregory's church, where a high mass of requem was celebrated at nine o'clock by Rev. Fr. Charles P. Heaney. The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished by the regular choir.

There was a profusion of floral tributes. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy. The deceased was 80 years of age and was one of the most widely known and highly esteemed residents of this section of Norfolk County. A daughter, Mrs. Sarah Bannin and a number of grandchildren survive her.

LONG DISTANCE GLASSES NEEDED

Members of combination company No. 2 of the Quincy fire department located on Beale street in the Wollaston district, made a good stop of a brisk fire on the roof of A. L. Baker's house at 17 and 19 Winthrop avenue, Sunday afternoon, but the inability of the pair of horses to draw the truck up the hill on which the house stands necessitated the running of a pretty long line of hose and led several witnesses of their attempt to ask: "Why not a three-horse hitch on a piece of apparatus which has so much hill-climbing as does this one?"—Rambler in Boston Herald.

That certainly was a long distance. The writer needs glasses. The apparatus has a three-horse hitch. The trouble was the machine in turning a corner skidded, struck the curb stone, broke a wheel and was temporarily out of commission. It would have taken several three horse hitches to tow that crippled piece of apparatus up the slightest incline.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

The annual picnic of the Wollaston Baptist church will be held at Island park grove, Monday, June 17. The picnickers will go by train, leaving Norfolk Downs at 8.54 o'clock and Wollaston one minute later. There will be plenty of sports including base ball, and boat races. With regard to lemonade the committee announce "all you want." Tickets can be obtained at Eben Hardy's store or of the committee, William Bullock, Mrs. C. B. Ball, Eben Hardy, J. A. Jewell and J. A. Sparrow.

HOWARD M. DOW, COMPOSER, DEAD

Lived Years in N. Weymouth Familiar Figure in Quincy

WIDELY KNOWN BY MASONS

Howard M. Dow, the well known music and musical composer, a former resident of Weymouth, for a number of years died at the home of his son, in New Rochelle, N. Y., Wednesday. He was widely known in Quincy and by the Masonic fraternity generally.

Mr. Dow was born in a house on Winter street, Boston, 75 years ago and his whole professional career was in and about Boston until six years ago, since which time he has made his home with his children in New York and Los Angeles, California.

He attended the old Mason street school now used for School Committee purposes; at the age of seven began to take instruction on the organ and at nine instruction on the piano and composition. At 16 he became a church organist in South Boston, and he so continued for 52 years, serving at Dr. Hale's church in Union Park street Trinity, Arlington street church Second church and at Dr. Minot J. Savage's church of the Unity for 29 years.

He was also active professionally as organist, composer and choir leader for various Masonic bodies, including the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts.

Mr. Dow married in 1864 Mary Agnes Rice, daughter of the then register of deeds in this county. She died in 1889. He is survived by three children, a daughter, Mrs. Dow, married to a man of her own family name in Los Angeles. Arthur M. Dow of New York and James Dow of Boston.

Soon after his marriage he removed to North Weymouth residing in a mansion near what is known as Weymouth Heights station for many years. Here he did much of his music composing. After the death of his wife he continued to reside in Weymouth with his daughter. Upon her marriage however he gave up his home in Weymouth and made his home with his children.

He was for many years a familiar figure about Quincy for instead of taking the train for Boston from the Weymouth Heights station, which was close to his home he always came to Quincy on the electric cars, and took the train to Boston from this station.

BALTIMORE BATTLE

Cannot Be Forecasted With Any Certainty as to Victor

Washington, June 13.—Democratic leaders in congress fear a long deadlock at the Baltimore national convention over the presidential nomination. With no candidate entering the convention with a majority of the delegates, and with Wilson and Clark controlling more than one-third of the votes, they cannot figure out how the Baltimore gathering will finish up its work within three days of allotted time.

One obstacle, it is pointed out, in the way of an early agreement for the nomination is the feeling between the Wilson and Clark forces. Somehow or other the rivalry between these camps of the New Jersey and Missourian is keener and the feeling is more intense than between the other aspirants.

The Underwood forces are sitting quietly on the lid. They haven't ruffled anybody's feelings. They are not saying anything to cause a flareback.

To show how confident the Underwood people are as a result of the feud between Clark and Wilson forces is the statement made by one of the leading Underwood supporters that they have promises from Texas, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and South Carolina that these states will flock to Mr. Underwood in the event the nomination of Mr. Wilson becomes an impossibility.

This is the first time that the Underwood people have laid claim to the Wilson delegates. The Alabama forces also assert that New York will come to their side of the convention hall after the third or fourth ballot. With New York, the eighty-odd southern delegates instructed to Underwood and the Wilson delegates, the Underwood forces claim they will present a showing in the convention which will cause a stampede on the next ballot.

KANSAS CITY HAS STREET CAR RIOTS

To Smoke or Not to Smoke, the Question

Kansas City, Mo., June 13.—Following a day, night and morning of rioting, during which women slapped the faces of smokers, and men in a hurry to catch trains pitched those delaying the cars into the street, a truce of one day has been agreed to in the cigar dealers' fight against the Metropolitan Street Car company's order.

The company is defying a new ordinance that permits smoking on cars. Conductors and motormen have received orders to let a car stand so long as any one in it is smoking.

NOTICE.

A few days ago some one visited my garden, which is always open, and took about 150 tomato plants that I intended to give away. They did not leave a sample of the kinds and there were some early varieties. I shall always feel badly to meet the person that took them but will forgive them if the plants are returned.

INTEREST TO GUNNERS.

One of the new laws of interest to sportsmen is that relative to shooting of certain fowl. The new act repeals Sec. 1, of Chapter 187 of the Acts of the year 1911, which prohibited the pursuing, hunting, taking, or killing of any wild fowl included under the name of Anatidae during the time between two hours after sunset and two hours before sunrise.

FALL IN TINWARE.

A large number of friends attended the tin shower tendered to Miss May Veale, of Vernon street, at the home of Miss Edith Spargo, 395 Washington street, Tuesday evening, by the "Jolly Nine Girls." The evening was most enjoyably spent with games of all sorts and music furnished by talent in attendance.

Refreshments were served and the affair was brought to a close at a late hour with dancing. Miss Veale was the recipient of numerous useful articles of tinware.

RECORD NUMBER GRADS IN GRAMMAR SCHOOLS

460 Will Enter Upon Course of Higher Education or Take up Life's Battles at Once

Mr. Barbour Sounded Note of Warning for More Grammar Schools

The largest number of graduates ever sent forth from the Quincy grammar schools 460 were presented with diplomas at the closing exercises held this afternoon in the assembly hall of the High school building. There were 460 graduates in all, a number that is considered exceedingly large for a city the size of Quincy.

The stage of the hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion. The stars and stripes occupied a conspicuous position overhead, while profusions of daisies, entwined about diplomas presented a most attractive picture. The decorative work was done by Charles Sampson, principal of the Quincy school, and the teachers of the different schools.

The classes marched into the hall in alphabetical order, headed by a pupil who bore the banner of the schools. All the girls were prettily attired in white or light colored dresses, while the boys wore black suits and white blouses.

The work of the pupils in taking their respective places in the hall was ably executed.

There was a large attendance of parents and friends. The accompanist was Miss Emma F. Perkins, supervisor of music.

Seated on the platform were Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools, Jeremiah E. Burke, assistant superintendent of public schools in Boston and members of the Quincy school committee.

PROGRAM.

The following is the program of the afternoon's exercises:—

March:—Piano, Violins, Drum—Patriotic Medley—Selected.

Chorus:—Glad Festal Day—Arranged from "Carmen"—Wilson.

Introductory Remarks — Albert Leslie Barbour.

Chorus:—a.—Pretty Maiden—Arranged from "Faust"—Rimbault.

b.—Hark! Hear the Trumpets—Arranged from "Carmen"—Bizet.

Address—Jeremiah E. Burke, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Boston.

Chorus:—Lovely Night, O Tender Night—From "Tales of Hoffmann"—Offenbach.

Presentation of Diplomas—Chairmen of Sub-Committees.

a. Salute to the Flag.

b. America.

The music was under the direction of Miss Emma A. Perkins.

Gustaf Clarence Lundin, Quincy High school '12.

The orchestra was made up of the following members of the Quincy High school:

William J. Roche, class of '12, Beatrice Irene Costello, class of '13, Edward Berman, class of '14 and Clifton Hosmer Young, class of '14.

Both the accompanist and orchestra acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner.

ALBERT L. BARBOUR.

The exercises opened with a few remarks by Superintendent Barbour who reviewed the school work of the past year, declaring that the grammar graduates of 1912 beat all records. Mr. Barbour added that conditions had reached such a stage that the city will have to make provisions to accommodate still greater numbers of pupils and this he proposed to eliminate. The congestion that is sure to take place two years hence in the present course of events.

He said that the High school and Woodward Institute will be fully taxed in the fall and added that special requirements will have to be made for those who enter the Institute after this year. Mr. Barbour said that the Parochial school will have a graduation class next year and this will also add to the congestion.

Of the 460 graduates this afternoon, 244 were girls and 211 were boys. Of this number, 426 have signified their intentions of going to secondary schools. The high school will enroll 322, while 85 will matriculate at the Woodward Institute. Other schools in and about Boston will get 19 of the graduates.

The majority of those graduated have spent eight years in the grammar schools, one completed the course in six years, and two in seven years. It took eight years for 201 to get diplomas, while 162 spent nine years and 54 ten years. Twenty spent 11 years and one 12 years.

The youngest pupil to graduate this year is Mehitable Knights of the Washington school who is in her twelfth year, while the oldest is 17 years of age.

Thirty graduates are between the ages of 12 and 13 years, 170 between 13 and 14, 163 between 14 and 15, 76 between 15 and 16, 18 between 16 and 17, and three between 17 and 18. The average age is 14 years.

As grade one in September 1904, the class numbered 700, as grade two, 1905 688, as grade three, 1906, 651; as grade four, 1907, 649; as grade five, 1908, 689 as grade six, 1909, 650; as grade seven, 1910, 598; as grade eight in the beginning of the year 553, and June 1st 502, of which 460 were graduated.

For the first time in a number of years, the Willard school has failed to graduate the largest number. This year the honors were carried off by the Quincy school, with Wollaston a close second.

The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Jeremiah E. Burke, assistant superintendent of schools in Boston. The exercises were carried out in a most satisfactory manner and every detail was attended to in a perfect manner. The diplomas were conferred by members of the school committee.

THE FOURTH CELEBRATION

Is Creating Much Enthusiasm Among the People

BIG AUTOMOBILE PARADE

A meeting of the general July Fourth Celebration committee will be held Saturday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade and a general invitation is extended to all interested to attend. Collectors are now at work in the several wards of the city, with the exception of Ward Six, which ward has a celebration of its own, and from the reports that are coming in from these collectors, money is being freely contributed.

The more money the more features, but it needs at least $2,000 to carry out the program as now outlined by the general committee. Now that it has been assured that a battleship is to be in Quincy waters on the Fourth and that the crew will parade with the ship's bands it will add zest to the affair.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide who has charge of the automobile parade in the morning is very enthusiastic over this feature, and as it is a recognized fact that whatever Col. Kincaide takes hold of is sure to be a success, it can be readily understood that this new feature in this year's program will be a good one. There are several hundred automobiles owned in Quincy and a large part of these have already signified their willingness to enter their car.

EIGHT GRADUATES GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Another Corps of Competent Nurses Enter Upon Careers

FROM QUINCY HOSPITAL

Eight graduate young nurses received diplomas at the Quincy Hospital, Thursday afternoon which indicated that they have qualified as nurses and are now eligible to start on a professional career. The exercises were largely attended and all details were carried out most satisfactorily.

The program opened with a solo by Mrs. Lawrence H. Sturtevant, which was the occasion for prolonged applause. The accompanist was Professor Frank Wrigley. This was followed by the opening address, a most instructive discourse, by Dr. J. A. Gordon, chairman of the Executive committee of the hospital. Dr. Gordon congratulated the graduates on their accomplishments and for the untiring zeal they had always displayed in administering to the sick and said in part:

"Graduates of the training school for nures of the City hospital of Quincy, it is my pleasure and duty as chairman of the executive committee to make a few remarks to you before yon receive your diplomas, the diplomas that certify that you have taken the prescribed course of instruction in the hospital and have passed satisfactory examinations in the principles and practices of nursing. They are guarantees to the world that you have adequate training and possess the proper qualifications for the manifold duties of general nursing. But do not let your study end here. When you leave the hospital and are thrown upon your own resources and initiative, do not be content to stop with the knowledge gained here for this is only the beginning of your development. Continue your studies in all the branches of your work and keep pace with all the advances of medical science and the refinements of nursing so that you may always hold your place in the front rank of your profession.

"You have chosen a noble profession, one that should bring you much honor and satisfaction. There is no higher calling than to devote our energies intelligently to the care and cure of the sick, the suffering and the injured.

"It is a profession that calls forth in the highest degree all the sympathetic feelings of a woman's mind and heart:

"When pain and anguish sickness wrung the brow
A ministering angel thou."

"But much more is required of the nurse in these modern days than these ennobling sentiments of sympathy and the desire to relieve suffering and woe. Sympathy is a grand stimulus

PATRIOTS PAY TRIBUTE TO OLD GLORY ALL OVER THE WORLD

The Red and White Stripes and Field of Stars Displayed in all Parts of Quincy Today

Wollaston Red Men Show Flag Development. Exercises by Other Organizations

Today marks the annual flag day when every citizen pays special homage to the Star Spangled Banner which only about 100 years old, floats over a free and sovereign population of 110,000,000 of people.

The flag itself is an inspiration. It has been borne in triumph on many a blood stained battlefield. Its mere presence has time and again protected the lives and property of many when riot and bloodshed have crossed its path.

The song has immortalized it.

The few who have termed it as a mere particle of textile fabric have had cause to regret their disrespectful allusion.

Everywhere it is honored and when seen by an American after years of absence from his native land in some remote part of the world his heart thrills with pride and admiration and his soul is stirred by the thought that he is one of the many millions embraced within its protecting folds.

Quincy people animated by that patriotic fervor which burns like a sanctuary lamp were prompt today in paying their tribute of respect.

Every one who had a flag displayed it and hundreds of people appeared on the streets with little flags fastened in their hats or the lapels of their coats.

Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps held patriotic exercises at the home of the president. Mrs. Mary E. Powers of Bigelow street this afternoon.

Quincy lodge of Elks will hold patriotic exercises in their club house on Foster street.

Matt Hale is getting almost as bad as his chief, with the difference that very little heed is taken of the former.

Rowdyism in restaurants or other public places where women assemble should be suppressed in a manner which will leave no room to doubt that it will not be tolerated.

If all the chorus dolls and stock company ladies whose pictures appear in the metropolitan dailies were society buds before they sought excitement on the stage there must be a big hole in the original and immortal 400.

When President Austin of a coastwise steamer line says that boats and rafts are not necesary for coastwise steamers because they are so close to land and have adequate wireless systems, his memory must be the thing he forgets with. MAY BE COUNTER REQUESTS.

The Bunker Hill Monument association has requested of Canada the old gun captured at Bunker Hill by the British and now at the Quebec citadel. The Massachusetts Historical society backs the request and it is hoped that in view of the peace centenary the request will be granted.

That is a very good idea indeed and the peace sentiment might prompt the extension of such a courtesy.

But has any one paused to consider that it establishes a bad precedent and will place this country under a sense of obligation. The Canadians and British may be quick to see this point and come back with counter requests. Could they be refused if the Bunker Hill gun is returned?

We presume there are revolutionary and 1812 relics of the British in this country in the shape of battle flags and other historic articles. If the request which the Bunker Hill asociation has presented is granted might not the British with equally courteous demeanor and in view of the peace centenary and as a stronger bond of continued peace request the return of those relics? If they did what would be done with such a request? It seems as if this seemingly harmless request of the Bunker Hill association has presented opportunity for opening up a subject which perhaps many would rather remain uncovered as it might give rise to differences of opinion which might tend to put a pall upon this alleged friendly and brotherly spirit so often referred to.

SEATS ON BOSTON COMMON.

And now comes to the front a Boston lady who suggests that the best way to drive the drunks and loafers off the Common would be to remove the seats. A very fine idea indeed. One that might be termed an original classic. It is not only fine and classical but amusing. Who owns Boston Common? Possibly some of the unfortunates who may have to use the common seats as a means of collecting their scattered senses have contributed in blood and money that the common might exist. Possibly many of the people given this sweeping characterization of "loafers," may be well intentioned persons fatigued from work or cares and used the seats as a temporary resting place, a means of gaining some relief from the every day grind.

Are all the people of Boston to be deprived of the privileges and benefits of the seats on the Common because at intervals, some unfortunate has found them more convenient than locomotion of some other unfortunate who has been tramping around all day in search of work, tired and foot-sore, finds this a means of blessed relief. The christian spirit of some people passeth understanding. They would deprive people of the right to sit on the Common. Yet it is just such a class who may be found sending flowers, fruit and pasties to some deep dyed criminal who has been committed for some horrible offence. If there is a thought to save the drunkard who sits on the Common seats or an opportunityt o provide employment for the so-called loafer and assist in his uplift here is a chance for women of this type. But to deprive thousands of a national life time privilege is absurd and not worthy of consideration. Let the lady tax her ingenuity to get into the lime light by some other means.

PUFFING UP OTHERS.

Since he has become interested in the Republican nomination for Congress in the new Cape district Charles S. Groves, executive secretary of the Republican state committee, has become a student of announcements of candidates. "It is a great deal easier," he said "to write one for another fellow than it is to write one for yourself."—Ex.

Undoubtedly there is a world of truth in what Mr. Groves says. Few newspaper men but what have at one time or another been requested by some candidate to write his platform speeches or puff him up for the office.

LADIES' NIGHT QUINCY K OF C

Anniversary Also Planned by Council in Near Future

LATTER A STAG PARTY

Two events of interest are being planned by the members of Quincy council, No. 96, Knights of Columbus, both of which are to take place this month. They are the ladies' night scheduled for June 26 and the celebration of the 18th anniversary of the institution of the council, the date of which has not been set.

The feature of the ladies' night will be an address on The Consistory at Rome by William F. Kenney, the well-known newspaperman, who accompanied Cardinal O'Connell and the Boston party to Rome last winter. Mr. Kenney's address has proven extremely interesting on other occasions when it has been given and the members of Quincy council are looking forward with pleasure to his coming.

Besides Mr. Kenney's address, there will be an entertainment, dancing and refreshments. The affair will be held in Colonial Hall, which is in the same building with the Columbus Club. Grand Knight Edward D. Barrett is head of the committee in charge of the arrangements.

Henry F. Magee is chairman of the committee that is arranging for the anniversary celebration. This affair will be a "stag" party and will consist of a banquet, followed by addresses by prominent members of the order, and an entertainment.

IMPROVEMENT HAS A WORD

To Say of Interest on the Way Across Library Grounds

Editor of the Ledger:—

I read with interest your editorial favoring cross walks on the Library grounds, connecting Coddington and Washington streets and beg to disagree with you. It would be a great pity to cut up in any way that beautiful expanse of green lawn to perhaps save a minute of time to this rushing generation. I do not favor sacrificing beauty to speed. There is too much of a tendency at the present time to cut corners, no matter if it does mar your neighbor's lawn. Slow up and keep to the sidewalks.

Instead of cutting up the Library lawn why not do as suggested in one of your recent editorials—have the City buy the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., building, remove it and throw the land into Coddington street. It would be better to extend Temple street through to Coddington, taking some of the Library lawn in conjunction with the insurance property and make a large open square. It certainly would be a civic improvement. We think the city should do this. Should like to her from others through the Ledger regarding this proposition.

Yours for Improvement.

SHALL WE TAKE THE RISK?

Editor of the Ledger:—Last Sunday afternoon I was walking on Adams street, near Hancock, when the auto-chemical fire engine came along, going towards Wollaston. It was truly a fearsome sight. The speed could not have been less than forty miles an hour. This part of Adams street is not very wide, and on a pleasant Sunday afternoon there is a steady stream of automobiles going through it in both directions. The fire engine, going at such speed, could only take the middle course on the car track, and the vehicles on each side had to keep out of the way the best they could. In this case there was good luck and skilful driving by everybody, so that there was no accident; but I believe that such risks ought not to be taken. Every one who drives an auto knows that the machine is liable to swerve unaccountably once in a while, and no careful driver would think of driving through a narrow lane at a break-neck speed, where a rut or hole or stone or slippery place, and especially a bursted tire, might cause a terrible accident.

Now there is no more comfort in being killed by a fire engine than by a grocery team, and is the fierce speed worth while, after all? At forty miles an hour the engine would make the a one-mile run in one and one-half minutes; at a twenty-five mile speed the one mile would be made in less than two and one-half minutes—less than a minute in favor of the greater speed. Doubtless firemen will argue that a minute of time is sometimes important, but in nine cases out of ten i do not believe it would matter much, and in any case no such consideration should weigh for a moment against the imminent danger to human life.

It is an ungracious task to write anything which might seem to reflect even remotely on our excellent fire department, and this letter must not be taken in that light. I am arguing for a speed that will save the firemen's lives as well as those of the public. Firemen drive at dangerous speed because custom has heretofore somehow sanctioned it, because, as it seems, a false sense of the exigency seemed to require it; but the safety of human life is above every other consideration, and I believe that if the present practice is continued, it is only a question of time before there will be a dreadful fatality to record.

SWAT THE FLY THE SLOGAN

Disease Carrying Power of Insect Made Clear

TO WOLLASTON PEOPLE

If the remarks of the speakers, on Thursday evening, at the Park and Downs vestry have any effect the Wollaston Park Improvement association will add a loud local note in the cry fast spreading across the nation of "Swat the fly."

The occasion was the first ladies' night of the Association and a most interesting stereopticon lecture on "The typhoid fly" was given by Miss Therese Norton of Arlington a representative of the Women's Municipal League of Boston.

In addition the three members of the Quincy Board of Health were present and added their word of warning in regard to the fly.

Representative William J. Leslie was also a speaker. Music, readings and refreshments added to the enjoyment of the large number that attended.

President E. O. Woodward opened the meeting with a word of welcome and Secretary Anthony read the records.

Several new members were admitted and Mrs. Antoinette S. Paige reported for the committee on trees and shrubbery. As an incentive to neat grounds and gardens the committee has offered cash prizes to the school children of the district having the best garden.

In the director's report President Woodward announced the appointment of William M. Burrell as a director of the Association.

The July Fourth celebration was brought up and it is probable the members of the Association will make a generous contribution to the central committee.

John L. Hamilton reported for the "boost" committee in charge of the recent hearing at city hall.

Many interesting facts were mentioned by Miss Norton in her talk on "The typhoid fly" in which she generously quoted the valuable experiences of Dr. Hodge of Clark University Worcester.

Many pictures were shown of contamination by flies where least expected. The direct route of the fly from garbage pail to dinner table and from filth to baby's bottle were shown as were others of a similar nature.

The fly is a prolific carrier of disease. In the Spanish war more soldiers were killed by fly carried disease than by bullets.

The housefly breeds in filth, over 95 per cent in stable manure. We should first clean these places up.

Formalin as a fly poisoner was recommended although this should be put out of reach of animals.

The fly trap is very efficient although for its greatest success you must be governed by surroundings in the kind of bait you use.

Co-operation is the thing needed. To succeed we must plan, not just to fight him, but to put him out of business. We must not simply lessen his numbers but entirely exterminate him.

The colonies of bacteria left by a fly wiping his feet on food were depicted.

The lecture closed with views of fly protected food shops and those present were urged to patronize dealers who properly protected their wares.

Chairman William H. Teasdale of the Board of Health told what had been done locally in the suppression of the fly.

It was hard to get people educated in the matter and meetings such as tonight are the best thing and should be conducted in all parts of the city.

Stables had been found open and owners had been written, but it is a hard matter to arouse public sentiment all at once.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

PARAGON PARK.

The large crowds at Paragon, with the Palm Garden filled to its capacity every evening from late in the afternoon, through the dinner hours and right up to and through the Cabaret Show which is on in the Palm Garden from 9 to 11 o'clock, so far in advance of the customary opening of this resort for the season on Saturday, June 15th(furnishes ample proof of the great popularity of the Cabaret. As a matter of mere business information the public may care to know that the attendance and receipts of the Park and Palm Garden last Saturday and Sunday ran way ahead of the opening Saturday and Sunday of a year ago when the Park and all its amusements were open full blast. With the Park and all its new amusement attractions in addition to that powerful magnet, the Cabaret, fully open for the eighth season next Saturday, it is quite evident that with favorable weather on the opening Saturday and Sunday and the holiday on the following Monday, Bunker Hill Day, the attendance will break all records. A special feature will be made of the fireworks display next Saturday evening, and Manager Dodge promises that the pyrotechnic programme on June 17th night will eclipse all previous efforts. Late boats will run back to Boston these three nights.

The long, varied and entirely novel Cabaret Show is run in the Palm Garden so successfully and with such evident satisfaction to all the patrons not without a tremendous expense. Some idea of what the outlay in money as well as in thoughtful planning must be realized to some extent when it is said that over 75 artists, musicians, singers, dancers, etc., are engaged in giving this unique entertainment. The extraordinary part of it is that there is no admission charged to the Cabaret, but guests are expected, of course, to patronize the Palm Garden.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Lindsay Morison believes that in offering a presentation of "The Rosary" to his patrons next week, he will be satisfying a general desire to see this remarkable play produced by a stock company. Bostonians are already familiar with the story of "The Rosary," for it has enjoyed a big run at one of the first class houses of the Hub, but this will be the first time it has ever been produced here in stock. Mr. Morison seems to have a strong penchant for being the first to produce a play in stock, although this penchant has often meant an enormous outlay in royalties. "The Rosary" is a piece which appeals equally to all denominations, for it possesses a love story that is full of human interest. The characters are true to life, in fact their prototypes may be found in every city and town of the country. Wonderful success has attended the production of the play, at one time there being six companies playing it simultaneously.

Mr. Morison is going to have built a special scenic equipment for the piece, and intends to leave out no detail that characterized the original. The entire strength of his company will be used in the portrayal, including Howell Hansel Miss Anna Cleveland, Mary Sanders, Mrs. George A. Hibbard, Rose Morison, Wyrley Birch, Frances Woodbury, H. Dudley Hawley and all the other favorites.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

With Wish Wynne, the famous English comedienne, and five other big novelties new to Boston audiences, included on the list, next week's bill at B. F. Keith's Theatre will be one of the best programmes offered at that popular playhouse this summer. Wish Wynne is the prettiest, daintiest, and most charming entertainer England ever sent to the shores of the United States. She is the pet of London, and her appearances in New York City have shown that American audiences quite agree with the verdict of their cousins across the seas. Miss Wynne does not sing her songs. She talks them, but so potent is the charm of her personality, and the carrying power of her wonderfully expressive voice, that she wins the good graces of her audiences before she has been on the stage five minutes. Miss Wynne's songs are all original with her and include "The Wind Blew Another Apple Down"; "The Drudge;" "The School Girl;" and "I Were Afraid," the last named being a cute little kid song. Aside from Miss Wynne, the bill will be notable for the number of novelties it contains. La Daodima, the Parisian art model, will introduce her beautiful "Visions d'Art," a most exquisite series of reproductions of the world's great masterpieces in sculpture and painting. La Daodina has created a genuine furore in every city where she has appeared and no doubt Boston will in turn fall captive to her charms. Cook and Lorenz, the merry musical tramps, and the cleverest pair of eccentric dancers on the boards today, will be on hand with their unique stunts; and other big features are the Six Brown Brothers, musical comedians; Rawson and Claire, just a couple of kids; Chapman and Berube, two wonderful equilibrists; The Zeraldas, head balancers and others.

CASTLE SQUARE.

The third week of "The Climax" begins at the Castle Square Monday afternoon with a special holiday matinee. This original play with music has made an emphatic sensation ever since its first performance, and it promises to be a ruling summer attraction. Its heroine, a beautiful singer who finds her ambitions towards an operatic career interrupted by love, is astonishingly well played by Miss Florence Webber, who sings as skilfully as she acts. There is music all through the play, Miss Webber sings three solos, among them the famous "Song of the Soul," and there is expert pianoforte playing by Carney Christie.

Mr. Craig has gathered an excellent company for this production at the Castle Square. Donald Meek gives a fine character impersonation as old Golfanti, Mr. Christie acts the ardent younger Golfanti with youthful charm, and Thomas Fallon is the self-satisfied physician to the life. There will be performances of "The Climax" every evening at the Castle Square, and matinee every day except Thursday.

HALF HOLIDAY ON SATURDAY

Ledger Force Will Enjoy It During Summer Months

Commencing tomorrow and continuing every Saturday during the balance of June and through the months of July and August, the Quincy Daily Ledger will go to press promptly at 12 o'clock, thus giving the employees in all departments of the printing office a half holiday.

In carrying out this plan the general public can do much towards its assurance and success by kindly co-operation. All Saturday advertisers, and others who have notices for the Saturday publication are requested to get them in as early as possible on Friday.

All persons who have news contributions of local interest will likewise confer a favor if they will send in whatever they have as early as possible.

This early going to press on Saturdays not only gives the office force a half holiday but it gives the newsboys a chance to deliver their papers early and still be in plenty of time for an afternoon ball game of their own or to attend one of the games in either part of the city which may attract their attention.

The public can help us in giving our force the half holiday and we ask the co-operation.

GREAT STRIDES IN STREET CAR SERVICE SINCE FIFTY YEARS AGO

Electric Power for Moving Cars First Used in Quincy Twenty-Four Years Ago

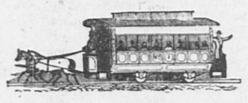
Original Horse Car Company Met With Obstacles and Discontinued Service

Albert Keating writing to the Ledger says "Fifty years ago today the Quincy and Boston Horse railroad opened for business. It ran from the house of George H. Field, Franklin street to State street, Boston. I was conductor on the first passenger car that ran over the road."

Mr. Keating is evidently a little mixed in his dates for according to the files of the Patriot, the opening day of the new mode of travel was Wednesday, May 7, 1862. The Patriot of May 10, 1862 speaking of the opening says:

"A new era in the future destiny of Quincy was inaugurated on Wednesday last.The new avenue of communication with our Metropolitan neighbors, the horse railroad, was thrown open for public travel.

"Five cars filled with ladies, who on this occasion, with their usual promptness, responded to the invitation of the managers, moved on at ten a. m. in gallant style for Boston, time occupied one hour and twenty minutes—this figure however will be lessened in future trials.



Type of First Horse Cars Used in Quincy.

"Everything is now reduced to a system, and is in fine working order; a good road, enterprising managers, carriages of a superior make,(fast teams, experienced conductors, a reduction in fare of one third, cars which run every hour from six a. m. till 9 p. m., an accommodation before denied us, are some of the advantages which the citizens will derive from this enterprise. It is an achievement of incalculable benefit to the place, and will receive the fostering care of the public."

Later issues of the Patriot speak of the increasing patronage given the cars and of the equipment which consisted of forty horses and twelve cars. Connection with the cars from Quincy Point as well as from Braintree and Weymouth was made by barges although later it was planned to build a railroad to Quincy Point.

On June 7, that year the company advertised its revised time table of cars. Under this schedule hourly cars for the corner of Broad and State streets Boston left Franklin corner from 7.05 a. m. until 9.05 p. m. and returning cars left Boston hourly from 7.15 a. m. until 11.15 p. m. R. B. Leuchards was the president of the company at that time.

Pattee's history speaking of the horse railroad says, "A few public spirited persons of the town, William S. Morton, John J. Glover and Robert B. Leuchards petitioned the Legislature for an act of incorporation to establish a horse railroad. The company was granted an act of incorporation February 15th, 1861. This road was soon constructed and extended from the foot of Penn's hill to Field's corner, in Ward twenty-four, Boston. At this place it connected with the Meropolitan railroad. This was a cheap and pleasant method of conveyance for our citizens, between this town and the city, and a great convenience in getting to various parts of the town on the line of the road.

Later the company purchased two dummy engines at great expense, steam dummy engines at great expense which proved successful as far as locomotion was concerned. The expense of running these was so much greater than horse power, that they were finally abandoned. This was a costly experiment for the company, which caused them to become embarrassed, and finally to discontinue the road. Up to the time of this unfortunate experiment they had transacted a very successful business."

From this period for many years Quincy was without street car service. In the latter part of the eighties however another movement to build a street railway was inaugurated and the Boston and Quincy company formed. They built their line which went into operation in 1888. It was on this line that electricity was first used successfully for street car propulsion. Later it was adopted in Boston and other large cities.

From this time up to the present the development of the street railway system in Quincy has been rapid. There have been numerous consolidations until now the local street railway is part of the Bay State street railway company, which controls practically all of the street railway lines to the north and south of Boston. It is also now possible to travel from Quincy by street cars to all parts of the state by connecting lines as well as to many of the states adjoining Massachusetts.

It is not wealth or ancestry, but honorable conduct and a noble disposition, that make men great.—Ovid.

TAFT CLASHES WITH CONGRESS

President's Ire Roused Over Major General Wood

Washington, June 14.—A clash between President Taft and congress, the like of which has not been seen since 1830, when President Andrew Jackson put in force the "pocket veto," is imminent.

The causes of the pending row are two important money measures, the army and the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills. He threatens to veto both.

In the first, President Taft charges, Major General Fred C. Ainsworth, who retired to escape court martial, and his friends in congress deliberately upset the organization of the army by injecting legislation for the sole purpose of "getting even" with Secretary of War Stimson and Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff.

In the second the president finds cause for being aggrieved in a clause abolishing his pet, the commerce court.

The president takes a stand similar to that adopted by Governor Foss in Massachusetts, to secure desired legislation. He has let it become known that if these two bills come to him in their present form—that is containing the new legislaion—he will veto them even if it ties up the wheels of government.

It was in the senate that the alarming conditions were made possible. It went further than the house in the matter of he commerce court. The lower body had simply cut off the appropriation for the court, but the senate actually abolished it.

An effort to reconsider the senate action with reference to the chief of staff limitations was unsuccessful by a vote of 28 to 29. Both these senate actions hit the president hard.

FEDERAL COURTS DECISION

Will be Impetus For Housewifes' Continued Frugality

Buffalo, June 14.—Judge Hazel, in the United States district court, has handed down an opinion in which he holds that money saved by a housewife from her expense account cannot be seized by her husband's creditors.

Some time ago M. C. Simon declared that he was insolvent both as an individual and as surviving member of the firm of Meyer & Simon. Mrs. Meyer, widow of the deceased member of the firm, had $4000, saved from her allowance of $75 a week for household expenses. The referee decided that the money should go to the creditors. Judge Hazel reversed the decision.

DEVELOPING NEW PROPERTY

Demonstrates Its Attractiveness in the Market

ADAMS FARM LAID OUT

The wisdom of thorough development of new property before attempting sale of lots has been fully demonstrated at the "Homestead Sale" of lots at the Merrymount Subdivision of the John Quincy Adams farm. This property is in the hands of Herbert T. Whitman, agent for the Adams family, and has been laid out with wide streets and granolithic sidewalks. Water pipes have been laid and a large pier has been built for the boating members of the new shore colony. The site of the new colony is certainly a most ideal one and as a result of careful advertising and the extensive and careful preparation all but ten of the shore lots have been sold and over seventy lots have been sold during the past ten days. In order to meet the demand for lots in this newest and most beautiful Boston suburbs the management has decided to open another tract on June 17, which will be known as Merrymount Annex. All of the property here is carefully restricted, and each deed is made subject to these restrictions. This one feature insures you a home site where you will find congenial neighbors and where you will be proud to live. Among the purchasers of lots in this new suburb during the past ten days are:—

Mary E. Tisdale, of Quincy, Passonagesset Knoll.

Frank W. Tucker, City Architect, Boston, Passonagesset Knoll.

Charles K. Farrington, Boston, Norton road.

Willis E. Carlsley, Treasurer, Bertelsen & Petersen Engineering Co.

George E. Durbeck, Norton road, Chicktabot road.

Mrs. Francis W. Bean, Passonagesset Knoll.

Louis Wipperman, of Boston, Norton road.

William P. Cotter, of Boston, Norton road.

John Eberle, of Boston, Norton road.

M. J. Curran, of Boston, Chickatabot road.

Francis J. Coughlin, of Boston, Chickatabot. road.

REMINDER OF ENGLISH HOME

English Captain Gained Such Impression of Quincy

An interested visitor in Quincy this week is Captain Donald McDougle, of the Prince Tudor, an English vessel, on which he sailed in company with a number of his fellow countrymen from across the seas. While in Quincy he is the guest of John F. Page, of the engineering department of the Fore River Ship Company, who himself has just returned from Italy, where he had been demonstrating the perfections of the turbines attained by Walter F. Rice of Johnson avenue, also affiliated with the local ship concern.

A peculiar coincident in the travels of both Captain McDougle and Mr. Page on their travel by water from Europe was that the ships on which they were travelling passed Gibraltar one hour apart and arrived in Boston at approximately the same time. Mr. Page is an intimate friend of the English captain, who regretted that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of the Quincy man, when both ships were in such close proximity at Gibraltar.

The English captain will remain in Quincy for the rest of the week. He is very much pleased with conditions in the "City of Presidents" and in an interview with Henry P. Kittredge, the well known politician, who conducts a variety store in Quincy square stated that many of the scenes of his city reminded him of his boyhood days in England.

LONG TRIP FOR YOUNGSTERS.

With shipping tags attached to them marked Boston, Mass., Frank Cronin, six years, and his four year old sister arrived at San Francisco on the steamer Nile, from Hongkong. The children who started en route for Boston at Manila, are now under the care of the immigrant officials and are bound for the home of their grandmother, 68 Jackson street, Boston. They have been given a purse of $85 by passengers on the Nile.

for noble action in the field of nursing, but knowledge and training are necessary to guide the work aright and make it safe and effective.

"We have tried to give you that knowledge and training and trust to your ability and faithfulness to carry on the work which you have so diligently begun. But remember that nursing is an art as well as a profession. More than sympathy and the desire to relieve human suffering, more than training in the principles and practices of nursing is needed to make you a successful nurse.

"You must have an adequate knowledge of the diversities and I might say perversities of human character in health and disease and you must learn to accommodate your own dispositions to these varying conditions if you can expect to make yourself acceptable to your patients and enable yourself to carry out your noble work.

"The private nurse comes very close to the bosom of the family. Let the knowledge so gained of whatever character be entirely hidden in your own hearts or soon be forgotten. You have no more right to gossip about the families you have been in or to carry information about their affairs than you have to steal. No nurse should be allowed the privacy and freedom of the household who has not the high type of womanhood which will make her loved, honored and respected.

"If you do your duty aright you will make many pleasing and endearing friendships in the practice of your profession, peculiarly enduring friendships that come from grateful hearts for your patience, skill and self-sacrifice.

"Treasure them as trophies of victory and the confident evidences of your success. Seek and treasure them, for they will be a well-spring of pleasure and joy to you as the years go by.

"Keep a warm place in your hearts for your alma mater, the little hospital on the hill with all its beautiful surroundings, the grey granite ledges, the green trees, the blue waters of the bay. It is here you received your preparations for your high calling. You can honor it most by doing your work well. May happy memories long linger around it and give you pleasure through the trials and vicissitudes of your lives.

"In the words of the immortal poet-physician, Oliver Wendell Holmes, I give you this benediction: "Love bless you, joy crown you, God speed your career."

Dr. Gordon was loudly applauded at the conclusion of his address. Fred B. Rice, chairman of the Board of Trustees made a few remarks, preparatory to conferring the diplomas, in the course of which he said that 64 graduates had gone forth from the Quincy Hospital, all of whom have since acquitted themselves in such a manner as to reflect great credit upon themselves and those who had given them instruction and upon the institution. He said that he had occasion from time to time to visit the hospital and had always found the nurses working energetically and courteously for the welfare of the hospital. He thanked those young ladies among the graduates whose courses were finished last winter, but who had stayed until now, giving their assistance at the Quincy hospital.

He spoke along the same lines as Dr. Gordon and wished them all the greatest possible success in their profession.

The following nurses received diplomas:—

Miss Alma Read of Quincy.
Miss Olive M. Marcille of Randolph.
Miss Mary A. Walsh of Roxbury.
Miss Sarah K. McIntosh of Roxbury.
Miss Lunda E. Hill of Sanford, Maine.
Miss Marion C. Mills of Rutland, Vermont.
Miss Catherine C. Black of Scotland.
Miss Ruth E. Barnard of Mattapan.

J. W. McLeod of London, England, accompanied by Professor Wrigley, rendered a solo which wes very favorably received. A prayer by Rev. James A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church closed the exercises.

Refreshments were served and many of those present were shown about the different parts of the hospital. Much interest was taken in the new operating rooms, which were opened for public inspection for the first time at the graduation. Every modern improvement and convenience has been arranged for the doctors and the operating rooms are equipped in a most up to date fashion, so much so that they can well rank among the best.

Among those in attendance was Mrs. Mary Rice, widow of the founder of Quincy Hospital.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

CHAPTER V.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock Laughs the First Time In Sixteen Years.

THE neighbor left, and Margaret packed their purchases into the big market basket. Wesley took the hat, umbrella and raincoat, and they went down to Mrs. Comstock's as they reached the step Margaret rose pleasantly to Mrs. Comstock, who sat reading just inside the door, but she did not answer.

Wesley Sinton opened the door and followed by Margaret.

"Mother," he said, "you needn't take on so mad over our little racket on the porch. I ain't told her a word I didn't tell you or you said to me. She's not to blame very strong, and she's sewed since 4 o'clock this morning to get this dress ready for tomorrow. It's done and we came down to try it on Elnora." Isn't that the truth, Mag Sinton?" he added Mrs. Comstock.

"You heard Wesley say so," proudly affirmed Mrs. Sinton.

"I want to make you a proposition," said Wesley. "Wait till Elnora comes. Then we'll show her the things and see what she says."

"How would it do to see what she says without bribing her?" muttered Mrs. Comstock.

"If she can stand what she did yesterday and will today she can bear most anything," said Wesley. "You take away the clothes if you want to till we tell her."

"Well, you don't take this waist I'm working on," said Margaret. "For I have to baste in the sleeves and set the collar. Put the rest out of sight if you like."

Mrs. Comstock picked up the basket and bundles, placed them inside her room and closed the door.

Margaret threaded her needle and began to sew. Mrs. Comstock returned to her book, while Wesley fidgeted and raged inwardly. He could see that Margaret was nervous and almost in tears, but the lines in Mrs. Comstock's impassive face were set and cold. So they sat and the clock ticked off the time—one hour, two, dusk, and no Elnora. Margaret long since had taken the last stitch she could. Occasionally she and Wesley exchanged a few words. Mrs. Comstock regularly turned a leaf and once arose and moved nearer a window. Just when Margaret and Wesley were discussing whether he had not best go to town to meet Elnora, they heard her coming up the walk. Wesley dropped his tilted chair and squared himself. Margaret gripped her sewing and turned pleading eyes to the door. Mrs. Comstock closed her book and grimly smiled.

"Mother, please open the door!" called Elnora.

Mrs. Comstock arose and swung open the screen. Elnora stepped in beside her, bent half double, the whole front of her dress gathered into a sort of bag filled with a heavy load and one arm stacked high with books. In the dim light she did not see the Sintons.

"Please hand me the empty bucket in the kitchen, mother," she said. "I just had to bring these arrow points home, but I'm scared for fear I've soiled my dress and will have to wash it. I'm to clean them and take them to the banker in the morning, and oh, mother, I've sold enough stuff to pay for my books, my tuition and maybe a dress and some lighter shoes besides. Oh, mother, I'm so happy! Take the books and bring the bucket!"

Then she saw Margaret and Wesley. "Oh, glory!" she exulted. "I was just wondering how I'd ever wait to tell you, and here you are! It's too perfectly splendid to be true!"

"Tell us, Elnora," said Sinton.

"Well, sir," said Elnora, doubling down on the floor and spreading out her skirt, "set the bucket here, mother. These points are brittle and have to be put in one at a time. If they are chipped I can't sell them." And she told all that had happened.

Elnora laid the last arrow point in the pail and arose, shaking leaves and bits of baked earth from her dress. She reached into her pocket and produced her money and waved it before their wondering eyes.

"And that's the joy part!" she exulted. "Put it up in the clock till morning, mother. That pays for the books and tuition and"— Elnora hesitated, for she saw the nervous grasp with which her mother's fingers closed on the bills. Then she went on, but more slowly and thinking before she spoke.

"What I get tomorrow pays for more books and tuition, and maybe a few, just a few, things to wear. These shoes are so dreadfully heavy and hot, and they make such a noise on the floor. There isn't another calico dress in the whole building, not among hundreds of us. Why, what is that? Aunt Margaret, what are you hiding in your lap?"

She snatched the waist and shook it out, and her face was beaming. "Have you taken to waists all fancy and buttoned in the back? I bet you this is mine!"

"I bet you so, too," said Margaret Sinton. "You undress right away and try it on, and if it fits it will be done for morning. There are some low shoes too!"

Elnora began to dance. "Oh, you dear people!" she cried. "I can pay for them tomorrow night! Isn't it too

"Please hand me the empty bucket in the kitchen, mother," she said.

splendid! I was just thinking on the way home that I certainly would be compelled to have cooler shoes until later, and I was wondering what I'd do when the fall rains begin."

"I meant to get you some heavy dress skirts and a coat then," said Mrs. Comstock.

"I know you said so!" cried Elnora. "But you needn't now. I can get every single stitch I need myself. I'll be helping with the tax next, mother."

Elnora waved the waist and started for the bedroom. When she opened the door she gave a little cry.

"What have you people been doing?" she demanded. "I never saw so many interesting bundles in all my life. I'm skeered to death for fear I can't pay for all of them and will have to give up something."

"Wouldn't you take them if you could not pay for them, Elnora?" asked her mother instantly.

"Why, not unless you did," answered Elnora. "People have no right to wear things they can't afford, have they?"

"But from such old friends as Maggie and Wesley!" Mrs. Comstock's voice was oily with triumph.

"From them least of all," cried Elnora stoutly. "From a stranger sooner than from them, to whom I owe so much more than I ever can pay now."

"Well, you don't have to," said Mrs. Comstock. "Maggie just selected these things because she is more in touch with the world and has got such good taste. You can pay as long as your money holds out, and if there's more necessary maybe I can sell the butcher a calf, or if there's things too costly for us, of course, they can take them back. Anything that ain't used can be returned. They were only brought here on trial."

The girl began opening the packages. The hat came first.

"Mother!" cried Elnora. "Mother, of course, you have seen this, but you haven't seen it on me. I must try it on."

"Don't you dare put that on your head until your hair is washed and properly combed," said Margaret. "While it dries you can eat your supper, and this dress will be finished. Then you can put on your new ribbon and your hat. That little round bundle on the top of the basket is your stockings."

Margaret sat down and began sewing swiftly and a little later opened the machine and ran several long seams.

Elnora was back in a few minutes, holding up her skirts and stepping daintily in the beautiful new shoes.

Wesley and Margaret scarcely breathed for a long time. Then Wesley went to do the feeding. Elnora set the table. When the water was hot Margaret pinned a big towel around Elnora's shoulders and washed and dried the lovely hair according to the instructions she had been given the previous night. As the hair began to dry it billowed out in a sparkling sheen that caught the light and gleamed and flashed.

"Now, the idea is to let it stand naturally, just as the curl will make it. Don't you do any of that nasty, untidy snarling, Elnora," cautioned Margaret. "Wash it this way every two weeks while you are in school, shake it out and dry it. Then part it in the middle and turn a front quarter on each side from your face. You tie the back at your neck with a string—so, and the ribbon goes in a big, loose bow. I'll show you." One after another Margaret Sinton tied the ribbons, creasing each of them so they could not be returned, as she explained that she was trying to see which was most becoming. Then she produced the raincoat, which carried Elnora into transports.

To Wesley and to Margaret the bright young face of Elnora, with its pink tints, its heavy dark browns, its bright blue gray eyes and its frame of curling reddish brown hair was the sweetest sight on earth, and at that instant Elnora was radiant.

She set the hat on her head. It was just a wide tan straw with three exquisite peacock quills at one side. Margaret Sinton cried out, Wesley slapped his knee and sighed like a blast and Mrs. Comstock stood speechless for a second.

"I wish you had asked the price before you put that on," she said impatiently. "We never can afford it."

"It's not so much as you think," said Margaret. "Don't you see what I did? I had them take off the quills and I put on some of those Phoebe Simms gave me from her peacocks. The hat will only cost you a dollar and a half."

She avoided Wesley's eyes and looked straight at Mrs. Comstock. Elnora removed the hat to examine it.

"Why, they are those reddish tan quills of yours!" she cried. "Mother, look how beautifully they are set on! I think they are fine. I'd much rather have them than those from the store."

"So would I," said Mrs. Comstock. "If Margaret wants to spare them, that will make you a beautiful hat, dirt cheap, too! You must go past Mrs. Simms and show her. She would be pleased to see them."

Elnora sank into a chair because she couldn't stand any longer and contemplated her toe. "Landy, ain't I a queen?" she murmured. "What else have I got?"

"Just a belt, some handkerchiefs and a pair of top shoes for rainy days and colder weather," said Margaret, handing over parcels.

"About those high shoes, that was my idea," said Wesley. "Soon as it rains low shoes won't do, and by taking two pairs at once I could get them some cheaper. The low ones are two and the high ones two-fifty, together three seventy-five. Ain't that cheap?"

"That's a real bargain," said Mrs. Comstock, "if they are good shoes, and they look it."

"This," said Wesley, producing the last package, "is your Christmas present from your Aunt Maggie. I got mine, too, but it's at the house. I'll bring it up in the morning."

He handed Margaret the umbrella, and she passed it over to Elnora, who opened it and sat laughing under its shelter. Then she kissed both of them. She got a pencil and a slip of paper and set down the prices they gave her of everything they had brought except the umbrella, added the sum and said laughingly: "Will you please wait till tomorrow for the money? I will have it then, sure."

"Elnora," said Wesley Sinton, "wouldn't you"—

"Elnora, hustle here a minute!" called Mrs. Comstock from the kitchen "I need you!"

"One second, mother," answered Elnora, throwing off the coat and hat and closing the umbrella as she ran. There were several errands to do in a hurry, and then supper. Elnora chattered incessantly, Wesley and Margaret talked all they could, while Mrs. Comstock said a word now and then, which was all she ever did. But Wesley Sinton was watching her, and time and again he saw a peculiar little twist around her mouth. He knew that for the first time in sixteen years she really was laughing over something. She had all she could do to preserve her usually sober face. Wesley knew what she was thinking.

After supper the dress was finished, the plans for the next one discussed, and then the Sintons went home. Elnora gathered her treasures.

As she started for the stairs she stopped. "May, I kiss you good night, mother?" she asked lightly.

"Never mind any slobbering," said Mrs. Comstock. "I should think you'd lived with me long enough to know that I don't care for it."

"Well, I'd love to show you in some way how happy I am and how I thank you."

"I wonder what for?" said Mrs. Comstock. "Mag Sinton picked that stuff and brought it here, and you pay for it."

"Yes, but you seemed willing for me to have it, and you said you would help me if I couldn't pay all," insisted Elnora.

"Maybe I did," said Mrs. Comstock. "Maybe I did. I meant to get you some heavy dress skirts about Thanksgiving, and I still can get them. Go to bed and for mercy's sake don't begin mooning before a mirror and make a dunce of yourself."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

LABOR UNIONS TAKE HOLD

Unite On Question of Recognizing Union Rights

LABOR GATHERING ON COMMON

Chief Justice Rugg Suggested as Arbitrator—Arrangements Being Perfected For Meeting on Common Sunday—Preceded by Monster Parade—Bay State Men Contribute Ten Cents Per Day—Numerous Accidents Occur

Boston, June 14.—Leadership of the present strike against the Boston Elevated Railway Company is gradually passing into the hands of the Boston Central Labor union, with which practically all the regular labor organizations in the city are affiliated. There is a conference at strike headquarters between the C. L. U. and the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, which is trying to organize the Elevated company employes. One of the first decisions of this conference was that there shall be a parade in Boston next Sunday afternoon and a mass meeting on the common, and that they shall be under auspices of the Boston Central Labor union. Through the agency of that union the strikers are enlisting the active cooperation of nearly all crafts that are organized, and the issue over which they make common cause is their right to form a union, which, they say, the company is denying them. The C. L. U. will meet this evening to complete the arrangements for the demonstration.

The most substantial support, thus far announced, will come from the car men in the employ of the Bay State Street Railway company. Notices were posted in some of the barns of that company to the effect that the union members will be assessed 10 cents a day for the benefit of the Boston Elevated strikers and fined $1 if caught riding in an Elevated car.

Accidents to the street cars have been so numerous the last few days that they were the subject of discussion by the Elevated management yesterday. The company is having detailed reports on all of them and find that its green men are not responsible for all. The fact that there is a strike places emphasis on accidents, says the company, which hardly would attract attention in ordinary times.

One car, with a large number of passengers, jumped the tracks on the Broadway Extension bridge and was only saved from crashing through to the tracks below, by striking an iron post. There was a rear-end collision in the East Boston tunnel in which one passenger was hurt and two fainted. One or two suffered minor injuries and several women fainted, in each accident.

John R. Hutchinson of 106 Tremont street, Brighton, was held in $5000 in the Brighton court on a new charge of conspiracy. The police allege that he conspired with William H. Shandberg, a striker, who was held in similar bail, to place dynamite on the car tracks in Commonwealth avenue.

Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Masaschusetts supreme court may be the arbiter of the Boston street car strike, if the suggestion of the striking carmen is favored.

Over the long distance telephone from his home in Worcester, Judge Rugg refused last night to say whether or not he would accept the invitation. It is believed that he will make no positive statement, unless both sides of the strike formally request him to serve.

Both publicly and privately the officials of the Elevated have reiterated they will not arbitrate or treat with the carmen's union. "We do not recognize that there is any strike," said Vice President Brush.

Practically normal service was claimed by the Elevated on all its lines the past twenty-four hours.

A few days ago some one visited my garden, which is always open, and took about 150 tomato plants that I intended to give away. WARD SIX CELEBRATION

Various Committees Report Progress and Enthusiasm

At the regular meeting of Ward Six Patriotic association held Thursday evening at headquarters there was a large attendance. Edward Gallagher, chairman of parade committee reported that the progress made was very encouraging, as a large number of features for the parade have already been entered and more are under way.

The fancy ball game committee was represented by the chairman C. E. Cherrington who said that many entries have been made.

Reports were heard from the athletic committee and the semi-professional ball game committee.

Requests were made that all entries be in early as possible, to aid the committee in their work.

Josiah C. Fuller, chairman of finance committee was very happy in receiving reports of collections from his committee.

Ice cream tickets for the children have been distributed to all who attend Quincy school and those not thus reached will be visited by the collectors and given tickets as soon as possible.

The collectors expect to have a good report to make at the next regular meeting.

Headquarters have been nicely decorated inside and a large transparency outside, when lighted, gives the appearance that a celebration of our natal day is near at hand.

MUCH RESPECTED CITIZEN DEAD

Dennis Shea, Noted for Christian Life, Passed Away

Dennis Shea, for almost a half century a resident of West Quincy and one of the city's most prominent citizens, died at his late home 25 Larry Place, Thursday evening. He was 70 years of age and had endeared himself during his many years of residence in the west section of the city, to a wide circle of friends, who deeply mourn his loss.

Mr. Shea was a devout Catholic and was known to all for his piety. He had frequently taken an active part in church affairs and was highly respected by both young and old. He was a charter member of the St. Mary' Catholic Total Abstinence and Mutual Relief Society and was a splendid type of Christian gentleman.

The deceased was also a member of St. Francis Court, No. 25, M. C. O. F., of Division 4, A. O. H., of St. Mary's Holy Name Society and of the League of the Sacred Heart of which he was a most conspicuous member. He was one of the oldest residents of Quincy and for a number of years was in the employ of the city department. A wife, two sons, James and Timothy and a daughter, Mrs. Frank Gallagher, survive him.

The funeral services, which are in charge of undertaker Edward D. Barrett, will take place from his late home Saturday morning. A requiem high mass will be celebrated for him at nine o'clock in St. Mary's church.

HEADLINERS WILL BATTLE

Leaders in Quincy League to Try Their Mettle

OTHER BASE BALL EVENTS

A game which gives every promise of being the best that has been played this season between any two teams of the Quincy City Base Ball league, takes place on the Water street grounds Saturday afternoon when the South Quincy combination and the Quincy A. A., both of whom are tied for first honors in the league, clash in battle royal. Neither team has yet tasted defeat and as the rivalry between both is exceptionally keen, a warm game is bound to be in order.

The South Quincy team will depend on Comolli, its clever south-paw to carry off the honors of the day, while Hebert is the man upon whom the Quincy A. A. supporters are depending for victory. The Quincy A. A. team will have the same line-up as in every game thus far with the possible exception of first base, which will be covered by the elongated Leary, who has been classed as one of the best first sackers in semi-professional ranks. George Fallon will hold down the initial bag for South Quincy, while "Dode" Fitzgerald will go to his regular berth in the outer garden.

This game has been eagerly awaited for some time and as both teams claim numerous rooters and supporters, a record breaking crowd should be in attendance for the occasion.

The Western Electric team will be the attraction at the Ward Three playgrounds Saturday, when they will try to defeat the Orients. Monday, will see the Orients in two games, the morning game at Dorchester with the Roger Wolcotts, a team that needs no introduction to base ball fans, and in the afternoon back at their old stamping grounds, Ward 3, with the strong team that represents Co. A, 8th regiment. Bradley and Carlson will endeavor to bring home the bacon in all three games and with the Orients stinging the pellet in anywhere near the manner in which they batted last Saturday, both twirlers should pull out victorious.

Merrymount Park will be the scene of a great base ball struggle to-morrow afternoon when the Quincy Y. M. C. A. nine lines up against the strong Colonials from West Quincy. All who remember the contest of last year between these same two aggregations know full well what may be expected this time. The West Quincy tossers have a clean record to date but the Association boys with vengeance teeming in their veins, will use every effort to land a victory and thus turn the tables for the triumph gained by the Colonials last year in one inning. Foster will cover the mound for the Y. M. C. A. team and as he is travelling at a fast clip this season, the Colonials will have to strain every muscle to make him bite the dust.

The Colonials have been greatly strengthened for this game by the addition of "Reggie" MacDonald, the crack High school pitcher and "Bill" O'Brien the popular young catcher who has been working on several strong independent teams.

The Y. M. C. A. will have Foster and Croucher to do the box work with Holmes or Clark on the receiving end.

SATURDAY'S BASE BALL.

General Electric Company vs Orients at Ward three playgrounds.

SWAT THE FLY

Chairman Teasdale told of the cleaning up of the malaria mosquito in West Quincy several years ago. At that time there were 76 cases in a restricted section. Today there is not a case there.

The local board has this year already started the fight and one thousand gallons of fuel oil have been spread on the ponds of the city.

Tomorrow this must stop as the funds are too low. He hoped that the citizens would look to their councilmen and have the appropriation passed in order that in time we may be rid of the mosquito.

Dr. Frederick E. Jones warned those present against raising flies in garbage pails. He differed with a previous speaker in letting flies at the garbage at all. The secret was not in raising flies on the filth but having it where the fly could not reach it.

The subject of the garbage pail was an important one. He would wager that not one quarter of those present had not had a new pail this year.

They had sat in the kitchen and cussed the carelessness of the garbage man but had not gone and got a new pail.

Dr. Jones brought many points home to his audience in caring for their own places. In conclusion he urged patronage of those dealers who were best fulfilling the proper health conditions.

James Thomas, the third member of the board spoke briefly and asked all to report any nuisances noticed to the Board of Health in order to maintain the highest efficiency.

Mr. Teasdale added a word asking forbearance in the matter of burning over public dumps. This has to be done once in a while to destroy the rubbish and exterminate insect life.

In response to a request for the proper style of garbage pail Chairman Teasdale stated that a sample of the best type had been placed on exhibition at City Hall.

Representative Leslie on account of the lateness of the hour spoke briefly. Although but in its infancy this association had been doing good work in the neighborhood.

He was glad to see similar organizations spreading through the city. They were accomplishing splendid results and he wished them Godspeed in their work.

Vocal solos by Mrs. William H. Spooner, "Mattinata" by Tosti and the "June Song" by Nevin were enjoyed.

Mrs. Albert S. Vail contributed two delightful readings entitled "Seein' things" an "The Moo Cow."

Refreshments and a social hour closed the evening. Meetings will be resumed in September.

POPULAR RESIDENT DEAD.

James W. Keenan, of 209 Willard street, died at his late home this morning. He was one of the most popular residents of the West Quincy district and the announcement of his death came as a severe blow to the large number of friends to whom he has always endeared himself.

He was 60 years of age and had resided in West Quincy for a number of years. The late Mr. Keenan was a member of St. Francis Court, No. 25, M. C. O. F. and had frequently taken an active part in many affairs held by the court. The funeral services will take place from his late home, Sunday afternoon.

Prayers will be offered up for him in St. Mary's church at 2 p. m. The deceased is survived by a wife and family.

BAR ELECTED COUNCILLORS.

A meeting of the Quincy Bar association was held Thursday evening, at which the following were elected as the board of councillors. Frank A. Tirrell, John D. Mackay, Phillip H. Sullivan, Walter S. Pinkham, J. J. McAnarney, William P. Thompson, William R. Thomas, George W. Abele, and James L. Edwards.

It was also voted that any attorney in the East Norfolk district should be eligible for membership.

OLD COLONY ASSOCIATION.

The quarterly meeting of the Old Colony Association, Universalist, will be held at Marion, Mass., on Wednesday, June 26. Meeting will open at 10.45 and at 11 o'clock there will be an address by Mr. Charles C. Smith of the New Bedford Y. M. C. A. Subject "Work with Boys." This will be followed by a discussion opened by Rev. H. C. Gale of New Bedford. The ladies of the Marion parish will serve lunch at noon. After lunch there will be time to see a portion of one of the most popular summer resorts on the Massachusetts coast. At 1.30 P. M. there will be a business meeting followed at two o'clock by a discussion of Woman's Missionary Work opened by Mrs. L. W. Attwood of So. Weymouth. Quite a number are going from Brockton, as usual, and they will travel by electric car. Those who desire to accompany them may write to Rev. O. Howard Perkins.

BIG MEETING ON CELEBRATION

Fourth of July Association Much Encouraged

EVERY ONE WELCOME

There should be a large attendance tonight at the July Fourth celebration meeting at the rooms of the Board of Trade. The collectors in the several wards have been at work all this week and from reports that have leaked out the collections have been considerably larger than last year. People have for two years seen what the committee have to give for the money collected and everybody is perfectly satisfied that all funds have been well expended. Everybody has had a good time the citizens have remained at home and there has been an absence of the numerous fires and arrests for drunkenness and other causes that usually mark the celebration of the National holiday.

The committee needs fully $2,000 to carry out the program as outlined. Even more than that amount could be well expended. Attend tonight's meeting and give the committee encouragement by your presence as well as the benefit of your advice.

FLAG DAY.

Paul J. Revere Corps 103, observed Flag day at the home of the president, Mrs. Mary E. Powers by special invitation. The house was decorated with flags and cut flowers, and all members wore a flag in honor of the day. The exercises in charge of the Patriotic Instructr were as follows: Reading of Scriptures; Lord's prayer by the Chaplain; Mrs. Marion Baker; piano selections Mrs. Bertha McCurdy; vocal selections Mrs. Exelis Nason; reading Mrs. Nason;, Mrs. Idella Savage, Mrs. Marion Baker, Mrs. Ella Hayden, Mrs. Belinda Richardson, Mrs. Sarah Williams, Mrs. Annie Grignon and Mrs. Anna Gould; Mrs. Savina Dailey gave a sketch of her visit to Rockland; Mrs. Kate Blaisdell gave her Memorial day address; Mrs. Penniman read a selection relative to the flag, and Mrs. Blaisdell, by request a Memorial day piece, entitled "Miss Hetty gets ready," which she gave in Brockton before a large Memorial day assemblage.

The exercises closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner, and the Flag salute.

Mrs. Powers then served refreshments. She was the recipient of many pretty gifts, including flowers and money, it being her birthday. A pretty feature was the presentation of a bouquet of pinks and roses for her little granddaughter Catherine Powers.

All wished her many happy returns of the birthday, which will long be remembered as it comes on the same day as Flag day .

SCHOOLS UNITE IN A GOOD TIME

Principal Goodspeed Handsomely Remembered by Pupils

A JOYOUS GATHERING

The graduation party at the Wollaston school, Friday evening, will long be remembered by the class of 1912, as one of the happiest events in their school history.

With the pupils and parents of the graduating class of the Massachusetts Fields school as guests of the Wollaston parents, the graduates of the two schools made merry with an entertainment, songs, and dancing until a late hour.

The decorations were very effective, a large flag hanging above the platform and one side of the hall being hung with the orange banners of the Massachusetts Fields school, the other with the old rose of Wollaston.

Daisies and other flowers brightened the platform while on display was the championship cup won by Wollaston and a picture of the ball team winning it.

TRIBUTE TO FLAG BY QUINCY ELKS

Very Impressive Service Held at Lodge Club House

MEMBERS MADE ADDRESSES

The 135th anniversary of the birth of the American flag was fittingly observed by Quincy lodge of Elks Friday evening at their club house on Foster street. The service, a very pretty one was conducted by the officers of the lodge assisted by a large gathering of the members. The spacious rooms of the club house were profusely decorated with the National emblem and the service was held in the parlors.

HON. JOHN D. SMITH
Who Gave Tribute to the Flag.

The exercises commenced shortly after 8 o'clock with an overture selection by Binney's orchestra during which the officers marched in and took their respective stations. In the absence of Exalted Ruler George A. Jordan, the chair was filled by Phillip H. Sullivan, the Esteemed Leading Knight. The other officers to take part were James W. Sweeney, as Esteemed Leading Knight, John Hilderbrand as Esteemed Loyal Knight, Edward D. Larkin as Esteemed Lecturing Knight, Secretary John D. Smith and Edward J. Desmond as Esquire. The office of Chaplain was filled by John Hilderbrand. In place of the usual wand carried by the Esquire he carried an American flag.

The ritualistic opening service was conducted by the officers which included prayer by the Chaplain, history of the flag by James W. Sweeney, Song, "The Star Spangled Banner." Then came the Elk's toast at 11 o'clock to the absent brother which was followed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The Elks tribute to the flag was then given by the Hon. John D. Smith which was followed by the singing of "America." Then came the closing exercises by the officers and patriotic airs by the orchestra.

Refreshments were served after the exercises.

DUTY THE WATCHWORD

Every available seat was taken at graduating exercises of the grammar schools, held Thursday afternoon in the assembly hall of the High school. Every detail was carried out to complete satisfaction and the graduation was proclaimed by all to have equalled if not surpassed any of those held in previous years.

The hall itself presented a most imposing spectacle and great charm was added to the program as the different schools marched into the hall to their places, carrying their school colors and headed by a girl standard bearer, who carried the banner of the school which she attended. The graduates were becomingly attired, the boys in blue suits, with white blouses and neckties ands the girls in spotles white dresses, thus producing a spectacle that will be treasured up forever in the minds of those who were in attendance.

The graduates totalled 460 but every plan was carried out and perfected as though there was but a single class. The music was very entrancing and those who rendered numbers, under the direction of Miss Emma F. Perkins, deserve their full share of praise for their splendid work. The stage was very prettily decorated for the affair and the abundance of daisies that were strewn about the list of diplomas was typical of a real garden scene.

Seated on the platform were Superintendent Albert L. Barbour, Jeremiah E. Burke, assistant superintendent of schools in Boston, truant officer Charles H. Johnson, chairman John L. Miller of the school Board and members of the school committee.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Jeremiah E. Burke, assistant superintendent of public schools in Boston, who talked about thirty minutes. He gave a discourse on "Service in Life," which was replete with many weighty and useful suggestions and thoughts for those who were just going forth into the world from the grammar school. Mr. Burke spoke in a forceful manner and his remarks were heard most distinctly in all parts of the hall.

He started out by congratulating those who had been declared eligible for diplomas but added that their battle in life had just begun, albeit that they have reached the goal in one field. The speaker alluded to his recent travels through Europe and spoke of the many observations that had come under the survey of inspection in different countries across the seas. The one thing that seemed to attract his attention and demand his utmost concentration while across the Atlantic was the wonderful size and efficiency of the navies, especially that of England.

He injected the famous expression of Lord Nelson: "England expects every man to do his duty," and went on to show that its application at that time as well as at the present day was most pertinent. The strength of England,, the speaker declared, was in her navy. The manners and customs of the English sailors were briefly described and the stringent rule of disci-

AIR LINE MAIL FROM SQUANTUM

One Trip from Aviation Field to New York Planned

AT AVIATOR'S EXPENSE

An experimental aeroplane mail route between Squantum and New York has been authorized by Joseph Steward, second assistant postmaster general. Information to that affect has reached Superintendent Ryan of the railway mail service.

The name of the carrier to be sworn in has not been made public, but he will be a well known aviator. The trip will be only one way, the date being set for June 29, or thereabouts. The trip must be made at the expense of the aviator.

Congress has appropriated $50,000 for an aeroplane mail service, and if this experiment proves a success some of the money might be appropriated for a trial service in New England. It is likely this experimental trip will be made partly by water and partly by land.

BANK HOURS.

The National Mt. Wollaston and the National Granite Banks will be open the holiday the usual hours.

The Junior Christian Endeavorers, held a very successful meeting in Bethany church vestry Thursday afternoon. A salad supper was served to which ample justice was done. This will be the last meeting until September.

OBJECT TO SUNDAY FLYING

Ministerial Association Expression Against It

MAYOR TO BE INTERVIEWED

The Ministerial Association which represents every Protestant church in Quincy as well as the Y. M. C. A. is putting in a protest to the Mayor against the aviation meet being held on Sunday in Quincy.

They have no intimation that Mayor Stone would for a moment consider the granting of a permit for Sunday flying as Quincy is especially good in Sabbath observance. Yet the ministers will interview him to assure him that he can depend on them for moral support in standing up for the best traditions of Quincy.

Rev. T. W. Davison of Atlantic, secretary of the Ministerial Association was interviewed Thursday and said the committee appointed to interview Mayor Stone was Rev. C. P. Marshall of Quincy Point, Rev. R. E. Armstrong of Christ Church and Rev. Carl Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian. Mr. Davison thought almost every citizen of any standing in Atlantic would protest against the meet being held on Sunday. He did not think there would be any Sunday flying, but stated on good authority the permits had been asked for as well as on the other days.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

There were 460 happy grammar school graduates in Quincy yesterday.

"Acquisition of knowledge and what to do with it?" Both are problems which the future alone can determine.

The Boston street car strike has now run nine days and things have seemed to settle down to normal conditions. The attitude of the courts in dealing with disorderly strikers and sympathizers had a good effect in preserving order.

The warring factions of the Massachusetts Republican party have agreed to agree as far as Chicago as they both travel on the same train, but arrived at their destination they will be as far apart as the poles.

The vice-presidential joke is having its regular periodical revival.

Another woman has been pronounced as thoroughly familiar with the flying machine. It will be soon time to read of her hasty and fatal flight to earth.

That Boston chamber of commerce bunch is having some outing if any one should ask you. In what manner will they be able to turn trade and commerce to the Hub?

Mexicans are said to be tiring of revolution. Well it is about time. They have certainly had enough of it the past few months. Was it all brought about through patriotism or of filthy lucre furnished by those who desired to profit by the revolutionary disturbances.

That colored school boy athlete of Springfield turns out to be a full fledged man with a wife and family. But then in the south negroes are called boys as long as they hobble.

Good bye old school may you be as kind to my successors as you have been to me, "is the parting cry of the 1912 graduate."

It will be all crimson next week.

Rich in years, rich in good deeds, former Mayor Green of Boston left one hospital to go to another amidst the commingled tears and well wishes of the little tots whose days he brightened by his presence even while suffering an ailment himself. Such a testimonial is crown enough for the venerable head of one whom every one wishes a speedy recovery.

May Charlesttown have as good a Seventeenth as Quincy anticipates for the Fourth.

According to all acounts Culebra pass is a most slippery proposition. It keeps a moving and a moving all the time.

A Brockton minister says that people remain poor through lack of hope. How about the average editor. No one has heard of him losing hope, yet he is perrenially and miserably poor.

NOT COMPATIBLE WITH FACTS.

Lieutenant Governor Luce holding the position he does with his eyes on the side lines leading to places higher up in the gift of the people, is hardly placing himself in an attitude of soliciting confidence in his intentions when he says that the present primary laws are successful in their operation and that this was demonstrated by the large percentage of voters who were registered at the last caucusses.

Surely he cannot have persuaded himself that what he says is a fact and even if he has gone to that extent of closing his own eyes to the real situation he cannot be so short sighted so as to assume for a minute that his mere statement in face of the facts is going to pull the wool over the eyes of the average voter possessed of average intelligence. It is beneath the dignity of the office of Lieutenant Governor to attempt to deceive the people in such a way. It brings into question his reliability, and sincerity. It creates an element of doubt in the minds of people. If he can be so flagrantly insincere and lacking in presenting the true facts in this particular instance there is the probability that he would be equally unreliable in other departments. Only a few years ago in caucusses in different parts of the state over 70 per cent of the party voting strength was cast at caucusses. In the face of this can it be said that the recent pitable exhibition can be called a largely attended and successful caucusses? We do not believe that the people have any such idea. The quicker the caucus laws are brought down to a common sense and simplified form the better it will be all around. And by the way one Luce caucus law is enough by way of experiment.

PRESENT DAY NOVELS.

Taken as a whole is there a great deal to go into ecstasies over in the present day novel. In almost every Sunday magazine supplement, every paper, and kind of publications are turned out stories bearing the names of the premier writers of the present day. They are extensively advertised. The commercial spirit is uppermost.

The way some authors names are handed around the story output which they sign they must be simply talking into a machine which later turns them over to some one else. Are the novels of the present day as enthralling, are they as full of that thrill, that nameless something which makes you desire to absorb every word it contains, compels you to sit up longer than usual burning the midnight oil in order to reach the climax? There are grave doubts that any of the present day products would cause any one to inconvenience themselves the least particle to quickly learn the fate of Gladsom Gladys or if Winsome Willie was accepted or given the mitten.

On the other hand take the works of Dumas, Balzac, Hugo, Dickens and others. How many people have turned time and again to the Three Guardsmen for recreation and stimulus even after once reading it from cover to cover. How many times have the works of Hugo and Balzac and Dickens called for a second perusal without a tinge of weariness from the operation. So the question arises are the novels of today as inspiring as holding in their interest as those of former ages? The action of the public and the manner in which books are treated is the best answer to that.

pline to which they were subject was vividly brought forth.

He then took up his observations in Switzerland and added that strict appliance to principle together with a love for fellow countrymen that knew no bounds was largely responsible for the peace and prosperity which Switzerland has enjoyed to the present day. "And returning home," continued Mr. Burke, "when my vision revealed to me the stars and stripes fluttering to the breezes, a deep feeling of emotion coursed through my veins and my most acute and sensitive nerves having been touched, I realized that my own native land has an illustrious navy and that the success of these free and independent states was due to its efficiency."

Mr. Burke then went on to draw timely lessons from such observations, which could be applied to the natural course of events in this life. He said that the graduates were now imbued with the elements of knowledge, but that they should inculcate a spirit of love and esteem for mankind and thus try to bring about the true brotherhood of man. Success he declared did not consist in caring for one's brother unless one's brother reciprocated the kindness.

The purpose of the school, he said, was to teach service. He urged the graduates to help all to whom it was possible to extend a lending hand and concluded by stating that success would crown their efforts and they could rest safe in the satisfaction that they had performed their duties as was intended. He was given rounds of applause at the close of his address.

The exercises closed with the singing of "America" and the gathering dispersed after a most successful and enjoyable program had been carried out. The colors of the different schools, which occupied conspicuous positions at the graduation were as follows:

Lawyer Who Put Abe Ruef Out of Graft Game Is Now Fighting For Roosevelt.

PRESIDENT TAFT FEELS CONFIDENT

Believes He Will Be Nominated on First Ballot

HUGHES REFUSES TO BE USED

Washington, June 15.—"There will be no third candidate. All the information I get is that I will be nominated on the first ballot with votes to spare."

This was President Taft's answer to a visitor who asked his position in regard to a compromise candidate at the Republican national convention.

The president has not the remotest doubt that he will be nominated at the Chicago convention, and that the Republican party will not have to worry about a third candidate.

As to a dark horse or third candidate the president has refused to talk on the subject even to his most intimate friends. He even refuses to acknowledge such a possibility. His advices from his friends and from Chicago are so conclusive that he apparently has dismissed the third candidate talk as nonsense.

In the event that a deadlock should occur and neither Mr. Taft nor Mr. Roosevelt should be able to receive the nomination, the president has stated that he wants to have a say in who the dark horse shall be. Although he has refused to discuss the subject, it stands to reason that he has given it some thought.

Chicago, June 15.—That the enemy is demoralized by dissension in his camp and the Roosevelt forces will continue doing all they can to increase this demoralization—such is the substance of the statements heard at the ex-president's headquarters. According to Senator Dixon, who in this agrees with many of the rumors current, the first sign of the pending panic was the "Missouri compromise," which, some say, will be as historic as a former compromise of the same name. And the Missouri compromise, in turn, is traced to Secretary Nagel, of whom the Roosevelt manager said yesterday: "Secretary Nagel is an honest man."

Many of the Roosevelt leaders concede the improbability of the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt on the first ballot, but at the same time say that President Taft cannot muster enough votes to adopt the report of the committee on credentials. Here is the point where they claim the Taft ships will go on the rocks. The credentials committee, it is admitted by many, will be similar to the national committee.

While conceding the truth of the claim of the Taft men that the president still leads, it must be said that the movement to defeat Roosevelt and nominate a third man if Taft by any chance fails has taken aggressive shape. It is being engineered by the friends of Cummins. Of course the Taft leaders will not listen to any suggestion of a shift to Cumimns, but they are watching the Cummins boosters like hawks. Senator William S. Kenyon is in charge for Cummins and has started to organize a group of delegates with whom he hopes to prevent a nomination on the first ballot. Unless this is done, and, providing more than one ballot be taken, the deadlock will not be tied up so tight that it cannot be broken. The confusion following would inevitably work out to the advantage of Roosevelt. The Taft men, however, believe they will win on the first ballot.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, reached Chicago late today to lead the fight for his nomination at the Republican convention.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Pathos of City's Cripples and Waifs on a Country Outing—What Daisies and Buttercups Means to the Kiddies—Outdoor Dog Show Has its Day—Only Five Per Cent of Charlestown Folk Have Ever Climbed Bunker Hill Monument—Hub Professor's Diaphonogramme is Simpler Than it Sounds.

Many Bostonians wondered what was going on one morning recently when all outgoing local trains on the Boston & Albany line were besieged by companies of canines, big and little, who were hustled onto the platforms and into the baggage cars amidst yelps and expostulations of varying degrees of ferocity. It was all because of the annual open air dog show held on the grounds of the Woodland Park Hotel at Auburndale, and comprising about one thousand of the prize and near-prize winners of society. They were brought from as far as Butte, Montana, to compete in the contests, and the promise of exciting competition under the blue June skies lured hundreds of society folk to the show.

Those who saw the long procession of 400 automobiles on their way to Sharon lake, each filled to its capacity with happy children from the various charitable institutions in the Hub, had it brought home to them very plainly what a day's outing in the country means to the little crippled and sightless waifs of the big city. Someone was heard to ask what good it did to take the blind children along—they couldn't see any more than in their institution yard. The keenly trained senses of the children from the blind asylums were perhaps even more susceptible to the cool breezes, the exhilaration of the smooth gliding cars, the smell of the good green earth and the daisies and buttercups and the joy of feeling the vast expanse around them with no hard iron gates to keep them from the dangers of the city highway, than those who were gifted with clearest vision. At any rate, they smiled their pleasure at the prospects as the long line of cars passed through the city with waving flags. The outing is an annual event given under the direction of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association, assisted by charitable people of the surrounding territory. Owners of automobiles gladly turn over their cars and chauffeurs for the day's outing, and two or three cars were sent by specially interested persons all the way over the road from New York for the purpose. The day at Sharon lake is filled with band concerts, games, entertainments and carefully thought out features which may be enjoyed fully by those who have been crippled or blinded or otherwise shut out from the normal pleasures of childhood. The day is not simply a day's pleasure but a whole volume of memories to be stored away and brought forth on frequent occasions, while the next year's event is awaited with anticipation.

Not five per cent of the people who live right under the shadow of Bunker Hill Monument have ever climbed to the top, according to an investigation made by a curious minded person among the inhabitants of Charlestown. He did not take a census of the whole district, but by personal inquiry satisfied that very few have ever had the curiosity to enjoy the view from the little lantern windows 220 feet above the memorial grass plot. The custodian of the shaft confirms the statement. Hundreds of tourists annually make the ascent but Bostonians never. An elevator might or might not increase the patronage.

A pronouncing key by which to sing correctly in any language is interesting musical Boston. M. Camille Thurwanger, Parisian, philologist, instructor for some years past at the New England Gonservatory of Music, has patented his diaphonogramme or plan of phonetic annotation of vocal music in foreign languages. Among many difficulties connected with learning to sing has always been this, that the singer properly to interpret cosmopolitan vocal music must be something of a polyglot. Translations have long proved inadequate. The words of a song in whatever language they are written contribute materially to the artistic effect. That means, ordinarily, prolonged study of the languages. Students of vocal music at such a school as the New England Conservatory begin in the first year with diction in Italian and French, passing on to a year's full instruction in each language accompanied by diction in German and, in the fourth year, study of songs and arias in that language. Such training prepares for concert singing and the operatic stage. Not everyone who sings, however, can give the time necessary for intensive study of several foreign tongues. M. Thurwanger's method is to keep before the singer's eye a single and uniform sign for each sound represented in the foreign language whatever it may be, together with a diaphonogramme or comparative key on the opposite page for reference when necessary. This means ever ready help for any singer, professional or amateur, who is not perfectly sure in every case of the pronunciation of words. The possible helpfulness of such a plan in public school music teaching, particularly in high schools and academies, is one of the suggestive features. Songs written in foreign languages have heretofore been practically barred out from school music books. Given a key that makes available a universal scheme of pronunciation nothing prevents a direct correlation of the music teaching and the modern language instruction.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

CHAPTER VI.

Wherein the Heart of Pete Corson Is Touched by a Girl.

MRS. COMSTOCK picked up several papers and blew out the kitchen light. She stood in the middle of the sitting room floor for a time and then went into her room and closed the door. Sitting on the edge of the bed, she thought for a few minutes and then suddenly burled her face in the pillow and again heaved with laughter.

Down the road plodded Margaret and Wesley Sinton. Neither of them had words to utter their united thought.

"Done!" hissed Wesley at last. "Done brown! Did you ever feel like a bloomin', confounded donkey? How did the woman do it?"

"She didn't do it!" gulped Margaret through her tears. "She didn't do anything. She just trusted to Elnora's great big soul to bring her out right, and really she was right, and so it had to bring her. She's a darling, Wesley. But she's got a time before her. Did you see Kate Comstock grab that money? Before six months she'll be out combing the Limberlost for bugs and arrow points to help pay the tax. I know her."

"Well, I don't!" exclaimed Sinton. "She's too many for me. But there is a laugh left in her yet. I didn't s'pose there was. Bet you a dollar if we could see her this minute she'd be chuckling over the way we got left."

Both of them stopped in the road and looked back.

"There's Elnora's light in her room," said Margaret. "The poor child will feel those clothes and pore over her books till morning, but she'll look decent to go to school, anyway. Nothing is too big a price to pay for that."

"Yes, if Kate lets her wear them. Ten to one she makes her finish the week with that old stuff."

"No, she won't," said Margaret. "She don't dare. Kate made some concessions all right, big ones for her—if she did get her way in the main. She bent some, and if Elnora proves that she can walk out barehanded in the morning and come back with that much money in her pocket, an armful of books and buy a turnout like that she proves that she is of some consideration, and Kate's smart enough. She'll think twice before she'll do that. Elnora won't wear a calico dress to high school again. You watch and see if she does. She may have got the best clothes she'll get for a time for the least money, but she won't know it until she tries to buy goods herself at the same rates. Wesley, what about those prices? Didn't they shrink considerable?"

"You began it," said Wesley. "Those prices were all right. We didn't say what the goods cost us; we said what they would cost her. Surely she's mistaken about being able to pay all that. Can she pick up stuff of that value around the Limberlost? Didn't the Bird Woman see her trouble and just give her the money?"

"I don't think so," said Margaret. "Seems to me I've heard of her paying or offering to pay them that would take the money for bugs and butterflies, and I've known people who sold that banker Indian stuff. Once I heard that his pipe collection beat that of the government at the Philadelphia centennial. Those things have come to have a value."

"Well, there's about a bushel of that kind of valuables piled up in the woodshed that belongs to Elnora. At least I picked them up because she said she wanted them. Maggie, how the nation did Kate Comstock do that?"

"You will keep on harping, Wesley. I told you she didn't do it. Elnora did it! She walked in and took things right out of our hands. S'pose we'd got Elnora when she was a baby, and we'd heaped on her all the love we can't on our own, and we'd coddled, petted and shielded her, would she have made the woman that living alone, learning to think for herself and taking all the knocks Kate Comstock could give have made of her?"

"You bet your life!" cried Wesley warmly. "Loving anybody don't hurt them. We wouldn't have done anything but love her. You can't hurt a child loving it. She'd have learned to work, be sensible, study, and grown into a woman with us, without suffering like a poor homeless dog."

"But you don't get the point, Wesley. She would have grown into a fine woman with us; just seems as if Elnora was born to be fine, but as we would have raised her, would her heart ever have known the world as it does now? Where's the anguish, Wesley, that child can't comprehend? Seeing what she's seen of her mother hasn't hardened her. I guess we'd better keep out. Maybe Kate Comstock knows what she's doing. Sure as you live, Elnora has grown bigger on knocks than she would on love."

"I don't s'pose there ever was a very fine point to anything but I missed it," said Wesley, "because I am blunt, rough and have no book learning to speak of. Since you put it into words I see what you mean, but it's dinged hard on Elnora, just the same. And I don't keep out. I keep watching closer than ever. I got my slap in the face, but if I don't miss my guess, Kate Comstock learned her lesson, same as I did. She learned that I was in earnest, that I would haul her to court if she didn't loosen up a bit, and she'll loosen. You see if she don't."

Up in the attic Elnora lighted two candles, set them on her little table, stacked the books and put away the precious clothes lovingly. Then she slipped into her little white nightdress, shook down her hair that it might become thoroughly dry, set a chair before the table and reverently opened one of the books. A stiff draft swept the attic, for it stretched the length of the cabin and had a window in each end. Elnora arose and, going to the east window, closed it. She stood for a minute looking at the stars, the sky and the dark outline of the straggling trees of the rapidly dismantling Limberlost. In the region of her case a tiny point of light flashed and disappeared. Elnora straightened and wondered. Was it wise to leave her precious money there? The light flashed once more, wavered a few seconds and died out. The girl waited. She did not see it again, and so she went back to her books.

In the Limberlost the hulking figure of a man slouched down the trail.

"The Bird Woman was at Freckles' room this evening," he muttered. "Wonder what for?"

He left the trail, entered the inclosure still distinctly outlined and approached the case. The first point of light flashed from the tiny electric lamp on his vest. He took a duplicate key from his pocket, felt for the padlock and opened it. The door swung wide. The light flashed the second time. Swiftly his glance swept the interior.

"'Bout a fourth of her moths gone. Elnora must have been with the Bird Woman and given them to her." Then he stood tense. His keen eyes discovered the roll of bills hastily thrust back in the bottom of the case. He snatched them up, shut off the light, relocked the case by touch and swiftly went down the trail. Every few seconds he paused and listened intently. Just as he reached the road the low hoot of a screech owl waveringly prolonged fell on his ears, and he stopped. An instant later a second figure approached him.

"Is it you, Pete?" came the whispered question.

"Yes," said the first man.

"I was coming down to take a peep when I saw your flash," he said. "I heard the Bird Woman had been at the case today. Anything doing?"

"Not a thing," said Pete. "She just took away about a fourth of the moths. Probably had the Comstock girl getting them for her. Heard they were together. Likely she'll get the rest tomorrow. Ain't picking getting bare these days?"

"Well, I should say so," said the second man, turning back in disgust. "Coming home now?"

"No; I am going down this way," answered Pete, for his eyes caught the gleam from the window of the Comstock cabin, and he had a desire to learn why Elnora's attic was lighted at that hour.

He slouched down the road, occasionally feeling the size of the roll he had not taken time to count. He chuckled frequently.

"Feels fat enough to pay," he whispered. "Bill, I beat you just about seven minutes."

The attic was too long, the light too near the other end, and the cabin stood much too far back from the road. He could see nothing, although he climbed the fence and walked back opposite the window. He knew Mrs. Comstock was probably awake and that she sometimes went to the swamp behind her home at night. At times a cry went up from that locality that paralyzed any one near or sent them fleeing as if for life. He did not care to cross behind the cabin. He returned to the road, passed and again climbed the fence. Opposite the west window he could see Elnora. She sat before a small table reading from a book between two candles. Her hair fell in a bright sheen around her, and with one hand she lightly shook and tossed it as she studied. The man stood out in the night and watched.

For a long time a leaf turned occasionally and the hair drying went on. The man drew nearer. The picture grew more beautiful as he approached. He could not see as well as he desired, for the screen was of white mosquito netting, and it angered him. He cautiously crept closer. The elevation shut off his view. Then he remembered the great willow tree shading the well and branching across the window at the west end of the cabin. From childhood Elnora had stepped from the sill to a limb and slid down the slanting trunk of the tree. He reached it and noiselessly swung himself up. Three steps out on the big limb the man shuddered. He was within a few feet of the girl.

Elnora closed the book and laid it aside. She picked up a towel and, turning the gathered ends of her hair, rubbed them across it and, dropping the towel on her lap, tossed the hair again. Then she sat in deep thought. By and by words began to come softly. Near as he was the man could not hear at first. He bent closer and listened intently.

—"ever could be so happy," murmured the soft voice. "The dress is so pretty, such shoes, the coat and everything. I won't have to be ashamed again, not ever again, for the Limberlost is full of precious moths, and I can always collect them. The Bird Woman will buy more tomorrow, and the next day, and the next. When they are all gone I can spend every minute gathering cocoons and hunting other things I can sell. Oh, thank God for my precious, precious money! Why, I didn't pray in vain after all! I thought when I asked the Lord to hide me, there in that big hall, that he wasn't doing it because I wasn't covered from sight that instant. But I'm hidden now; I feel that." Elnora lifted her eyes to the beams above her. "I don't know much about praying properly," she muttered, "but I do thank you, Lord, for hiding me in your own time and way."

Her face was so bright that it shone with a white radiance. Two big tears welled from her eyes and rolled down her smiling cheeks. "Oh, I do feel that you have hidden me," she breathed. Then she blew out the lights, and the little wooden bed creaked under her weight.

Foreigners Attack Armed Officers and One Is Killed

TWO GATLING GUNS MOUNTED

American Smelting Works in State of Siege—Strikers Set Fire to Various Buildings—Attack Ambulance Corps and Fire Department—General Strike of All Classes and Crafts—Street Car Shot Into

Perth Amboy, N. J., June 15.—A thousand striking laborers stormed the plant of the American Smelting & Refining company here and were fired on by deputy sheriffs. One striker was almost instantly killed and three others were wounded. With the first volley the strikers fell back.

Those injured were taken to a hospital in a critical condition. The strikers even assaulted and stoned the ambulance carrying away the wounded.

The strikers succeeded in setting fire to a part of the fence surrounding the works before they were driven back by the rain of bullets. After retreating out of range they held parley and the strike leaders declared that they would make another charge and get inside of the works even at the cost of more lives. Sheriff Bolischweiller immediately took steps to swear in 400 additional deputies and said he would refrain as long as possible from calling on the militia. At the smelting company's works two small gatling guns have been set up in the office.

The strike involves no particular craft, but is made up of foreign laborers of the American Smelting & Refining company, section hands from the northeastern division of the Lehigh Valley railroad, men, women and girl employes of the Perth Amboy Tobacco company, laborers of the Barber Asphalt company, and other minor plants.

Later the situation grew more serious. While several men representing the state militia were hastening here from Trenton under orders from Governor Wilson to decide whether the situation warranted the calling out of the militia, a mob of 2000 men made another attack on the plant, shouting threats that they would burn the buildings. They were repulsed by two volleys from rifles in the hands of the police and detectives guarding the plant. Retiring to a small building used as a trolley car waiting room, they set fire to it. When a fire company responded to an alarm its members were attacked and forced to retreat, leaving the building to burn to the ground. Two of the firemen were injured by stones. None of the shots from the rifles wounded a mob member, but several bullets struck nearby houses.

Some of the mob fired shots through the windows of a car while others hurled stones. The motorman put on full speed and the dozen passengers threw themselves on the floor as the car flashed through the lines of rioters.

Five hundred strikers held a mass meeting and appointed a committee of two to wait upon Jesse Seaman, general manager of the American Smelting & Refining company plant, for a reply to their demands. Mr. Seaman informed the committee that the demand would not be considered until the rioting ceased. One of the leaders, when informed of Mr. Seaman's reply, said:

"They have got to grant our demands; if they don't we will blow the whole works up."

SCHOOLS UNITE

vations for graduates, with parents and friends. Music by Pinkham's orchestra was enjoyed.

To the strains of am arch played by Miss Emma A. Perkins, the two classes entered from opposite sides of the hall, Wollaston being headed by a banner borne by Miss Annie Bartlett and Massachusetts Fields by Merrill Orswell.

"Glad festal day" arranged from Carmen by Wilson was the first selection of the pupils, being followed by an address from David H. Goodspeed, principal of the school and he said:

"Some hoped for the holding of the graduation in this building, said Mr. Goodspeed, but the school committee hesitated to break the old custom of having one big graduation in the High school and after the inspiring occasion this afternoon I don't know but what I agree with them.

Sometime ago the thought came that it would be nice for the class of 1912 to have a graduation party, get the two districts in closer touch and finish the year's work with a grand good time.

Of the 490 that completed their course of study 91 came from these two districts. From Wollaston 56, the largest class in the history of the school, and from Massachusetts Fields 35.

Of the two districts the youngest was 12 years 4 months. One had completed the course in 6 years, 5 in 7, 17 in 8, 27 in 9, 8 in 10 and 3 in 11.

Of the 91, 71 planned to continue at the High school, 12 at Woodward and 3 in other schools.

Addressing the pupils Mr. Goodspeed continued "Boys and girls of 1912 we rejoice with you in your completion of the work in the elementary schools. You have finished the second chapter in the book of knowledge.

Each chapter presents more responsibilities, greater temptations and vastly more opportunities. Accept the responsibilities, conquer the temptations and make the most of the opportunities.

This country needs more than ever boys and girls of good strong characters, boys who say "I'll try."

"The future depends on the boys and girls, you are the ones who shape the destinies ofthe country. Remebrer that the more you put into life the more you will get out of it.

Play the game fair and above all love your country, make each chapter of your life a book of inspiration for others to read."

Mr. Goodspeed thanked the people of the two districts for the spirit of loyalty and co-operation they showed,

In a neat speech of presentation by Maynard Hatch, president of the Wollaston graduates Mr. Goodspeed was presented with a handsome leather portfolio as a token of the esteem with which he was held and for the interest he had taken in the classes.

Mr. Goodspeed in a fitting reply of thanks raised a roar of laughter by telling how he had accidentally come upon the committee when they were arranging for the presentation.

Two songs were rendered by the classes. "Pretty maiden" arranged from "Faust" by Rembault and "Hark! Hear the trumpets" arranged from "Carmen" by Bizet, a pretty march to the stage preceded.

Master David Bailey read the class history which proved to be a composition of unusual merit—clear and consistent throughout.

The class prophecy by Miss Katharine Kimball was a bright and piquant bit of fancy told in a most refreshing manner.

"Lovely night O tender night" from "Tales of Hoffmann" by Offenbach was sung by the classes and followed by a grand march during which refreshments were served eaten with zest during the opening tricks of a magician.

General dancing followed which was enjoyed by all.

The reception committee of the class included Miss Mildred Harrisan, chairman, Miss Gladys Glover, Miss Barbara Johnson, Sherman Brokaw, Alden Barnes and Maynard Hatch.

The affair was under the direction of a parents' committee from the Wollaston school consisting of Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Albert Sayward, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. Favreau and Mrs. H. A. Stevens.

PRIVATE SCHOOL EXHIBIT

Florence Mead, Frances Street, Ruth Hamblett and Mary McAnarney.

"When Polly buys a Hat,"—Frances Angier.

"Our Flag" the last number on the program was very finely executed, the little ones repeated, "I love the Flag," each child waving a small flag, the larger pupils marching in and taking position on the back of the stage and all uniting in singing, "My Country, 'tis of Thee."

At the close of the exercises the guests were invited to inspect the work of the children, which was well and admirably done. Mr. King, the indefatigable worker and sincere friend of children invited all to come out on the lawn and partake of refreshments. He was assisted in serving the guests by the teachers and the older pupils. Various games were enjoyed and Mr. King presented each child a can and banner as souvenirs of the occasion.

The teachers and children were grouped gracefully and a snap-shot was taken by Mrs. Frank S. Baker.

Before leaving for their homes the children gave hearty cheers for Mr. King in appreciation of his kindness, and for their teachers who by their faithfulness and executive ability have won for them so high a standard in their education.

Much praise and many favorable comments were heard for the very praiseworthy and commendable work and recitations of the children. They all did exceptionally well. The beautiful songs rendered so sweetly and with so much expression are due to the faithful teaching of Miss Helen H. Baxter, who has worked with untiring zeal to attain these splendid results.

To Miss Josephine M. Wright, the principal, and her able corps of assistants, Miss Alice Pope, Miss Avah Gilson, Miss Helen H. Baxter, sincere congratulations are extended for the excellent work accomplished under their guidance and discipline, and for the satisfactory manner in which every detail was planned and carried out so perfectly.

TRAVELLING BAG GIVEN DUNSTAN

A very pleasant evening was spent Thursday when a party of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Kane, on Jackson lane, to bid bon voyage to James S. Dunstan, who sails today on the Leyland liner for England.

Mr. Booth in a few well chosen words presented Mr. Dunstan with a travelling bag and Mr. Dunstan in return thanked those present for their kindness in thus remembering him.

The evening was spent in telling stories and recalling old familiar scenes in the homeland and in singing William Warmington rendered several solos and Allan Dorr sang and also played on his mandolin. Ice cream, cake and tonic were served.

At a late hour the company joined hands and sang Auld Lang Syne after which they bad goodbye to one who has been a faithful friend and neighbor for many years.

GUSTAFSON DROWNED WHILE SPEARING EELS IN TOWN RIVER

Boat Capsized. His Cries Attracted Attention on Shore but He Could Not be Located

Heavy Boots and Clothing Hampered Man Who Struggled Hard for Life

Aaron Gustafson aged 47 years a shoemaker by trade living on Brockton avenue Germantown was drowned in Town river Saturday night by the capsizing of his boat while spearing for eels. When his boat was capsized he cried out for help but although his cries were heard by the residents living on the water front, he could not be located. His cries also brought his wife to the scene and she patrolled the water front from midnight until nearly 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Then neighbors joined in the search and a large searching party was formed led by Rev. G. W. Lindstrom of Brockton who came across the body shortly after 4 o'clock lying on the banks of the river. Gustafson had evidently made a hard fight for life but his heavy rubber boots impeded him. His boots were half off and also his coat, for it was apparent that he had tried to rid himself of these incumbrances. Medical Examiner Jones who was notified turned the body over to an undertaker. The unfortunate man was well known among the Swedish people of the city. He leaves a widow and three young children.

BAPTISTS IN MERRY MOOD

Picnic with Absorbing Interest in the Day and its Events

HAS BEENS GIVEN CHANCE

The best and largest picnic in its history was held at Island Grove Park, Abington on the holiday by the Wollaston Baptist Sunday school.

Extra cars were attached to the train leaving Boston at 8.42 which made a special stop at Wollaston and the jolly crowd of 250 reached the grove shortly before 10 o'clock.

Here sports of all kinds were indulged in among the features being a quarter mile race for "Hasbeens."

Elford L. Durgan, superintendent of the Sunday school was the winner of this event the time being something under half an hour. Although the distance was but a quarter of a mile it seemed about ten to some of the participants who had not recovered their breath when it came time to start home.

The quarter mile boat race proved quite exciting and was won by J. R. Reed in 1 minute 55 seconds. The double oar race for the same distance was won in 3 minutes, 34 seconds by Fred Oxner and Ned Taylor.

The sports concluded with a six inning ball game between the Walther and Rand classes, won by the former 7 to 2.

The last inning proved exciting as the Rand class filled the bases and threatened to win after all. The Walther class was conspicuous by the number of substitutes put in,

The line up was as follows:

WALTHER CLASS	RAND CLASS
Raymond p	p Hatfield
Arnold c	c Ela
Bailey 1b	1b Barlow
Brown 2b	D. K. Hill
Wyatt 3b	3b E. Bullock
Nichols ss	ss W. K. Hill
Oxner lf	lf Walther
Reed cf	cf Bartlett
Colson rf	rf Williams

Lemonade and popcorn were distributed with a liberal hand and the party entrained for home at four-thirty, just in time to miss the heavy down pour.

The picnic was in charge of J. Arthur Sparrow, Eben Hardy, Mrs. J. Arthur Jewell, Mrs. Charles B. Hall and William Bullock.

The results of the races follow:

50 yard dash—Won by Earl Church, Leon Biganess second.

50 yard dash for boys—Won by Edward Smith, Lawrence Bailey second.

50 yard dash, boys 12 and under—Won by Russell Sears, Joseph Barber second.

AUTOGRAPH ADAMS LETTERS

Presented to the Quincy Historical Society

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Quincy Historical society was held Saturday afternoon at the cottage of John and Abigail Adams. The attendance was unusually large. Brooks Adams presided and these officers were elected:

President—Brooks Adams
Vice President—Fred B. Rice
Secretary—Emery L. Crane
Treasurer—James L. Edwards
Librarian—Charles E. Goodspeed

Curators, the above with Mrs. E. H. Alden, Charles E. Goodspeed, Herbert W. Pinkham, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson and Emery L. Crane were appointed a committee to have charge of entertainments during the coming year.

The following were elected to membership in the society. Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott, Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Miss Georgiana C. Lane.

During the meeting the society was presented by Mrs. George H. Wilson with a volume of letters of Abigail Adams with autographs and by the president with one of the bronze medalions of the First Church by Mrs. Henry H. Kitson.

A vote of thanks was extended for the gifts.

After the meeting tea was served by the president.

ATTENDED BANQUET.

Lieut. Col. Arthur W. Stetson, who is on the staff of Gen. Stocker, Commander-in-Chief of the Patriarchs Militant I. O. O. F., took part in the parade incident to the meeting of the department council at Beverly Monday. After the meeting there was a banquet and parade after which the degree of Chivalry was conferred on 22 ladies and the Grand Degree of Chivalry was conferred on six Chevaliers.

TWO ALARMS—LITTLE DAMAGE.

The alarm from box 431 at 8.38 Sunday evening was a false one.

The alarm from box 331 at 4.15 Monday morning was for a slight fire in an unoccupied barn on the Parker Hayward estate on Franklin street. The fire started in a small quantity of hay in the manger and as the place was unoccupied it looks very much like the work of an incendiary. Damage slight.

—Can't eat, can't sleep, can't work, can't sit still—symptoms of a malady beginning to infect the greater part of the male population of the country, It is curable only by sitting two hours each day on the hard benches of a baseball park.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOYS AND GIRLS

Have Jolly Time in Athletic Events at Picnic

The annual picnic of the Memorial Church Sunday school of Atlantic, Monday was the largest ever held by the school over 300 attending in five cars which left the church for the Ward Two playground.

Superintendent Walter F. Blake, and James Houston kept the young people busy from the time they arrived on the field until 5 P. M. They were assisted by W. F. Cummings, John Fuller, Josiah Fuller, and Councilman Beeman. Spencer Apollonio acted as judge of the sports.

Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Gurney made the lemonade and there was a constant supply all day. At noon ice cream was served by W. F. Blake, assisted by W. N. Ware, Miss Ada Harding and the teachers.

In the ball throw for girls under fourteen, the prize was taken by Jordine Davison, who threw the ball 110 feet.

The first prize for girls over fourteen was taken by Susan Moffat who threw the ball 120 feet.

Ralph Hadlock took the prize for throwing the ball for boys over fourteen, throwing the ball 227 feet.

Christina Kenniburg won first prize in the flag race, gaining 27 flags.

The 50 yard dash was won by Ralph Coombs for the boys, and Clara Von Emden for the girls.

Gladys Arthur took first prize in the 100 yards dash.

In the young couples race Loyal Safford, and Gladys Arthur were easy winners.

William MacMahon won first prize in the shoe pile race, and Loyal Safford and Glenn Arthur were first in the three legged race.

Herbert Barkley won the pennant for the red block hunt.

Some of the older men felt young looking at the young people racing, and W. N. Ware challenged William L. Buckley for a 50 yard dash. This was perhaps the most exciting event of the day. Mr. Buckley showed his knowledge of the track and let Mr. Ware think he wasn't in it until the last few feet when the dashed past him, and came in first.

The girls gave the boys a close call in the ball game as some of Woodward's and Quincy High Schools best players were on the girls team.

The shower prevented the completion of the full list of games scheduled but it proved an enjoyable day for all that.

ENTHUSIASM IN ABUNDANCE

Manifested for Fourth of July Celebration by Citizens

CITIZENS WORKING OVERTIME

The July Fourth celebration Committee meeting Saturday evening was the largest attended of any this year and all seemed to be embued with great enthusiasm over the success of the coming celebration. Mayor Stone the president of the association presided.

Encouraging reports were made by some of the chairmen of the collection committee.

George F. Elcock, chairman of the Fireworks committee reported that the contract for Fireworks had been awarded to the American Fireworks Co. and that the display would include 120 pieces in addition to numerous bombs. One of the special set pieces will be that called Niagara Falls This piece will be 600 feet long and will be very beautiful.

The charter of the Quincy Fourth of July association was received and the thanks of the association was voted to George E. Adams, Esq. for his work in behalf of the securing of the charter. The principal officers of the association are:—

President—Eugene R. Stone.
Vice President—James F. Burke.
Secretary—Arthur W. Stetson.
Treasurer—Clarence Burgin.

These with the chairman of the several committees compose the executive committee.

Colonel Henry L. Kincaide will be marshal of the automobile parade and it would start a little earlier than the antique parade and that prizes would be given for the handsomest and the most grotesquely decorated automobile.

The antique parade will probably start about 8.30.

For athletic sports it was planned to have base ball games in Wards 2, 3, and 4 and a big game at Merrymount Park in the afternoon. The usual field sports will probably be omitted this year.

Letters were read from a number of associations in signifying their intention to take part in the parade.

It was suggested that there should be a perpetual cup offered for the automobile parade but nothing definite was decided upon.

The following appropriations were made in addition to those made a week ago. Ball games $80, publicity committee $50. The appropriation for the parade was increased from $150 to $600.

The expenses of the day as now outlined will amount to $1,600 or $1,700 and it is up to the collection committee to get busy.

There will probably be two or three bands in the morning parade.

The chairman of the children's entertainment was not present but it was announced that a good entertainment would be provided for them. It was suggested that some kind of a circus performance could be given at Merrymount Park.

Another meeting of the general committe will be held next Saturday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade and a general invitation is extended everybody interested to be present.

The committee on base ball, connected with the Fourth of July celeebration is composed of James E. Neary, Gus B. Bates, president of the Quincy Base Ball league, Louis F. LaRose, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., George Crotty, Peter M. Sullivan, James E. Burke and Leo P. Noonan.

All managers of base ball teams, who are desirous of competing for prizes, are requested to submit their names to the committee. A meeting will be held in the Board of Trade rooms, Adams Building, at eight o'clock Friday evening.

All base ball players of Quincy are invited to be present.

THOMAS TO ENTERTAIN.

John Thomas, Humorist will be the big attraction at the entertainment of the Park and Downs Men's club in the vestry this evening. He will be supported by a wealth of local talent.

LODGES UNITE IN PAYING HONOR TO DECEASED MEMBERS OF ORDER

Quincy Odd Fellows and Rebekahs Join in Just Tributes to the Departed

Addresses by Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, Frank F. Prescott and Rev. Charles P. Marshall

DECEASED MEMBERS

MT. WOLLASTON LODGE.
Joseph Prario—Died Nov. 26, 1911.
Albert G. Dolliver—Died May 2, 1912

GEO. L. GILL REBEKAH LODGE.
Mrs. Lucretia Gill, Widow of George L. for whom lodge was named—Died August 27, 1911.
Mrs. Ellen T. Gragg—Died June 6, 1912

Joint memorial services were held Sunday afternoon by Mount Wollaston Lodge of Odd Fellows and the George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge for the members who died during the past year. The services were held in the lodge room in the Adams building and were largely attended. Among those present were Grand Deputy Collett, Eminent Commander Henry P. Furnald of Quincy Commandery, Knights Templars; Austin W Green, master of Gridley Bryant school ; Arthur B. Foster, Dr. E. H. Bushnell and John D. Mackay, Esq., of the school committee, and several visitors from other lodges The Temple quartet rendered several selections.

Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, Noble Grand, delivered the necrologic address on behalf of the George L. Gill Rebekah Lodge. giving a brief sketch of Mrs. George L. Gill and Mrs. Ellen T. Gragg, the two members who died during the past year, and paying a tribute to each.

The necrology for Joseph Prario and Albert G. Dolliver, the two members of Mt. Wollaston Lodge who died during the year, was delivered by Frank F. Prescott, a prominent member of the order and former editor of the Daily Ledger. He said in part:

"It is a familiar saying that the early settlers of our glorious country builded well, and we revere their memory. In like manner, credit is given by Quincy Odd Fellows to the charter members of Mt. Wollaston Lodge and the petitioners for its re-organization nearly thirty years ago. They were instrumental in instituting a lodge in the city of presidents which is strong in brotherly love, watchful of its members in sickness, foremost in degree work, and solid in its finances. I am impelled to these introductory remarks because both of the brothers who passed away during the past year were pioneers in this lodge."

Mr. Prescott then paid fitting tributes to Brothers Prario and Dolliver, saying that that they were faithful to the tenets of the order, and closed with these lines:

"God smile upon this friendly band!
And may He bless our grand endeavor!
To labor on with heart and hand
In friendship, love, and truth, forever."

An address was also delivered by the Rev. Charles P. Marshall, pastor of the Washington street Congregational church and a member of the lodge. Mr. Marshall pointed out that the church was unjustly criticised for allowing fraternal orders to do so many of the works of mercy and said that the church was not to be considered a manufactory, but rather a power house from which goes out the force that sets in motion through numerous and varied organizations, the influences that make for good. The mission of the church, he asserted, was higher and more extensive than the cause of social service, and higher than that of any other organization. He made a strong plea for a more genuine brotherhood as one of the means of entering into the larger life and to the end that the remark "How those Christians love one another" should lose the sarcasm with which it is often uttered in these days and mean what it meant when first used.

Mr. Marshall's address was listened to with close attention and was evidently enjoyed.

The audience sang the Memorial hymn, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," after which the Temple quartet sang "When the mists have rolled away," and the Rev. Mr. Marshall pronounced a benediction.

TO MEET NEW PRESIDENT.

At the meeting of Executive Board of the Associated Charities Mr. Thomas Fenno was the unanimous choice for President to fill the place left vacant by Mr. Howlett's removing from the city. The directors are invited to meet the new president at the Club House this afternoon, June 18, at 5 o'clock. All interested in the cause must be confidenf of the worth and value of the work to the community, when so representative a man, having the high regard and confidence of the public is the chief executive of the Association.

TEACHERS REMEMBERED.

A reception by the graduating classes of the Adams and Cranch schools took place in Cranch hall, Friday evening. Principal Arthur S. Townsend was given an open stickpin, while Miss Mary L. Eagan assistant at the Adams and Miss Carrie A. Crane assistant at the Cranch were presented with a silver pendant and silver buckle respectively.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Deputy Superintendent Watts of the Boston detective force retires on a pension of $1500 a year to enter private business. Fine for the taxpayers.

United States inspectors are supposed to pass upon all meat sent out from the big packing houses, yet army officials refused to accept two thirds of a consignment for the commissary department of the Cuban expedition.

What is the matter with the Massachusetts congressmen have they lost all interest in the National game. Not a single representative of the Bay state on the congressional base ball nine.

What a relief when that Chicago convention is ended.

Guy Ham's reply to Matt Hale was caustically witty and suggestive of brain storm.

A New York congressman is yapping because the newspaper men or at least the papers they represented should have to defray their expenses while on presidential travels. Is there any good reason why they should not pay the bill?

Morgan is credited with advancing $25,000,000 to avert the panic of 1907. If memory serves aright the United State jumped into the breach with the money to stem the tide which no doubt Morgan and the other big manipulators created.

The Massachusetts legislature got a lot of glory for promptly accepting the amendment for popular election of United States senators but was in such a hurry to get home that it forgot all about proving for senatorial primary.

And Mr. Crane's successor will be elected in the old fashioned way so that the glory to the legislators was premature.

The powder trust has blown up, but the chances are that it will keep on smoking at the same old stands.

The car travelling public Boston is furnished losts of comedy skits by the strike breaking conductors.

Lillian Russell will now try to break into Pittsburg society. According to all accounts it is pretty smoky.

Lawson has again cut loose on his senatorial campaign in his usual original manner.

Victor Rosewater will need all the perfume that his name implies if a bad egg campaign is inaugurated at the Chicago convention.

Another leper has found his way into Boston. This time it is a Chinaman and he will join the others at Penekee Island.

ENFORCING CURFEW LAW.

The mayor of Malden is evidently not satisfied with the enforcement of the Curfew law in that city and has called upon the chief of police to attend the matter immediately. It would seem that this regulation is more honored in the breach than the observance in other places. Quincy has a curfew law of long standing. Is it being enforced? Children under 14 years of age are supposed to be beneath the paternal roof tree when the bell rings.

There are grave doubts that the regulation is being as energetically enforced as when it was a new thing and attracted widespread attention.

Young girls are frequently seen passing through the square or alighting from electric cars whose appearance would indicate that they came within the Curfew ordinance. Of course in this present period of short skirts for any one from six to sixty years it is difficult to determine at long range anywhere near the age of a female on the street. It is necessary to have a view of the face to come anywhere near being correct in fixing ages. But even this test fails at times.

Yet withal that there have been girls seen on the street at a late hour who certainly appeared to be too young to be wandering around alone at such an hour. Even if they were over fourteen years of age, many considered that home was the best place for those more particularly noted.

The enforcement of the curfew law can operate no harm. The proper place for girls of that tender age, or boys either, for that matter, is home. If they are at an entertainment or in company with others there is an excuse for the transgression if it could be termed as such under such circumstances.

The home should be made so inviting that they would not care to be wandering around the streets after nine o'clock. A word to the parents. Let the boys and girls visit each other at their different homes. Make it pleasant for them. Do not have them feel that they are in the way. Give full scope to harmless girlish and boyish fun and they will be better satisfied to stay home than go upon the streets. The whole secret is in making the home pleasant and attractive. If the boys and girls are allowed those privileges and permitted to indulge in innocent and healthful pastimes among themselves, there will hardly be any need to worry about their future.

ROWDYISM MUST CEASE.

A certain class of young men when they arrive at a period midway between the calf and man existence immediately jump to the conclusion that loudmouthedness, a sprinkling of profanity, a blase air and a disposition to ignore the rights of others in a public place are the properly component parts of their career at that time.

Fortunately it wears off in a great many and they become useful and sensible beings.

This careless demeanor to a great extent is studied. The young man does not really think so, but he is really posing. If his manner creates a laugh he is tickled to the depths of his small and mean little soul. Utter indifference to his attitude during this display season is like gall and wormwood to him, because if he has any sensibility to realize what a sorry figure he is cutting, trying to play a game on a real stage while his audience turns its back on him as unworthy of consideration.

So much for that class. If you are in it think it over and see if it does not just fit your case.

But there is another class which carries its conduct to the point of annoyance. That is the genuine rowdy. There is hope for the first class through moral suasion and good advice but the latter are not open to such influences.

The rowdy needs a strong hand and a firm hand and a hand that carries chastisement with it to convey to him that his conduct is undesirable and resented.

In a certain well-known place both of these types were on exhibition a short time ago. The rowdy was the first to accept the stage as though it was all fitted for his entrance. Loud and profane and indecent language marked his appearance. And by the way he in this case was not represented by the singular number. However he made an exhibition of himself. It was annoying, distasteful and unsavory to decent and peaceably inclined people. There were women, respectable women, within easy hearing distance of this swashbuckler. For any one to voice a protest would mean a scene even more distasteful than the one in progress.

It ended however after a while and every one breathed easier. Chief of Police Burell was informed of the incident and he emphatically declared that such conduct would be checked, that rowdyism would not be permitted in Quincy and he meant what he said without fear or favor to any one.

It is to be hoped that this warning note will reach those who are most in need of it.

The other character made entrance on the stage soon after. He was only swaggering and silly, but in that he was annoying. He was permitted to run a certain length and an intimation handed out that he had reached the limit. The warning is likewise conveyed to this class. They can both take heed or the consequences will not be pleasant for either. It is to be hoped that both will have sense enough to accept it and profit by it and save themselves and their friends trouble and annoyance as a result of their own foolishness.

TOWN PLANNING.

The crazy patchwork system after which most growing American towns develop, was under discussion at the fourth National Conference on City Planning, held in Boston.

In the development of the American town, it has usually been customary to put in a street today regardless where one will be needed tomorrow. The result is that teamsters and pedestrians for all time will have to turn angles and travel greater distances to traverse the criss-cross streets.

Country people laugh at the happy go lucky way in which cities have "growed" like Topsy, into forms of confusion and pestilential crowding, when even in the country village similar mistakes are being made today.

The big folly, both of the city and of the country town, has been the inability to see the need of park land. In half or our small towns there is no good place where the boys can play ball legally. Often it becomes necessary to station a guard so that the gang can run if the owner or a police officer comes in sight.

In at least half of our towns, the original settlers used to reserve commons and park land. The public has allowed many of these rights to slip out of its hands. Some one would let chickens run over the tract, or build a shack, or plant fruit trees there. By and by he or his sons would claim the property. If a fence tumbled down, it was rebuilt farther into the public land.

Whenever a new street is being laid out, it is a good thing to remember that it will probably cost no more to lay out a wide street. The owner is full of public spirit when the surveyors come to locate a highway through his land. He talks generously of the obligation to co-operate with town improvement. A few feet more or less are a mere trifle.

After he gets the street, the proposition is quite different. Then his house becomes his castle, he deplores the tendency to infringe on private rights.

His sacred soil also possesses many qualities that enhance its value. Its location is so unparallelled, its natural beauty so evident, that is value per front foot becomes very large. And as a movement for street widening usually upsets all the plans of the abutters, it is not surprising that their claims for damages resulting from an afterthought of the public should seem excessive.

COLLEGE EXAMS.

Harvard and Radcliffe colleges are giving entrance examinations this week at the Quincy High school for those intending to enter the college next fall. Herbert Arnold instructor at the Johns Hopkins University, formerly of Quincy, is proctor for Harvard and Mrs. John D. Mackay of this city for Radcliffe.

JUDGE ARCHBALD IS REPUDIATED

Investigator Brown Finds Him Unfit For Office

Washington, June 18.—A copy of the report of Wrisley Brown, assistant to the attorney general and special investigator for the department of justice, of the charges against Judge Robert A. Archbald of the commerce court, has been made public. Mr. Brown's report says:

"Upon careful reflection the evidence which accompanies this report does not entirely convince my judgment that Judge Archbald has intentionally corrupted his high office for personal profit, but I am of the opinion that, in the absence of an adequate contrary showing, the testimony and documentary proofs are sufficient to establish a course of action on the part of this judge that is so violently abhorrent to the judicial proprieties as to discredit his fitness to remain on the commerce court."

Mr. Brown adds in his report that, taking all things into consideration, he is inclined to believe the story which Edward J. Williams of Dunmore Pa., told regarding Judge Archbald's activity in transactions for the sale of coal properties to several railroads.

MEN POOREST SCHOLARS

Honors at Wesleyan All Taken by Fair "Co-Eds"

Middletown, Conn., June 18.—To the deep chagrin of the male students at Wesleyan university, every young woman in the graduating class this year, which is to be the last class of women to receive diplomas from the university, has been elected for high scholarship to the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa.

One of the arguments which the male students have advanced against co-education, which becomes extinct at Wesleyan this year, is that the young women have taken scholarship honors which otherwise would have gone to the men.

STRIKERS REFUSE TERMS

Perth Amboy Workers Fail to Return To Their Work

Perth Amboy, N. J., June 18.—The local general strike took a turn for the worse after giving promise of subsiding. The 1200 strikers at the American Smelting & Refining company voted not to accept the compromise offer of 15 cents a day advance in wages, holding out for their original demand of 25 cents.

The 900 strikers at the plant of the Barber Asphalt company who Saturday voted to return to work on the old basis, declined to resume work. No clash took place between the strikers and the armed guards.

THAW NOT INSANE

Report of Government Witness and of Ex-Governor Stone

White Plains, N. Y., June 18.—The third attempt of Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, to obtain his freedom opened with the testimony of Dr. William A. White, an alienist in charge of the United States government hospital at Washington.

Dr. White testified that he had examined Thaw on three occasions recently, the latest being last Thursday, and had found no evidence of paranoia. "Thaw is not insane," he said, "and it would not be unsafe to the community to liberate him now."

William A. Stone, former governor of Pennsylvania, said he saw Thaw Sunday. "He's perfectly rational—no question about it in my mind," said he.

Shoots Self After Sister

Boston, June 18.—Raphael Capodiluto, 28 years old, attempted to murder his 16-year-old sister, Nicolina, by shooting her through the head. He then shot himself through the right temple and died in a police ambulance while on the way to the Relief hospital. The girl is at that institution and there is no hope of her recovery.

Forced to See His Wife Drown

Pelham, N. H., June 18.—While her husband stood upon the piazza of the Harris hotel, Mrs. Frank Pierce of Cambridge, Mass., was drowned when the small boat she was in capsized. Mrs. Pierce was accompanied in the boat by Mrs. Edith Houdlett of Melrose Highlands, Mass., who was rescued by Alfred Pomlow of Lawrence, Mass. The accident was due to an attempt to change seats.

Ministers Can Unite In Any Faith

Ottawa, June 18.—The supreme court of Canada has upheld a lower court decision that a marriage of two Roman Catholics by a Protestant clergyman or a marriage of a Roman Catholic and a Protestant under the same condition is valid in the province of Quebec.

Democratic Convention Opens Week From Today—Committee Now Located In Convention Hall—Hendrick of New York Likes Foss' Platform—Nevada Senator Would Limit Ballot and Immigration

Baltimore, June 18.—Headquarters of the Democratic national committee has been moved to rooms in Convention hall, where National Chairman Mack and his associate committee will conclude the remaining details incident to the opening of the convention a week from today. Two "dark horse" booms for the presidential nomination were informally discussed here by national committeemen. The booms were for Mayor Gaynor of New York and Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts.

The movement for Governor Foss was launched by Frank Hendrick of New York, who said that the governor's name might not be taken up until the second ballot. Mr. Hendrick said that Governor Foss' platform was the immediate reduction of the tariff and reciprocity with Canada.

Secretary Woodson has received word that some contests would be filed from Rhide Island. The notification gave no details. Headquarters for Speaker Champ Clark and Governor Wilson were opened yesterday.

United States Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada has drafted a platform which he desires adopted by the Baltimore convention. One of the planks of Senator Newlands' tentative platform declared that the "Constitution should be so amended as to confine the right of suffrage in the future to people of the white race," and favored a law "prohibiting the immigration to this country of all people other than those of the white race, except for temporary purposes of education, travel and commerce." Other planks submitted by the Nevada senator favor the gradual reduction of the tariff toward a revenue basis; the breaking up of private monopolies; the union of both national and state banks within the boundaries of each state in reserve associations; the expenditure of at least $50,000,000 annually for the development of rivers for navigation; the appropriation of $25,000,000 annually for good roads and a like sum for new fighting ships; and declares against any modification of the Sherman anti-trust law.

New York, June 18.—Edwin A. Newman, Democratic national committeeman from the District of Columbia, says that the talk at Baltimore as to a probable temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention included among others, heretofore mentioned, the name of Thomas W. Browne of Rutland, Vt. "While in my opinion Senator O'Gorman is perhaps the favorite selection for temporary chairman," said Mr. Newman, "Mr. Browne is receiving favorable consideration at this time."

Washington, June 18.—Senator Gore of Oklahoma, who has returned from conferences with Democratic leaders at Baltimore, will second the nomination at the Baltimore convention of Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, which will be made by John Westcott of Camden, N. J.

DEBS OPENS CAMPAIGN

Socialist Leader Scores Republican Convention Candidates

Chicago, June 18.—The first campaign in which the Socialist party has had a complete ticket in every state in the nation has opened here. Eugene V. Debs and Emil Seidel, the Socialist candidate for Preident and Vice President of the United States, made the chief addresses. Mr. Debs said in part:

"We have in this city at this hour an exhibition of capitalist machine politics which lays bare the true inwardness of the situation in the capitalist camp. Nothing that any Socialist has ever charged in the way of corruption is to be compared with what Taft and Roosevelt have charged and proved against one another. They are both good Republicans, just as Harmon and Bryan are good Democrats—and they are all agreed that Socialism would be the ruin of the country. What difference is there, judged by what they stand for, between Taft, Roosevelt, La Follette, Harmon, Wilson, Clark and Bryan?"

He declared that Ettor and Giovannitti, now in jail at Lawrence, Mass., were no more guilty of murder than he himself. Mr. Debs declared that according to the latest census reports factory workers in the United States were paid an average wage of $519 for the year, an increase of not quite 9 percent in five years and an increase of 21 percent in ten years, but the average cost of living had increased more than 40 percent durig the same time.

MACHINES COLLIDED

Askel Steele, 14 years, of Granite street, who collided, while riding a bicycle with Sumner Swingle, 13 years of Hancock street, Saturday morning, sustained a deep cut on the back of his head as a result of being thrown to the ground. He was treate d by Dr. George M. Sheahan. The accident occurred in the vicinity of Hancock and Chestnut streets.

OLIN—CLAPP.

Relatives and friends in such numbers as to tax the seating capacity of the edifice were present at All Souls' church, Braintree, last Saturday afternoon to witness marriage of Miss Anna Cushing Clapp of 98 Park street, Braintree, daughter of Mrs. Edwin Bowker to Edwin Read Olin, of 29 St. James street, Roxbury, son of the late Colonel William M. Olin, a former secretary of state. The ceremony was performed at 4.30 o'clock by Rev. James DeNormandie, pastor of the First Unitarian church, Roxbury.

William W. Bell of Roxbury was best man and the matron of honor was Mrs. Wallis Craig Smith of Saginaw, Michigan. She wore a picture hat trimmed with pink roses and was beautifully gowned in pink chiffon over turquoise blue satin. She carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

The ushers were Eugene E. Pettee of Roxbury, Alfred H. Sawyer of Concord, John E. Gilman, Jr., and William Gilman of Dorchester, George H. Wetherbee, Jr., and Henry Knight of Braintree. The bridal procession entered the church led by the ushers and after them came the matron of honor followed by the bride on the arm of her uncle, Mr. C. F. Cushing of South Braintree. The bride was met at the altar by the groom and best man and was given in marriage by Mr. Cushing. The bride looked charming in white chiffon over white satin with pearls and venetian lace and brocaded satin train.

The auditorium was decorated with masses of mountain laurel and beautiful music was rendered by the organist of the church, Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt assisted by the Lotus quartette of Boston. A pleasing innovation was the wedding march which was sung by the quartette instead of being rendered as usual as an instrumental selection.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception in the parish hall and the happy couple were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Edwin Bowker, Miss Caroline L. Olin, sister of the groom and Mrs. Wallis Craig Smith. During the reception a collation was served by a Boston caterer.

Mr. and Mrs. Olin left for a wedding trip of about a fortnight's duration after which they will reside at 78 Park street Braintree.

YOUNGSTERS IN BURGLARIES

Inspecter Goodhue Rounded Up Six Juveniles

THEY ENTERED TWO STORES

Inspector Goodhue has succeeded in rounding up the parties who broke into two stores on Water street last Tuesday evening. The matter of the break was kept quiet by the police in order that the parties might be more readily apprehended. The stores entered were those of Albert Ackerstrom where cigars and tobacco amounting to $15 were taken and the stroe of Louis Biller where fruit to the value of $10 was taken. Inspector Goodhue has learned that the breaks were made about 11 o'clock that night by two gangs of boys. There were four in one party and two in the other. All six have been summoned to appear in the juvenile court next Tuesday.

THEIR FREEDOM SHORT-LIVED

Two Boys Escaped from Rainsford Island Reformatory

CAPTURED IN FEW HOURS

Two boys George Kelly, aged 14 years of 373 Armory street Roxbury and Michael Bongierne aged 12 years of 21 Forde street, East Boston, took their departure without leave from Rainsford's Island early Saturday morning. Their escape was soon discovered by the officers of the institution and word telephoned to the Quincy police to look out for them as it was immediately thought that they would make a landing at Squantum. The boys who had been committed for breaking and entering, had been planning to escape for some weeks. They had safely hidden a canoe in which they made their escape. Officers with glasses picked up the boys making toward Moon island and when word was received at the police station the patrol auto with Officers Cahill, Holloran and Farrell was sent to Squantum on a flying trip. The officers found the boys on Squantum street. Both were without hats and the Bongierne boy was barefooted and apparently none the worse for their adventure although disappointed that their escape had been nipped in the bud. They were turned over to officers of the island who came to Squantum after them.

INNIS BEATEN BY McARDLE

Latter Supplanted Former in Girl's Affections

POSTAL CARDS FIGURED

The continued case of John McArdle for assault on Alvah D. Innis was heard before Judge Avery Saturday and occupied the greater part of the day. According to the testimony McArdle lay in wait for Innis on Bigelow street two days before he finally met him. Then when they did meet Innis had his arm full of books and was on his way to school. Without giving the young man an opportunity to defend himself it is alleged that McArdle pitched into him and gave him a terrible beating and but for the interference of neighbors who were attracted by the cries of Innis, murder might have been committed. The case is said to have grown out of a girl affair at the High school. It is alleged that McArdle supplanted Innis in the affections of one of the girls and to revenge himself Innis sent McArdle some numerous postal cards to which the girls name was signed. The court however held that the assault was a serious one and imposed a fine of $50 from which an appeal was taken.

Gardner, off Washington street, Braintree, Saturday, but the prompt work of the neighbors prevented the loss being greater than $1800, which is covered partly by insurance. The fire started in the kitchen and worked up through the roof. The furniture was removed from the house.

CUBAN REPORTS IMPROVE

Federal Officers Very Optimistic In Their Views of Rebellion

Santiago, June 18.—The insurgent leader, Julio Antomarchi, who ordered all the whites to leave the vicinity of El Cobre, has issued a proclamation stating he will hang any person approaching him with a suggestion that he should surrender.

Colonel Francisco Valiente reports that 150 rebels have surrendered in Oriente province. He says the rebels are completely disorganized and divided into small groups.

Captain Iglesias reports that he has scattered three bands of rebels near Olimpo in Oriente province and that their leader was killed.

Havana, June 18.—General Monteagudo, commander-in-chief of the government troops, telegraphed President Gomez:

"In view of the last happenings it is my belief that the revolution is over. I do not think that large bands of rebels will again form. The surrender of Eugenio Lacoste, the leader of the insurgents in Guantanamo district, has had a most important effect. He was considered here the real chief of the rebels."

Washington, June 18.—Rear Admiral Usher's cable from Guantanamo, confirms the report that General Estenoz, the rebel leader, had been killed, and General Lacoste, the paralytic rebel chief, had been captured by the Cuban government forces.

SECOND BATTLE FORT DEARBORN

Chicago Convention In Anniversary Year War 1812

50,000 TO HEAR ROOSEVELT

Chicago, June 18.—Celebrating the centennial of the War of 1812, and the battle of Fort Dearborn, where Chicago now stands, the opening of the Republican national convention this morning, may well be termed the battle of Fort Dearborn, of the war of 1912. Two bands played while the greatest number of delegates ever chosen, 1078, gathered, with half as many newspaper men and thousands of spectators, with as many more clamoring for entrance.

At noon the gavel rapped for order by Chairman Rosewater of the national committee. Prayer was offered by Rev. Jas. F. Callahan, pastor of St. Malachi's Roman Catholic church. A handsome gavel was presented by citizens of Chicago. And then the fight was on for mastery between the Taft and Roosevelt forces for control of the temporary organization. A fight which bids fair to last until midnight.

The Roosevelt men expect to bring the contest to a focus immediately, by demanding a roll call on the temporary chairmanship or the very first question that comes up before the convention. Then it is planned to have Governor Johnson of California cast the twenty-six votes for that state on the question. This action by Governor Johnson, it is expected, will be objected to by the two Taft delegates from the Fourth California district.

This juncture will be grasped by the Roosevelt floor leaders as the one upon which to get the "expurated" vote of delegates. The floor leader will move at once that the temporary roll as made up by the national committee be rejected, and that a substitute roll, including the seventy or eighty delegates claimed by Colonel Roosevelt be adopted.

In thus substituting the matter of the disputed seats to the convention en bloc, none of the delegates affected by the contests would vote on the question, and the Roosevelt men believe that such a poll would give them the upper hand in the organiaztion of the convention.

Mr. Taft has the nomination at this writing by a narrow majority, which is cut into and not increased every time anything happens. Whenever a shift, however slight, takes place the gainer is Roosevelt, not Taft. These gains for the colonel may be offset by releasing the Roosevelt delegates in some of the primary states, as suggested, but the real question is, "How long can this process of disintegration go on and leave the president safe?"

The Massachusetts delegation struck town in a frame of mind. Men who have been coming to national conventions for twenty years say they never saw anything like it. Every man is doubtful of his neighbor, and in place of the old cordiality and camaraderie which made everybody in the delegation a good fellow, whether he voted right or not, was a settled suspicion that no one can be trusted. It is understood that the astute Charles S. Baxter had arranged that ,others being willing, W. Murray Crane should be re-elected to the national committee, provided he, Baxter, were elected chairman of the delegation and thus given a place on the exceedingly important committee on credentials.

Matthew Hale of Boston announced that the eight delegates-at-large from that state who had been renounced by Colonel Roosevelt in favor of President Taft, would vote for Roosevelt. "In view of the tactics of the national committee in deciding the contests in other states," said Mr. Hale, "I believe the eight delegates-at-large from Massachusetts will vote for Colonel Roosevelt."

The first indications of a revolt in the Taft ranks against the decision of the national committee in the delegate contests came yesterday when nine of the Virginia delegation, counted as solid for Taft, declared they would overrule the action of the committee in seating the Taft delegates in California, Texas and Washington.

On the heels of this came a report that the Virginia delegation, at an executive session had voted unanimously against the selection of Senator Root for the temporary chairmanship and also against permitting delegates seated by the national committee in contested cases to vote in affirming the temporary convention roll. The latter action is the first taken by any state so far against the contested delegates' seats.

On the eve of the Republican national convention, Colonel Roosevelt last night disclosed the line of attack which he will make. He laid down two principles. He said that the delegates whose selection he contests must not vote in the organization of the convention or upon the settlement of the contests, and made it clear that he would resist it.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Pete Corson dropped from the limb and found his way to the road. He stood still a long time, then started back to the Limberlost. A tiny point of light flashed in the region of the case. He stopped with an oath.

"Another hound trying to steal from a girl," he exclaimed. "But it's likely he thinks if he gets anything it will be from a woman who can afford it, as I did."

He went on, but beside the fences and very cautiously.

"Swamp seems to be alive tonight," he muttered. "That's three of us out."

He entered a deep place at the northwest corner, sat on the ground, and, taking a pencil from his pocket, he tore a leaf from a little notebook and laboriously wrote a few lines by the light he carried. Then he went back to the region of the case and waited. Before his eyes swept the vision of the slender white creature with tossing hair. He smiled and worshiped it until a distant rooster faintly announced dawn.

Then he unlocked the case again and replaced the money, laid the note upon it and went back to concealment, where he remained until Elnora came down the trail in the morning, looking very lovely in her new dress and hat.

She had had a great struggle with her hair. It crinkled, billowed and shone, and she could not avoid seeing the becoming frame it made around her face. But in deference to her mother's feelings the girl set her teeth and bound her hair close to her head with a shoestring. "Not to be changed at the case," she told herself.

That her mother was watching she was unaware. Just as she picked up the beautiful brown ribbon Mrs. Comstock spoke.

"You had better let me tie that. You can't reach behind yourself and do it right."

Elnora gave a little gasp. Her mother never before had proposed to do anything for the girl that by any possibility she could do herself. Her heart quaked at the thought of how her mother would arrange that bow, but Elnora dared not refuse. The offer was too precious. It might never be made again.

"Oh, thank you!" said the girl, and, sitting down, she held out the ribbon.

Her mother stood back and looked at her critically.

"You haven't got that like Mag Sinton had it last night," she announced. "You little idiot! You've tried to plaster it down to suit me, and you missed it. I liked it away better as Mag fixed it after I saw it. You didn't look so peeled."

When Elnora looked in the glass the bow was perfectly tied, and how the gold tone of the brown did match the luster of the shining hair! Just then Wesley Sinton came to the door.

"Good morning," he cried heartily. "Elnora, you look a picture. My, but you're sweet. If any of them city boys get sassy you tell your Uncle Wesley and he'll horsewhip them. Here's your Christmas present from me." He handed Elnora the leather lunch box, with her name carved across the strap in artistic lettering.

"Oh, Uncle Wesley!" and that was all Elnora could say.

"Your Aunt Maggie filled it for me for a starter," he said. "Now, if you are ready I'm going to drive past your way and you can ride almost to Onabasha with me and save the new shoes that much."

Elnora slipped the strap and turned back the lid. This disclosed the knife, fork, napkins and spoon, the milk flask and the interior packed with dainty sandwiches wrapped in tissue paper, and the little compartments for meat, salad and the custard cup.

"Oh, mother!" cried Elnora. "Oh, mother, isn't it fine? What made you think of it, Uncle Wesley? How will I ever thank you? No one will have a finer lunch box than I. Oh, I do thank you. That's the nicest gift I ever had. How I love Christmas in September."

"It's a mighty handy thing," assented Mrs. Comstock, taking in every detail with sharp eyes. "I guess you are glad now you went and helped Mag and Wesley when you could, Elnora?"

"Deedy, yes," laughed Elnora, "and I'm going again first time they have a big day if I stay out of school to do it."

"You'll do no such thing," said the delighted Sinton. "Come now, if you're going!"

"If I ride can you spare me time to run into the swamp to my box just a minute?" asked Elnora.

The light she had seen the previous night troubled her.

"Sure," said Wesley largely. He was having such a good time nothing could hurry him. So they drove away and left a white faced woman watching them from the door, her heart just a little screr than usual.

"I'd give a pretty to hear what he'll say to her," she said bitterly. "Always sticking in, always doing things I can't ever afford. Where on earth did he get that thing and what did it cost?"

CHAPTER VII.

Wherein Elnora Receives a Warning and Billy Appears on the Scene.

THEN Mrs. Comstock entered the cabin and began the day's work, but mingled with the brooding bitterness of her soul was the vision of a sweet young face, glad with a gladness never before seen on it, and over and over she repeated, "I wonder what he'll say to her?"

What he said was that she looked as fresh and sweet as a posy and to be careful not to step in the mud or scratch her shoe when she went to the case.

Elnora found her key and opened the door. Not where she had placed it, but conspicuously in front lay her little heap of bills and a crude scrawl of writing beside it. Elnora picked up the note in astonishment.

dere Elnory, the lord amighty is hiding you all right dohe you ever dout it this money of yourn was took for some time las nite but it is returned with intres for god sake done ever come to the swamp at nite or late evnin or mornin or far in any time somgin worse an you know could kit you A FREND.

Elnora began to tremble. She hastily glanced about. The damp earth before the case had been trodden by large, roughly shod feet. She caught up the money and the note, thrust them into her gulmpe, locked the case and ran for the road.

She was so breathless and her face so white Sinton noticed it.

"What in the world's the matter, Elnora?" he asked as he helped her into the carriage.

"I am half afraid," she panted.

"Tut, tut, child!" said Wesley Sinton. "Nothing in the world to be afraid of. What happened?"

"Uncle Wesley," said Elnora, "I had more money than I brought home last night, and I put it in my case. Some one has been there. The ground is all trampled, and they left this note."

"And took your money, I'll wager," said Sinton angrily.

"No," answered Elnora. "Read the note and, oh, Uncle Wesley, tell me what it means!"

Sinton's face was a study. "I don't know what it means," he said. "Only one thing is clear. It means some beast who doesn't really want to harm you has got his eye on you and he is telling you plain as he can not to give him a chance. You got to keep along the roads, in the open, and not let the biggest moth that ever flew tell you out of hearing of us or your mother. It means that, plain and distinct."

"Just when I can sell them; just when everything is so lovely on account of them. I can't—I can't stay away from the swamp. The Limberlost is going to buy the books, the clothes, pay the tuition and even start a college fund. I just can't!"

"You've got to," said Sinton. "This is plain enough. You go far in the swamp at your own risk, even in day time."

"Uncle Wesley," said the girl in a whisper, "last night before I went to bed I was so happy I tried to pray, and I thanked God for hiding me under the shadow of his wing. But how in the world could any one know it?"

Wesley Sinton's heart gave one great leap in his breast. His face was whiter than the girl's now.

"Was you praying out loud, honey?" he almost whispered.

"I might have said words," answered Elnora. "I know I do sometimes. I've never had any one to talk to, and I've played with and talked to myself all my life. You've caught me at it often, but it always makes mother angry when she does. She says it's silly. I forget and do it when I'm alone. But, Uncle Wesley, if I said anything last night you know it was the merest whisper, because I'd have been so afraid of waking mother. Don't you see? I sat up late and did two lessons."

Sinton was steadying himself. "I'll stop and examine the case as I come back," he said. "Maybe I can find some clew. That other—that was just accidental. It's a common expression. All the preachers use it. If I was going to pray that would be the very first thing I'd say."

The color came back to Elnora's face.

"Did you tell your mother about this money, Elnora?" he asked.

"No, I didn't," said Elnora. "It's dreadful not to, but I was afraid. You see, they are clearing the swamp so fast. Every year it grows harder to find things, and Indian stuff gets scarcer. I want to graduate, and that's four years unless I can double on the course. That means $20 tuition each year and new books and clothes. There won't ever be so much at one time again—that I know. I just got to hang to my money. I was afraid to tell her for fear she would want it for taxes, and she really must sell a tree or some cattle for that, mustn't she, Uncle Wesley?"

"On your life, she must!" said Wesley. "You put your little wad in the bank all safe and never mention it to a living soul. It don't seem right, but your case is peculiar. Every word you say is a true word. Each year you will get less from the swamp, and things everywhere will be scarcer. If you ever get a few dollars ahead, that can start your college fund. You know you are going to college, Elnora!"

"Of course I am," said Elnora.

She jumped from the carriage and soon found that with her books, her lunch box and the box of arrow points she had a heavy load. She was almost to the bridge crossing the culvert when she heard the distressed screams of a child. Across an orchard of the suburbs came a small boy, after him a big dog, urged by a man in the background. Elnora's heart was with the small flying figure in any event whatever. She dropped her load on the bridge and with practiced hand caught up a stone and flung it at the dog. The beast curled double with a howl. The boy reached the fence, and Elnora was there to help him over. As he touched the top she swung him to the ground, but he clung to her, clasping her tightly, sobbing and shivering with fear. Elnora carried him to the bridge and sat with him in her arms. For a time his replies to her questions were indistinct, but at last he became quieter and she could understand.

GREATEST RIOT OF THE STRIKE

Sympathizers Decide to Walk to Work—Effect Is Not Yet Greatly Observed—Strikers Go to Chicago and Other Cities to Solicit Funds—No Strikers Found Among Those Arrested In Last Riot

Boston, June 18.—Boycotting the service of the Boston Elevated is what the strikers and their sympathizers have decided upon to force the hands of the company. Several labor unions took such steps last week, and the mass meeting on the common followed suit. These people declare that they will not ride on the Elevated company cars until the strike is won, but that the instructions are not generally followed by the laboring classes was observed all over the city. The company states that its service is in fine operating condition.

Fifty strikers have left Boston to go to some of the largest cities in the country and solicit funds for the strike in Boston. One delegation went to Chicago. It is the purpose of the twenty strikers who comprise this party to request the support of all unions in that city to help them secure recognition of their union by the Boston Elevated company.

There was rioting of a serious nature after the mass meeting of the labor organizations on the common when several thousand of the crowd moved toward Park square as if by concerted action, attacked cars and were dispersed after a number had been hurt and eleven arrests had been made and it is observed also that there are no striking motormen or conductors among those who were arrested, but the rioting was done by people who had attended the mass meetings.

People in some of the buildings along the way evidently were prepared for such an emergency, for they had missiles ready and threw them as soon as the police became occupied in the street below.

A Lenox street car turned from Tremont into Eliot street. When the crowd shouted the motorman made the mistake of shutting off his power and stopping the car, which gave the rowdies an opportunity to jump on board as the passengers scrambled off. The bell ropes were cut and the trolley rope was severed near the feed wire. Meanwhile the motorman had jumped on the front seat and was swinging his switch stick so vigorously that no one in the crowd dared to touch him. The conductor drew a revolver, but he was overpowered.

When police reserves arrived the crowd fought them and injured a sergeant and three patrimen. There were many in the crowd who were bruised and hurt, but they all got away except those who were locked up. Within a few minutes the police not only quelled the disturbance, but completely routed the troublemakers.

Nine of the eleven men arrested for participating in the riot were sentenced to terms in the house of correction ranging from one to eight months.

These included one strike breaking conductor employed by the Boston Elevated, who was found guilty of carrying concealed weapons. His sentence was suspended. All the men appealed and were held in bonds of from $200 to $500 for jury trials in the superior court.

VETOES ARMY BILL

President Opposed to Act Limiting Chiefs of Army Staff

Washington, June 18.—The president has vetoed the army appropriation bill which would oust Major General Leonard Wood of the office of chief of staff on March 4 next.

The president's act was taken as an indication that he would also veto the bill which carries an amendment that would abolish the commerce court.

The president did not veto the bill because of any fault in its appropriations, he said, but because of legislation which congress had added. He declared the practice of attaching legislation to an appropriation bill with the intent of depriving the president of his constitutional power of veto could not be defended.

COLONIALS MET FIRST DEFEAT

McDonald Retired Y. M. C. but Lost Through Poor Support

The Colonials of West Quincy met their first defeat of the season at Merrymount park Saturday afternoon at the hands of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., team by a score of 3 to 2.

The winners scored two runs in the second inning on timely hits and listless playing on the part of the losers. The Colonials lost a splendid opportunity to tie the score in the ninth inning, when Bonafini hit the ball to deep right field. The hit was good for a home run, but the failure of the runner to tag the bases caused him to become an easy out.

Foster pitched effectively for the Y. M. C. A. McDonald, the High school twirler, also performed very creditably, but lost on three costly errors by his team mates. P. Clark and Croucher played well for the winners while Thomas and W. McDonald were conspicuous for the losers.

RAIN STOPPED GAME.

A steady downpour of rain at the close of the fifth inning, brought the South Quincy—Makaria game at the Water Street playgrounds to an abrupt close, Monday afternoon, with the score 3 to 1 in favor of the former.

The score was 1 to 0 in favor of Makaria until the first half of the fifth when two hits, a hit by pitched ball and two bases on balls allowed the South Quincy team to tally three runs. The team work of the visitors was conspicuous at all times and they played an errorless form. Dam also acquitted himself with the willow, securing a fine two base hit.

For the winners McCarthy and the Galvin brothers played exceptionally well, while M. Chapman, Artis and Manning excelled for the losers. This victory placed the South Quincy team at the head of the league by a substantial margin.

The contest was nothing more than a swatting fest for the winners. Two of their players. McVay and Bradley had a total of four hits each, while the entire Orient' combination connected safely eighteen times.

Bradley was very effective at all times and allowed the visitors but four hits. Carlson and the Markham brothers played well for the winners, while Regan was the only one of the losers who gave evidence of being a real ball tosser.

PRICELESS HEIRLOOM OF MAINE SACRED TRUST OF BOYD CAMP

Trophy Presented Organization by Sponsor Matthews, Received by Capt. Wardwell

Senator Lodge Warmly Applauded For His Kindly Interest in Securing Trophy

Past Commander Henry J. Matthews, sponsor for the Maine relic, the powder tank from that historic warship, turned over his charge to John A. Boyd Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, at a session of that organization in Grand Army hall, Tuesda y night. The trophy was accepted in behalf of the Camp by Past Commander George A. Wardwell.

P. C. HENRY J. MATTHEWS,
Who Presented Maine Relic to Boyd Camp.

The occasion was one of much enjoyment, bringing together as it did members of the Spanish War Veterans, Sons of Veterans, members of the Canadian Militia, members of the British Military Naval Veterans associations, public officials, private citizens, and last but by no means least that grand old man of the Grand Army of the Republic, Commander Francis P. Loud of Paul J. Revere Post No. 88, Grand Army of the Republic.

The gathering was informal, without any set speeches, but many were called upon and heartily responded, and it proved a most joyous and pleasant commingling of congenial spirits, every one willing and ready to contribute his share to the complete enjoyment of all.

It was a cosmopolitan gathering likewise as hands were "stretched across the sea and border" to greet the English cousins from England and Canada.

The keynote was happily struck by Capt. A. F. D. Woodbridge of the Canadian militia when he suggested that while an imaginary line and the sea separated the two English speaking races, they were united in a common bond for the uplift of humanity and good fellowship the world over.

Expressions of unstinted reverence and praise were accorded the members of the Grand Army and Spanish War Veterans and Sons of Veterans pledged themselves to keep green the memory of the men who fought for home and country and principles in the great struggle of fifty years ago.

COMMANDER FRANCIS P. LOUD,
Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R.

Representative William J. Leslie struck a responsive chord in the hearts of all present when he urged all to work with enthusiastic will in the movement to provide a better home for the boys of '61 and '65 who were fast answering the last roll call. In Quincy he emphasized the view held by many that the citizens had been backward in providing suitable quarters for the local post of the Grand Army.

The speeches of all were brief but pointed and contained some sentiment or thought which could be followed out and pondered over at leisure, with the possible result of good being produced.

The main feature of the evening's gathering however was the presentation and acceptance of the relic. The former duty devolving upon Past Commander Henry J. Matthews and the acceptance of the same falling to the lot of Past Commander George A. Wardwell.

As an evidence of the good feeling existing between the diversified elements present toasts were drank to President William H. Taft, the commander of the army and navy, King, George V. of England, Commander Francis P. Loud of Paul Revere Post and a silent toast and salute were accorded the heroic dead.

Past Commander George A. Wardwell presided and introduced the various speakers and entertainers.

Captain William D. Shedden of Boston, sang by request "Soldiers of the Queen" Lieut. Woodbridge acting as accompanist.

The speakers of the evening were Representative William J. Leslie, Department Adjutant Comrade Foye of the Brockton Camp, Commander Francis P. Loud of Paul J. Revere Post, No. 88, Grand Army of the Republic, Captain I. C. Johnson, department adjutant of the British Naval Veteran Association, Commander Frank Stoddard of Camp No. 95, Sons of Veterans, Past Commander Henry J. Matthews, Capt. A. F. D. Woodbridge of the 71st York Regiment of the Canadian militia, Postmaster Charles L. Hammond, Frank F. Prescott, Henry P. Kittredge, Sachem A. J. Clapp of the Improved Order of Red Men, Major F. J. Horne of the British War Veterans Association, Capt. Preston of Lynn and representatives of the local press.

PRESENTING THE RELIC.

In presenting the relic to the camp, Past Commander Henry J. Matthews, said: "In presenting this relic I may be excused for going into a little history regarding it. Almost four years prior to the raising of the Maine from the depths of Havana harbor I started a movement in that direction by a communication in the Quincy Ledger. I was attacked on all sides for my position. But I stuck to it. I explained how it could be done, deriving my knowledge from a civil engineer of my acquaintance who explained the subject fully to me. His and my contentions were justified four years later by the success of Major Ferguson in raising the hull of the Maine, in just about the manner which I had suggested. I made application through Senator Lodge for a relic from the historic battleship for this camp. There was considerable correspondence on the subject which I have preserved. At last I was notified that item No. 222 was at the disposal of this camp and I was sponsor for it. It arrived in time and was carried in the Memorial day parade. We owe much to Senator Lodge, our honored representative in the United States Senate for his activity in our behalf. This trophy cannot be removed from this hall, loaned, or exhibited without notifying the army and navy department through me, as sponsor, of that action so that the records may be maintained complete. Comrades, this memorial may not be of very high monetary value, but the memory of what it represents is dear to us. It will always bring to our minds that occurrence in the harbor of Hafana, when on the night of February 15, 1898 when the Maine went down and carried 266 brave souls into eternity. It should teach us a lesson. I prize it highly and the citizens of Quincy should prize it for what it represents. Mr. Commander I present it to you for John A. Boyd Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans and may the camp ever prize and cherish it."

Past Commander Wardwell in accepting the relic for the camp, said it afforded him much pleasure to be the recipient. He should prize it highly as he felt sure his comrades would and hoped the time was not far distant when the Grand Army post and auxiliary organizations would have a suitable home where this relic could be properly exhibited so that citizens of Quincy and all who came to visit here would have a chance to view it.

The bouquet of flowers which adorned it on this occasion he explained had been sent by Mrs. Edwin J. Gihon, wife of the Past National commander of the United Spanish War Veterans and had been brought from her home in Wakefield by one of the visitors.

The relic is a copper powder tank, of cylindrical form, 35 inches deep and seven inches in diameter, capable of holding 100 pounds of powder.

REPRESENTATIVE W. J. LESLIE.

Called upon to respond for the state said: "I feel that a gathering of this kind is of material benefit to the camp and can be productive of good. I have served in the militia and thought the time I spent as a soldier above every other calling. I look upon my soldier days as a happy dream and regret that I am not still in it. But it is a young man's place and I am no longer young. While not in the state of middle life I am rapidly drawing near to it. I regret that the bill which

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT DELEGATES IN DEADLOCK

Prospects of Long Drawn Out and Strenuous Conflict

Up to 1.30 o'clock this afternoon no definite news of a cheering character was received from the Chicago convention.

There is a difference of two hours time between Boston and Chicago.

The convention was to assemble at 11.15 o'clock, this forenoon or 1.15 o'clock Boston time.

The rival forces are still in a death grapple for supremacy.

Both sides claim the victory.

It is conceded that if Taft does not win on the first ballot he is hopelessly beaten.

The attitude and possible change of front of the 36 LaFollette and 10 Cummings delegates will have a great bearing on the result.

The outlook at present is that neither candidate has a working and operative majority.

WM. BUCKLEY AND DAUGHTERS

Will Lead the Ward 6 Fourth of July Parade

FORMER CHIEF MARSHAL

William L. Buckley and his three daughters will lead the Fourth of July parade at Atlantic. Mr. Buckley is to be chief marshal. His daughters' mounts will be western bronchos that have been broken to saddle by the girls themselves.

The automobile section of the parade will contain nearly every machine owned in Atalntic. The Fort Banks military band has been secured by the committee for the parade and for concerts throughout the day.

After the parade in the early morning will be a fancy ball game between fat and lean men of Atlantic. During the forenoon there will be field sports on the Atlantic playground, and in the afternoon water sports at the beach. The park commission has given the committee permission to carry out its program on the reservation.

There will be a play-out for hand tubs, and already several veteran firemen companies have entered. Free ice cream will be served children of the town at the committee's headquarters in the Music hall building. The celebration will be closed by a display of fireworks.

The field sports include 100-yard dash; 220-yard dash, mile run, shot-put, high jump, running broad jump, quarter-mile run, 100-yard dash for boys over 16, 50-yard dash for boys not over 10 and 50-yard dash for girls. The water sports will include 50-yard race open to all, 50-yard race for boys not over 16, swimming under water, diving contest open to all, diving contest for girls, 50-yard race for girls, riding the barrel and a relay race between two picked teams. Miss Rose Pitonof will act as one of the judges and give an exhibition of swimming and diving.

EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A conductor of the Elevated from Neponset bridge Saturday sported a button "We walk for Justice." A consultation of the register might lead one to imagine he rode in a taxi cab after working hours.

"Crane must go," is the edict of Roosevelt. Possibly the voters of Massachusetts may have something to say upon this important subject in November.

The beef trust is to be dissolved. It will probably be with a great big string attached and will make little difference in the price of meat.

How much did the striking car men profit by the hurdy gurdy trip to Quincy?

Democracy or despotism? It is up to Chicago delegates to decide.

It is conceded that the Philadelphia Athletics will be the greatest rivals of the Boston team in the American league race.

While American flags were exhibited in great abundance on Boston common Sunday, it was noticeable that few of the many thousands saluted it in the proper manner as it passed them.

T. R. was presented with the Nobel prize by the world's peace conference. Would the conference like to get it back in few of the recent events?

Wrestler Gotch evidently believes in getting right down to the bottom of things judging from his success with the toe hold.

A car baggage man told the Wollaston baggage master that he had been dead three days. The latter replied "That may be, but you can't bury me."

Passing under crossing gates is a dangerous practice and may lead to serious injury if not death at any time.

Beveryl has not ordered flowers for the president's reception, being uncertain as to the variety needed for the summer capital this year.

Charlestown's antique and horrible procession did not pan out very well. In the main money expended for this feature of celebrations could be expended to better advantage in other directions.

The general public will be thankful when they are relieved from the columns of slush served up daily from the Chicago convention.

The sentiment for peace may be overwhelming in this country, but when it comes to internal disturbances we have no seat in the Hague gathering.

It was significant that yesterday was the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo.

Has Tim Woodruff taken over his varied assortment of vests to the Roosevelt camp? He may now be classed with Joseph of the coat of many colors, but it would be interesting to know under what class he now exhibits.

Many of the delegates joined in the Lord's prayer at the Chicago convention yesterday. Many great generals in ages past devoted a period for prayer prior to engaging in a great battle. Probably the delegates thought they would perform their penance for the later sins at the earliest opportunity.

A SLAVE DRIVER.

Judging from the manner in which it is reported that Roosevelt is driving his delegates around at the Chicago convention, they might be compared to a crowd of slaves obeying in adject fear the behests of their lord and master rather than "proud citizens of the greatest republic the world has ever witnessed." Or at least that is the way the Fourth of July and political orators hand it out. Delegates from this or that state must do as they are told or rival tickets will be placed in the running of their states. Those delegates were elected by the people. They were not elected to do the bidding of one man or any body of men. As far as they are pledged by their election to stand by one man or a group of men it is all right.

But beyond that point the despotic power is too tightly drawn. Men from the Bay State, particularly, where the first blood of the Revolution mingled with the soil, where the "shot was fired that was heard around the world," the abiding place of the "Cradle of Liberty," the home of Paul Revere, John Hancock, and thousands of others who gave of their strength, others who gave of their strength, blood, wealth, aye their very all, on the altar of liberty, who can stand and tamely submit to any such coercion, should be relegated to the places they belong on returning from the lake city. They not only slavishly give up their own rights but they concede that the rights of thousands of Massachusetts citizens can be footballed around at the behest of any one man or party of men, "harvested" as it were until the crop was ripe then plucked and cast about at will, or gathered into the "pie galley" of an ambitious publisher.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Passing under the gates of grade crossings when they are down is a dangerous and fool hardy proceeding. A few seconds, possibly minutes may be saved by the venture but when all is said and done is the gain in time worth the risk. A misstep, a slip, the misjudging of a second of time may mean serious injury, maiming for life, or even the death of the reckless venturer. And in any case no one is to blame but the person injured.

The craze of time saving, the rapid movement, the hustle and bustle of American life is responsible for taking fool hardy risks which are illogical and unnecessary.

The time saved in many cases may mean a more extended period in the hereafter.

Passing under the gates at the railroad crossing near the Quincy railroad station is a favorite venture of many people who have to pass from one side of the tracks to the other to reach their destination. In many instances those people who take the risk do not know how near the approaching train may be. They bob under the gates, make a dash without looking to the right or left and if they reach the other side in safety congratulate themselves upon their agility and the saving of a few seconds of time.

This trick may be carried on once too often. The gatekeeper is powerless to prevent such a dash as he is near his gate bar and the people who pass under usually do so at a point about midway. The risk is too great. People should be more careful and there is really no necessity of their taking the desperate chance for the saving of a few seconds of time. It is to be hoped that people will be more rational upon this matter and discontinue a dangerous practice.

WILL MASSACHUSETTS STAND IT?

The Massachusetts delegates to the Chicago convention, en route in their special train with good feeling and other things to make the trip agreeable decided that they would unite on Senator W. Murray Crane as National Republican com. man from this state. This did not meet with the approval of the man who secured half of the Bay State delegates on a fluke. Crane was not acceptable. He must go. Senator Crane was disgusted by the dissensions within his own party. He declined to be again a candidate for Senator. Squabbling is distasteful to a man of his quiet tastes.

He ahs made an ideal Senator. Democrats and Republicans alike of Massachusetts have honored him for his integrity, his ability, tactfulness, and consistent work. He has been a producer. He has done things in a quiet modest manner and any one in Washington knows that he was one of the hardest worked officials in either House of congress. And notwithstanding all that Massachusetts men are told he is not desirable and they accept the decision. That Senator Crane is averse to engaging in a contest for the committee place is well understood. Will the determination to oust him from the committee be carried out? There is more behind this than the mere bouncing of Senator Crane. The people of Massachusetts must be considered. There is an election this fall. The Democrats could not have a stronger political argument than the forced retirement of Senator Crane from the Committee. Will Massachusetts stand for it?

JOHN THOMAS AT HIS BEST

Delighted His Fellow Townsmen With Recitation and Story

John Thomas of Boston, humorist, reader, mirth provoker, character artist, orator, comedian, and the bearer of a dozen other synonyms to those that heard him on Tuesday evening, was the prime attraction at the entertainment of the Park and Downs Men's club. Himself a Quincy boy, Mr. Thomas having been born on Adams street, the evening was all the more interesting, and his relation of an incident on the local railroad brought down the house.

"Dooley on Music" was an excellent character sketch while "the Stoner's funeral" was well told. "The automobilious wagon" was excitingly funny while "the debate of the Common Council" proved the hit of the evening.

A boy's composition on "Breath," a poem on "Brains," "The Joker," and "Sunny Jim" were other stories told.

The climax came with an impressive sermon based on the pathetic poem of "Old Mother Hubbard." This was worked up in the true ministerial fashion of days past and closed Mr. Thomas's entertainment.

The program was augmented by a local orchestra consisting of Miss Henrietta C. Gram, George Critchley, Charles Richardson, Miss Emily Bjorkman and Miss Louise Steffen's who rendered a number of pleasing instrumental selections. Piano solos by John Weidner of Lawrence were also enjoyed.

MAYOR STONE, EX-MAYOR SHEA

Both in Accidents, One Sea and the Other Land

BEN RESCUED THE LATTER

Accidents, both slight, happened to Mayor Stone and ex-Mayor Shea, Monday. Mayor Stone was out yachting when one of the crew tied the sheet. When the yacht tried to come about there was trouble and the yacht came within an ace of capsizing. As it was, her standing room was half filled with water and the Mayor got his patent leathers wet.

The accident to ex-Mayor Shea, or rather his automobile, happened about 1. o'clock Tuesday morning. The ex-Mayor was skimming along toward home in his Maxwell thinking of what a good time he had been having, and never giving the time of day, or night a thought. Suddenly there was a sound as of an explosion and down went a tire. "Bill" was then a long way from home. A search brought out the fact that he had forgoten to take his tire pump with him and while he had a spare tube it was of little use. It was rather dark at this hour and there was no garage or house in sight, and "Bill" was in a predicament. He said a few things to himself and had about made up his mind to make himself comfortable for the night, trusting to luck that with the return of daylight, help would be found, when there was a sound of a distant honk, honk, and another belated traveller hove in sight.

Automobilists sympathize with each other and the stranger immediately shut off power and inquired the trouble. "Bill" in his most diplomatic manner told his unknown friend just what had happened.

The next minute "Bill's" ears were greeted with a sound that seemed good to him. It said "Hello, Mayor, what are you doing here? Get down and blow up that tire quick," was Ben's order to his chauffeur for the stranger proved to be another belated Quincy man.

Then came the cry, "Here Bill have a cigar, Have two of them." "My but it did seem good to me" said Bill the next morning in telling his friend Brogan of the episode.

The flat tire was soon inflated and in a few minutes "Bill" was again speeding homeward gladly eating the dust of Ben's car, which was fast disappearing in the distance.

FIREMAN'S LICENSE

Got Hambury Into Trouble Thinking It An Engineer's

SENTENCED TO FINE OF $50

Elmer H. Hambury was fined $50 and costs in court this morning for running an engine without a license. When the case came up last week Hambury claimed that he had a second class engineer's license but that it had been stolen from the wall of the engine room. The state inspector however testified that it was not an engineer's license that the man held but a second class fireman's license. The case was then continued for further investigation. This morning it was shown by the records that it was a firemen's license and not an engineer's license which the man held. The court therefore imposed a fine of $50 and ordered the defendant to pay the costs of the case.

you labored for did not pass the legislature. The Spanish War veterans did their part and I tried to do mine, but regret that we were not successful. We as Spanish War veterans have a great deal to do. As we see the members of the Grand Army passing from us day by day it is left for us to take their places and do their work. To accomplish this the camps must be built up to do good work. We were boys when we went to war, but now we are men with men's work to perform. I should like to see all the camps, flourishing, growing and improving. The Grand Army is going but it will never be forgotten while the

Said that it was through the efforts of members of Boyd camp that the Brockton organization was effected. They had now a membership of 80 but hoped to make it 100 before the year closed. He could not see, why Quincy with the material to draw from could not have a large and strong camp. The work of helping the comrade, the widow and the orphan should be carried on with vigor. They were going further and asking Massachusetts for aid, not for themselves personally but for members of the organization as a whole. Some of the camps were in need of awakening and being brought up to date. He hoped this would be carried out. He was not much of a speech maker but had work to do and would do it.

COMMANDER FRANCIS P. LOUD.

The veteran was given an ovation when he arose to speak. He said: "When I look around and see you boys, for in the light of my years I must call you boys, I look back fifty years, when President Lincoln issued his first call for 300,000 volunteers, I enlisted as a musician in Colonel Gordon's second regiment which was mustered in at that part of West Roxbury known as Brook farm, and which we later called Camp Andrew in honor of the War governor. We left there July 8th, 1861, with 1040 men including 25 musicians and two days later encamped at Williamsport on the banks of the Potomac. The next day, the 11th, we forded the Potomac and later took part in the battle of Bull Run, Ball's Bluff, Cedar Mountain and Antietam, and retreated with General Banks through the Shenadoah valley. Many criticised Banks for that retreat, but you must remember he had only 8000 men and eight miles of baggage train and was confronted by 20,000 confederates. We marched 67 miles in two days. Many people contended that musicians were not needed with the army. There was many a time that I would rather have had a musket with which to protect myself than a cornet. Later on being mustered out I re-enlisted in the veteran corps as a musician, going from Readville as leader of a band of 20 men. Out of the 45 musicians whom I served with in the war only eight besides myself are alive today. We did our duty. You did your duty in a like manner when called upon. I am glad to be here and greet the younger men of the later war."

CAPT. I. C. JOHNSON.

Adjutant of the British Naval association, said he appreciated the honor of being the guest on this and other occasions of the Spanish War veterans. It was a pleasure to join with the camp in showing appreciation to Commander Loud what he and his comrades did for civilization. Honorary members of any organization did much for it and he was pleased to see that the camp had an honarary membership roll.

COMMANDER FRANK STODDARD.

Of Camp No. 92, Sons of Veterans, said: "I assure you the Spanish War veterans have an able assistant in the Sons of Veterans in perpetuating the memory and carrying on the work of the veterans of the Civil war. There was some little jealousy and bad feeling at first but was glad to say that this had rolled away and hereafter the Sons of Veterans and Spanish War veterans would be good friends. It was regrettable to note that in some instances the great service of the Civil war veteran was forgotten or neglected. In the town of Lee the post had become small and the veterans had been notified to vacate their quarters in the town hall. The post surrendered its charter. A protest should be sent to that place by posts and camps. It was a shame to see veterans treated so. In a Maine post the ranks were reduced to eight and the charter was surrendered. In the Civil war 2000 boys of 14 years of age enlisted, 5000 were only 16 years old and betwen the ages of 16 and 21 years there were 200,000. I endorse Mr. Leslie's remarks for a suitable quarters for the Grand Army post of Quincy. I tell you we have got to keep together. You must keep in the public eye or you will soon be forgotten.

CAPT. A. F. D. WOODBRIDGE

Of the Canadian Militia, introduced as representing another flag said that he had every respect for the comrades, brothers in arms, whom he met on this occasion. He was glad to note that the association between the two countries were growing closer each year and hoped the day was not long distant when they would become one. He did not mean, that the United States would go over and take Canada under her wing or that they would be under one flag, but he meant one in the good fellowship that was growing warmer all the time. Soldiers, of whatever country or wherever they were always performed their duty when called upon.

POSTMASTER C. L. HAMMOND.

Paid his respects to Commander Francis P. Loud and said that he hoped he would live and enjoy many years yet. The postmaster was going down the shady side of life himself, but hoped that his years would be as many and honorable as those of Commander Loud whom he had known for a long time, and remembered well his connection with the post office. It had been his pleasure and privilege to entertain many of the Veterans of the Grand Army each Memorial day at his home in West Quincy. Now that he had moved from that section of the city, he missed their pleasant visit.

FRANK F. PRESCOTT,

An honorary member of the camp, spoke of the days of the Spanish war, and the interesting letters which had come to the Quincy Ledger from one of the boys and could be found in the files of that paper today. He did not think it was really necessary to have a souvenir to remember the Maine. He hoped the Grand Army would be successful in obtaining the Adams Academy for permanent quarters, and that the auxiliary organizations would soon occupy it with the post.

HENRY P. KITTREDGE,

Another Honorary member of the camp said he had always taken an interest in the Grand Army and the Spanish war veterans especially this camp. He knew he was to be called upon and so had prepared a brief paper showing incidents regarding the Maine which had come under his observation.

SACHEM A. J. CLAPP

Of Tribe 62, Improved Order of Red Men, lamented the fact that he was too young for the Civil war and too old to be admitted to the Spanish war. He enjoyed those gatherings. One of his greatest pleasures was to entertain and listen to tales of the war by Frank Curry of Middleboro, now 87 years old but sprightly, as straight as an arrow and without a gray hair in his head. He touched upon the benefits of organization, and particularly fraternal organizations and gave illustrations of how the Red Men aided their brothers and the widows and orphans of their departed brothers.

COMMANDER GEORGE C. OGDEN

Of Camp No. 20, Brockton spoke of the building up work in Brockton and hoped that with the material to draw from in Quincy this camp would soon become one of the strongest as well as it was the second oldest in the country. There was a good field here to work from.

MAJOR A. J. HORNE

Of the British War Veterans, referred to a letter which he had borne for a Veteran of the Spanish War, who had died. The letter was presented to this camp and its history was well known. But its breath of hope and patriotism and eagerness to resume the duties of the soldier were inspiration sufficient to stir one to great deeds. While introduced as a representative of a British military organization, he wanted all to understand he was an American Citizens. "I am an American citizen by choice," he said "while many of you are citizens because you could not help yourself."

A writer has said that we cannot live by the dead, but we can revere their memory and that is what we should do for the veterans of those wars. He concluded his remarks with a humorous story.

The gathering was brought to a close by the audience singing "God Save the King," and "America," Charles E. Decker presiding at the piano.

During the evening refreshments and cigars were served most liberally by the efficient entertainment committee, William J. Collagan, Henry J. Matthews and John J. Johnson.

The gathering was one of the most delightful and profitable from every point in the history of the camp. It showed that the camp members are wide awake, alive to present day conditions and eager to keep pace with the times. New members are being added at each meeting and the hopes of those who wish it success and large membership will be realized.

Every one had a good time. There was not a dragging minute during the evening and members and guests were made to feel at home by the officers and committee.

This Relic night gathering will go down in the history of the camp as a red letter page in its history, one often to be referred to as a standard set medal which he had presented the Lieutenant as a trophy to be shot the Canadian regiment thanked Capt. George A. Wardwell of Quincy for the for similar events. Before "taps" were sounded Lieut. Woodbridge of for by the members of his command across the border.

SENTIMENT AGAINST 2-3 RULE

Final Plans Are Being Finished—Change In Rule Not For This Convention—Clark Leads but Is 302 Short—Seven Pledged Candidates In All—Various Names For Convention Chairman

Baltimore, June 19.—Overshadowed politically by the sensational goings-on in Chicago, Baltimore welcomes the prospective end of the battle there and will itself shine in the limelight next week.

Final plans are rapidly being arranged and before the week ends Maryland's metropolis will be ready to care for the Democratic hosts. There is a strong sentiment among Democratic leaders who have arrived here in favor of changing the two-thirds rule to a majority. All are agreed, however, no change will be made to apply to the present convention. The most done, if any action is taken, will be a submission of the question to the Democrats in the states, their verdict to be reported to the convention of 1916.

As to the candidates, there are seven having pledged delegates in their favor and there is much gossip regarding a few possible dark horses.

Best estimates made today of the strength of the active candidates credit Clark with 412 votes; Wilson, 280; Underwood, 88; Harmon, 31; Marshall, 30; Baldwin, 14, and Burke, 10. There will be 1086 delegates in the convention and the winner of the presidential nomination will have to muster 724 of them.

Unpledged delegates number 207, and such as have arrived in town are receiving distinguished consideration from the representatives of the candidates.

Half a dozen of the party leaders are considered for selection as temporary chairman of the convention. The number includes Judge Alton B. Parker, who is favored by Murphy, the head of Tammany; Senator O'Gorman of New York, who has many supporters; Ollie James, senator-elect from Kentucky, and Representatives Doremus of Detroit and Sulzer of New York.

Leaders are urging that the platform should be brief and to the point. Suffragists are on the ground with demands for their "rights." Several women will have seats as delegates in the convention.

DIED IN RESTURANT

Unknown Served a Meal and Waiter Discovers Him Rigid

Boston, June 19.—Although he didn't know it at the time, a waiter in a restaurant at 5 Green street served a dying man with breakfast. The unknown entered the place and ordered a substantial meal. Noticing after a time that the food was untouched the waiter went to the table.

"Anything the matter, sir?" he asked. Receiving no answer he looked more closely and saw his customer sitting bolt upright in the chair, his eyes closed and his body rigid.

A hurry call was sent to the Relief hospital, but the man was dead when the ambulance reached there. Nothing was found in his clothing to identify him. He was about 5 feet 7 inches in height, and a gray mustache and gray hair, was plainly dressed, and three fingers of his left hand were bandaged.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $30 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her box cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

He was a mite of a boy, nothing but skin covered bones, his burned, freckled face in a mortar of tears and dust, his clothing unspeakably dirty, one great toe in a festering mass from a broken nail and sores all over the visible portions of the small body.

"You wouldn't set a dog on a boy for just taking a few old apples when you fed 'em to pigs with a shovel every day, would you?" he said.

"No, I would not," said Elnora hotly.

"You'd give a boy all the apples he wanted if he hadn't any breakfast and was so hungry he was all twisty inside, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would," said Elnora.

"If you had anything to eat you would give me something right now, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said Elnora. "There's nothing but just stones in the package. But my dinner is in that case. I'll gladly divide."

She opened the box. The famished child gave a little cry and reached both hands. Elnora caught them back.

"Did you have any supper?"

"No."

"Any dinner yesterday?"

"An apple and some grapes I stole."

"Whose boy are you?"

"Old Tom Billings'."

"Why don't your father get you something to eat?"

"He does most days, but he's drunk now."

"Hush! You must not!" said Elnora. "He's your father!"

"He's spent all the money to get drunk, too," said the boy, "and Jimmy and Belle are both crying for breakfast. I'd 'a' got out all right with an apple for myself, but I tried to get some for them, and the dog got too close. Say, you can just throw, can't you?"

"Yes," admitted Elnora. She poured half the milk into the cup. "Drink this," she said, holding it to him.

The boy gulped the milk and swore joyously, gripping the cup with shaking fingers.

"Hush!" cried Elnora. "That's dreadful!"

"What's dreadful?"

"To say such awful words."

"Huh, pa says worser 'an that every breath he draws."

Elnora stared into the quaint little face and saw that the child was older than she had thought. He might have been forty by his hard, unchildish expression.

"Do you want to be like your father?"

"No; I want to be like you. Couldn't a angel be prettier 'an you! Can I have more milk?"

Elnora emptied the flask. The boy drained the cup. He drew a breath of satisfaction as he gazed into her face.

"You wouldn't go off and leave your little boy, would you?" he asked.

"Did some one go away and leave you?" questioned Elnora in return.

"Yes; my mother went off and left me and left Jimmy and Belle, too," said the boy. "You wouldn't leave your little boy, would you?"

"No."

The boy looked eagerly at the box. Elnora lifted a sandwich and uncovered the fried chicken. The boy gasped with delight.

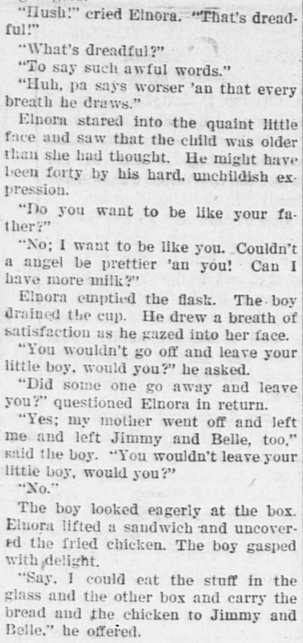
"Say, I could eat the stuff in the glass and the other box and carry the bread and the chicken to Jimmy and Belle," he offered.

Elnora silently uncovered the custard with preserved cherries on top and handed it and the spoon to the child. Never did food disappear faster. The salad went next, and a sandwich and half a chicken breast followed.

"I better leave the rest for Jimmy and Belle," he said. "They're 'ist fightin' hungry."

Elnora gave him the remainder of the carefully prepared lunch. The boy clutched it and ran with a sidewise hop like a wild thing.

Elnora covered the dishes and cup, polished the spoon, replaced it and closed the beautiful case. She caught her breath in a tremulous laugh.



"Drink this," she said, holding it to him

"If Aunt Margaret knew that she'd never forgive me," she said. "It seems as if secrecy is literally forced upon me, and I hate it. What will I do for lunch? I'll have to go sell my arrows and keep enough money for a restaurant sandwich."

So she walked hurriedly into town, sold her points at a good price, deposited her funds and went away with a neat little bank book and the note from the Limberlost carefully folded inside. Elnora passed down the great hall that morning, and no one paid the slightest attention to her. The truth was she looked so like every one else that she was perfectly inconspicuous. But in the coat room there were members of her class. Surely no one intended it, but the whisper was too loud.

"Look at the girl from the Limberlost in the clothes that woman gave her!"

Elnora turned on them. "I beg your pardon," she said unsteadily; "I couldn't help hearing that! No one gave me these clothes. I paid for them myself."

Some one muttered. "Pardon me," but incredulous faces greeted her.

Elnora felt driven. "Aunt Margaret selected them, and she meant to give them to me," she explained, "but I wouldn't take them. I paid for them myself." There was a dead silence.

"Don't you believe me?" panted Elnora.

"Really, it is none of our affair," said another girl. "Come on; let's go."

Elnora stepped before the girl who had spoken. "You have made this your affair," she said, "because you told a thing which was not true. No one gave me what I am wearing. I paid for my clothes myself with money I earned selling moths to the Bird Woman. I just came from the bank where I deposited what I did not use. Here is my credit." Elnora drew out and offered the little red book. "Surely you will believe that," she said.

"Why, of course," said the girl who first had spoken. "We met such a lovely woman in Brownlee's store, and she said she wanted our help to buy some things for a girl, and that's how we came to know."

"Dear Aunt Margaret," said Elnora. "it was like her to ask you. Isn't she splendid?"

"She is indeed," chorused the girls. Elnora set down her lunch box and books and unpinned her hat, hanging it beside the others. While her back was turned into the room came the girl of her encounter on the first day, walked to the rack and, with an exclamation of approval, took down Elnora's hat.

"Just the thing I have been wanting," she said. "I never saw such beautiful quills in all my life. They match my new broadcloth to perfection. I've got to have that kind of quills for my hat. I never saw the like. Whose is it, and where did it come from?"

No one said a word, for Elnora's question, the reply and her answer had gone the rounds of the high school. Every one knew that the Limberlost girl had come out ahead, and Sadie Reed had not felt amiable when the little flourish had been added to Elnora's name in the algebra class. Elnora's swift glance was pathetic, but no one helped her. Sadie Reed glanced from the hat to the faces around her and wondered.

"Why, this is the freshman section. Whose hat is it?" she asked again, this time impatiently.

"That's the tassel of the cornstalk," said Elnora, with a forced laugh.

The response was genuine. Every one shouted. Sadie Reed blushed, but she laughed also.

"Well, it's beautiful," she said, "especially the quills. They are exactly what I want. I know I don't deserve any kindness from you, but I do wish you would tell me at whose store you got those quills."

"Gladly," said Elnora. "You can't get quills like those at a store. They are from a living bird. Phoebe Simms gathers them in her orchard as her peacocks shed them. They are wing quills from the males."

Then there was a perfect silence. How was Elnora to know that not a girl there would have told that?

"I haven't a doubt but I can get you some," she offered. "She gave Aunt Margaret a great bunch, and those are part of them. I am quite sure she has more and would spare some."

Sadie Reed laughed shortly. "You needn't trouble," she said. "I was fooled. I thought they were expensive quills. I wanted them for a twenty dollar velvet toque to match my new suit. If they are picked off the ground, really, I couldn't use them."

"Only in spots," said Elnora. "They don't just cover the earth. Phoebe Simms' peacocks are the only ones within miles of Onabasha, and they moult but once a year. If your hat only cost $20 it's hardly good enough for those quills. You see, the Almighty made and colored those himself, and he puts the same kind on Phoebe Simms' peacocks that he put on the head of the family in the forests of Ceylon away back in the beginning. Any old manufactured quill from New York or Chicago will do for your little twenty dollar hat. You ought to have something infinitely better than that to be worthy of quills that are made by the Creator."

How those girls did laugh! One of them walked by Elnora to the auditorium, sat with her during exercises and tried to talk whenever she dared to keep Elnora from seeing the curious and admiring looks bent upon her. For the brown eyed boy whistled, and there was pantomime of all sorts going on behind Elnora's back that day. Happy with her books no one knew how much she saw, and from her absorption in her studies it was evident she cared too little to notice. It soon developed that to be inconspicuous and to work was all Elnora craved.

Claim Discharged Men For Joining the Union

BREAKER DERIDES THE STRIKE

Boston Road Said to Be Borrowing Men From Western Cities—Crime to Coerce Person Not to Join Labor Organization—Police Refuse Permit to Operate Hurdy-Gurdys—Committee Will Defy Order

Boston, June 19.—In an endeavor to break the strike of its conductors and motormen, now under way for twelve days, the Elevated comany is borrowing experienced men from non-union roads all over the country and discharging the professional strike breakers as rapidly as possible, according to a letter received from James T. Liddy of Columbus, O.

He says fifty men have already been loaned to the Elevated for a period of thirty days by the street railway company of Columbus. He also says their expenses were guaranteed by their own employers, who, in turn, are to be reimbursed by the Boston Elevated. Liddy is business agent of the Machinists' union in Columbus. The information was contained in a letter to John C. Colgan, chairman of the Carmen's union press committee.

Steps have been taken by the striking car men's union to prosecute the Boston Elevated company criminally for violation of the statutes. The strikers contend that by discharging employes for joining the union the company violated chapter 514 of section 19 of the acts of 1909, reading as follows: "No person shall himself or by his agent coerce or compel a person into a written or oral agreement not to join or become a member of a labor organization as a condition of his securing employment or continuing in the employment of such person."

A committee of three strikers called on the superintendent of police to secure a permit to play a hurdy-gurdy on the public streets to solicit funds for the striking conductors and motormen. That official said that he would not grant them the permit asked for and also that any striker caught playing an organ on the street would be immediately arrested. He also said that if the owner of an organ was found playing in conjunction with strike collections he would be arrested and his license revoked.

Counsel for the strikers was notified and informed the strikers' committee that Superintendent Pierce had exceeded his authority. The strike committee has ordered the three men to procure an organ and make a test case.

"Say, believe me, this ain't a strike," said a professional strike breaker to a reporter who boarded a Dorchester car in the subway.

"This is the tamest place I ever struck, and I'll be glad when I get out of here. I've been in at least twenty strikes and this is the tamest one I ever ran up against. Why don't they start something, the way they did over in Philley? Those are the things which make the business of being a strike breaker worth while.

"When there's plenty of danger—that's what we like. Us fellers who are regular strike breakers are all soldiers of fortune and we like the thrill that you get in a riot. We won't stay here more than two or three days more.

"When it's tame like here in Boston that cuts out most of the graft. They're watching us pretty close now.

"When there's plenty of shooting and they have difficulty in keeping the cars moving, they don't watch the cash registers. They are satisfied for us to take all we collect as long as we keep the cars moving."

The state board of arbitration and conciliation will try to settle the Boston Elevated strike.

This announcement and the story that there is a possibility of a strike of the strike breakers on the Elevated stimulates the interest in Boston's industrial dispute.

THIRD TO FLY AND DIE

Practice Flight at Springfield, Ills., Fatal For Woman

Springfield, Ills., June 19.—Mrs. Julia Clark of Denver, an aviator, was killed during a practice flight at the state fair grounds. The tip of a wing of a biplane in which she was flying struck the limb of a tree in the centre of the race track enclosure and the machine was dashed to the ground, turning turtle. Mrs. Clark's skull was crushed, and she died in a few minutes afterward.

Mrs. Clark was the third woman to secure a license and the third to be killed.

Odds Against Roosevelt

Chicago, June 19.—Betting odds against Roosevelt securing the nomination have lengthened to 2 to 1. This indicates that Wall street is inclining more to expect a compromise candidate. No offering of money on Taft in any way reported.

STOLE WHEELS AND SOLD THEM

George Freese Tried the Trick Once Too Often

FINED $25 ON ONE CASE

A young man who gave his name as George Freese was arrested in East Boston Tuesday night for Inspector Goodhue by whom he was wanted for the alleged larceny of bicycles at the Fore River shipyard. Many of the men employed at the yard ride bicycles to the yard which are left standing in racks near the entrance. Freese who was employed at the yard is alleged to have helped himself to a bicycle when he left the yard which he rode to his home in East Boston and then sold it. Several bicycles were missed and then a watch was kept. Freese was seen to take a wheel and ride off with it. When arrested he claimed to have purchased the wheel of an Italian in the yard for $4, and to have sold it for $5. The wheel was located in East Boston. The court said it did not put much faith in what the fellow said and imposed a fine of $25.

ON THEIR TRIAL TESTS.

TECHNICAL ASSAULT

Found Against Henry Kittredge on Cuttler Boy

BOY PROBABLY ANNOYING

Many storekeepers about City Square have been complaining of the nuisance some of the newsboys are continually making of themselves by holding up patrons entering their store and soliciting the purchase of papers. One of these boys, Leo P. Cuttler it is claimed annoyed Henry P. Kittredge who conducts the news stand on the corner of Saville and Hancock streets. According to Mr. Kittredge, Cuttler has been in the habit of holding up customers entering his store and soliciting them to purchase papers of him. Monday afternoon Kittredge claims that Cuttler although warned to keep away a number of times persisted in standing at the entrance to the store. Mr. Kittredge then came out and chased him away. Kittredge claimed that he made a pass to knock the boy's hat off when the boy ducked his head so that the blow landed on his face. The court took the ground that the assault was a technical one and there was no doubt but what the boy had made a nuisance of himself. The case was then placed on file on payment of costs.

Two years ago an effort was made to have the City Council pass an ordinance governing newsboys but it failed to pass.

FIRE BY CHILDREN

Nearly a Score of Roxbury Houses Are Damaged

Boston, June 19.—Two three-story apartment houses were destroyed, five others were partially burned, the roofs of eleven other dwelling houses caught in a four-alarm fire which threatened the entire Howard avenue and Letterfine terrace section of Roxbury. It was started by children playing with matches.

Three firemen were hurt. John Quigley of Engine 24 was taken to the City hospital suffering from severe burns about the head, face and shoulders. Lieutenant John Seeley of the Protective department was cut by flying glass. The damage amounted to more than $25,000.

WOMEN AVIATORS AT SQUANTUM

Miss Quimby and Miss Scott to Race Male Flyers

BOTH DARING BIRD WOMEN

Miss Harriet Quimby, who won fame as the first woman aviator to fly across the English channel, and Miss Blanche Stuart Scott, known the world over as "the Tom-boy of the air," will fly at the third annual Boston aviation meet at the Harvard Field, Squantum, beginning June 29.

Miss Quimby holds the distinction of being the first American woman to receive a pilot's license.

Miss Scott has been flying for nearly a year in the West.

The two women will compete against each other and will have a speed contest each day. They will enter many of the events with the male aviators. Miss Quimby will extend an invitation to Mayor Fitzgerald and Gov. Foss to make a flight with her.

She flies a powerful 70 h. p. Bleriot monoplane that attains a speed of 75 miles an hour under good conditions and she can carry one passenger.

Miss Scott flies a Martin biplane, in which is installed a 75 h. p. Curtiss engine. She will have two other similar machines so as to be prepared in case of an accident. Glenn F. Martin, her teammate, will appear with her.

Frank Coffyn, who flies a Wright hydro-aeroplane, and who will do most of the passenger work at the meet.

Another entry is Robert A. Fowler, hydro-aeroplane, and will do most first appearance in Boston. Lincoln Beachey, Hugh A. Robinson, who demonstrated the Curtiss hydro-aeroplane to the Russian and French governments, George W. Beatty, a Wright flyer, Frank J. Tirrell of Worcester who flies a headless Curtiss, and Lieut. T. Dewitt, an army aviator, also will appear.

route will be announced later. If possible the two bands of music and the drum corps will ride in auto trucks, one band at the head of the procession and the other music in advance of a subordinate divisions. An escort of police in autos will lead the procession and the judges will be supplied with autos with which to view the parade at various stages of its progress.

The auto parade will be entirely separate from the other parades which start at 8.30 A. M. A list of every registered automobile owner in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Milton is now being prepared, to whom within a week a notice containing full particular of the parade, prizes, etc., will be mailed. Oue of town autos will be permitted to participate, in fact the committee urge all auto owners to invite their out of town friends to join in this celebration. The list of prizes as planned at present, subject to change are as follows:

Mr. Chester I. Campbell, manager of the Boston Auto Shows and a resident of Wollaston is the first citizen to contribute a cup for one of the prizes and the committee will welcome additional contributions of prizes.

All auto owners who do not wish to enter the parade but do want to see it made a grand success, can contribute to that end by loaning their car with driver, during the parade, for use of judges, members of the committee and prominent guests. Just notify the chairman of the committee, Colonel Henry L. Kincaide. And do it now.

There are decorating companies in Boston, who make a specialty of decorating autos,—loaning all materials, doing the work and furnishing original ideas. Many very attractive prize autos have been trimmed in the past with crepe paper, flowers and foliage. The Committee will gladly furnish information to all parties who wish.

Special medals are offered by the committee to the parties sending in the largest list of entries. It is hoped some of our enterprising young men will at once get busy and interview every auto owner posible, sending their names to the committee.

In addition to the autos where special prizes are offered it is hoped that auto owners will parade in their cars with members of their families, or friends, or with children of their own or other families. The committee will be glad to have as large a showing of children as possible. When no decorations are used, the committee urge auto owners to trim cars with flags.

Certainly our auto owners should unite in making this parade the greatest and best ever held in this state and that will show our neighbors that Quincy is very much on the map when it comes to "doing things."

YOU need the Ledger every day.

Vol. 27 No. 144 QUINCY, MASS., THURSDAY EVENING JUNE 20, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

PROUD PARENTS AND FRIENDS WITNESS QUINCY HIGH GRADUATION

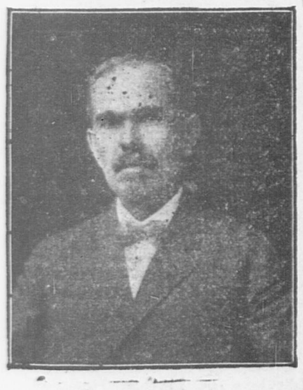
Prof. Perrin's Address Furnished Food for Deep Thought Garnished with Rare Wit

Essayists Display Careful Study and Preparation of Subjects

The ninety-six graduates, boys and girls of the Quincy high school, who received their diplomas at the high school hall, Wednesday evening, had the good fortune to hear two short but very good addresses, both on widely divergent subjects.

Prof. Marshall Livingston Perrin of the Boston University, addressed the pupils, on "American Ideals," and John L. Miller, chairman of the school committee in performing the duty of presenting the diplomas to the graduates took occasion to touch upon the more realistic subject of the cost, the care, and duty which the city performed towards the young people that they might enjoy a higher education. It was a common sense practical talk, which could not fail to impress both the graduates and the audience.

The graduation exercises were successfully conducted in every detail. There was no jarring note, no delay, no hesitation to mark the perfect harmony of action which makes such occasions both successful and delightful. The parents and friends of the happy graduates gathered in large numbers to encourage them by their presence, and the schoolmates were on hand to raise their gladsome voices in tuneful numbers echoing in a measure the welcome which the world gave to those young people soon to enter upon new duties and take up fresh responsibilities.



CHAIRMAN JOHN L. MILLER
Of the School Committee Who Presented the Diplomas.

The stage setting for this last scene in the school life of the boys and girls was perfect in its every detail. The decorations were in keeping with the occasion. Green predominated, as if offering a fresh verdant and inviting pathway for the footsteps of those who were to go out into the world either as students in advanced educational institutions or entrance upon a more strenuous battle with the world, to mould a way in the great field of endeavor which opens wide its portals on every hand.

The stage was banked with potted ferns and palms and evergreen with here and there a sprig of daisies to relieve the dark effect, and a red rose peping out from the rich green foliage at frequent intervals of space.

At the extreme left of the stage, a mammoth white floral "Q" appeared with the figures, "1912" in a larker shade of flowers on either side of the oval.

Directly in front of the stage on a field of dark green were the golden letters, "Q. H. S." At the back of the stage and above all were two crossed American flags.

The gallery at several points was hung with ivy.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the school chorus filed in and took their places in seats reserved for them in the auditorium at the right of the stage.

Shortly after, the graduates marched up either side of the hall and took their places on the stage.

The exercises opened with the first part of a Cantata "The Curfew Bell," by F. Lyons. It was divided into four parts which were sung between other numbers on the programme.

The programme as arranged was carried out, as follows:

Each of the youthful essayists did credit to himself or herself and the school. Where all did so well it would be unnecessary to go into a detailed criticism, friendly or otherwise, upon the respective merits of either essay. The boys and girls spoke in a clear strong voice which reached every part of the hall and their delivery was full of confidence, which was a great factor in their favor. As each essay is published with this story of the event, all can have a chance of judging of the merits of each.

A pretty feature of the girls' papers were the living picture illustrations accompanying them. As Miss Howard spoke of the girls over the seas, Miss May Herne stepped forward as a Japanese divinity. Miss Josie Aulback made a coquettish little Irish Colleen, while as Miss Florence Nelson tripped along in her "Heiland plaidie" one could almost hear the tones of the bag pipes and every one felt like joining in the chorus of "Annie Laurie" and "Bonnie Dundee." Miss Edna Sanborn made all there was of the Spanish girl and in imagining the casting of red rose of hope, the peep through the half closed lattice and the deep soulful eyes of the Spanish senorita could be seen. But for the fun making in this tableau, "Sandy" had it all her own way.

While reading her word picture of "Practical American Girls," Miss Olive May Barnicoat was assisted in a similar manner. Miss Edna Rhodes in a trim tailor coat and skirt and sailor hat, presented that ever recurrent type of busy girls in the commercial life of great cities.

Miss Hortense Andrews gave a good interpretation of the woman physician.

The nurse was well presnted by Miss Herne. Miss Julia Holteen looked the part of the educator and Miss Dorothy Edwards looked every inch the home maker.

The music was under the direction of Miss Emma A. Perkins, Gustaf Clarence Lundin presided at the piano, and the soloists were Gertrude Meade, Arthur Bullock, Elton Chase, John L. Martin and Leon Randall.

A PARCELS POST FOR THE UNITED STATES.

By Chester King Allen.

There is a widespread agitation for a parcels post. Without question it is one of America's pressing needs. There are today, as you know, two ways of sending packages; by express, and by mail. If one uses the express he must submit either to high or to inconsistent charges. For instance, the cost of sending a bundle weighing 100 pounds from New York to Yonkers (about 18 miles) is 50 cents. This 50 cents is divided with the railroad which carries the bundle that the express company gets about 26 cents, and the railroad 24 cents. The express company merely collects the bundle at New York and delivers it at Yonkers; the railroad transports it. Now when the same bundle is sent from New York to San Francisco, the charge is $14.50. Of this the railroad gets about $6.92 for carrying the bundle. The express company merely collects and delivers as before, assuming a slightly increased risk on account of the greater distance, yet is gets about $7.58. Why the increase from 26 cents to $7.58? Should not the express service benefit the people rather than itself?

The mail service on the other hand is out of the question for most goods. The rate is 16 cents per pound and packages must not weigh over 4 pounds. Moreover the mails will not carry perishable goods.

It is evident that the present system is unsatisfactory. The question is then, what would be satisfactory? The answer is, a parcels post.

A parcels post means the combining of the express business with the mail business, placing both under government control. The advantage to be gained is that the business is then so conducted as to give the greatest possible benefit to the people who use it. There are 34 nations in the world which have parcels posts. In this way, practical experience has shown that a parcels post is of immense benefit to the people. Some of these 34 nations are Great Britain, France, Germany, Japan, and South Africa. Let me illustrate the difference between the methods of transportation in the United States and in one of these countries. In the United States, a man wishes to send a pair of shoes some 40 miles into the country. He wraps them up and carries the package to the express office. At the office the clerk asks the value and makes out a bill of lading, after weighing it, and looking up the charge in a volume of tariffs which contains rates from every agency in the United States to every other. The charge is from 25 to 50 cents. The whole operation takes at least five minutes and besides this the clerk has to keep records of every package sent or received, which means still more time and expense. On the other hand if the man had mailed the shoes it would have cost at least 48 cents. Now let us say that in England a man wishes to send the same kind of a parcel the same distance. He takes it properly wrapped to the Post Office. The clerk weighs it and imposes the charge of 10 cents. All he has to do is to place the necessary postage stamps upon it. It does not seem possible to us that prices could be so few. The reason is this, the greater the number of packages sent, the less the cost for each individual package. Another reason is that equipment is provided and methods are used which are most suited to the business. In short the whole idea of a parcels post is the transportation of small packages on a scale so large that the cost for the individual package is greatly reduced. Of course when the price is reduced, the number of packages sent increases.

Almost the only opposition to our having a parcels post is made either by officials of the express and railroad companies who are well satisfied with the persent condition, or by persons who think a parcels post might promote mail order business for large department stores in cities and thus ruin the business of country storekeepers. This objection has been proved impractical by experience in foreign countries. The people buy from the local stores if possible because it is quicker and because they like to choose the goods themselves. They send to the city for goods unobtainable otherwise.

The establishment of a parcels post in the United States would probably cause a reduction in the cost of living, since it has done so in foreign countries. More than half the cost of farm produce goes to pay for transportation and middlemen. The cost of transportation would be greatly reduced; middlemen would be largely eliminated. In France and South Africa, and for that matter in any country having a parcels post, the farmers have mailing lists of customers to whom they send by "Post" eggs, milk, fruit and vegetables, fresh every day.

On the other hand the farmer would be brought more in touch with the city. Country stores carry few goods. When the farmer could not get what he wanted, he would send to the city for it, or have the storekeeper do so.

The variety of goods which go through foreign parcels posts is really surprising. The limit of weight in England is 11 pounds, but almost everything conceivable weighing less than that is likely to be sent through the post. A daily assortment usually includes such articles as canned goods, crates of eggs, pictures dry goods, metal ware, vegetables, fruit, meat, and pastry. A post man is not at all surprised if his wagon contains such articles as high chairs, step ladders, or crates of live chickens, while he will cheerfully carry a coal hod or a bread mixer into the house, and a vacuum cleaner or an oil stove to the next. This is how a parcels post works in England. Should we adopt the system in our own country, we should soon grow accustomed to the heavily laden post man stepping from his motor truck delivering everything from the Sunday dinner to milady's picture hat.

QUINCY OF THE FUTURE.

By Oswald A. Reinhalter.

For many years the historical fame of Quincy has been her great boast. To the "City of Presidents" many an enthusiastic tourist has made a pilgrimage. The birthplaces of the Adamses, the neighboring Dorothy Q. House, the Stone Temple with its aspect of veneration and dignity—all have attracted historical pilgrimages and have been the pride of the natives as well. Proud as we are of our historical city, we cannot live on our past glory forever. The time has come to turn away from the past and

Home of Col. Kincaide Scene of Pretty Wedding

RECEPTION AFTER CEREMONY

The home of Colonel and Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide on Whitney road was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, when Colonel Kincaide's niece, Miss Grace Ethel Perry was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick Arthur Cole, M. I. T. '08. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus of Bethany Congregational church in the presence of members of the families and intimate friends.

The bride on entering the apartment, was preceded by the ushers, William Morton Cole, brother of groom, of Newton Highlands, Lawrence Allen, M. I. T. '08, of Quincy, Wendell Luce of Boston, George Wiley of New York, and John B. Bass, of Quincy, cousin of the bride. Then came the bridegroom with the best man, Kenneth S. May, M. I. T. '08, of Newton Highlands. Walking alone came Colonel Kincaide's little danghter Doris as a flower girl, attended by Master Donald Kincaide Mackay, also a cousin of the bride, and son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Mackay as ring bearer. Miss Marie C. Bass, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and walked just ahead of the bride, who followed with her mother, Mrs. George W. Lewis. The bride was gowned in white crepe meteor and lace. She wore a veil with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Marie Bass wore rose pink chiffon over silk and carried pink roses. The double ring service was used.

After the ceremony there was a reception from 8 to 10 o'clock. Music was furnished by William Weston's trio. Dainty refreshments were served by T. D. Cook of Boston.

Mr. and Frederick A. Cole were assisted in receiving by Mrs. George W. Lewis, mother of the bride, Mr. Frederick W. Cole, father of groom, Miss Marie C. Bass, Mr. Kenneth S. May and Colonel and Mrs. Henry L. Kincaide.

Mr. and Mrs. Cole will pass the summer in Maine.

California Delegates Adopt Resolutions Favoring Bolt Action Flinn Quits

(Special Dispatch to the Ledger.)

Chicago, Ill., June 20—The threatened bolt of the Roosevelt delegates from the Republican convention was started today when the New Jersey members left the hall.

The California delegation passed resolutions withdrawing from the convention. They assert they will not be ruled by "Thives."

This course would indicate that the Roosevelt forces have given up all hope of seeing their candidate nominated.

If Taft delegates stick he will be nominated. Otherwise it may mean that a dark horse, probably Gov. Hadley of Missouri may be nominated as a compromise candidate.

Wisconsin delegates are not at all pleased at the attitude of their candidate LaFollette.

The Illinois delegates pledged to Roosevelt will not withdraw from the convention.

The eight Massachusetts delegates at large will support Roosevelt.

Boss Flinn at 11.50 in an interview says "I am done with the whole business."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Schools having closed for the seasons the pupils must now find other fields of activity.

As a trying out place for ambitious base ball players, Quincy is far ahead of any of its sister cities.

The enthusiasm for the Fourth of July celebration is like a snow ball that started at the top of the hill gains in size and strength as it rolls along.

It is now up to the City Council to do their part to help the thing along.

A unity of organizations such as manifested at the Spanish War Veterans' gathering Tuesday night is a great helper for international peace.

Congratulations to the girls of the switch. Telephone switch is meant, not the ratty kind. They have got eight hours and will remain wide awake and at their posts.

The death of John H. Holmes has removed from this earth one of the most picturesque figures in New England journalism.

Boston is still gunning around for a head for the health department. A supervisor and fumigator of the city's politics is needed to a greater extent.

The foliage throughout the city is assuming an autumnal frosty appearance from the spraying it receives to kill off the gypsy moths and brown tails.

Another long term, trusted town treasurer is short in his accounts. It is quite a while since one of the species had been exposed and it was hoped they had become extinct.

Thaw a third time seeking freedom. When will the American public be freed from this brazen exhibition of wealth attempting to defeat the ends of justice.

The Peerless one admits he is strange in the role of a working newspaper man and then takes two columns to predict a triple possible result which any primary school boy could have figured out hours before this gifted prophecy was put on the wire.

THE STAY AT HOME GIRL.

There came into this office the other day an exchange, which in giving a story of the graduating class of its local High school, reported the plans for the future of the graduating class. Of the twenty-six girls, a third were going to college, another third were to attend Normal School, and a third were going to attend business schools or take up office work. It was noticeable that only one announced that she propose merely to "live at home."

For one thing, there isn't money enough in home life to suit the Girl of the Period. These are times when a hat that the girls feel can be worn to town without undermining their social status, cannot be had for less than $10 to $25, or upwards, according to scales of taste. The leavings in Dad's purse, after meeting the increased cost of the household, are utterly inadequate. The Girl of the Period is too business-like to base her budget on such an irregular and indeterminate base of supplies.

It looks to her as shiftless to depend for her summer suit on the Old Man's good nature, as to take no steps to provide dinner, trusting that the neighbors will bring something in.

But the feminine restlessness goes deeper than money. It is felt in a great many homes of ample fortune. The Girl of the Period is becoming more and more critical of the offerings in the marital market. A house on the avenue is not necessarily enough.

College life has crammed her head with the lore of the ages, and made her as sensitive to mental shortcomings as to physical deformities. A prospective husband who cares more about Ty Cobb's batting record than about the significance of the Ibsen plays may strike her as amusing as an escort. But she may fear that her interest in the Ty Cobbs would flag at the 1,000th breakfast table.

Nor is the role of the Old-fashioned Girl, with her dainty embroidery, her dreamy culture of the hollyhocks and the larkspurs, with serene neighborhood five o'clock teas, any more alluring.

Unti we close the women's colleges, the college settlements, and the philanthropies, the intensely alert Girl of the Period will long for a life much like man's life. But meanwhile there is an echoing void in the heart of many an aged couple, and a longing for the sweet footfall so rarely heard.

THE RISK IS GREAT.

D. L. F. Chase, in a signed communication to the Ledger, under date of June 13, asks a pertinent question with regard to the risk run and need of such great speed on the part of fire apparatus to the scene of a blaze. He cited a particular instance on Adams street, at a narrow point, where a piece of apparatus was going at the rate of forty miles an hour. That was the estimate he made of the speed Mr. Chase says there is no more comfort in being killed by a fire engine than an automobile fire engine. As to that there are some who might take exceptions. The grocery wagon might not make the dispatch so quick or easy as a big fire engine. And in suits for fatalities the degree of pain, mental anguish and period of suffering is always figured by court and jury in determining the amount of damages.

Judging from the size, speed and weight of grocery wagon, a death blow from it would be a tedious, long drawn out and exceedingly painful affair. When it comes to a choice of shuffling off this mortal coil, we believe that the majority would prefer the speedier and surer way of the automobile fire truck and this large array of evidence would certainly be oposed to Mr. Chase's contention.

But that is not the point at issue. It is not a question of how tragedy is to be accomplished.

The real issue is that measures should be taken to guard against accidents which would result in catastrophes of this kind.

The firemen naturally take a great deal of pride in getting to the fires quickly, reaching the scene in the shortest possible space of time, so that they may enter upon the work of extinction with little loss of time. Any good fire fighter will tell you that the first few minutes of any fire are the most serious. A fire can be checked or break beyond control within the first brief period. Therefore it is necessary that the firemen desire to get in their work as quickly as possible.

No doubt the owner of the property shares those feelings. Every piece of fire apparatus is watched and checked. If it is delayed in reaching the scene of a blaze a storm of criticism goes up.

But with all that it does seem as if a happy medium could be reached, so that the speed would not appear so reckless and furious. The danger to life and limb of innocent pedestrians is of more consequence than any ordinary fire loss.

Mr. Chase claims the firemen's lives are in danger as much as any one else in case of reckless driving. This will be admitted under such circumstances but we have got to concede that the driver of the machine thinks as much of his life as any one else does. Therefore he is going to use every reasonable precaution to preserve that life. Still accidents are liable and of greater regularity when high speed is maintained. So that if efficient service and standards can be maintained, at a lower rate of speed, thereby reducing the danger to firemen and pedestrians alike the standard public service would still be maintained and results justify the moderation.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION

face the future. To our ancestors belong the glory of making Quincy what she is; before us lies the duty of making her what she will be.

The "City of Presidents," with its eighteen square miles of territory, its thirty-two thousands of enthusiastic citizens, is situated eight miles to the south-east of Boston; it extends from the Neponset River to Weymouth, from the Blue Hills to the Atlantic Ocean. This tract of land, though not extra large in area, contains many resources, which, if properly developed, will bring to our city a most prosperous future. Let us consider briefly a few of our possible developments.

First and foremost, our city has twenty-seven miles of excellent, but almost entirely undeveloped waterfront. Therein lies our brightest hope. Our waterfront front opens immediately into three splendid natural highways of the sea. Two of these channels, thirty feet deep, lead directly to the open sea. The other, equally good, brings us directly to Boston. No time need be lost in dredging these highways. One of them, situated at Houghs Neck, is three miles nearer the open sea then the docks at Boston. But the commercial aspect of our sea coast is not the only one to consider. We have a wonderful waterfront; and we should develop it. The whole shore is well adopted to the building of docks. We ourselves ought to have a public dock. Its presence would bring us many industries.

At Houghs Neck we have a summer resort of growing popularity. The residents of Post Island and Adams Shore can tell you the delights of these beaches. The bathers at Wollaston Beach enjoy many an invigorating dip in the salt water there. Let us build more bath houses at Wollaston, more improvements suited to a summer resort at Houghs Neck. Then leaving Adams Shore and Post Island as residential sections, we may rightly say that we have an ideal waterfront.

Another bright hope lies in the opportunities we offer to industries and manufacturing establishments. We have acres upon acres of land admirably suited to such purposes. The granite industry, one of few in this city, formerly spread our fame abroad far and wide; but now, we must confess, this industry is declining. The Fore River Ship Building Company, of more recent date has brought us equal honor at home and abroad through the mighty battleships constructed in its yards. The value of any industry to a community is illustrated by this plant. The Fore River employs thousands of workmen, many of whom reside in Quincy, in order to be near their work. Land is bought, houses are built, stores are established, the value of property in that section is increased. In case of additional industries, we should have more direct routes from the several parts of our own city to the neighboring ones, particularly Boston. We should also continue improving our streets. An excellennt transportation service coupled with our developed waterfront would make Quincy an ideal city for manufacturing concerns. The presence of the Fore River is one good reason why Quincy should be made the terminus of the proposed Brockton and Boston canal, as well as the site for the building of a dry dock in this section of the country. Another possible development in our city is the boulevard. At present it is but half completed. We should have it finished. We should then have a splendid highway from the Blue Hill Reservation to Squantum.

Quincy has an excellent school system. Since we have so fine a means for the development of the mind, why should we not have one equally fine for the development of the body? The children of today will be the citizens of tomorrow. Therefore, we should train them well. We ought to have a public gymnasium, financed and run by the city. I should recommend a site near Merrymount Park, using this field in connection with it, and making it an athletic field in every sense of the word. Much has been done recently in regard to playgrounds. These experiments have proven successful. Why not extend our playgrounds, as well as improve their equipment? Why not also provide several more successful day nurseries? Then we should be doing something material for the children.

On the other hand, we ought not to neglect improvements which give recreation to the older people. The closer union of parents and teachers is a step in the right direction. Could we not extend the scope of our public library? Our one branch-library has proven very successful. Why not establish more? Is it not a good idea to make use of our public schools as reading rooms and also use the halls of these schools for public entertainments? I fancy it might be pleasing to many of our people who get home from work rather late, if the library and reading rooms remained open later than at present. Eight o'clock seems early for the closing of so beneficial an institution as a library.

A new and sanitary railway station at Quincy would add much to the comfort and convenience of the inhabitants of our city. In addition, we need an institution where good, wholesome, appetizing food may be served attractively at moderate cost. Think of the discomforts attending the present arrangement for those in Quincy who are not fortunate enough to have homes here. We have a model post office; a model court house has just been completed. Our library is beautiful. Now, in order to complete the public buildings in or about Quincy centre, would it not be well to build a model city hall also—one with a large auditorium to be used for public meetings? The present one is beginning to take on an historic aspect, well suited indeed, to the monuments of history near by—the ancient cemetery at its side and the final resting place of the Adamses opposite—but hardly suited to Quincy of the future.

Just as Boston with all its industries, its business, its commerce, has its residential section, so can Quincy have hers. She ought, however, to introduce a system of parks for artistic as well as practical reasons. Let us have breathing places where tired mothers and fretful children can find peace and quiet on sultry afternoons.

You all recall how the ugly Duckling turned out to be a most beautiful swan—even so has our marsh at Squantum turned out to be a far famed Aviation Field. Here the bird men with thousands of enthusiastic spectators flock yearly to witness daring achievements. Unlike Icarus and Daedalus of old who made wings of wax which melted with the sun, these men had a lofty, a soaring ideal, and surmounting all obstacles, they stuck to it until they made it a reality. Why not let Quincy follow their example? Even as they proved themselves superior to all hindrances and obstacles which stood in the way of their ideal—cannot we, the citizens of Quincy, turn our faces away from the historical past and work resolutely to make Quincy of the future an ideal city—a good place in which to be born—a better place in which to live?

GLIMPSES OF GIRLS OVER THE SEAS.

By Elizabeth Howard.

Later we shall see the practical girl at home; let us first take a glance at the picturesque girls of other lands.

The Japanese girl is one of the most interesting of our foreign cousins. She is very attractive in her dainty flowered kimono, broad sash and tiny sandals as she sits with a group of girls, sipping fragrant tea in a lovely wistaria arbor. Once a week her hair is done in a carefully oiled knot on top of her head. It is her pride to keep it smooth and shiny. This is not difficult, since she wears no hat and sleeps with a block of wood for a pillow. When the Jap. girl is eleven or twelve years old a marriage agent comes to her father's house, with an offer of marriage from some young man whom she has probably never met. The agent tells the girl's father how much the young man is worth and negotiations are made regardless of her opinion or feelings; but she is obedient and very respectful to her parents, and accepts their decision without murmuring. One thing that the American girl might learn from her Jap. friend is courtesy to her superiors, for that is her strong point. The weary traveler, after a few moments in her presence cannot but be imbued with the feeling of peace and restfulness that her calm, quiet manner imparts.

Entirely different but quite as picturesque is the girl of the Emerald Isle; indeed many tourists come to the litle town of Mallow just to see the beautiful girls for which the place is famous. It is twilight and the fairest of colleens is sitting outside the door of her father's white-washed cottage crocheting a beautiful collar, which with a number of others, she must take to town tomorrow, where it will be sold and sent over the sea for some wealthy girl to wear. Her large dark blue eyes are shaded by long black lashes, while her dusky hair falls in a bewitching curl over her left shoulder; her cheeks are rosy as a summer dawn. She makes a pretty picture in a soft white dress with a green kerchief across her shoulders as she sits humming softly, "Kathleen Mavouneen."

Presently her eyes twinkle with delight, while her cheeks deepen to the hue of the reddest rose as she spies her "gossoon" descending the hill in the distance.

Irish girls are cheerful and industrious and bubbling over with merriment. They see humor in everything and lighten their work with snatches of gay song. The wit of the Irish girl, her demure manner, her pretty brogue, her vivaciousness and open-hearted disposition endear her to all. Truly, "to see her is to love her, and love but her forever."

Just across the Irish sea we find the bonnie, Highland lassie; sturdy, rugged and strong as her own Scottish mountains. Clad in her tartan petticoat and stockings, plaid sash and coquettish tam o'shanter, she roams over the friendly hills, talking to the shepherds who tend their flocks in the grassy hollows and filling her arms with the matchless Scottish heather. The still Scottish "loch" knows well her fair reflection as she sits on the bank and dabbles her bare feet in its cool depths. She is brave and full of the fire of her ancestors. Nothing could make her retract a promise or give in against her will. The traditions of her ancestors are sacred to her, and although she has not the quick wit and ready humor of her Irish sister, she has enough independence to make up for the lack of it in the other. The sound of her father's bagpipe sets her blood tingling. On summer evenings it is her delight to sing and dance to its accompaniment, filling hill and dale with the clear, sweet notes of "Annie Laurie "and "Bonnie Dundee."

Perhaps the most serious of the girls over the seas is the Dutch girl, with her long, golden braids, blue eyes, and pink cheeks as she trudges along with stolid, even gait. Her costume is very quaint and pretty, consisting of a short, dark skirt, bright colored jacket, stiffly-starched white cap, and clattering wooden shoes. These shoes are scrubbed with soap and water, inside and out, every Saturday. Dutch girls are very industrious, and love to keep everything scoured and polished, even to the sidewalk and trees in front of their houses.

All the girls in Holland skate. In winter the canals are alive with bright color and gay, happy laughter, as the girls and boys swing with rhythmic motion down the broad, glitering thoroughfares. Peasant girls are seen skating toward town with the large wooden byokes over their shoulders from which pails of milk and cheese are suspended.

Dutch girls are quaint and very charming.

As we pass along the streets of a Spanish town on a summer afternoon we see very few girls. They are at home, sitting in the cool, shaded court which serves as a piazza to Spanish people. But at night, when coolness returns, the streets are alive with the music and laughter of a thousand gay promenaders. Pretty, dark-eyed senoritas cast languorous glances at favored youths over their coquettish little fans as they pass by. On a quieter street we see a handsome young cavalier serenading his lady-love outside her grated window by softly appealing love-notes played on his guitar, a fountain close by is dancing and tinkling in the moonlight. Soon a graceful dark figure appears, drops a red rose down to the enraptured youth below and disappears.

The girls of Spain are all dark and extremely beautiful. Their great black eyes are indescribable—now

PEOPLE COMPLAIN OF THEM

Pedestrians using the westerly sidewalk on Hancock street between Saville and School streets are complaining about the lowness of some of the store awnings. In some places the awnings are so low that one is liable to lose a hat in passing beneath them. While parties making the complaint, have not taken the trouble to measure the height of the awnings there is no question but what they are considerably lower, that is some of them, than allowed by the City Ordinances.

Ordinance No. 14, section 4 says: "No person shall place or maintain over any street or sidewalk any sign, awning shade or other obstruction, unless permission shall have first been obtained in writing from the Commissioner of Public Works. All such signs, awnings, shades or other obstructions shall be safely and securely supported. No awning shall be less than seven feet from the ground at its lowest point. All signs awnings, shades and other obstructions, if built over a sidewalk, shall be of such width as shall be determined by the Commissioner of Public Works."

The Commissioner should take his yard stick and measure some of the awnings in the section mentioned.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION

lowered in soft, appealing tenderness; now overflowing with mischief; now filled with contempt and disdain. They dress in brilliant colors which, in contrast to their dark complexion, give them a very striking appearance. The red heels on the dainty little slippers, the bright-hued fan, and the deep red rose fastened in the dusky hair complete the costume.

But word pictures are inadequate to describe the charm and beauty of our friends over the seas. Now that you have seen them, judge for yourselves if all feminine loveliness be confined to American girls.

PRACTICAL AMERICAN GIRLS.

By Olive May Barnicoat.

June, the month of roses—the month of brides—the month of sweet girl graduates is with us again! Year after year you come to see the girls of your city, crossing the threshold from school life into the busy practical workroom of the world. As you sit there and admire the freshness, the youth the beauty of so many charming lasses, their dainty white gowns, the flowers, the music, the friends gathered to listen, to congratulate and to bid them Godspeed in their respective walks of life, do you ever realize what is to become of these girls tomorrow and the next day and on all the days to come?

Now and then we hear some one criticising the American girl as being a useless, ornamental, selfish, indolent, impractical creature, who spends her time making morning calls, playing bridge, attending suffragette meetings, whose exercise consist of riding in a luxurious brougham coddling a beribboned poodle in her lap.

The proportion of American girls who spend their time in such a fashion is exceedingly small compared with the vast army of women who, whether from choice or necessity, busy themselves daily in the dignified practical walks of life. The real American girl possesses an innate desire to be something more in the world than an ornament to society. To every American girl, sooner or later, comes the question, "What am I best fitted for?"

Have you ever stood at the subway about eight o'clock in the morning, or at Dewey Square about half past five at night? If you have, you will recall the hurrying crowd of men and women, rushing in various directions.

Right here, among this busy crowd you will find the best known type of American girl—the Business woman. Dressed in her severely tailored suit and jaunty hat, you see her hurrying with the crowd, toward her office. She may be a stenographer at "six per" or she may be commanding an enviable salary as the private secretary to some well-known scientist. In either case she is a practical American girl engaged in a very practical occupation.

Another calling where the American girl is doing a glorious work is as a nurse. Did you ever stop to consider what we should do without nurses in our hospitals, in our private homes and on our battlefields? To the physician in the hospital the nurse is indispensable and to the dying soldier on the battlefield she is a God-send. You see her walking softly down the ward between the white cots, soothing a patient here, gently touching a pillow there and bringing everybody a message of cheer. Or go into a home where perhaps the petted child is ill. He is cross and fretful toward every one. But when the nurse enters she with her low voice and gentle hand works wonders. Truly this is one of the noblest of occupations for a woman and surely it is practical.

Hand in hand with the nurse comes the woman physician. Many years ago the profession of medicine was unheard of for a woman. Gradually however she has convinced the world that she can do well anything she is especially fitted for, until today she takes her place with the most eminent of men physicians and surgeons.

I do not mean that she has a better knowledge of medicine or is better trained in the art of applying bandages, but that simply by her womanly intuition, her sympathy and her maternal instinct she can accomplish what eminent specialists fail to do. How many busy men would think to pluck a few blossoms from the garden, or bring a bright picture book on their way to make the morning rounds at the children's hospital, or perhaps carry a ball of darning cotton to some dear old grey haired grandmother off in the country suffering from rheumatism? Unlike the unwomanly suffragettes, the profession of medicine for women has come to be regarded as one of importance and dignity.

It has been said that the spirit of the teacher is reflected by the class. Think how many hours of the child's life is spent away from home between the ages of five and eighteen, during these years the habits, the discipline, the morals, the ideals which are to make or mar that child's later life are formed: what more practical work can the American girl do than undertake whole heartedly to make those who are with her each day, splendid types of future men and women? She is determined that regardless of the text book information they may acquire they shall always look back upon the ideals and training she gave them as important factors in making them gentlemanly men and womanly women.

Lastly comes the type of American Girl who is the most practical of all. Many a girl who has had beautiful dreams of a college life, or who aspired to paint wonderful pictures or compose inspiring music has by force of circumstances been obliged to sacrifice her ambitions to care for an invalid mother, or perhaps become the family breadwinner instead of the father who was fatally injured in a wreck; our American homes show many a brave girl, putting aside her youthful dreams of a great future and bending all her energies of head and of heart toward making home the most attractive spot on earth. At the present time no girl's education is considered complete without a course in the essentials of housekeeping. However no amount of scientific training can ever make a mere housekeeper a homemaker.

Picture the child at the close of a weary day returning from school. Whether he goes to a house or whether he goes to a home depends upon whether he finds a cook and a housekeeper or a homemaker and a mother.

The business girl goes into the hot dusty city each day; how quiet and peaceful home seems when she returns each evening. It is a part of a trained nurse's vocation to turn the ward of a city hospital into a home: the physician after her hard day's labor longs for the solitude of home as well as does the weary exhausted teacher.

In these days when there is so much said about woman's usurping the place of man, her ambition to be his equal in the race for fame and wealth and social prestige, let us not forget that in our heart of hearts is the supreme desire to be womanly women—that if our lots be for a time cast away from the home, that eventually we shall all come back to the place designed by our Creator. We believe firmly that when the much talked of regeneration of society comes—it shall have its birth, not at the woman's club—not on the stage—not in the modern novel—but at the fireside. We believe it is an infinitely greater thing to be a real homemaker, than to achieve the highest fame in any art or profession. Twentieth century girls though we be the desire uppermost in the mind of each of us is to be "A perfect woman, nobly planned

To warn, to comfort and commannd
And yet a spirit still and bright
With something of an angel light."

PROF. PERRIN'S ADDRESS.

Headmaster Howlett, in introducing the speaker of the evening, Professor Marshall Livingston Perrin of Boston University, said that probably more pupils of Quincy attended Boston University than enrolled at other colleges, that all of the graduates fulfilled expectations and because of this, the Quincy people should feel a bond of friendship towards the professor in charge of so great and efficient a seat of learning.

Professor Perrin spoke on "American Ideals" and his easy manner and rare wit and humor, gained the interest of the audience. He emphasized the point that the three ideals were Beauty, Truth and Love, and earnestly urged all the graduates and pupils to cultivate such virtues. He said in part:

"Do you think that after reading of what is happening in Chicago that we are having ideals? Do you think we are receiving the benefits of our doctrine builded on what we call American Ideals?

"These things are sure to happen in a young country and we can best understand ourselves if we think of the boy in the fifth grade at the grammar school. Young, but I am sure some in the audience have boys and girls in that grade and you know it is the most important of all the lower grades because it measures the turning point of their lives.

"The boy is commencing his ideals and he is feeling for something definite. They are neither hay nor grass; your smile shows you know them. You cannot talk plainly to them because they resent it and you cannot talk sense to them for they haven't any. They don't know what to do with their hands and with their feet nor do they want to be improved.

"If you should offer your son some cereal when he comes to breakfast in the morning, and say that it was good for him and nice, the word nice would immediately start an antagonism. He would say, 'Do me good? I don't want any.' And all because they are feeling around for ideals.

"Is there any time when they do not size up their teachers and parents? I would put the best woman I can find before them and all the virtues would not pass the inspection of this boy's accuracy. They read a lot, and the girl reads romances, not because they are fond of narrative, but because they are seeking for some ideal hero or heroine. That is the time they are looking for such things and that is where we are today.

"We are extremists; we go too far in our way; that is Americanism. The individual has never stood for so much as we are standing for today. The individual arouses himself and expresses himself publicly and more strongly in America than in any other place in the world.

"We have not however reached the highest point; there is a socialism we are tending to. It is not the usually accepted doctrine of socialism, but it is according to the desire and it can happen when the individual shall have the still greater blessing of having an opportunity to make the most of himself.

"All should have the opportunity to make the most of his power according to his wealth of purpose and will. It has not come, but it must; we must have it. This great question of individuality is run to extremes. In our administrative, social and political life we appoint people because of their popularity, and because they know the ropes the power is retained. As soon as a man is in the position to thoroughly understand the ins and outs of the office, he is usually removed to make a place for some other person, and there is no intelligent pursuance.

"The architects of our country are changed so often that one has not the opportunity to build a constant structure and no plan can be carried out for several years. Consequently, the man does as his conscience dictates and his plan must then turn about at once and he must prepare for his reelection so he can carry them out and there is a tremendous explosion. You know the experiences you have had in your committees.

"Another ideal carried is the strenuous activity, the tendency to rush things; it is in the air. Do something is the ideal of the American form of government, and things are done which could not be done in other countries.

"Do something; that means something that leads to something. Be active and attain success at any hazard; we must have it. This is the spirit of most Americans. It does not mean so much to other nations but it means a great deal to America.

"A German professor is content to work years upon a quiet investigation and he will labor for years in his laboratory and learn that what he is working on is of no material benefit to mankind. He is satisfied to publish a paper and warn the world that he was in a swamp and he has placed a sign on the border which reads 'Do not follow me.' The American is willing to do the same thing but, he must find a gold mine instead of a swamp.

"We find Americans who were willing to forget the luxurious surroundings of home and wealth who labor for years in the cause of humanity. It is their ideal of doing.

"The Oriental ideal is being, not doing. They have the other pole of the magnet. They think, they meditate, they can strive to become, to be, while we are anxious. We have enough experiences any day to keep an Oriental thinking for three days. We go to bed, grasp the pillow, think a little while and if all does shape up clearly at once, we go to sleep, and are up again to resume the rush next day. The Oriental is different; he has a wonderful piece of digestive apparatus, but, he has nothing to digest, We have everything to digest but we are not willing to do it. How many Americans will peruse a solid article of 10 pages without turning to see how many more pages are before him and then probably giving it up?

"Build your hopes on the three ideals, remember the commandments of God, Thou shalt love thy God and thou shalt love thy neighbor and help him to do the same. The different nations set up their Gods in their market places and while the Chaldeans worshiped cruelty and were cruel a man of christian instincts became the ruler of another land and the people of the world are still reverencing the ideals he set up, the three ideals of beauty, love and goodness.

GROCERS PLAN BIG OUTING

Crescent Park, R. I., the Scene of their Merry Making

At a meeting of the Old Colony Grocers' association held Wednesday evening it was voted to hold the annual outing ow the association at Narragansett Bay. Wednesday, August 7. The plan is to take a special train to Fall River at which point a special steamer is taken for a sail in Narragansett Bay, making a stop at Crescent Park, R. I., for dinner, and returning by the same route.

CHAIRMAN MILLER.

In presenting the diplomas to the pupils, Chairman John L. Miller of the school committee spoke of the cost of education. He said it cost $45,000 for those pupils to graduate. The city and City Council had been generous in providing funds for the schools. He hoped that the boys and girls would appreciate what had been done for them and that their future course would always reflect credit upon the Quincy High school.

To illustrate the progress and variety of school work of the present day he pointed to the desk upon which the diplomas rested and explained that it was made by the boys of the school. Next year greater time and progress would mark the industrial department of the school and it was an open secret that the committee would ask the City Council for a building, so that the pupils would have adequate facilities for their work.

In closing he said "I wish you Godspeed and success in your future walks of life and may your course bring credit and honor alike to yourself, the school from which you now depart and to the City of Quincy which has done so much for you."

The pupils then marched around in an endless chain and each received a diploma as they passed along.

CLASS SONG—FARE THEE WELL.

BY MISS EMMA F. PERKINS, Supervisor of Music.

While the moon her watch is keeping
Fare thee well.
While the weary world is sleeping
Fare thee well.
O'er our spirits gently stealing
Scenes of High School days revealing
Comrades dear with ardent feeling
For Quincy High.

Onward, outward o'er the world,
Fond ambition now unfurled,
Give us blessing, speed our parting,
Guide us in the new life starting,
Honor give to Quincy High School.

POPULAR RESORT OPENS ITS GATES

Revere Beach Has Many Added Attractions for This Season

With large sums expended by both state and private interests in improvements the past six months, Revere Beach, New England's playground, opens its season ranking with the foremost pleasure resorts of the world. Secretary George Lyman Rogers of the Metropolitan Park commission reports that recent outlays have brought the expenditure of the state of Massachusetts at the beach up to $1,962,475.05, while amusement concerns have spent a quarter of a million on the new attractions opening this year, bringing up the total capital invested in amusement enterprises at Revere to something over two million dollars.

The state bath house has 2,000 rooms this year accommodating over 8000 people during the day. The emergency room has been newly equipped and many other improvements made. The park commissioners have decided to admit automobiles every day this year, to the three mile boulevard.

The force of life guards under state supervision will be ample to care for the reckless swimmers who persist in doing "stunts."

Among the new amusement features this year are the Virginia Reel, the Sinking of the Titanic, an electrical show, and several new devices in the Pit. The Nautical Ball room which has the largest dancing area uninterrupted by posts or columns in the country, has been redecorated in an artistic color scheme.

Gambling in any form and other objectionable features have been forbidden.

Roosevelt Men Withdraw With Contested Names

HADLEY IDOL OF CONVENTION

Strongly Supported by Deneen, Borah and Dixon Against Bolting—Several Political Fortunes Will Rise or Fall With Roosevelt — La Follette's Forces Breaking Up—Taft Will Lose Some of Root's Strength

Chicago, June 20.—Early this morning all the Roosevelt members of the committee on credentials definitely bolted the committee and in effect withdrew all of the ninety-two Roosevelt contests.

The use of the term "bolt," however, was avoided carefully by supporters of the ex-president, whose contention is that, should there be a final break, they and not their opponents will constitute the genuine Republican convention.

This means that the balance of the committee will undoubtedly uphold the temporary roll adopted by the national committee, and the convention in turn accept the report of the credentials committee, thereby finally seating the delegates whom Colonel Roosevelt asserts to have been fraudulently placed on the temporary roll,

GOVERNOR HERBERT S. HADLEY, MISSOURI
Who Led the Floor Fight of Roosevelt Forces

those of the ex-president's adherents who are willing to stand with him through thick and thin will withdraw from the convention on the instant.

The plan as talked of does not contemplate withdrawal of the Roosevelt delegates from the Coliseum, but the holding of a double-headed convention in the same hall.

Reports of this plan reached the ears of the authorities in charge of the convention, who said that under no circumstances would they permit the holding of two conventions simultaneously in the Coliseum. The building, they said, was in control of the organization selected by the convention, which would preserve order, even to the point of calling upon the police to eject delegates, alternates or spectators who declined to recognize the authority of the chair.

Colonel Roosevelt's view of his position is known to be that should he head an independent ticket, he might have a fighting chance to win, though he realizes that he is inviting personal disaster. He believes, however, that it would be a fight worth making, and that it would be better for him to go down to defeat with colors flying than to submit to being overruled by the aid of votes which he has said would be fraudulent. The former president is said to be of the opinion that he could take with him the support of a majority of Republicans outside of the extreme eastern states, and increase his strength by substantial accessions from the Democratic party.

The Hadley boom, which crystallized in the demonstration in the convention, was said by Roosevelt adherents to have been launched by those of his opponents who desire to defeat him at all costs and are willing to desert President Taft if necessary to accomplish this end. Colonel Roosevelt's only comment in regard to Governor Hadley was made when he heard of the demonstration for the governor at the convention. "I'm delighted," said he. "No demonstration could be too high a tribute to give Hadley."

Chicago, June 20.—Governor Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri, the idol of the convention, became an unexpected ally of the peacemakers.

It is a fact that Hadley assured members of the national convention that no bolt would take place if a full and free discussions were allowed.

Hadley is not alone in deciding for himself that, as a Republican, he will not bolt the convention if no strong arm tactics are used against the Roosevelt men. Governor Deneen, Borah and Dixon, the one a senator and leader of the decently aggressive force on the Roosevelt end of the national committee, the other Roosevelt's personal manager, said days ago that they would not follow even Roosevelt in a bolt.

So the two factions in the Roosevelt camp are fighting each other in an endeavor to persuade the colonel to two different lines of action. One, led by Senators Borah and Dixon and now re-enforced by Governor Hadley, are discouraging bolt talk and working for a harmonious outcome of the present conflict. The other represented by Governor Johnson of California, Francis J. Heney, Gifford Pinchot, Frank A. Munsey and others will not be fully satisfied unless the colonel bolts, and so ensures beyond question the defeat of President Taft if he is renominated. The political fortunes of some of the men who are giving this advice are wrapped up absolutely in the personal success of Roosevelt. With him eliminated from the scene they are not strong enough to carry themselves longer before the public as a real influence. They must sink or swim with the colonel.

Already there is some talk among the Roosevelt men of a compromise. The Missouri Roosevelt delegates cannot refrain from pointing to Hadley at every opportunity as an available "dark horse." If a dark horse is needed, Idaho's eight votes will go immediately to Borah and there are some Roosevelt delegates in New York who favor Hughes. The Taft delegates have been warned that if there is to be a third man the initiative must come from the Roosevelt side and break Roosevelt's alignment before there is a change in the Taft lineup. The combination which has caused some concern at Roosevelt headquarters was Hughes and Hadley.

Where will the La Follette thirty-six stand in a fight, which is due to begin today, to last probably for the rest of the week?—this is the question about which nobody seems certain. According to Walter L. Houser, La Follette's campaign manager, if the Wisconsinites bolt they cannot bolt very far for La Follette has control of the organization in his state, and on it and him Governor McGovern depends for re-election. "We will not go to Taft," says Houser emphatically. As to voting for Roosevelt, he is not quite so positive. No one knows this morning exactly where the Wisconsin men will throw their strength, and probably they do not themselves. It is evident that they are not the compact, uncompromising little band which the public were led to expect and that in the coming contests, they will vote scattering.

No vote upon the presidency may be expected today. It will not come until hours have been used up in strong language by both sides and the tedious process of calling the long roll has taken place.

When the vote on the presidency is reached, Taft will be found to have lost from his apparent margin of eighteen as revealed in the vote over Root and McGovern, unless the Roosevelt men bolt the convention.

It stands to reason that he cannot lose much and win. The Roosevelt men profess that he will lose twenty votes from his present standing—will be wiped out. His own side claim that if he is not nominated Roosevelt will not be. Right here comes the one great query of the day. If Taft is not renominated, can his managers hold their forces against Roosevelt and select a third man. They want to do this if they cannot get Taft. The man in the street would say that if Taft were defeated and Roosevelt needed only fifty votes to win, he would get them. The political generals who are in the Congress hotel and not in the street say that Roosevelt cannot, to save his political life, steal fifty votes from the Taft side under any circumstances.

Only the future can prove which view is right. The president will either be renominated on the first ballot, or he will not be renominated at all. The Taft men say the only sure thing is that Roosevelt cannot win. The Roosevelt men say the only sure thing is that he cannot be beaten. It would seem that the Taft element, controlling the convention as it does would be able to work out things against Roosevelt, at least, before the strife is ended.

PRESIDENT WINS SECOND ROUND

Committee's Decision on Delegates Is Supported

TAFT WINS AGAIN 564 to 510

Second Convention Contest Lost by Teddy—Governor of Misouri Receives Ovation of an Hour—Delegation Contest Passes to Credential Committee—Question Is Argued For Hours In Hall

Chicago, June 20.—The Roosevelt forces met their second defeat in the Republican national convention in a session which had for its outstanding feature a remarkable demonstration of nearly an hour's duration in honor of Governor Hadley of Missouri.

All of the Roosevelt delegates joined in this demonstration, while some of the Taft states lent a voice. The ovation to the Missouri executive was quickly interpreted by many of the delegates as the possible forerunner of a boom for Hadley for president. One enthusiastic Pennsylvanian jumped to the stage and called:

"Three cheers for Hadley, the next President of the United States!"

Governor Hadley led the fight on the convention floor to oust ninety-two contested Taft delegates and to seat ninety-two Roosevelt men in their places. When quiet had been restored and after Governor Hadley had made a brief statement, Mr. Watson moved to refer to the credentials committee the motion to seat the ninety-two Roosevelt delegates.

Governor Deneen moved to amend so as to provide that no contested delegates should vote on the membership of the committee of credentials or on its report.

When it was announced that the Taft motion to table had been carried by a vote of 564 to 510, the Taft folk broke into a cheer. The vote on the temporary chairmanship had been 558 for Root to 502 for Governor McGovern. The vote of six Hawaii delegates made the difference.

This transferred the fight to the committee on credentials, appointed just before the convention adjourned until today.

Prior to announcing the vote, Chairman Root said that Governor Hadley had made points of order against any of the ninety-two contested delegates voting, and he had fully considered the matter during the calling of the roll. He overruled all the points.

The whole question of the disputed delegates to the national convention was threshed out again when Governor Hadley renewed his motion to substitute a roll he had prepared for the temporary roll of the convention.

It had been agreed between the leaders of both sides that three hours should be allowed for argument, after which, it was expected, a roll call by individuals would furnish the second test of strength.

The opening invocation was delivered by Rabbi Joseph Stoltz of Chicago, the delegates and spectators standing reverently.

Chairman Root at once announced that the unfinished business was the Hadley amendment. He stated that an agreement for division of the time—an hour and a half for each side—had been reached.

Governor Hadley opened the debate. He was cheered enthusiastically by the Roosevelt men as he stepped to the front. Many of the delegates were on their chairs.

Governor Hadley explained his amendment which had been ruled out of order. He declared that it was necessary that his amendment be carried so that the honest will of the Republican voters in the various states might be expressed. He criticised the Rosewater ruling briefly, insisting that his original motion, made immediately after the convention assembled was proper.

Hadley then reviewed the Roosevelt meeting of last Monday night, and repeated the Roosevelt charge that the action of the national committee was "naked theft" designed to thwart the will of the people of the United States.

This assertion was greeted with enthusiastic applause, as was Hadley's statement that he did not know whether the majority would agree with him that Roosevelt was the logical candidate for President of the United States.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

After school she went again to the home of the Bird Woman, and together they visited the swamp and took away more specimens. This time Elnora asked the Bird Woman to keep the money until noon of the next day, when she would call for it and have it added to her bank account. She slowly walked home, for the visit to the swamp had brought back full force the experience of the morning. Again and again she examined the crude little note, for she did not know what it meant, yet it bred vague fear.

CHAPTER VIII.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock Indulges In "Frills" and Billy Reappears.

It was Wesley Sinton who really wrestled with the problem as he drove about his business. He did not have to ask himself what it meant; he knew. The old Corson gang was still holding together. Elder members who had escaped the law had been joined by a younger brother of Jack's, and they met in the thickest of the few remaining fast places of the swamp to drink, gamble and loaf. Then, suddenly, there would be a robbery in some country house where a farmer that day had sold his wheat or corn and not paid a visit to the bank, or in some neighboring village.

The home of Mrs. Comstock and Elnora adjoined the swamp. Sinton's land lay next, and not another residence or man easy to reach in case of trouble. Whoever wrote that note had some human kindness in his breast, but the fact stood revealed that he feared his strength if Elnora was delivered into his hands. Where had he been the previous night when he heard that prayer? Was that the first time he had been in such proximity? Sinton drove fast, for he wished to reach the swamp before Elnora and the Bird Woman would go there for more moths.

At almost 4 he came to the case, and dropping on his knees studied the ground, every sense alert. He found two or three little heel prints. Those were made by Elnora or the Bird Woman. What Sinton wanted to learn was whether all the rest were the footprints of one man. It was easily seen they were not. There were deep, even tracks made by fairly new shoes, and others where a well worn heel cut deeper on the inside of the print than at the outer edge. Undoubtedly some of Corson's old gang were watching the case and the visits of the women to it. There was no danger that anyone would attack the Bird Woman. She never went to the swamp at night, and on her trips in the daytime every one knew that she carried a revolver, understood how to use it and pursued her work in a fearless manner.

Sinton was afraid for Elnora, yet he did not want to add the burden of fear to Katharine Comstock's trouble or to disturb the joy of Elnora in her work. He stopped at the cabin and slowly went up the walk. Mrs. Comstock was sitting on the front step with some sewing. She dropped her work on her lap, laid her hands on it and looked into his face with a sneer.

"You didn't let any grass grow under your feet," she said.

Sinton saw her white, drawn face and comprehended.

"I went to pay a debt and see about this opening of the ditch, Kate."

"You said you were going to prosecute me."

"Good gracious, Kate!" cried Sinton. "Is that what you have been thinking all day? I told you before I left yesterday that I would not need do that. I want to ask you if you ever see anything about the swamp that makes you think the old Corson gang is still alive?"

"Can't say that I do," said Mrs. Comstock. "There's kind of dancing lights there sometimes, but I supposed it was just people passing along the road with lanterns."

"Kate, I have got to tell you something. Elnora stopped at the case this morning, and somebody had been into it in the night."

"Broke the lock?"

"No. Used a duplicate key. Today I heard there was a man here last night. I want to nose around a little."

Sinton went to the east end of the cabin and looked up at the window. There was no way any one could have reached it without a ladder, for the logs were hewed and mortar filled the cracks even. Then he went to the west end. The willow faced him as he turned the corner. He examined the trunk carefully. There was no mistake about small particles of black swamp muck adhering to the sides of the tree. He reached the low branches and climbed the willow. There was earth on the large limb crossing Elnora's window. He stood on it, holding the branch as had been done the night before, and looked into the room. He could see very little, but he knew that if it had been dark outside and sufficiently light for Elnora to study inside he could have seen vividly. He brought his face close to the netting, and he could see the bed with its head to the east, at its foot the table with the candles and the chair before it, and then he knew where the man had been who had heard Elnora's prayer.

Mrs. Comstock had followed around the corner and stood watching him. "Do you think some slinking hulk was up there peekin' in at Elnora?" she demanded indignantly.

"There is much on the trunk and plenty on the limb," said Sinton. "Hadn't you better get a saw and let me take this branch off?"

"No, I hadn't," said Mrs. Comstock. "First place, Elnora's climbed from that window on that limb all her life, and it's hers; second place, no one gets ahead of me after I've had warning. Any crow that perches on that roost again will get its feathers somewhat scattered. Look along the fence there and see if you can find where he came in."

The place was easy to find as was a trail leading for some distance west of the cabin.

"You just go home and don't fret yourself," said Mrs. Comstock. "I'll take care of this. If you should hear the dinner bell at any time in the night you come down. But I wouldn't say anything to Elnora. She best keep her mind on her studies if she's going to school."

When the work was finished that night Elnora took her books and went to her room to prepare some lessons but every few minutes she looked toward the swamp to see if there were lights near the case. Mrs. Comstock raked together the coals in the cooking stove, got out the lunch box, and, sitting down, she studied it grimly. At last she arose.

"Wonder how it would do to show Mag Sinton a frill or two," she murmured.

Mrs. Comstock was up early and without a word handed Elnora the luncheon case as she left the next morning.

"Thank you, mother," said Elnora and went on her way.

She walked down the road, looking straight ahead until she came to the corner, where she usually entered the swamp. She paused, glanced that way and smiled. Then she turned and looked back. There was no one coming in any direction. She kept to the road until well around the corner, then she stopped and sat on a grassy spot, laid her books beside her and opened the lunch box. She scarcely could believe her senses. Half the bread compartment was filled with dainty sandwiches of bread and butter sprinkled with the yolk of egg and the rest with three large slices of the most fragrant spice cake imaginable. The meat dish contained shaved cold ham, of which she knew the quality; the salad was tomatoes and celery, and the cup held preserved pear, clear as amber. There was milk in the bottle, two tissue wrapped cucumber pickles in the folding drinking cup and a fresh napkin in the ring. No lunch was ever dainties or more palatable. Of that Elnora was perfectly sure. And her mother had prepared it for her.

She glanced around her and then to her old refuge, the sky. "She does love me!" cried the happy girl. "Sure as you're born she loves me; she just hasn't found it out yet!"

She was to go to the Bird Woman's after school for the last load from the case. Saturday she would take the arrow points and specimens to the bank. That would exhaust her present supplies and give her enough money ahead to pay for books, tuition and clothes for at least two years. She would work early and late gathering nuts. In October she would sell all the ferns she could find. She must collect specimens of all tree leaves before they fell, gather nests and cocoons later and keep her eyes wide open for anything the grades could use. She would see the superintendent that night about selling specimens to the ward buildings. She must be ahead of anyone else if she wanted to furnish these things. So she approached the bridge.

That it was occupied could be seen from a distance. As she came up she found the small boy of yesterday awaiting her with a confident smile.

"We brought you something!" he announced without greeting. "This is Jimmy and Belle—and we brought you you a present."

He offered a parcel wrapped in brown paper.

"Why, how lovely of you!" said Elnora. "I supposed you had forgotten me when you ran away so fast yesterday."

"Naw, I didn't forget you," said the boy. "I wouldn't forget you, not ever! Why, I was ist a-hurrying to take them things to Jimmy and Belle. My, they was glad!"

Elnora glanced at the children. They sat on the edge of the bridge, obviously clad in a garment each, very dirty and unkempt, a little boy and a girl of about seven and nine. Elnora's heart began to ache.

"Say," said the boy, "ain't you going to look what we have gave you?"

"I thought it wasn't polite to look before people," answered Elnora. "Of course I will if you would like to have me."

Elnora opened the package. She had been presented with a quarter of a stale loaf of baker's bread and a big piece of ancient bologna.

"But don't you want this yourselves?" she asked in surprise.

"Gosh, no! I mean ist plain no," said the boy. "We always have it. We got stacks this morning. Pa's come out of it now, and he's so sorry he got more 'an ever we can eat. Have you had any before?"

"No," said Elnora, "I never did."

The boy's eyes brightened and the girl moved restlessly.

"We thought maybe you hadn't," said the boy. "First you ever have, you like it real well, but when you don't have anything else for a long time, years an' years, you git so tired."

He hitched at the string which held his trousers and eyed Elnora speculatively.

"I don't s'pose you'd trade what you got in that box for ist old bread and bologna now, would you? Mebby you'd like it! And I know, I ist know, what you got would taste like heaven to Jimmy and Belle. They never had nothing like that. Not even Belle, and she's most ten. No, sir-ee, they never tasted things like you got."

Elnora knelt on the bridge, opened the box and divided her lunch into three equal parts, the smaller boy getting most of the milk. Then she told them it was school time and she must go.

"Why don't you put your bread and bologna in the nice box?" asked the boy.

"Of course," said Elnora. "I didn't think."

When the box was arranged to the children's satisfaction all of them accompanied Elnora to the corner where she turned toward the high school. Elnora and Billy led the way, Jimmy and Belle followed.

ROOSEVELT IN THE HALL

Such May Occur and Auto Stands Ready to Convey Him

Chicago, June 20.—Every step has been taken to prepare a swift and dramatic entrance of Colonel Roosevelt into the Coliseum at that moment when the colonel comes to the decision that his physical presence is necessary there for the success of his cause. Both the ex-president and his managers have gone over the entire route from the door of room 1102 Congress hotel to the chair in the convention hall which, as proxy for Sidney Bieber, Mr. Roosevelt may occupy.

The automobile waits ready to start near a door of the hotel. The trip, it is calculated, will not occupy more than eight minutes. Of course, it may turn out that Mr. Roosevelt will not find it good tactics to enter the field of combat in person, but that on the principle that it is best to be ready for the most extreme measures, these preparations have been made.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies to-day that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

Mrs. F. J. Reid, 81 West street, Whitman, Mass., says: "After suffering for many years with kidney complaint and spending a great amount of money for medicine without being helped, I was indeed gratified when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me so quickly. The pains in my back never ceased and I could not sleep well, getting up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. I had begun to look bad and was growing despondent when I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills. Procuring a supply I began to use them and the contents of three boxes cured me.

The above statement was given on Oct. 6, 1908 and when Mrs. Reid was inteviewed on July 27, 1911, she said: "I have no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and I willingly confirm my former statement. I use this remedy occasionally when in need of a kidney remedy and always find relief."

ANDY USED LEAD TONY HIS MOLARS

Both in Court. Judge Decided It Mutual Affair

Andy Carbone and Tony Sousa, two Randolph barbers got into a scrap Wednesday morning with the result that Andy was in court this morning charged with assaulting Tony with a dangerous weapon. Andy had been employed by Tony and had received notice that his services would not be needed after this week. Wednesday morning the two men got into an argument in the shop which grew warmer as it progressed and ended by Tony trying to push Andy out of the door. It was then alleged that Andy struck Tony over the head with a piece of lead and that in the fracus Tony got his thumb in Andy's mouth with the result that it was badly bitten. The court took the ground that it was in the nature of a mutual assault and dismissed the case against Andy on payment of $2.20 costs.

STILL ALARM.

The auto chemical was called out on a still alarm at 12.45 this noon for a fire in a four foot pile of shavings at the foot of Edison stret near the old Lezotte boat house. A hydrant steam was required to subdue the flames. The buildings did not take fire.

YALE IS TO HAVE A NEW $700,000 FIELD.

Plans Are Announced For Coliseum to Seat 60,000 Persons.

The Yale Alumni Weekly in a special "coliseum number" gives the first definite plans of Yale's new $700,000 athletic field and the plan recommended for financing the project.

The graduate committee favors a coliseum or bowl-like structure, but not entirely of concrete, as built elsewhere. This is in the form of an embankment of earth, faced upon concrete, upon which will be placed wooden seats. It is planned to seat between 50,000 and 60,000 persons, with the opportunity to seat more if necessity requires. The total cost, $700,000, is apportioned as follows:

Land, $150,000; coliseum, $300,000; clubhouse, $100,000; new baseball stand on the present Yale field, $50,000, and the rest to be employed in improving the grounds from time to time.

The committee is unanimous as to the plan of financing. Certificates will be issued to carry no other privilege or dividend except the right for fifteen years to obtain tickets for the important games of each year at the regular price. A subscription for $1,000 or more carries with it the right to buy ten tickets to be located together. Two tickets can be procured for $100, the lowest certificate that will be issued.

The Yale athletic authorities already have options on all the land for the new coliseum except a golf course, and an option for it is expected in the near future.

Spoiled the Game.

"We made a rule in our card club that no member should be allowed to win more than two prizes during the season."

"Was it a success?"

"Not exactly. As soon as a lady won two prizes she dropped out."—Detroit Free Press.

HARMONY ONLY ON SURFACE

Progressive Element In Democratic Party Restless

NOT OVER FORTY CONTESTS

Bryan Will Oppose Parker For Temporary Chairman—Demand That Keynote Speech Have Progressive Sound—Senator Daniels Proposes Second High Man as Vice President—All Candidates Have Headquarters

Baltimore, June 20.—A fight between Judge Alton B. Parker and William Jennings Bryan for the honor of temporary chairman of the Baltimore convention became imminent with the increased talk that the subcommittee on arrangements will select the New Yorker for the position of making the keynote speech. Progressive Democrats arriving in Baltimore quietly threw out the hint that if Parker is named that they are willing for a test of strength on the convention floor the first jump out of the box, and the man to match swords with Parker will be no less a personage than the great commoner himself. This talk has thrown a damper on the Parker talk. The reports that Thomas F. Ryan is urging Parker is also increasing the opposition to him. A high member of the sub-committee said that the real fight will be between Parker and Ollie James. Another member said Parker's name may never be presented.

The fight for the temporary chairmanship is now the overshadowing topic. Leaders do not want to discuss it, but the air is full of opposition to the New York judge. When the talk of the progressive wings of the party presenting the name of Bryan got around, other prominent party leaders were trotted out for the temporary chairmanship. The names of Senator Kern and Senator Shively of Indiana were mentioned, also the name of Representative Henry of Texas. Party leaders do not want to start the convention off with a big floor scrap. All want harmony, but the progressive wing has made known its intentions that it will not surrender any important strategical position to extreme conservatives like Judge Parker.

Preliminary to the meeting today of the arrangement committee to select the temporary officers of the Democratic national convention, there was further discussion of the proposition to have the candidate who received the highest number of votes on the final ballot accept the nomination of vice-president. National committeeman Daniels of North Carolina is strongly urging this proposition to his fellow-committeemen.

"Of course all the presidential candidates say they would not accept second place on the ticket, but what else could they say at this time," said Committeman Daniels, who added that the makeup of the ticket from the geographical standpoint would be satisfactorily brought about by the adoption of the proposition.

The headquarters of the various presidential candidates were in full swing and the rival camps issued hurly claims to victory.

Secretary Woodson said that all of the contests received so far were minor in character.

"All in all, I don't believe there will be more than 40 seats contested," said Secretary Woodson, "and these represent perhaps half a dozen delegations. No one of them is serious."

Philadelphia, June 20.—Colonel William J. Bryan again looms up as the probable candidate of the Pennsylvania delegates to the Democratic national convention.

Jordan Loses Plea

EAGERNESS FOR SEAT ON TRAIN COST MURRAY HIS LIFE AT DEPOT

Outward Bound Express Train Struck Man as He Was Crossing Track

Hurled Many Feet in the Air and Picked Up Battered and Dead

John Murray aged 38 years of 194 Orleans street East Boston was instantly killed at the Quincy depot Thursday night by an outward bound express train. Murray who is employed at the Fore River shipyard as a coal passer came to the depot with others to take the 5.06 train for Boston. Instead of waiting in the inward side of the depot Murray with several others were seated on the embankment on the outward side intending to board the train from that point. Quite a few men do this every night believing that they will stand a better chance to get a seat.

As the 5.06 train pulled into the depot Murray started toward the train when he was struck by the express train whose approach he had evidently not noticed. The man was thrown some distance and the wheels of part of the train passed over both legs above the knee. In addition to these injuries he was evidently injured internally for when the crowd rushed to where he lay they found he was dead.

Medical Examiner Jones was notified and the body was removed to Hall's morgue.

It is claimed that it is against the rules of the railroad for one train to pass while another is standing at the depot but the engineer doubtless thought he had time to get by before the inward train came into the depot as the signal was set for him to come ahead.

It is said that Murray has a family in East Boston.

WHOLE HOLIDAY FOR CARRIERS

Nothing Doing in Mail Delivery July Fourth

Postmaster Mansfield is considering the plan of giving a full holiday on July 4 to the 3000 letter carriers and clerks of the Boston postal district. He believes the business men and residents will approve.

It has been the custom to make one delivery on that day.

This will of course include the carriers at the Quincy post office.

LAID UP A FEW DAYS.

Paul Madison driver of the city garbage wagon whose foot was injured Thursday when the wheel of his wagon passed over it, will be laid up for some days. Fortunately however no bones were fractured by the accident.

Q. H. S. RECEPTION BIG AFFAIR

Over 800 Joined in Festivities. Many Danced

ATTRACTIVE DECORATIONS

Music hall was the scene of a brilliant and social event Thursday night when fully 800 people including parents, teachers, students and friends, were present at the annual reception of the senior class of the Quincy High school.

The affair was most delightful for those who participated and the successful manner in which every detail was carried out caused it to be pronounced one of the best receptions ever held by a senior class.

The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion. At the south-east corner, where the receiving party was stationed, was suspended a large American flag, while streamers of red and blue, the school colors added much to the effectiveness of the scene. Potted plants, ferns and daisies were in evidence about the platform, while a large wreath of flowers made in the form of a "Q" played a conspicuous part in the decorative scheme. Japanese lanterns extended from one side of the platform to the other and showed up to great advantage in the moonlight dances.

From eight until nine o'clock, those in attendance were kept on the move by the ushers to greet the receiving party. Those in the receiving party included Maurice Blackmur, president of the class of 1912, Eleanor Whittemore, vice president, Juanita Metherall, secretary, Samuel Prout, treasurer, Miss Mollie Brown, Miss Anna Kennedy and Miss Clara Thompson of the faculty, Mrs. J. F. Roche and Mrs. Albert L. Barbour, wife of the superintendent of schools.

The ushers, all of whom are members of the incoming senior class, were Richard Crane, Ralph Prout, Roland Estey, Millard Sumner, Richard Larkin, Edward Bullock, Leon White, Hayden Crocker, Edward Brown and Albert Parker.

At nine o'clock the grand march was started. It was led by Maurice Blackmur and sister, Miss Virginia Blackmur, followed by Walter Rogers and Eleanor Whittemore, Starrett White and Miss Juanita Metherall, Samuel Prout and Miss Margaret Johnson and about two hundred couples.

The movements and evolutions were very cleverly executed and "Q. H. S." 1912" was worked out to such an extent as to merit prolonged applause.

General dancing followed the grand march and was enjoyed till midnight.

The music for the affair was furnished by Poole's orchestra. A short intermission was held about 10.30 o'clock, during which frappe was served in the banquet hall. The dance order comprised sixteen regular numbers with four extras.

The committee in charge comprised Starrett White, Miss Elizabeth Howard, Miss Juanita Metherall, Miss Louise Prout, Willard Atkins and Maurice Blackmur.

FORESTERS HONOR DUGGAN

Presented With Ring at Reception of 200 People

HIS OWN SONG A BIG HIT

A handsome gold ring bearing the seal of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters was presented to Past High Chief Ranger Cornelius M. Duggan, of Holmes street, Atlantic, by members of St. Kevin Court M. C. O. F., at the reception tendered him in Poland's hall, Thursday evening. The affair was attended by fully 200 and the presentation speech was made by Chief Ranger Theodore Keohane.

CORNELIUS M. DUGGAN,
Presented With Emblematic Ring.

Mr. Duggan was taken by surprise at this mark of good will but responded very feelingly in acceptance of the token. Many prominent members of the order present spoke in commendation of Mr. Duggan, conspicuous among whom were High Chief Ranger James Dignam of John Boyle O'Reilly Court of New Bedford, High Inside Sentinel Joseph T. Brennan of Americus Court of Boston and Deputy High Chief Ranger Michael Milan.

Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe and Rev. Fr. James F. McNiff pastor and assistant respectively of the Church of the Sacred Heart, were present and addressed the gatheing. The first part of the evening was devoted to the reception. All of the speakers were loud in their praises of the work of Mr. Duggan for what he had done for the advancement and welfare of the order.

After the reception a Dutch supper was served, followed by an entertainment furnished by members of the Court. A special feature of the musical program was the singing of a song, entitled "My Atlantic Friends," composed, written and sung by Mr. Duggan.

GARDEN PARTY.

The annual garden party of the Free Home for Consumptives will this year be replaced by a garden whist to be held on the grounds of the Home, 428 Quincy street, Dorchester, Saturday, July 6, from 3 to 6 P. M. Hundreds of cards have been issued and this Y. L. C. A. event promises to be a great success. The gifts for this occasion are very elaborate and attractive.

☞ Two big features for the July Technical World are "State Road from a Private Purse" by Bailey Millard, and "Moving a Railroad Six Thousand Miles," by Rene Bache. Both are very readable, that of the State Road being interesting in telling of a new use of money by a wealthy man for the benfit of others.

GODSPEED TO FRIEND FRED

Johnson Shown How His Success is Appreciated

HAS WORKED HARD

The home of Mrs. John Johnson 2 Gothland street, was the scene of a happy gathering Thursday evening, the occasion being a farewell social held in honor of her son Frederick who leaves today to attend to his duties as civil engineer, at Eureka, Utah. Some thirty or more of his relatives and friends were present and all joined in making it a happy and enjoyable gathering and impressing upon Fred the strong and fast friends he left in Quincy, and his eight little nieces and nephews added their share to the pleasure of the occasion.

After refreshments had been served, hand-shaking was in order and all bade Fred goodby, wishing him good luck a safe journey to his new home and every success in his new field of enterprise.

Johnson is an example of the splendid qualities of push and energy and determination possessed by some ambitious boys, of the period. By his own efforts he succeeded in obtaining a college education, working his way through Harvard,takinng an engineer's course, working during the vacation periods and between hours at the college in order to earn enough to reach the goal of his desires.

At the close of his college career he went out to the mines in Utah . The same spirit of push and energy marked his career there and now he attains a position of independence gained solely through his own effort and a desire to be something more than a mere figure head in the world. His success only shows what others can accomplish with the same pluck and energy.

LAWN PARTY.

The committee for the lawn party on St. Chrysostom's church grounds Saturday has spared neither time nor expense to make this the best ever. A large stage has been erected for dancing and an orchestra of harp, violin and flute will furnish the music. The sports are sure to create fun, especially the fat men's race. Representative William J. Leslie will present the prizes. The Midway will be interesting and includes a shooting gallery, Jap rolling balls, Aunt Dinah dolls, fortune telling, etc. The supper committee promises an excellent repast a la carte, a menu served by a Boston chef, of clam chowder, steamed clams, plain lobster, lettuce salad, French fried potatoes, watermelon, home-made pie, ice cream, cake and coffee.

TAFT STAR IN ASCENDENCY AT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Credential Committee at Work. Report Says They Gave Contested Delegates to President

(Special To The Quincy Ledger.)

Chicago, Ill., June 21,—The convention did not convene at the usual hour today and there is little hope that anything will be accomplished.

The committee on credentials is still at work on the contested delegations.

The committee is not ready to report.

The committee is undoubtedly crediting all the contested delegates for President Taft.

If the Taft delegates stick as they have on all other questions, the president will be renominated.

It will then be up to the Roosevelt forces to Bolt or accept the defeat.

An air of uncertainty as to possible results hangs over the convention.

A ballot for candidate will not be reached before Saturday and possibly later.

HARVARD COLORS IN THE LEAD

Made Clean Sweep of Morning Races at New London

FAVORITE IN VARSITY RACE

(Special to the Quincy Ledger.)

New London, Conn., June 21.—

It is Harvard's day at New London and the crimson is waving on high.

Up to noon Harvard had taken everything in sight in the annual aquatic events.

The freshmen race was won by Harvard by a boat length.

The four oar race also went to Harvard by 20 boat lengths, being a walkover.

The great race of the day is the eight oared race which will be held late this afternoon.

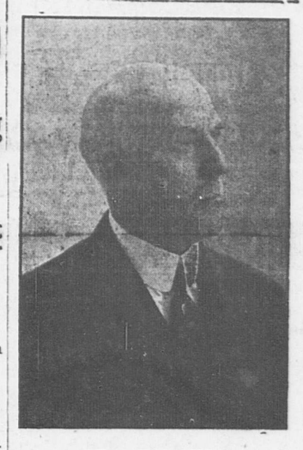
Betting is strong that Harvard will win.

—"No matter how poor you are, remember there is somebody just a little poorer," says the Charleston News and Courier, and perhaps there are some who can get comfort in that way. What balm is there, however, for those unfortunates who are troubled by the thought that, however rich they are, there are others who are richer?

WHAT SAYS BILL TO THIS HINT?

Popular Ex-Mayor Much in Evidence at Social Functions

Although ex-Mayor William T. Shea of Quincy is now a private citizen, his fellow-citizens insist in keeping him before the public eye. His presence at social functions is in as great a demand as when he occupied the chief executive's chair of the city. "Bill," as he is familiarly called, is as popular as ever. His friends say that future honors are in store for him.—Rambler in Boston Herald.



EX-MAYOR SHEA.
Whose Friends Have Future Honors in Store for Him.

What has the genial "Bill" to say to this broad hint? Has he a hankering for Beacon hill honors or does he aspire to a Congressional flight?

Undoubtedly a large number of people in Quincy would flock to his support in the former case, and as he is well known throughout the district, he would be assured of considerable aid in case his inclinations turned towards the city of diagonal streets.

The ladies having charge of the Grove street booth at the coming lawn party of St. Mary's parish will hold a dance at St. Mary's hall next week.

EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Of all the bores imaginable the one who sits behind you in the theatre, comments knowingly upon the performers as though he was a long lost friend and chatters about college gossip, is the worst that ever happened.

Noisy elements should be driven from close proximity to public, or private buildings for that matter, where entertainment of any kind is in progress. It is annoying to audiences to hear their loud calls, and even profanity while listening to an interesting address or musical selection.

The college harvest is a big one this year.

Are you going in the Fourth of July automobile parade? If so notify Colonel Henry L. Kincaide at once.

City Square is a busy place, Saturday and Sunday afternoons with the numerous automobiles and crowds of people passing through it.

Women delegates at the Chicago convention are having the time of their lives. Incidentally one or two of the women not delegates are eagerly seeking cheap notoriety.

Assistant United States District Attorney E. Mark Sullivan was hounded almost to the altar rail on his wedding day by a woman who has made life a burden for him since he managed some slight legal matter for her. Mark was always popular with the fair sex.

Retail meat men may be believed when they say that they cannot make as big profit with a high cost of meat when it is considered that they have to supply their own tables.

Judges are severe on drunken automobile drivers and it is well that they should be jailed or cut off their booze supply.

Congress placed Theodore Roosevelt's name in the list of 150 immortals and struck from the roll that of Frank D. Millett who went down with the Titanic.

The congressional committee that will investigate the expenditures of the Presidential candidates and their managers will have a pretty stiff job cut out for them.

The strike breaking conductor who boasts of his knocking down so openly should receive the usual reward meted out to such personages.

Give the Credit men credit for holding a creditable session in Boston.

Both political parties seem to have dictators at the present day. Bryan has come out with an objection to Parker as chairman of the Baltimore convention. It is about time that the people asserted themselves and relegated every would-be boss to the scrap of obscurity.

And by the way a lot of good electric juice has been burned up in sending mountains of trashy stuff from the Chicago convention.

Secretary of the Navy Meyer denies the rumor that he is about to resign, and he ought to know. As a preconvention circulation it was a bird but hardly reached the dignity of the desired effect.

Does the present calm in the Democratic ranks precede the storm which is liable to break at the Baltimore convention?

With a two thirds vote to decide a choice and no candidate in sight with even a majority it looks as though the Democarts had their work cut out for them at Baltimore.

DISTURBING ASSEMBLIES.

It is particularly annoying for people who have gathered for an evening of enjoyment at some lecture, musical or the like to be annoyed by noises which issue from without. In warm weather it is quite necessary that windows should be open so that the least noise from the outside sounds like a Fourth of July demonstration. It does not always happen that the offenders are malicious in their purpose. In most cases the noise is caused by boys who intent upon their play and bounding with young animal instincts cannot restrain themselves.

We would not curb the boyish enthusiasm for a great deal. It is life, health and happiness to them and an inspiration to many other people.

But there are times when their exuberance of spirits is not fully appreciated.

During the High school graduation exercise Wednesday night, the audience for a brief period was forced to have its attention distracted from a pleasing program by shouts from the outside which came through the open windows with distinctive clearness. Fortunately the outburst did not last long so the annoyance was curtailed. However a word of warning in such cases is not amiss. Boys and young men when giving vent to their animal spirits should be sure that they are not annoying either those who are being entertained or people who may be sick in the neighborhood. The warning is given in a friendly way and should be accepted in the same manner.

PRES. FENNO ASSUMES DUTY

As President of Quincy Associated Charities

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Thomas Fenno the newly elected president of the Associated Charities met for the first time with the Board of Directors and presided.

The General Secretary read a report of work accomplished during the month of May, which was a busy month making large demands on the workers. Seeral donations of money, clothing etc., were acknowledged. A study of sources of reference reveals the interesting fact that the society is now being used by Social Service workers and Associated Charities in other cities. Private Individuals in Quincy, school teachers, Day nursery, Overseers of the poor, the State and private societies. This study also shows that a large number of those families referred have come because of sickness, tuberculosis being common, and next to sickness poor home conditions is given as a reason for referring families.

The Society feel that they are fortunate in securing Mr. Fenno for the presidency and members of the board of directors present at Tuesday's meeting took occasion to express their satisfaction.

WOODWARD MAN FOR FALL RIVER

Frederic W. Plummer Honored by Call to Spindle City

Principal Frederick W. Plummer of the Chelsea High school has been offered the principalship of the B. M. C. Durfee High school at Fall River.

On returning from a visit to the "spindle city", and as a result of his survey of the field, he expressed himself much pleased with the reception accorded by the school officials. While the new field means a larger measure of responsibility, it offers a gratifying increase in salary.

Mr. Plummer was for a number of years master at the Woodward Institute in Quincy where he was extremely popular and it was with regret that his resignation was accepted, when he received a call to the new High school in Chelsea.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOYS ON OUTING

Special "Eats" Furnished by Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Shaw

BROKEN BATS ENDED GAMES

The boys of Mr. Branch and Mr. LaRose's classes of the Bethany Sunday school enjoyed a grand outing and field day Thursday at the Blue Hills Reservation; leaving the Y. M. C. A. early in the morning and returning about 9 o'clock at night. The morning was spent in playing ball, three teams were chosen with the following all star players as captains; Red Sox: Guy Shaw. Athletics: Leslie Andrews. Tigers: Earl Bates.

The Red Sox defeated the Tigers and the Tigers defeated the Athletics, the third game not being played off as scheduled owing to the fact that all the bats were broken in the Tiger-Athletic game by Alex Robertson who acted as coach and field manager of the Athleties. Capt. Bates distinguished himself by making a grand one-hand stop in the fifth inning of his game with the Red Sox. He was also nearly slaughtered by his teammates when he fanned out with three men on bases in the sixth inning.

After lunch the boys all went in bathing, Leslie Andrews and "Billy" Thompson being the water-dogs of the party.

About 5 o'clock the party was joined by Mr. W. G. Shaw, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. LaRose, Miss Gertrude Shaw and Miss Mildred Andrews. The entire group then made a trip to the top of the hill where Sherman Mugford made a hit with the crowd, by asking if "this was the place where the Stars were sent up every night?"

At 6.30 o'clock "hot-dogs" cakes and ice cream, a special treat by Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, were served. Several of the boys who had left the hill before the crowd went in for an extra swim not knowing about the "grub," were given the great "haw-haw" led by John Willmott and "Stan" Ford when they came straggling in about the time the ice cream was being served.

The boys of the party were H. Nelson, N. Isaacson, C. Morton, W. Thompson, R. Williams, J. Williams, S. Ford and Paul Rasmassen from Mr. Branch's Class.

T. Rice, S. Mugford, E. Bates, P. Innes, E. Bullens, A. Beach, J. Willmott, F. Austin, Guy Shaw, C. Johnson, L. Andrews and L. F. LaRose.

C. Wilcox and A. Robertson were the invited guests of the day.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The offering of the Lindsay Morison Stock Company at the Majestic Theatre for next week will be Charles Klein's greatest play, "The Third Degree." This will be the first time that this remarkable piece has even been produced by a stock company in Boston, and consequently the first time an opportunity has been presented to see it at popular prices. One of the most unusual tributes paid to the realism of "The Third Degree" happened during the first season it was produced. One of America's best known actresses actually fainted when the third degree was being given to the unfortunate prisoner, despite the fact that she was well acquainted with all the tricks of the stage.

When the play was seen in Boston at top prices, the leading roles were taken by Edmund Breeze and Helen Ware. In Mr. Morison's production these same roles will be taken by Howell Hansel and Rose Morison, Mr. Hansel playing Lawyer Brewster and Miss Morison playing Helen West. This will not be a new experience for either Mr. Hansel or Miss Morison, for they have assumed the same roles many times before. The difficult part of the victim of the third degree will be played by Wyrley Birch, who may be counted upon to give an excellent account of himself. The balance of the cast will include the full strength of the Morison Company. Special scenery has been built for the production, and every possible thing done to bring it as near perfection as the original.

B. B. KEITH'S THEATRE.

G. Molasso's latest and most sensational French pantomime, "La Somnambule," with Mlle. Nina Payne and a splendid company of fifteen Parisian dancers and mimes, comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre next week for an engagement of one week only. Mons. Molasso is the greatest producer of pantomime that this country has ever seen, and some of his productions, notably "The Rose of Mexico" and "Paris by Night," have been unsurpassed for beauty and novelty. "La Somnambule" is in many respects the best thing he has even done, both from a spectacular and artistic point of view. This pantomine tells an intensely interesting story of society life among the French nobility. One of the big features is "La Danse du Nuit," performed by Mlle. Nina Payne, which ends with a sensational fall down a flight of steps. The incidental music, written by Daniel Dore, composer of "The Rose of Mexico," is both catchy and appropriate. "La Somnanbule" is by far the most sensational and pretentious production ever staged by Mons. Molasso. This brilliant novelty will be but one feature of a great show, nearly every act being new to Boston.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The week at the Castle Square beginning Monday will be given over to "Charley's Aunt," one of the most popular and merriest of modern farces. It has not been seen in Boston for two season, and it is certain to be heartily welcomed. "Charley's Aunt" has had more performances and longer runs than any play of its kind, and it has made the fortunes of its authors and its producers. It has also been translated into several languages, and has been acted all over the globe. Now it comes back to Boston assured of a cordial reception. The humor of "Charley's Aunt" is the humor of characters and situations, and its succession of comic episodes in which a young man masquerades in feminine habiliments add not a little to its mirth-making. The leading role of Lord Fancourt Bebberley will be played by Donald Meek, and other characters wil l be taken by members of Mr. Craig's company fresh from their acting of "The End of the Bridge" in Chicago. This farce is sure to receive one of the liveliest productions at the Castle Square Theatre that it has ever had in Boston.

THE MEISTERSINGERS

In response to thousands of requests from patrons all over New England, B. F. Keith has engaged as a special summer feature at his beautiful playhouse, commencing Monday, July 1st, "The Meistersingers," composed of the Harvard, Schubert and Weber male quartets of Boston. This wonderful singing organization, which created a veritable furore during their six weeks' engagement at this house last summer, will appear in what is said to be the most magnificent scenic production ever staged in vaudeville. "The Meistersingers" will be shown camping out, at their beautiful sylvan retreat in the wilds of Maine. A massive cycloramic stage setting has been built, representing a charming vista of lake and forest on the shore of the Rangley lakes, and in this entrancing scene on the moonlight shores of the lake, "The Meistersingers" will be heard in that perfection of voice blending and tone quality for which they are famous. The programme arranged for "The Meistersingers" this season is entirely new, and is composed of one of the most remarkable medleys of popular, semi-classic, and operatic airs ever got together. Over one hundred musical gems will be introduced during the engagement, a complete change of programme being made weekly. "The Meistersingers Camping Out" promises to be one of the greatest features ever seen in Boston during the summer months, and no theatregoer will want to miss this magnificent offering.

PARAGON—CABARET.

The eighth season at Paragon, undoubtedly the most famous seashore resort and amusement park in New England, if not in the United States, is now fully opened and all its attractions in full running order. And what a round of amusements Manager Dodge is providing this season. Anyone who thought that Paragon offer a veritable whirlwind of attractions last season should visit it now.

The Cabaret in the Palm Garden every evening from 9 to 11 o'clock is such a pretentious affair in the way of entertainment that it requires every minute of these two hours to get through the entire programme with not a second's time lost in changing from one feature to the next one. No less than 75 artists, singers and musicians are engaged in giving the Cabaret, among the features being: the Boston Opera quintet, the Georgian male quartet led by Harry Blaney, the Guatamala Serenaders, the Florodora octet of eight violin girls, Mme. Irma Blanch Wright-Heims, Mlle. Fi Fi. Mell Eastman, Miss Wood, the Twilight Chorus, Mace Gay's military band, the Palm Garden orchestra, and circus acts. There are important changes in the programme each week. There will be another big fireworks exhibition Saturday evening, and a grand Italian illumination Sunday evening.

SUMMONED TO COURT

Treas. Rogers of Steamboat Company Must Answer

PONY LAW VIOLATION

Frank Rogers who is alleged to be the treasurer of the Boston Bay Steamboat Company, whose boat plies between Boston and Houghs Neck has been summoned into court Saturday morning by Inspector Goodhue for violation of the so-called pony express law, that is transporting for hire or reward intoxicating liquors without first having been granted a permit by the Mayor and City Council.

It is understood that the company supposed they had a right under the general law of transporting liquor from Boston by boat to the landing at Houghs Neck but did not have the right to deliver the liquor after its arrival. Under the law however, all transportation companies other than a steam or electric railroad must have a permit.

According to Inspector Goodhue, the company has been transporting liquor to Houghs Neck leaving it on the steamboat wharf from which point it was delivered by a carrier holding the necessary permit for transportation.

SNEAK THIEVES ADMITTED BY

False Keys to Charles H. Johnson's Law Office

SMALL MONEY HAUL

It has been reported to the police that the office of Charles H. Johnson in the Adams building was entered by sneak thieves Wednesday afternoon. The parties evidently gained admittance by the means of false keys. Once inside the parties pried open Mr. Johnson's desk and secured about $5 in money, some checks and money orders and two National bank books. Mr. Johnson discovered the theft soon after and immediately stopped payment on the checks and money orders. The bank books will do no one any good. There is no clew to the parties.

WEDDED COUPLE KIDNAPPED

Paraded Through Streets to Music of Devil's Fiddles

A wedding parade, which startled a number of people who happened to be in the vicinity of Quincy square about ten o'clock Thursday evening was the feature of the marriage of Miss Ella May Blanding, daughter of Elmer C. Blanding of 51 Bedford street and David S. McIntosh, son of Mrs. Jessie McIntosh, of 88 Quincy street. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride at eight o'clock and was performed by Rev. James A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, before a large assemblage of relatives and friends of the high contracting parties.

The bridesmaid was Miss Carrie Blanding, a sister of the bride, while Daniel Driscoll was the best man. The bride was handsomely gowned in white crepe de chene over white satin trimmed with Rose point lace and carried a large bouquet of sweet peas. The bridesmaid was prettily attired in pale blue chiffon over pink messaline and carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

A reception followed the ceremony. The house was decorated with potted plants and flowers of all descriptions and presented a most pleasing spectacle. The ushers at the reception included Frank Driscoll, Leo Elcock, and Thomas Elcock.

At the close of the reception, when the couple were about to depart on their honeymoon, they were taken by storm by those present and rushd suddenly into the street. Red fire was displayed in an abundence and with an agony band, armed with tin pans and other such noisy utensils of unearthly sounds, a parade was formed and march was made through a number of surrounding streets. Confetti was used in abundance and when Quincy depot was finally reached the couple looked like a couple of North pole explorers after a snow blizzard, and the depot partook of the same condition after the shower. The demonstration was one rarely before witnessed in Quincy.

The couple were the recipients of many useful and costly presents.

The newly married couple will spend a two weeks' honeymoon in New York. Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are well and popularly known in Quincy enjoying the good will of a wide circle of friends, who showered congratulations upon them. Mr. McIntosh is a well known minstrel performer and for a number of years was president of the famous Iroquois club, whose members were responsible for the great demonstration, Thursday evening.

MIDDLE WEST LIFE PICTURED

By Rev. E. N. Hardy, a Former Quincy Clergyman

FRIENDS NOT FORGOTTEN

Editor of the Ledger:

Again will I redeem my promise to write for you a word concerning the life in the Middle West. We have had something more than a year of it and like it. We like the place, the people, the church and the work. A more attractive place for a home cannot be found near Chicago. In fact a New Englander who has just made his residence here declares it is the most beautiful place he ever saw, La Grange has the best health record of the state and one of the best in the west. There has been little sickness here this winer even though the weather has been intensely cold. There as so many New Englanders here that it would be difficult to be lonely and there is so much doing all the while that there is no time for anything of the kind.

The spring has been late but now the crops are coming forward very rapidly. I confess that the fertility of the soil constantly amazes me. Gardens which have been planted for a decade produce abundantly with no enrichment. There are no stones to trouble. It is not surprising that the early settlers considered this the very garden of the gods. To one bred in the hill country it seems at first strange that these dwellers on the plains come to love them with an intensity equal to that of the New Englander for the highlands. As we live in a district of rolling prairie and really within the confines of Chicago we have not missed the hills.

Naturally friends will wish to know how the work has progressed here in our church. It has been a good year for us in every way. Attendance at all our services has steadily increased and there seems to be a good degree of interest throughout the church. During the first year sixty-two new members were added to the church, forty on confesion of faith and about fifty adults. The proportion of men is very large in the new membership and in all the services. We have settled an assistant pastor and organized a new Congregational church which he will serve. This church gives promise of rapid growth and large influence. When we came here the church was burdened by heavy indebtedness. The interest in the work has grown till the church wished to cancel the debt. At a public meeting a week ago the debt of fifteen thousand dollars was pledged and the momentum was sufficient to carry the pledges nearly two thousand dollars more. In all the pledges will amount to about seventeen thousand. Our regular budget for this year is twelve thousand aside from many extras, consequently the receipts for 1912 will much exceed twenty thousand dollars.

In missionary benevolences the church is in the first half dozen of the Congregational churches of Chicago. The benevolence of the western churches surprises me. A generation of princely givers is being produced and the way in which charitable institutions are sustained is really amazing.

We are beginning to feel the call to the highlands of the old Granite State and I presume that the family will ere long journey hither. Our son Phillips has just completed his first year at Northwestern University with extra credits to his advantage besides a very satisfactory standing in all his work. It is a bit difficult for a New Englander to realize that here in the Middle West are universities like Northwestern, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Chicago with an enrollment about that of Harvard, with supurb equipment, and with very high standards of scholarship. The University of Illinois will receive from the State from this time on about two and a quarter millions a year. Other state universities are also most liberally sustained and the time is not far distant when the unendowed university will be unable to compete with like institutions of the State.

Lest I weary your readers I must bring this letter to a conclusion. Again I wish to say that we can never forget the many many good friends of Quincy.

Sincerely yours,
Edwin N. Hardy.

La Grange, Illinois, June 15, 1912.

The body of Jerome Joseph Connelly, a well known young man of West Quincy, who died in Denver, Colorado, June 15, arrived in Quincy this morning and was taken in charge by undertaker Barrett. The deceased is the son of Mrs. Mary Connelly of 7 Perkins street and was in his 27th year.

He was the only son and the announcement of his death was the cause of great sorrow being manifested by his many friends. He was employed as chief machinist at the Charlestown navy yard and being taken ill while engaged in work there, was sent to Colorado in an endeavor to restore his health.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning from his late home and a high mass of requiem will be celebrated in St. Mary's church at nine o'clock. A naval escort from Charlestown will attend the services.

BAY STATE MEN WILL REMAIN

Will Stay in Convention and Work For Principles

SEVEN TO STICK TO TEDDY

Chicago, June 21.—The Massachusetts delegation will vote against the acceptance of the report of the committee on credentials. Then on all other motions, which may come up, the chairman of the delegation, Charles S. Baxter, will rise and say that the eighteen delegates from Massachusetts who are pledged to Colonel Roosevelt refuse to be recorded because of the delegates who are seated fraudulently in the convention.

It was stated that there were only seven out of the eighteen members who would follow Colonel Roosevelt in a bolt. The members of the delegation who were put down as in favor of this were George W. Coleman, Frederick Fosdick, Professor Albert B. Hart, John M. Keyes, Frederick P. Glazier, Lynn M. Granger and Alvin S. Weeks.

The Taft delegates on the Massachusetts delegation decided that in the event of a bolt on the part of the Roosevelt delegates they would fill vacancies by the selection of alternates from among the list of their guests.

COMPROMISE IS QUESTION

Penrose Clings to Taft but Others Talk of Desertion

Chicago, June 21.—The Taft leaders seem to have come to the realization that while they may be able to nominate their candidate by a small plurality, there is but little hope of his winning at the polls. They are looking for a third candidate and all the morning have been in conference with the friends of possible compromise candidates.

Several times it was reported that Senator Crane of Masaschusetts had conferred with Senator Kenyon of Iowa regarding the possibility of throwing the Taft strength to Senator Cummins as a compromise candidate.

Senator Kenyon insisted that Iowa's ten delegates would not bolt the convention, no matter what happened.

"The Cummins delegation never will bolt," said Senator Kenyon.

"We think it would be foolhardy to bolt; also, I hold sanguine hopes for the success of Senator Cummins. We have not a fighting chance, but we have a good compromise chance. Everything depends upon a deadlock, which we believe will come."

"We will stay with President Taft," said Senator Penrose when told of the current rumors afloat that the president would get out of the way to permit the nomination of another candidate. "So far," the senator continued, "he is the strongest man whose name has been suggested, and certainly there can be no reason for dropping him until after a roll call shall have demonstrated the contrary. His friends do not believe that any such necessity will arise."

The opinion of the Pensylvania senator was a fairly accurate reflection of the attitude of most of the leaders of the stalwarts. Some, however, hold the view that in case of the nomination of Colonel Roosevelt by a bolting convention some other candidate than Mr. Taft might more effectually hold the radical wing of the party in hand.

By those holding this view the names of Governor Hadley, Justice Hughes, Senator Cummins and Senator La Follette were canvasssed as possible nominees.

There, however, was no early general movement in behalf of either of them, and most onlookers became convinced that there would be no new movement in behalf of a new man until after the test prescribed by Mr. Penrose, unless the president himself should take the initiative.

DR. CHALMERS INJURED

Other Occupants of Auto Were Only Slightly Hurt

Lowell, Mass., June 21.—A touring car turned turtle on the Pawtucket boulevard and its owner and driver, Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D. D., of the First Congregational church of Manchester, N. H., was crushed under it, receiving serious, though not necessarily fatal, injuries.

Dr. Chalmers is at the Lowell general hospital with several broken ribs and numerous minor bruises about the body. The three other people received slight injuries.

Dr. Chalmers was on his way to his summer home at Hyannisport. When going down the boulevard here the rear wheels skidded and before the driver could straighten out the machine it turned over, throwing its occupants to the road.

Titanic Victims Picked Up

Hamburg, June 21.—The Ilford reports having found the bodies of three Titanic victims 370 miles from the spot where the liner sank. Papers showed they were three stewards living in the Isle of Wight. The bodies were buried at sea.

PEPLUMS ADVANCE IN POPULAR FAVOR

Wedgewood Blue, Dull Lavender and Faded Green are Coming Colors

TIMES OF LOUIS XVI REVIVED

By this time most women have settled rather definitely in their own minds what fashions they will take for their own this summer. The hurry and unrest of the spring is over, and now that they know what they like best of all the differing models offered for consideration and have selected the necessary gowns for their summer wardrobes, they are filled with that peace and serenity which ensues upon work well done. And is it not a comfort to feel, also, that one's judgment has been proved reliable? That with the tendency to return to the pannier we have not been misled into a mistaken fulness of skirts? For we still adhere to pronounced slenderness of silhouette, and even the panniers, to get a hearing at all, have had to renounce a too ambitions bagginess.

Nevertheless the panniers are not rejected, and with the limitation imposed upon them are seen in many dainty dresses, especially those for evening wear. In the fall and winter models, it is asserted, the pannier style of dress, will prevail over other designs, and material now deemed incongruous, will receive their setting in that fashion. But that is a story yet to be told. Just now the peplum seems to be the object of woman's affection. Despite many early predictions to the contrary, the peplum is floating high on the wave of popularity, and is seen in every material. Few taffeta dresses will be seen without it this summer, it is said, and in one form or another it appears on most of the ready-made lace and lingerie blouses and gowns for sale in the shops.

A fashionable form of the peplum is shown in above figure where with collar and cuffs of like material it helps to form the charming scheme of decoration. The slenderness of the skirt is no ways obviated by the peplum which quite conforms to the main lines of the design. Linen of a deep khaki shade was used for the skirt and blouse, the peplum, cuffs and collar being of white pique scalloped with brown. A brown leather belt with leather covered buttons to match complete the dress.

On the taffeta dresses the peplum is often outlined with a shirred puff of the silk a similar puff, somewhat wider, bordering the foot of the skirt. These puffs or shirrings are a revival of a fashion very popular a generation or more ago when the fancy for them was carried to such lengths that skirts were often gathered from top to toe in repeated rows of shirring until those who had no reverence for fashion's goddess declared they looked like multiplied hoops about a barrel. That there may be a tendency to return to these shirred and puffed skirts in indicated in recent French models, where the fulnes of skirt or petticoat under the hip pannier, is drawn tightly about the form of the wearer in many rows of gathers.

Apropos of this advanced style, the colors in which the new gowns are appearing are of decided interest. The liking for garish tints is giving way to a taste for more subdued effects, and when the fall fashions make their appearance they will in all likelihood be displayed in wedgewood blue, old crimson, dull lavender, gray and faded green. All of these colors are incomparably soft and restful, and among them every woman will be able to choose her own. The wedgewood blue is already popular, and being made up in summer frocks, which with a touch of white in the trimming remind one, indeed, of the Wedgewood china cups and vases cherished by our grandmothers. Do not suppose, however, that because the body of the gown may not be gaudy, that all brilliance is tabood. On the contrary, these dull lavenders or faded greens are brightened by pipings of clear color, or other touches which enhance and give full value to their beauty. Notice that the auxiliary tints are not placed without careful study of the effect to be obtained. They must be applied just right or else not done at all. By the selection and use of a single flower or knot of ribbon an entire costume may be made or marred.

But to come back from next fall to the interests of the present, isn't it wonderful the vogue the so-called Robespierre fashions have obtained? The collar, of course, we all know, by this time, but it takes a discerning eye to see the less obvious influence in the cutaway fronts of coats and peplums, and in the long sleeves with full frills over the hands. In fact, not the great statesman alone, but the whole period of Louis XVI and the French revolution has come upon the stage again in the dress of today. Fichus are a feature of many of this summer's frocks, the pretty theatre and evening cap are a harking back to the dainty head dresses worn by Marie Antoinette and her ladies in waiting, and even the sunbonnet, affected by the poor queen in her play life at LaPetite Trianon, has been revived by fashionable women as appropriate head-gear for their now frequent outings.

In the above illustration the effect of that period is seen in the lines, as well as in the collar. The lace coatee over the dark blue taffeta skirt has the cutaway front of the Robespierre coat, while the collar is frankly that of its namesake. The long sleeves are also characteristic. These lace coatees are extremely stylish at present. Made of cluny or Irish crochet they are a handsome finish for a foulard or taffeta street suit, as here represented. Many lovely evening dresses of charmeuse, messaline, crepe de Chine or voile are also made with lace coatees, shadow lace or other fine varieties being used instead of the heavier qualities suitable for street dress. The coatee may be in part responsible for the prevalence of the peplum, or perhaps it is the other way round. At any rate, either peplum or coatee, an extension of the blouse over the hips, is seen on most gowns, and is a distinctive feature of present styles.

TENATIVE PLATFORM

Various Planks Agreed Upon by Taft Supporters

Chicago, June 21.—The temporary organization as completed gave President Taft overwhelming control of the committee on resolutions. This means that the platform which will be presented to the convention will be precisely what the president and advisers who represent him on the subject desire. The Taft strength in the convention is made up of many small states, but as each state has a vote on the committee, they have run the president's strength up to thirty-three votes to nineteen controlled by the radical faction. Massachusetts, being evenly divided, elected no one to the committee.

The tentative draft of the Taft platform was submitted as follows, planks on the tariff and banking and currency being held in abeyance for a time:

Among other planks, the platform favors enactment of the necessary legislation to safeguard the public health, to limit effectively the labor of children who should be at school, to protect wage-earners engaged in dangerous occupations, to substitute the principle of workingmen's compensation for actions at law to recover damages in case of injury, to retain public ownership and control of those natural resources that are still the public property, and in all possible ways to satisfy the just demand of the people for the study and solution of the complex and constantly changing problems of social welfare.

Is opposed to what is known as the recall of judges or to the recall of judicial decisions.

Earnestly favors all measures for the establishment and protection of the peace of the world and for the development of closer relations between the various nations of the earth. It believes most earnestly in the peaceful settlement of international disputes in the reference of all justiceable controversies between nations to an international court of justice.

Is opposed to special privileges and to monopoly. It favors the enactment of legislation supplementary to the existing anti-trust act which shall define as criminal offences specific acts that uniformly mark attempts to restrain and to monopolize trade, to the end that those who honestly intend to obey the law may have a guide for their action and that those who aim to violate the law may the more surely be punished.

Refutes the statement that the increased cost of living is due to the tariff, will support the prompt scientific inquiry into the causes which are operative, both in the United States and elsewhere, to increase the cost of living, and when the exact facts are known will take the necessary steps to remove any abuses that may be found to exist, in order that the cost of the food, clothing and shelter of the people may in no way be unduly or artificially increased.

Favors a law prohibiting corporations or their officers, directors or stockholders from contributing funds to campaigns for the nomination or election of the president, vice president, senators or representatives in congress.

Also favors laws requiring the fullest publicity of all campaign contributions, whether made in connection with primaries, conventions or elections.

Stands committed to the maintenance, extension and enforcement of the civil service law, and it favors the passage of passage of legislation empowering the president to extend the competitive service to include purely administrative offices filled by presidential appointment.

Favorably reviews progress made under the administration of the past sixteen years and heartily endorses the administration of President Taft.

Spiders.

Spiders are not insects, as most people think. The spider has eight legs, whereas an insect cannot have more than six. The nervous system is constructed on a totally different basis, and so are the circulation and respiration. The eyes are different, the insects having many compound eyes and the spider never having more than eight and all of them simple. Then a spider has no separate head, the head and the thorax being fused together.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

"Billy," said Elnora, "I would like you much better if you were cleaner. Surely you have water. Can't you children get some soap and wash yourselves? Gentlemen are never dirty. You want to be a gentleman, don't you?"

"Is being clean all you have to do to be a gentleman?"

"No," said Elnora. "You must not say bad words and you must be kind and polite to your sister."

"Must Belle be kind and polite to me, else she ain't a lady?"

"Yes."

"Then Belle's no lady!" said Billy succinctly.

Elnora could say nothing more just then, and she bade them goodby and started them home.

"The poor little souls!" she mused. "I think the Almighty put them in my way to show me real trouble. I won't be likely to spend much time pitying myself while I can see them." She glanced at the lunch box. "What on earth do I carry this for? I never had anything that was so strictly ornamental! One sure thing! I can't take this stuff to the high school. You never seem to know just what is going to happen to you while you are there."

As if to provide a way out of her difficulty a big dog arose from a lawn and came toward the gate, wagging his tail. "If those children ate the stuff, it can't possibly kill him!" thought Elnora, so she offered the bologna. The dog accepted it graciously, and, being a pedigreed beast, he trotted around to a side porch and laid the bologna before his mistress. The woman snatched it, screaming, "Come, quick! Some one is trying to poison Pedro!" Her daughter came running from the house. "Go see who is on the street. Hurry!" cried the excited mother.

Ellen Brownlee ran and looked. Elnora was a half block away, and no one nearer. Ellen called loudly, and Elnora stopped. Ellen came running toward her.

"Did you see anyone give our dog something?" she cried as she approached.

Elnora saw no escape.

"I gave it a piece of bologna myself," she said. "It was fit to eat. It wouldn't hurt the dog."

Ellen stood and looked at her. "Of course, I didn't know it was your dog," explained Elnora, and she told Ellen about Billy and Jimmy and Belle and the sacrificed luncheons.

"Wait until I run back and tell mother about the dog, and get my books," said Ellen.

Elnora waited, and that morning she walked down the hall and into the auditorium beside one of the very nicest girls in Onabasha, and it was the fourth day. But the surprise came at noon when Ellen insisted upon Elnora lunching at the Brownlee home and convulsed her parents and family and overwhelmed Elnora by a greatly magnified but moderately accurate history of her lunch box.

"Gee, but it's a box, daddy!" cried the laughing girl. "It's carved leather and fastens with a strap that's got her name on it. Inside are trays for things all complete, and it bears evidence of having inclosed delicious food, but Elnora never gets any. She's carried it two days now, and both times it has been empty before she reached school. Isn't that killing?"

"It is, Ellen, in more ways than one. No girl is going to eat breakfast at 6 o'clock, walk three miles and do good work with no lunch. You can't tell me anything about that box. I sold it last Monday night to Wesley Sinton, one of my good country customers. He told me it was a present for a girl who was worthy of it, and I see he was right."

When Elnora entered the cost room after having had luncheon with Ellen Brownlee there was such a difference in the atmosphere that she could feel it.

"I am almost sorry I have these clothes," she said to Ellen.

"In the name of sense, why?" cried the astonished girl.

"Every one is so nice to me in them, it just sets me to wondering if in time I could have made them be equally friendly in the others."

Ellen looked at her introspectively.

"Well, yes, I believe you could," she announced at last. "But it would have taken time and heartache, and your mind would have been less free to work on your studies. No one is happy without friends, and I just simply can't study when I am unhappy."

That night the Bird Woman made the last trip to the swamp. Every specimen she possibly could use had been purchased at a fair price, and three additions had been made to the bank book, carrying the total to a little past $200. There remained the Indian relics to sell on Saturday, and Elnora had secured the order to furnish material for nature work for the grades. Life suddenly grew very full. There was the most excitingly interesting work for every hour, and that work was to pay high school expenses and start the college fund. There was just one little rift in her joy. All of it would have been so much better if she could have told her mother and given the money into her keeping. But the struggle to get a start had been so terrible, Elnora was afraid to take the risk.

When she reached home she only told her mother that the last of the things had been sold that evening.

"I think," said Mrs. Comstock, "that we will get Wesley to move that box over here back of the garden for you. There you are apt to get toiled farther into the swamp than you intend to go, and you might mire or something. There ought to be just the same things in our woods and along our swampy places as there are in the Limberlost. Can't you hunt your stuff here?"

"I can try," said Elnora. "I don't know what I can find until I do. Our woods are undisturbed, and there is a possibility they might be even better hunting than the swamp. But I wouldn't have Freckles' case moved for the world. He might come back some day and not like it. I've tried to keep his room the best I could, and taking out the box would make a great hole in one side of it. Store boxes don't cost much. I will have Uncle Wesley buy me one and set it up wherever hunting looks the best early in the spring. I would feel safer at home."

CHAPTER IX.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock Manipulates Margaret, and Billy Acquires a Residence.

ELNORA hurried upstairs to change her dress. Margaret Sinton came that night, bringing a beautiful blue one in its stead and carried away the other to launder.

"Do you mean to say those dresses are to be washed every two days?" questioned Mrs. Comstock.

"They have to be to look fresh," replied Margaret. "We want our girl sweet as a rose."

"Well, of all things!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "Every two days! Any girl who can't keep a dress clean longer than that is a dirty girl. You'll wear the goods out and fade the colors with so much washing."

"We'll have a clean girl anyway."

"Well, if you like the job you can have it," said Mrs. Comstock. "I don't mind the washing, but I'm so inconvenient with an iron."

Elnora sat late that night working hard over her lessons. The next morning she put on her blue dress and ribbon, and in those she was a picture. Mrs. Comstock caught her breath with a queer stirring around her heart and looked twice to be sure of what she saw. As Elnora gathered her books her mother silently gave her the lunch box.

"Feels heavy," said Elnora gayly. "And smelly!"

Elnora went down the road thinking of the children with whom she probably would divide. Of course, the bridge would be occupied again. So she stopped and opened the box. Undoubtedly Mrs. Comstock was showing Margaret Sinton the "frills." The cake was still fresh, and there were four slices. The sandwiches had to be tested twice before Elnora discovered that beechnuts had been used in a peanut recipe, and they were a great improvement. There were preserved strawberries in the cup, potato salad with mint and cucumber in the dish and a beautifully browned squab from the stable loft.

"I don't want to be selfish," murmured Elnora, "but it just seems as if I can't give away this lunch. If mother did not put love into it she's substituted something that's likely to fool me."

She almost felt her steps lagging as she approached the bridge. A very hungry dog had been added to the trio of children. Elnora loved all dogs and, as usual, this one came to her in friendliness. The children said "Good morning!" with alacrity, and another paper parcel lay conspicuous.

"How did you like the bologna?" questioned Billy eagerly.

"One of the girls took me to lunch at her home yesterday," answered Elnora.

Dawn broke beautifully over Billy's streaked face. He caught the package and thrust it toward Elnora.

"Then maybe you'd like to try the bologna today?"

The dog leaped in glad apprehension of something, and Belle scrambled to her feet and took a step forward. The look of famished greed in her eyes was more than Elnora could bear. She opened the box and divided the milk between Billy and the girl. She gave each a piece of cake leaving one and a sandwich. Billy pressed forward eagerly, bitter disappointment on his face, and the elder boy forgot his charge.

"Aw, I thought they'd be meat!" lamented Billy.

Elnora gave way.

"There is!" she said gladly. "There is a little pigeon bird. I want just a teeny piece of the breast, for a sort of keepsake, just one bite, and you can have the rest among you."

Elnora drew the knife from its holder and cut off the wishbone. Then she held the bird toward the girl.

"You can divide it," she said. The dog made a bound and seizing the squab sprang from the bridge and ran for life. The girl and boy hurried after him. With awful eyes Billy stared and swore tempestuously. Elnora caught him and clapped her hand over the little mouth. A delivery wagon came tearing down the street, the horse running full speed, passed the fleeing dog with the girl and boy in pursuit and stopped at the bridge. High school girls began to roll from all sides of it.

"A rescue, a rescue!" they shouted.

It was Ellen Brownlee and her crowd, and every girl of them carried a big parcel. They took in the scene as they approached. The fleeing dog, with something in its mouth, the half naked girl and boy chasing it, told the story. Those girls screamed with laughter as they watched the pursuit.

"Thank goodness, I saved the wishbone," said Elnora. "As usual, I can prove that there was a bird." She turned toward the box. Billy had improved the time. He had the last piece of cake in one hand and the last bite of salad disappeared in one great gulp. Then the girls shouted again.

"Let's have a sample ourselves," suggested one. She caught up the box and handed out the remaining sandwich. Another girl divided it into bites each little over an inch square, and then she lifted the cup lid and deposited a preserved strawberry on each bite. "One, two, three—altogether now!" she cried.

Billy let out a roar. "You old mean things!" he screamed.

In an instant he was down in the road and handfuls of dust began to fly among them. The girls scattered before him.

"Billy!" cried Elnora. "Billy! I'll never give you another bite as long as I live if you throw dust on any one!"

Then Billy dropped the dust, bored both fists into his eyes and fled sobbing into Elnora's new blue skirt. She stooped to meet him and consolation began.

SHORT SESSIONS HELD TWICE

Fear Roosevelt Would Rush the Convention Hall

PLANS LAID FOR NEW PARTY

Police Guard Chairman's Platform—Colonel Indicates Under Certain Conditions He Would Head Independents—Possibility of Second Convention—Perhaps After Baltimore Convention

Chicago, June 21.—Exactly four minutes (12:02 to 12:06 p. m.) was the duration of the opening session of the third day of the Republican national convention. The immense crowd, nearly 14,000 people, who had fought their way into the hall after an hour or more in line had only to go out again. The only business done was the prayer and the motion of Watson of Indiana to be in recess until 4 p. m. The ostensible reason for the recess was the fact that the credential committee at work upon the contestss affecting the personnel of the convention had only fairly begun its work.

The convention again reassembled at 4 o'clock, only to adjourn until today noon because the credential committee was not ready to report.

SENATOR ELIHU ROOT

[Two striking views of the permanent chairman of the Republican national convention.]

The afternoon session was remarkable, not so much for the fact that it lasted a bit less than one minute, as for the extraordinary conditions which ensued upon its adjournment.

A smashing rainstorm was in progress outside; so the people simply stood where they were and shouted, each to his taste.

Under cover of the racket, and at first unnoticed by the crowd, there began to gather on the platform a body of big policemen.

Then it began to be noticed that Chairman Root, Secretary Gleason, Sergeant-at-Arms Stone and his assistant, Colonel Thayer, had never left the platform at all. And the crowd began to understand the reason for this conspicuous show of force.

It was feared Mr. Roosevelt might come in person and a possible attempt made to seize the floor and organize a rival convention. So for a good deal more than an hour a police guard surrounded the platform and the convention officials kept their places on the stage, while the great crowd yelled itself tired.

ROOSEVELT AS INDEPENDENT

If Not Nominated Now May Call Convention Later

Chicago, June 21.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has indicated that under certain conditions he might withdraw from the Republican party to take the lead in the formation of a new party.

"If the people want a progressive party, I'll be in it," he said.

Some of the colonel's supporters urged their associates to precipitate the crisis in the Republican national convention at the earliest opportunity. More conservative counsels finally prevailed and it was determined there should be no bolt from the regular convention.

It is the plan of the Roosevelt delegates to make their last stand on the report of the credentials committee. If the seventy-eight delegates claimed by them to be fraudulent are seated, the Roosevelt forces will remain in the convention until the end, but will not vote, and then will call a second convention.

Colonel Roosevelt has not definitely committed himself to the latter part of this plan. He is considering the advisability of delaying action for several weeks and then to summon an entirely new convention. This would not be had until after the Democrats acted in Baltimore.

It is predicted that the nominating stage of the convention might not be reached until late tomorrow.

One of Colonel Roosevelt's associates who talked with him yesterday said that he had declared his willingness to run for president if any considerable number of the delegates wished him to, even if he did not carry a single electoral district in the country.

CREDENTIAL COMMITTEE

Are Joined by Roosevelt Men Upon His Instructions

Chicago, June 21.—Roosevelt members of the credential committee, acting under the suggestion of Colonel Roosevelt, returned to the meeting of that committee. Their statement of the previous night that they had "left the committee for good" was followed by a decision to go back and participate in the hearing of contest cases. Under the revised rules the Roosevelt men claimed they had won their chief points, namely, to secure the introduction of new evidence, and to secure greater time for debate.

The Roosevelt members of the committee agreed in a conference to push only the Arizona, California, Texas and Washington contest cases, forty-eight delegates in all. They declared these were the most important cases. The agreement was made in the hope of shortening the committee's session. The Hadley resolution included delegates from Arkansas, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan and Tennessee. The prospect of holding the national convention idle for several days, while these were considered, induced Roosevelt men to agree to abandon the last group, and centre their fight on the others.

HIGH SCHOOL RECEPTION.

The High school reception, that much anticipated event was held in Bates' Opera House, East Braintree, Thursday evening and was a brilliant affair. At six o'clock a banquet was served to the members of the graduating class, teachers, the superintendent and invited guests. The menu was a most excellent one by Boston caterers. During the banquet the diners were entertained by the class history read by Miss Anna L. Anglim and the class prophecy by Clinton J. Scollard.

Much merriment was caused by the presentation of gifts, each one receiving some trifle as a sort of "knock" to some habit or fad. John A. Macandrew, janitor of the school and always an honored guest of the graduating class, received a T D pipe as his gift. The gifts with appropriate verses attached were given out by Miss Mary J. Cahill. The banquet was in charge of a committee consisting of Clinton J. Scollard, Louise E. Dennehey, Sylvia D. Storrs, Florence M. Green and Theron I. Cain.

Dancing was enjoyed from eight to twelve o'clock to the strains of Dennehey's orchestra. The beautiful hall was made still more attractive by the ladies with their happy faces and lovely gowns.

The grand march was led by Dr. L. Paul Chapin and Mrs. Chapin, followed by Mr. Andrews and Miss Lena Paul, superintendent Ralph L. Wiggin and Mrs. Wiggin and about 75 couples. After a very pretty and intricate grand march, the dancing was begun and fully enjoyed by all.

Among the teachers present were Dr. L. Paul Chapin, principal of the school, Walter H. Andrews, James Smalley, Jr., Margaret A. McLean, Lena I. Paul, Louise M. Saunders, Katherine Holteen and Charlotte A. Norton. The whole affair was a grand success and was a fitting and brilliant ending to the school year.

PARSON AYERS DEFENDANT IN ALIENATION OF AFFECTION SUIT

Chester A. Boynton Claims $25,000 and the Papers were Served on Minister

Mr. and Mrs. Boynton Former Parishioners. Church People Said to be Divided

The Rev. William B. Ayers, pastor of the Park and Downs, Congregational Church at Norfolk Downs, Wollaston, is defendant in a suit for $25,000, brought against him by Chester A. Boynton of Revere for alleged alienation of the affections of his wife, Helen W. Boynton.

The writ in the case was put in the hands of a deputy sheriff for Norfolk county last night, and is from the offices of Cutler & James.

The suit against the clergyman is but one of several troubles that have beset him since his coming to Wollaston from Cape Vincent, N. Y., a little more than two years ago. A committee of Congregational clergymen not long ago finished a protracted consideration of charges made against him. What these charges were every members of the ministerial trial board has refused to state, each one having taken a solemn vow to disclose nothing.

Mr. Ayers was not found guilty by the investigating committee, though the Rev. George L. Cady, pastor of the Pilgrim Trinitarian Congregational Church of Columbia road said last night that the accused minister was not exonerated.

Mrs. Boynton is an attractive woman, about 25 years old. She and her husband were formerly very active in the affairs of the Park and Downs church, and Mr. Boynton, who is financial man in a large down-town department store, was especially useful to the church in its work of raising money for a new building. This new edifice was dedicated recently.

The trial of the case promises to be sensational. While the declaration in the case has not yet been filed, those intimate with the affairs of the Boyntons have heard of allegations that will be made of incidents that first aroused Mr. Boynton's suspicions. It is probable, too, that some details of Mr. Ayers's career at Cape Vincent, N. Y., will be recited in connection with the trial of the case.

When asked about the suit against him, Mr. Ayers Friday evening refused flatly to discuss the matter in any way whatsoever. Six members of the church, chosen at random as sources of information, spoke highly of their clergyman. One of these men admitted, however, that there is a distinct opposition to Mr. Ayers within the church and characerized this element as "a small coterie whose efforts to oust the minister resulted in the charges against him." Some of those who defended the minister charged that Boynton has told stories about Mr. Ayers that were later disproved.

YOUNG DeALBA'S LUCKY ESCAPE

Struck by Front Wheel of Auto and Face Cut

NO BLAME TO DRIVER

Clinton De Alba, the seven year old son of John R. De Alba of 581 Washington street, Quincy Point, was knocked down while playing in the vicinity of his home shortly after two o'clock Friday afternoon, by an automobile numbered 2913, operated by C. D. Heaton, Jr., of 1259 Broad street, Providence, R. I. He was taken to the home of Dr. Edward H. Bushnell, who found that the child had sustained a deep cut to the right side of his face, a little below the eye.

Young De Alba, in company with a number of playmates, was running in back of a car and was just about to cross the street to go to his house when he was struck by the automobile. Heaton, who was travelling at a moderate rate of speed at the time, did not see the boy run from behind the car. As soon as he did discover him, he immediately applied the emergency brakes, but was unable to bring his machine to a standstill until after the boy had been struck by one of the front wheels.

Officer Edward Johnson, who happened to be near the scene of the accident ran to the boy's assistance, together with a number of other eye witnesses. All who saw the accident attach no blame to the driver of the machine. The driver it is said did all he could under the circumstances, and was allowed to proceed to his destination. He had just been returning from Nantasket. Many who saw the accident claim that the boy escaped lucky and that quick work on the part of Heaton averted serious injuries.

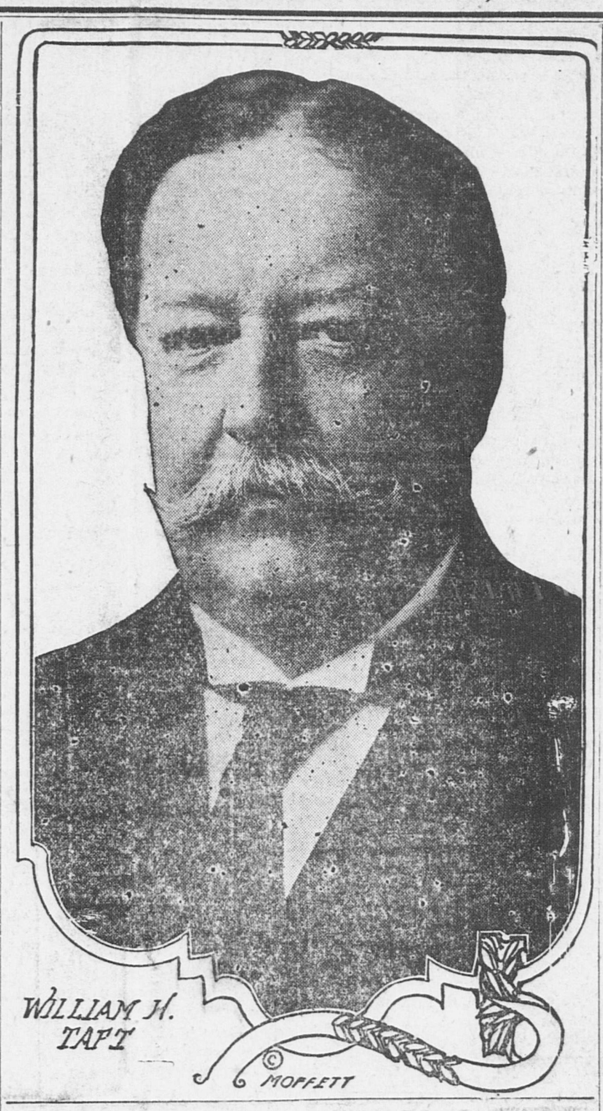
$1,000 ORDER FOR JULY 4th

To Be Acted Upon by the City Council Monday Night

PUBLIC SENTIMENT FAVORS

An important meeting of the City Council will be held Monday evening. It is an adjourned meeting from June 3, as the seventeenth meeting was omitted. Many reports will be received from the Finance committee the members making an effort to clean up the business referred to it. Interest is also centered to learn what the Public Buildings Committee will do with the order appropriating $1,000 for the proper celebration of the Fourth of July. It has been reported that the Council would adjourn at this meeting for the summer vacation. But this cannot be done for the reason that the Council has ordered public hearings on the acceptance of several streets which is scheduled for the first meeting in July, which falls on Monday July 1. It is possible that on that date the Council may adjourn for the summer.

There is no doubt but that the fine record maintained in the city the past two years by the attractive celebrations carried out has created a great public sentiment in favor of them, and the majority of the citizens favor this $1000 appropriation to carry on the celebration. At any rate there has not been a single person in the city who has come forward and voiced any objections.



TAFT MAY BE NOMINATED ON FIRST BALLOT TODAY

Roosevelt Forces Up a Tree Over the Events of the Past Few Days

The Bolt Fever Seems to have Run its Course Without Effect

(Special Dispatch to the Ledger.)

Chicago, June 22—The tired and weary delegates of the Republican convention, disgusted at the long drawn out fight, will attempt to crowd three days work into one at the session today and will undoubtedly nominate President William H. Taft on the first ballot.

All talk of a compromise candidate is scouted.

President Taft and his supporters would not listen to such a proposition.

The bottom has dropped out of the Roosevelt movement.

Perkins is said to have headed up his barrel.

Hadley's prominence not at all to the liking of the Colonel who does not relish sharing the limelight with any one.

James S. Sherman of New York may again be nominated for Vice-President.

The Roosevelt forces are all at sea.

Now that sober second thought has come to them, the most ardent bolters do not appear anxious to go home with this message to their constituents.

There is too much personally and locally at stake to take the chance.

Q.H.S. GRADUATES LAST MEETING

Class Party Marked Severing of Fond Ties

SMILES DISPELLED REGRETS

Fond, yet in a measure sad farewell words were expressed to their Alma Mater by the ninety-six graduates of the class of 1912, Quincy High school at the class party held Friday evening in the school gymnasium. It was a happy gathering and the exchanging of photographs was one of the features.

The gymnasium was very prettily decorated for the event. In the northeast corner of the hall was suspended a large American flag, while a large "Q," made from daisies occupied a conspicuous position.

Streamers of red and blue, the school colors, added greatly to the effect and "Q. H. S. 1912" stood out prominently on the walls.

The guests of the evening included Headmaster James D. Howlett, Miss Victoria Zella and Miss Elizabeth Crane teachers at the school.

The class history was read by Philip Halvosa, Jr., and was replete with many interesting facts, notable among which was the decrease of the class in numbers during the four years' course. As freshmen the class numbered 348, as sophomores 198, as juniors 132, while 101 started the senior year, 96 of whom completed the course. The history of the class showed that 254 pupils had left in the course of four years.

Eevery member of the class came in for a full share of consideration, much of which was witty in the class prophecy, read by Miss Juanita Metherall . It was a decided hit and the members of the class were kept in a state of mirth and laughter while it was being read.

Frappe was served during the evening and dancing was enjoyed till after eleven o'clock. Lloyd Lewis furnished the music.

The committee in charge comprised Everett Andrews, (chairman) Miss Margaret Hunt, Miss Isabelle Walker, Miss Blanche Thacher and Roserell Bill.

WHALE CITY AND QUINCY TEMPLARS

To Fittingly Observe the Great Feast of St. John

FINE PROGRAM ARRANGED

Quincy Commandery, Knights Templar has laid out quite a program for its first annual pilgrimage next Monday in celebration of St. John's day, and the Sir Knights who participate are assured of a pleasant outing.

As Monday is the date of the stated conclave of the Commandery it will meet in the asylum for a business session at 9 o'clock, instead of the evening as usual. The business session will probably be a short one, for at 9.30, the program calls for the formation of the lines to receive Sutton Commandery of New Bedford, which will arrive on the train due at 10 o'clock, accompanied by a band. It is expected that Sutton Commandery will turn out upwards of 200 swords.

As soon as possible after the arrival of Sutton Commandery a line will be formed for a short parade about City Square. Quincy Commandery under command of Em. Sir Henry P. Furnald and accompanied by the Wollaston band will be the escort.

The parade over, the Sir Knights will return to the asylum where the heavy regalia will be left for the day. Arrangements have been made for its being insured during the absence of the Sir Knights.

At 10.55 special electric cars will be taken in front of the asylum for Nantasket beach , via East Weymouth. Nantasket will be reached about noon, the headquarters being at Paragon Park.

At 12.30 a shore dinner will be served in the Palm Garden and mine host Dodge promises that it shall be a good one. An hour and a half will be allowed for the dinner and at 2 o'clock one of the Nantasket steamers, which has been chartered for the party will be taken for a sail about the harbor. Music on the boat will be furnished by the combined bands and light refreshments will be served as the salt air is sure to furnish the Sir Knights with sharpened appetites.

The boat is scheduled to return to Nantasket at 5 o'clock, when the special cars will be found in waiting to take the party home, and they are due to arrive in Quincy at 6.30.

A light lunch will be served in the asylum after which there will be a social hour when Bro. Charles H. Johnson will give his illustrated lecture on Historic Quincy, which will close the day's program. Sutton Commandery will leave for home on one of the late evening trains.

EVERY ONE HELP TO CELEBRATE

Fourth of July Committee Working Hard for Great Day

CO-OPERATION REQUIRED

The indications are that tonight's meeting of the general committee having in charge the Fourth of July celebation will be a largely attended one. The time is growing short and much detail work still remains to be done. Collectors have been busy all the week and as many of these will submit partial reports at this meeting the committee will be given a general idea of what may be expected in the way of funds for the celebration.

The committee however is depending largely for the success of the celebration on the passage of the order now before the City Council appropriating $1,000 for the proper observance of the day. This order is now before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, a meeting of which has been called for Monday evening, at half an hour before the meeting of the City Council.

Just what action this committee will take can not of course be foretold but the general impression seems to be that a favorable report may be looked for.

From what can be learned from the collectors, who occasionally drop into the rooms of the Board of Trade evenings, money is coming in much easier this year than in previous years. One reason for this is that the citizens have had an opportunity, during the past two years of seeing how

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Have Roosevelt and Bryan entered into secret compact to wreck both the Republican and Democratic parties and pose as twin Moses to lead the children of the country out of the wilderness?

The light rain of last evening did much to save the lawns and snuff out that brown dried up appearance which many of them had come to assume.

The new fangled overlap shirtwaist gives a woman the appearance of being half dressed.

The headsman on a Boston paper who wrote "Ferryboat Beyond the Graves," must have been in recent communion with Bangs "House boat on the Styx."

Bryan is advising Roosevelt and Taft to withdraw. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Bryan should have thought of that on two occasions when the Democrats had a good chance of electing a president with himself eliminated.

Hill, Hale and something else all begin with the one letter. If Hill and Hale were in that somewhere else the Massachusetts delegation at Chicago would be better.

Let us hope that the Harvard graduate who contended that aristocratic rule was better than that of the people is so subtle in his wit and humor that his true meaning did not come up to the level of his hearers.

And thus endeth the hopes of one ambitious publisher to hold down a cabinet seat.

John H. Holmes was an editor of the old school, but journalism of the today would be better if more of his kind were at the editorial helm.

An alleged witty squib in one Boston paper should have barred it from circulation through the mails as on the grounds of indecency.

The storekeeper who sprinkles and cleans his sidewalk each day by means of a garden hose, deserves the approval of his fellow citizens.

Not much cause for insomnia because of the heat those beautiful, cool June nights.

Another victim of getting on the wrong side of the track has paid the penalty with his life.

Some of the alleged prophets and wise ones who figured out the relative strength of the candidates for the republican nomination for president a few weeks ago will not hug themselves with pride over their powers of divination on casting a look backward.

"Brer Pukkins" will find it somewhat difficult to gather in the "harvest" from the bread of money cast upon the political waters.

Of course give the letter carriers a chance to enjoy one whole holiday. If any one wants mail bad enough to go fussing over it on July Fourth with a celebration on hand let them go to the office for it.

George Washington never slopped over, Lincoln never felt called upon to bolt.—Boston Globe.

True and neither of them ever lowered their dignity to indulge in intemperate language although the Lord knows they lived in times that tried men's souls and were more maligned than the most unscrupulous individuals.

IS SABBATH FLYING HARMFUL?

While having a deep and reverent respect for the Sabbath and a keen sense of appreciation of the good intentions of the clergymen who have protested against Sunday flying at the Squantum aviation field, we feel that this subject may be approached from many angles, each fact of which will show in a different light.

No one for a moment would accuse the reverend gentlemen who have lent their names to the protest against flying which has been filed with Mayor Stone of being insincere in this movement or animated by any but the most worthy motives.

But even people with the best intentions may have failed to take accurate observations from every view point.

The preservation of the sacred New England Sabbath, should never be permitted to waver, but can this air flying be truly called any intent to violate the commandments of God or man.

And this is borne out most acceptably by the statement of Manager Williard of the aviation meet, who says:

"Our plans for the two Sundays were for simple exhibition flying, as the aviators were not to be allowed to compete for prize money. It was the purpose of the management to provide flying for the working people who would be unable to attend on other days. It was also the intention to invite members of the Massachusetts militia and officers stationed at the harbof forts to make experiments. If the ministers will withdraw their objections for one Sunday I am sure they will be convinced aviation is a proper sport for the Sabbath."

Possibly exception may be taken to the word "sport" used in the closing sentence by Mr. Williard.

We do not believe that aviation in the highest sense is simply sport any more than the electric railroad or the steam road.

Air travel will in course of time become an established factor in world transportation.

Therefore every time a flyer goes in the air, he is experimenting, working out some problem to aid him in becoming a better operator or to detect parts wherein his machine may be improved.

Aviating is no more harmful to the morals than yachting or automobiling or carriage driving.

It is hardly conceivable that a clergyman would strenuously object to take a ride in the automobile of one of his parishioners or behind the deacon's horse, on a Sunday afternoon.

Then there is another side. It is understood that this year the management plan a more popular system of admission fees.

If the machines are sent up Sunday this will afford a vast number of laboring people, who have to labor every day but Sunday, a chance to witness this rare yet dangerous sport. Then it cannot be claimed that it is a sport or pastime, recreation, or study or whatever you choose to call it that can alone be enjoyed by the rich man who can leave his desk with impunity on any day of the week without asking any one for permission.

This reminds us of a prominent church member who once on a time strongly denounced the minister of his church for driving a well groomed and fairly speedy horse Sunday afternoons, when relieved of the religious cares of the day.

The objection of the worthy deacon reached the clergyman, who only smiled in rather a whimsical manner but made no comment.

It was not long afterwards that the minister driving his horse, met the deacon trudging along on his homeward journey. He had no mean road to travel and he was biting the dust of every form of vehicle that moved.

The minister immediately invited the deacon to take a ride. The latter enjoyed it. There was no further complaint about the minister driving his horse on Sunday, but one day while sitting on his piazza, in a contemplative mood, the deacon was heard to remark, apropos of nothing, and probably to himself, as if unconscious that he spoke his thoughts aloud, "Parson must get a good deal of pleasure and gratification in riding behind such a fine horse."

We do not believe that the clergymen would offer serious objection to an undertaking that might produce wonders in the way of experiment. The clergymen would hesitate before depriving the poor or laboring man of pursuits obtainable week days, yet barred because of the Sabbath, providing they were satisfied that the enterprise was not against public welfare or morals of the community.

In this instance we incline to the strong belief that public morals, the welfare of the community, either the young or older portion of it, would not suffer any great shock by permitting the air machines to be operated solely for experimental, scientific and exhibitive purposes.

There is nothing about a biplane, monoplane, aeroplane or any other kind of a plane that conveys a particle of anything which could be conveyed as violation of the laws, either civil or divine. Much might be gained however by flying at any time. Science is a peculiar child. Experiment is ever more uncertain. No one can foretell the moment when a great revelation touching upon the basic principles of certain experimental machines may be reached. Aside from this, the working man must be given spme consideration.

His recreation is as dear to him and far more desirable and beneficial than to the man who can drop everything at any moment and make a dash in pursuit of recreation, diversion or rest.

So with all due respect to the good intentions of the clergymen, we feel that this is one occasion where their objections may be overruled without working any great injury to any one.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH

Sunday will be observed at Children's Sunday in the Wollaston Unitarian church and promises to be of unusual interest. The church will be beautifully decorated. In addition to the singing and scripture reading by the pupils, a number of children will be baptized. The children baptized in June 1902 will receive from the church, through its president Charles S. Adams, M. D., a copy of the Bible in recognition of the tenth anniversary of their baptism. Superintendent Frank A. Page will present gold pins to pupils for faithful attendance upon the sessions of the Sunday school. Fred M. Rollins, chairman of the charity committee, will tell of the work of the Sunday school in behalf of the Fresh Air children and have four young ladies receive the annual contribution for this good cause. The Junior Lend-a-Hand club, through its president Priscilla White, will present a beautiful picture to the Sunday school and Mrs. Herbert J. —The silly stage of the Titanic disaster is, happily, passing; and the most vigorous shove along was given when the Cunard line refused to accept remuneration for picking up the passengers of the sunken ship. The idea of taking pay for doing a humane duty is repulsive, and the offer of money is almost an insult. The good sense of the Cunard line officials readily recognized that fact.—Barre Vt. Times.

AIRMEN FLOCK FOR SQUANTUM

Big Stand to Seat 15,000 People Will Be Set Up

POPULAR PRICES TO PREVAIL

Everything is practically in readiness for the great aviation meet at Squantum, which commences Saturday of next week. It promises to be the largest and most successful gathering of the bird men and women at this deservedly popular resort.

Manager W. A. P. Willard received a signed contract from Frank Coffyn, who flies a Wright hydraeroplane. Aviator Coffyn will do most of the passenger carrying work and will enter all the hydraeroplane events. Robert A. Fowler a Wright operator, who flew across the continent will make his first appearance in Boston.

Entries have been received from Lincoln Beachey, the world's greatest aviator, Hugh A. Robinson, the man who demonstrated the Curtiss hydraeroplane to the Russian and French government, George W. Beatty, a well-known Wright flyer, Frank J. Terrill of Worcester who flies a headless Curtiss and Lieut. T. Dewitt Milling the United States Army Aviator who won the tri-state biplane race in a Burgess Wright machine in last year's meet. At least fifteen aviators will compete for the prizes, and entries from foreigners are expected within the next few days.

The work on the transformation of the field is progressing rapidly. One hundred workmen have, for the past ten days, been plowing and harrowing a half-mile getaway which will run at right angles with the one used at the previous two meets. The hangars, which will accommodate 20 machines, are being constructed on the getaway. Sixteen car loads of grandstand which will seat over 15,000 people is now on its way from Washington, D. C. This portable stand will be the largest one ever erected in New England.

The great feature of this meet will be the popular prices. Admission to the field wil be exceptionally low, and the prices of the grandstand seats will be within reach of everyone.

Charles K. Hamilton, notified Manager W. A. P. Willard that he would take part in the third annual Boston Aviation Meet.

FEAR SPECTRE OF ROOSEVELT

Democrats Tremble at Possible Union of Progressives

WATTERSON'S PLEA FOR PEACE

Bryan Off to Baltimore—Similar Situation as at Chicago Grinning In the Background — Harmon-Underwood-Parker-Wall Street Combination—One Negro Delegate—Bryan Telegraphs Progressive Leaders

Baltimore, Md., June 22.—Chief interest of Democrats here appeared to centre in the fight that is imminent between William J. Bryan and the national committee, and therelection of Judge Alton B. Parker as temporary chairman of the convention.

Bryan is said to be depending for support on the following of both Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson. The Harmon and Underwood delegates are entirely satisfied with Parker, so will not help Bryan to keep him out of the honor.

Bryan men are in the minority on the conservative leaders over the sefore, it is expected the full committee will ratify Parker's selection. The fight will then be taken on the floor of the convention. Bryan himself is expected to make the principal speech against Parker.

ALTON B. PARKER.
[Committee Choice as Temporary Chairman of the Democratic National Convention In Baltimore.]

The conservatives, almost to a man, profess to believe that Bryan himself wants the Democratic nomination. They prefer any candidate so far mentioned, to him.

Although their candidate has the lowest number of delegates of the four leading candidates for the presidential nomination, the Harmon forces, with the help of the Ryan-Belmont-Murphy influence, have drawn first blood in the preliminary skirmish for the control of the Baltimore national convention. The selection of Judge Alton B. Parker of New York for temporary chairman is proclaimed as a Harmon victory.

It has come out that the Bryan forces fear the spectre of Theodore Roosevelt. They believe he will run as an independent candidate for president and that he will make war on special interests and bosses as he did in the primary. In the selection of Parker it is pointed out that Roosevelt will be given an opening vigorously to attack the Democratic convention.

It is not so much Judge Parker's keynote speech that the Bryan people fear as the act of selecting Parker, when he is favored by the Murphy-Ryan-Belmont-Sheehan forces. The effect of this upon the progressive vote of the country, it is said, may prove disastrous, unless a man is nominated who is known to be beyond the influence of the Wall street combination.

Members of the national committee following the leadership of Mr. Bryan says the issue is simply progressism against conservatism and assert that the firt vote of the convention will show that the progressives are in control.

A little variety will be given the convention by the presence of a negro as a delegate. He is said to be coming from Colorado, and his participation will mark the first appearance of a man of that race as one of the component parts of a Democratic national convention.

Chicago, June 22.—Branding ex-Judge Alton B. Parker as a "reactionary," William J. Bryan telegraphed to a number of prominent Democrats throughout the country, appealing to them to join him in preventing the election of Judge Parker as temporary chairman of the Baltimore convention. The telegrams were addressed to Speaker Clark, Governor Wilson of New Jersey, Governor Foss of Massachusetts, Governor Baldwin of Connecticut and Mayor Gaynor of New York city. Mr. Bryan announced that he would leave for Baltimore today.

The telegram is regarded as an adroit move by Bryan to put each of the men addressed on record as to his progressiveness. Neither Underwood, Governor Harmon nor Governor Marshall of Indiana was addressed by Bryan.

Washington, June 22.—The selection of Alton B. Parker for temporary chairman drew forth severe criticism from Senator Obadiah Gardner of Maine.

"There are scores of men in the country more competent to present the keynote of Democracy to the convention than Parker," declared the Maine senator. "The Democratic party owes him nothing and it would be folly to place a man like him in such a delicate position."

TARIFF REVISION

Governor Foss Urges as a Paramount Issue For Democrats

Boston, June 22.—Governor Foss last night sent to Colonel Bryan a night letter urging that the Democrats subordinate all personal issues to the adoption of a progressive platform at Baltimore.

The governor suggests these planks: Tariff reduction, abolition of monopoly, perfecting agencies of government. The governor hopes to see the Democrats solidly united for tariff revision.

It was announced last night that the governor has decided to attend the convention at Baltimore. He is very confident of securing recognition in the deliberations upon a presidential nominee.

To Continue Clinton Strike

Clinton, Mass., June 22.—A vote not to return to work was taken by the 200 striking weavers of the Lancaster mills at a mass meeting on the common, led by the Industrial Workers of the World.

—Professor Moore, the chief of the weather bureau, says that if his plans for an international weather and storm bureau, with reports from ocean steamers, is adopted, the crossing of the Atlantic, so far as storms are concerned, will be as safe as a short street-car journey.—Somerville Journal.

BRIEFS

Kenneth Blake of the M. I. T. of Boston, has accepted a position as civil engineer in Stoneham, for the summer.

Roswald Bill of Newbury avenue, was the only Atlantic boy to graduate from the High school this year. Mr. Bill is making preparations to enter Tufts college in September.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hospital Aid Association will be held Thursday, June 27 at the home of Mrs. William McFarlane on Merrymount road.

Considerable fun has been had at the expense of a man who failed to take particular notice what train he was on a few nights ago. His regular train had been leaving from the same track for a long time, but this particular night there was a change, and the result was that Mr. Blank went whizzing by Atlantic at great speed. The conductor informed him that the first stop was East Milton. The fare was paid for the ride to East Milton but for punishment the "sightseer" walked all the way home. He thinks now that he will not board a train again without being sure where it will take him.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church is to hold a Rustic social on Wednesday evening, in the lecture room of the church.

The Walther Men's class will meet Sunday at 12.15 in the Wollaston Baptist church. Rev. Joseph Walther will lead the discussion. Subject: "Present Day Evils and our attitude toward them." "Foolish and wise men of this generation," and "Some things for which we ought to give thanks today."

Sentiment in Atlantic is strong against the aviation meet being held on Sunday, not from a religious stand point, but because of the crowds that would over-run the community. It is understood that Rev. J. P. Cuffe, Rev. I. F. McNiff, and Rev. T. W. Davison have expressed their objections to the meet being held on Sunday.

The Patriotic Association of Ward 6 is soliciting funds for the Fourth of July and the people are responding generously.

PUGILIST IS INDICTED

Jack Johnson and Wife Held For Smuggling

Chicago, June 22.—Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight pugilist, and his wife, Etta Johnson, were indicted by the federal grand jury for smuggling a diamond necklace bought abroad.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made by the pugilist to settle the case by the payment of part of the duty and penalty. The necklace is valued at $3000, and with the penalty the amount reaches $6000.

The federal authorities announced that the indictment would not interfere with the Johnson-Flinn fight, July 4. The heavyweight pugilist will be allowed to give bonds at Las Vegas, and after the Fourth will be required to return to Chicago to plead to the indictment. The government will demand a bond of $5000.

Degree For Kermit Roosevelt

Cambridge, Mass., June 22.—Kermit Roosevelt will receive his Harvard degree in chemistry, having completed the four-year course in two and one-half years.

ROOSEVELT'S FORCES ROUTED

Colonel's Name May Not Be Presented At All

TAFT WINS EVERY ROLL CALL

President's Nomination Overshadows Dark Horses—Birth of New Party Matter of the Future—Colonel Will Abide by Wishes of His Friends—Platform Will Endorse Female Suffrage

Chicago, June 22.—The Taft forces in the Republican national convention further demonstrated their control of that body. The convention took up piece-meal the contests from many states, and in each instance the Taft delegates were declared entitled to their seats by majorities ranging from a high water Taft vote of 605 to 464, to a narrow margin of 542 to 529.

The latter vote was in the California case, in which the convention rules for selection of delegates by congressional districts came into conflict with the state primary law providing for a state-wide vote on all delegates.

Through this technicality the Taft forces claimed the two delegates from the Fourth district.

The case was bitterly fought and the voting was followed with the greatest interest, especially when it was seen that the Taft people were losing many of the delegates that had been with them in other contests.

Amid cries of "toot, toot, choo, choo," the steam roller passed majestically over the entire seventy-eight delegates, making practically certain the ultimate triumph of the Taft forces in the convention.

Unless the unexpected happens in the convention, President Taft will be renominated either today or Monday.

The Roosevelt forces concede that on the straight vote of the convention, with the contested delegates seated by the credentials committee, the colonel cannot be nominated.

If Colonel Roosevelt eventually heads an independent ticket it seems certain that the convention which will name him will be held at a time considerably after the adjournment of the Republican national convention, now in session in this city.

As a result of the decisive votes of the convention, particularly that on the Fourth California district contests, and after a day's sober reflection on the part of his close advisers, the plan for a continuation of the present convention, as outlined previously, practically has been abandoned.

If, furthermore, Mr. Roosevelt is placed in nomination before the convention now in session, it will not be of his planning or with his sanction, but the individual action of some one of his enthusiastic supporters. The points in the otherwise indefinite Roosevelt program were made clear by Colonel Roosevelt himself and confirmed by some of his closests advisers.

Chairman Perry of the Oklahoma delegation said the entire delegation would go to Baltimore after the convention and open negotiations with the Democrats as to forming a progressive party.

Some of Colonel Roosevelt's more radical supporters still cling to the belief that it would be wise to carry out their original plan, which, in effect, was stoutly to maintain that the Republican convention is irregular and illegal, and after its adjournment to proceed with an organization in the same hall and name their ticket with Mr. Roosevelt at its head. Colonel Roosevelt, however, refused to sanction this plan. He did not forbid it. He still maintains that he is bound to obey the wishes of his supporters and that he is willing as he expressed in his statement, "personally to bear the responsibility."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Harvard Professor Speaks Italian so Well that Even the Monkey Understood—Credit Men Charge it up to Old Boston for a Hospitable Week—Panier Gowns and Swagger Sticks Make Back Bay Look English as a Muffin—Cats and Dogs Rain on the Countryside as Vacation Season Approaches as Result of Animal Rescue League's Preachings.

The scores of carefully tended black bags, baskets and boxes from which emerge the heads of more or less scared kittens or cats, as they are carried through the railroad terminals, would seem to indicate that the work of the society with the long name is bearing fruit. Certainly not many of the family pets can have been left to a dinnerless summer in the city, judging by the number that are being carried away on every mountain or shore bound train. It is interesting to note also that whereas a few years ago the usual sight was that of mother carrying the cat and the small boy surreptitiously tweaking its tail. Nowadays it is more usual to find the son of the family gently and kindly caring for pussy and leaving mother free to look out for the more responsible duties.

The Massachusetts board of health is getting roasted just at present by the Massachusetts State Pharmaceutical Association, in its convention. The association is anxious to place one or more of its members on the State board, just so that there may be someone represented who knows something about drugs and medicines. The motion was made among others, that newspapers should be prohibited from mentioning the names and doses of poisons used in homicide and suicides, and it would seem that the point was well taken if the number of subsequent suicides by the same poison as that used in a recent much discussed murder case are any indication of the power of suggestion.

Boston gasped slightly at the Country club races on the 17th when six of the beauties of a theatrical company playing in town appeared in the very latest European fashion craze—the panier gown and the English swagger stick. The gowns were respectively classed as the "coal hod" panier, the "milk pail" panier, the "lunch basket" and the "bell-top" paniers, each gown being accompanied by appropriate head gear. Each young woman carried the short, limber switch known as the English "swagger" stick, and it is needless to say that many were the cricks in the necks of men and daggers in the eyes of women. These same girls appeared also at the afternoon promenade in the Back Bay and at the Harvard class day exercises. Perhaps the young woman who appeared on Boylston street a short time ago with an improved harem skirt—improved in that its divisions were not gathered in around the ankle but hung loosely—was also a member of this theatrical company.

It is quite surprising to the average stenographer or other business woman to discover what a large aggregation of important men control the interesting question of whether she shall be allowed a charge account at leading department stores. The 17th annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men, meeting in Boston during the week of June 17th, assembled something like one thousand of these gentlemen and their charming wives. This national association, formed in 1896, has been undoubtedly the chief factor in making a profession of the credit man's calling, and in organizing individual credit men and associations of credit men throughout the United States for the purpose of rendering more uniform the basis upon which credits in every branch of commercial enterprise are founded. The Boston girls have been quite impressed by the business necessary to be transacted because they and their sisters and brother desire to buy goods on credit, and can sympthaize a little less rebelliously with the men who positively insist that their bills must be paid promptly.

Class reunions at Harvard commencement time brings out many amusing experiences and anecdotes. At a recent dinner a professor of the romance languages told of his attempt to determine whether his command of the Italian language was adequate. Passing through the North End of Boston one day he stopped and conversed with an Italian organ grinder. He was delighted to find that not only could he understand the organ grinder perfectly and that the latter could understand him perfectly, but after he had been speaking a few minutes the monkey came up and shook hands with him. And speaking of class reunions, the vivid combinations of color worn by the various classes on their outings recall the old customs at Harvard. Back in the middle eighteenth century the candidates for degrees were threatened with loss of coveted distinction if they appeared in other than black dark blue or grey clothing. This did not hold for long, however, as in the latter part of the century one candidate appeared in "coat and breeches of pearl-colored satin, with silk waistcoat and stockings, splendid buckles in his shoes, and his hair elaborately dressed and powdered according to the fashion of the day," and still he got his degree. Today the cap and gown prevails at the commencement exercises, but when the classes are on their junkets the giddiest of reds, greens, purples, oranges and blues are presented in hat bands, coats, ties, stockings, sweaters, and even bathing suits.

Providence, June 22.—Women of Marieville declare that they intend to keep their children within doors, despite the fact that the vacation season has commenced, because Antonio Mariano, 14, indicted for manslaughter in the killing of Willie Mather, 12, on Feb. 25 last, has appeared in his old haunts in that section.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

After the luncheon was given to the three children Elnora was hustled into the wagon with the girls and driven on the run to the high school. They sang a song beginning,

Elnora, please give me a sandwich;
I'm ashamed to ask for cake,

as they went on. Elnora did not know it, but that was her initiation. She belonged to "the crowd." She only knew that she was happy and vaguely wondered what her mother and Aunt Margaret would have said about the proceedings.

Saturday morning Elnora helped her mother with the work. When she had finished Mrs. Comstock told her to go to Sinton's and wash her Indian relics so that she would be ready to accompany Wesley to town in the afternoon. Elnora hurried down the road and was soon at the cistern with a tub busily washing arrow points, stone axes, tubes, pipes and skin cleaning implements. There were not so many points as she had supposed, and some she had thought the finest were chipped and broken. Still there was quite a large box of perfect pieces to carry to the city.

Then Elnora hurried home, dressed and was waiting when the carriage reached the gate. She stopped at the bank with the box, and Sinton went to do his marketing and a little shopping for his wife.

At the dry goods store Mr. Brownlee called to him: "Hello, Sinton! How do you like the fate of your lunch box?" Then he began to laugh.

"I always hate to see a man laughing alone," said Sinton. "It looks so selfish. Tell me the fun and let me help you."

Brownlee wiped his eyes.

"I supposed you knew, but I see she hasn't told."

Then the three days' history of the lunch box was repeated with particulars which included the dog.

"Now laugh," concluded Brownlee.

"Blessed if I see anything funny," replied Sinton. "And if you had bought that box and furnished one of those lunches yourself you wouldn't either. I call such a work a shame. I'll have it stopped."

"Some one must see to that, all right. They are little leeches. Their father earns enough to support them, but they have no mother, and they run wild. I suppose they are crazy for cooked food. But it is funny, and when you think it over you will see it if you don't now."

"About where would a body find that father?" inquired Sinton grimly. Mr. Brownlee told him, and he started, locating the house with little difficulty. House was the proper word, for of home there was no sign. Just a small empty house with three unkempt little children racing through and around it. The girl and the elder boy hung back, but dirty little Billy greeted Sinton with, "What you want here?"

"I want to see your father," said Sinton.

"Well, he's asleep," said Billy.

"Where?" asked Sinton.

"In the house," answered Billy, "and you can't wake him."

"Well, I'll try," said Wesley.

Billy led the way. "There he is!" he said. "He is drunk again."

On a dirty mattress in a corner lay a sleeping man who appeared to be strong and well.

Billy was right. You could not awake him. He had gone the limit and a little beyond. He was now facing eternity.

Sinton went out and closed the door.

"Your father is sick and needs help," he said. "You stay here and I will send a man to see him."

"If you just let him 'lone, he'll sleep it off," volunteered Billy. "He's that way all the time, but he wakes up and gets us something to eat after awhile. Only waitin' twists you up inside pretty bad."

The boy wore no air of complaint. He was merely stating facts.

Wesley Sinton looked hard at Billy. "Are you twisted up inside now?" he asked.

Billy laid a grimy hand on the region of his stomach, and the filthy little waist sank close to the backbone. "Bet your life, boss," he said cheerfully.

"How long have you been twisted?" asked Sinton.

Billy appealed to the others. "When was it we had the stuff on the bridge?"

"Yesterday morning," said the girl.

"Is that all gone?" asked Sinton.

"She went and told us to take it home," said Billy ruefully, "and 'cause she said to, we took it. Pa had come back, he was drinking some more, and he ate a lot of it—most the whole thing, and it made him sick as a dog, and he went and wasted all of it. Then he got drunk some more, and now he's asleep again. We didn't get hardly none."

"You children sit on the steps until the man comes," said Sinton. "I'll send you some things to eat with him. What's your name, sonny?"

"Billy," said the boy.

"Well, Billy, I guess you better come with me. I'll take care of him," Sinton promised the others. He reached a hand to Billy.

"I ain't no baby, I'm a boy," said Billy as he shuffled along beside Sinton, taking a kick at every movable object without regard to his battered toes.

Once they passed a Great Dane dog lolling after its master, and Billy ascended Sinton as if he was a tree and clung to him with trembling hot hands.

"I ain't afraid of that dog," scoffed Billy as he was again placed on the walk, "but one't he took me for a rat or somepin and his teeth cut into my back. If I'd a done right I'd a took the law on him."

Sinton looked down into the indignant little face. The child was bright enough, he had a good head, but, oh, such a body!

Wesley Sinton reached his hand. They were coming into the business part of Onabasha, and the streets were crowded. Billy understood it to mean that he might lose his companion and took a grip. That little hot hand clinging tight to his, the sore feet recklessly scouring the walk, the hungry child panting for breath as he tried to keep even, caught Sinton in a tender, empty spot.

"Say, son," he said, "how would you like to be washed clean and have all the supper your skin could hold and sleep in a good bed?"

"Aw, gee!" said Billy. "I ain't dead yet. Them things is in heaven. Poor folks can't have them. Pa said so."

"Well, you can have them if you want to go with me and get them," promised Sinton.

"Kin I take some to Jimmy and Belle?"

"If you'll come with me and be my boy I'll see that they have plenty."

"What will pa say?"

"Your pa is in that kind of sleep now where he won't wake up, Billy," said Sinton. "I am pretty sure the law will give you to me if you want to come."

"When people don't ever wake up they're dead," announced Billy. "Is my pa dead?"

"Yes, he is," answered Sinton.

"And you'll take care of Jimmy and Belle, too?"

"I can't adopt all three of you," said Sinton. "I'll take you and see that they are well provided for. Will you come?"

"Yep, I'll come," said Billy. "Let's eat, first thing we do."

"All right," agreed Sinton. "Come into this restaurant." He lifted Billy to the lunch counter and ordered the clerk to give him as many glasses of milk as he wanted and a biscuit. "I think there's going to be fried chicken when we get home, Billy," he said, "so you just take the edge off now and fill up later."

CHAPTER X.

Wherein Billy Creates a Sensation in the Sinton Home.

WHILE Billy lunched Sinton called up the different departments and notified the proper authorities, ending with the Women's Relief association. He sent a basket of food to Belle and Jimmy, bought Billy a pair of trousers and a shirt and went to bring Elnora.

"Why, Uncle Wesley!" cried the girl. "Where did you find Billy?"

"I've adopted him for the time being, if not longer," replied Sinton.

"Where did you get him?" queried the astonished Elnora.

"Well, young woman," said Sinton. "Mr. Brownlee told me the history of your lunch box. It didn't seem so funny to me as it does to the rest of them, so I went to look up the father of Billy's family and make him take care of them or allow the law to do it for him. It will have to be the law."

"He's deader than anything!" broke in Billy. "He can't ever take all the meat any more."

"Billy!" gasped Elnora.

"Never you mind," said Sinton. "A child don't say such things about a father who loved and raised him right. When it happens the father alone is to blame. You won't hear Billy talk like that about me when I cross over."

"You don't mean you are going to take him to keep?"

"I'll soon need help," said Sinton. "Billy will come in just about right ten years from now, and if I raise him I'll have him the way I want him."

"But Aunt Margaret don't like boys," objected Elnora. "She won't want him in her home."

"In our home," corrected Sinton.

"What makes you want him?" marveled Elnora.

"God only knows," said Sinton. "Billy ain't so beautiful, and he ain't so smart. I guess it's because he's so human. My heart goes out to him."

"So did mine," said Elnora. "I love him. I'd rather see him eat my lunch than have it myself any time."

"What makes you like him?" asked Sinton.

"Why, I don't know," pondered Elnora. "He's so little, he needs so much, he's got such splendid grit and he's perfectly unselfish with his brother and sister! But we must wash him before Aunt Margaret sees him. I wonder if mother"—

"You needn't bother. I'm going to take him home the way he is," said Sinton. "I want Maggie to see the worst of it."

"I'm afraid"— began Elnora.

"So am I," said Sinton, "but I won't give him up. He's taken a sort of grip on my heart. I've always been crazy for a boy. Don't let him hear us."

"Don't let him get killed!" cried Elnora. During their talk Billy had wandered to the edge of the walk and barely escaped the wheels of a passing automobile in an effort to catch a stray kitten that seemed in danger.

Sinton drew Billy back to the walk and held his hand closely. When they started home Billy sat on the front seat. He drove with the hitching strap tied to the railing of the dashboard, flourished the whip and yelled with delight. At first Sinton laughed with him, but by the time he left Elnora with several packages at her gate he was looking serious enough.

"See me make 'em go!" he shouted as the whip fell a second time.

Margaret was at the door as they drove up the lane. Sinton left Billy in the carriage, hitched the horses and went to explain to her. He had not reached her before she cried, "Look, Wesley, that child! You'll have a runaway!"

Wesley looked and ran. Billy was standing in the carriage slashing the mettlesome horses with the whip.

"See me make 'em go!" he shouted as the whip fell a second time.

He did make them go. They took the hitching post and a few fence palings, which scraped the paint from a wheel. Sinton missed the lines at the first effort, but the dragging post impeded the horses, and he soon caught them. He led them to the barn and ordered Billy to remain in the carriage while he unhitched. Then leading Billy and carrying his packages he entered the yard.

HAVANA PAPER CHARGES GOMEZ

With Fostering Revolution to Enhance His Popularity

REVOLT GOT BEYOND CONTROL

Gomez Wanted to Increase Certainty of His Re-election—General Estenoz Selected to Head Revolution—Aid Given Filibusters Bringing In Arms—Journal Challenges Full Investigation of Charges

Havana, June 22.—The rumors which have been long current that President Gomez instigated the revolution in Cuba for the purpose of getting the credit of quelling it and thus increasing his chances for re-election to the presidency, have now taken the form of direct charges made particularly by the newspaper El Dial. The paper declares that President Gomez personally arranged with General Estenoz to start the revolution and then be bought off. President Gomez was then to pose as a strong man capable of dominating any situation and indispensable to the security of the Cuban republic.

The paper continues that when General Estenoz began the work of conspiracy the authorities of the province of Oriente reported all the movements and plans of the conspirators to the president, who personally transmitted them to General Estenoz for his guidance. In one instance an important communication was made by official word of mouth to President Gomez, only to be immediately communicated to General Estenoz.

The paper charges that President Gomez was fully informed of the details of the outbreak before March 10, but took no precautions, keeping in constant touch with General Estenoz. At the end of February the governor of Santiago learned that a schooner carrying Haitian filibusters with arms and ammunition would arrive and attempt a landing near Daiquiri on March 10. He dispatched a gunboat which captured the schooner manned and armed as described, but three days later came secret orders from Havana to release the schooner and her crew and not to make any report of the incident. Later on the schooner landed men, arms and dynamite in Cuba.

The paper says that after General Estenoz and President Gomez had agreed to start a small revolution for their mutual benefit the affair took on unexpected proportions resulting in a veritable conflagration.

The paper challenges the authorities to investigate the truth of its charges.

Washington, June 22.—While the navy is striving to have the battleships recalled from Cuba to participate in the regular fleet exercises which were mapped out for them long before the Cuban trouble assumed a serious aspect, it is not believed that the ships will be taken away and the marines left behind. At the same time officials here are reluctant to take away any of the marine guard at this time. One plan suggested is to withdraw the big battleships and substitute the Atlantic reserve fleet.

well the committee has expended the funds at its disposal and what a success these celebrations have been.

Few of the thousands of citizens who enjoy the celebration realize how much detail work the successful carrying out of the day's program is devolved upon the committee. The committee is certainly working hard for the success of the affair and it behooves everybody to put his shoulder to the wheel and help along not only by his contribution but by attending the general committee metings, which are open to the public and give the committee the benefits of his advice.

Bear this in mind tonight and attend the meeting of the rooms of the Board of Trade.

ROGERS PLEADS NOT GUILTY

On Charge of Violating Pony Express Law

CONTINUED TO THURSDAY

Frank Rogers, treasurer of the Boston Bay Steamboat Co., appeared in court this morning on summons by Inspector Goodhue for alleged violation of the so called pony express law for transportation of intoxicating liquors to Houghs Neck without a permit. He entered a plea of not guilty and the case was continued on his personal recognizance in $100 until next week Thursday.

As stated in the Ledger of Friday this is an interesting case as it has always been presumed that a steamboat company as well as a steam and electric railway company had a right under the general law to transport liquor without a permit.

ROOSEVETL AND WILSON

Possible Combination of a New Party Now In Embryo

Chicago, June 22.—Plans are being worked out by the radical Roosevelt leaders looking to a big non-partisan progressive convention to be held early in August, at which a nation-wide organization can be perfected, a platform adopted and a ticket named. Unless some action of the regular Republican convention now in session calls for the earlier action by the progressives this plan will be carried out.

Woodrow Wilson is the man already talked of as running mate for Roosevelt—assuming that Roosevelt will be the candidate of the new party, in the event that Wilson is not to be named at Baltimore. William J. Bryan is also prominently mentioned.

It is contended by George Record of New Jersey, who is strong for this program, that Roosevelt and Wilson are really radicals of equal degree and belong in the same party and that Taft and Harmon are in fact representatives of the same interests.

"It is time to shake Penrose, Crane and Root," said Record. "They should herd by themselves in a party which stands openly for special privilege and the perversion of the courts. We who stand for human rights and for social justice have nothing in common with them, and we ought to go with clean Democrats like Ben Lindsey, Bryan and other of their kind. We have faith that the country is ready to respond to this call."

NO CONFERENCE WITH MAYOR

But Executive Has Forbidden Sunday Flying

AT AVIATION FIELD

Mayor Stone said this morning that he should not allow any Sunday flying at the Squantum aviation field. At a recent meeting of the ministers' association a protest was entered against granting any flying on the Lord's day at Squantum. The matter was brought to the attention of the Mayor with the result that he has issued orders to the Chief of Police to prevent flying on the Lord's day. It was rumored that a conference was to be held on the matter between the Mayor, Manager Willard and the Chief of Police but Mayor Stone says that he knows nothing about any conference.

$2,000 NEEDED FOR FOURTH

To Make Celebration Success and Credit to Quincy

EVERY ONE WORKING

An enthusiastic meeting of the Fourth of July celebration committee was held Saturday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade with Mayor Stone, the president of the committee, presiding.

Partial reports receiver from the collectors showed that over $600 had been collected up to date. President Stone announced that fully $2,000 was needed to carry out the program as the committee desired and he hoped that the collectors would put forth every effort during the coming week to get in money. While the City Council had not as yet acted on the order appropriating $1,000 for the proper celebration he believed that it would pass the order.

He also announced that another meeting would be held Wednesday evening and it was important that collectors should make a full report at that time. There were several matters that wanted to be cleaned up but the committee could not go ahead with them until it was ascertained how much money it would have at its disposal.

The amounts appropriated thus far approximate $1,600 and if more money was forthcoming these would be added to.

George A. Wardwell chairman of the parade committee said that the morning parade would start at 8.30 and that the auto parade about thirty minutes after the first parade had finished. It was planned that the automobile parade should go into every ward and he had been assured that some of the automobile owners who were to take part in the parade in Atlantic earlier in the morning would come to Quincy and enter this parade.

The routes of the parade had not been definitely settled upon as yet but would be some time before next Saturday so that the route could be announced in the local papers of next Saturday.

Chairman Wardwell informed a Ledger man that Major Frederick E. Jones would be the Chief Marshal and that Captain George A. Wardwell would be Chief of Staff. As now outlined Colonel Henry L. Kincaide would be the marshal of the automobile division; George E. Adams Chief of the military division; Leo J. McMaster chief of the trades division; David Hanson chief of the societies and military division, and Galen Vinton Bowditch chief of the antique and horrible division. Just who would compose the staff of the various division chiefs had not as yet been definitely decided.

Up to the present time it was definitely known that the following organizations would participate in the parade. Norfolk Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Norfolk Downs, in a float, the Red Men, Spanish War Veterans, Sons of Veterans, Junior order of Moose, the Buffalos, Woman's Relief Corps and Moose. He expected to hear from other societies and organizations at any time.

It was announced that a most cordial invitation was extended to out of town societies and features to join in the parade. While it was not definitely known as yet what battleship would be in Quincy waters that day it was thought that the jackies of the battleship would enter the parade with the ship's band.

The music committee announced that at the present time two bands and a drum corps had been engaged. It was desired however if possible to have one or two more bands. This matter

Oscar Koivn, of 27 Clark avenue, was fined $15 for assault and battery and drunkenness and Topias Kureseja of Arthur street was fined $15 for attempt to rescue a prisoner, by Judge Albert E. Avery in the district court this morning. The case was the result of the trouble which occurred Saturday evening in the vicinity of Finn hall, Suomi road, West Quincy, when Constable Oscar Djerf was in the act of arresting one of the above mentioned.

Jeremiah J. McAnarney conducted the prosecution. Several witnesses were heard, all of whom upheld testimony of the constable. According to the testimony it seemed that Maki and Koivn had gained admission to the dance hall and were causing considerable annoyance to the dancers, especially to a numbr of young ladies. Constable Djerf who happened to be playing as a member of the orchestra, noticed the disturbance the men were causing, proceeded to tell them that their presence in the hall was not rquested.

The men seemed to resent his assertions to effect that he was a guardian of the peace, and when Djerf had succeeded in placing Maki out on the street a fight ensued and the men started to make further trouble. It is alleged that bricks were thrown through the windows of the hall, many of the dancers being cut by the flying pieces of glass. The constable warned the men repeatedly, but they still perssted creating a disturbance. The twisters were placed on Maki and Koiva attempted to get him awaay fromt hec onstable, but the latter though his head was bleeding badly as a result from being struck by a bottle, managed to place the two men

EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The suggestion that we forget 1912 and look forward to the anniversary of the American-English peace compact of 1915, is a very good one. But a lot may happen in three years. The Spanish war was precipitated by an explosion that only lasted a few seconds.

Galveston, Baltimore and San Francisco, in their rapid growth from ruin to the pinnacle of municipal success are goodly examples of the grit, sternness of purpose and unflinching patriotism of the American people.

While Roosevelt ranted around inventing phrases for the National committee, it is now the turn of the newspaper men to find fitting expressions for his "rest in peace," etc.

A newspaper heads dispatch about Bryan, "Bryan is silent." Poor man he better consult a throat specialist at once as a few minutes of silence might prove fatal to his voice.

Massachusetts delegates by no means maintained that dignified air of Boston "culchaw, doncher know."

"On the road to Baltimore where the flying oysters soar" will be the cry of the Democrats next week. Just watch your "Uncle Gene" and "Cross of Gold Bill" at that delightful gathering.

The New York Sun after naming a possible Roosevelt cabinet concludes with the invocation, "And Platform—God Forbid."

The man with the limited purse will hardly be so anxious to attend another Republican convention. Which all goes to show that politics is truly a rich man's game unless you have a Harvester trust and wealthy publisher to finance your campaign.

Shades of Bunker Hill, the Bay State flag dragged in the dust at Chicago whose site had hardly been discovered when the first blood of the revolution was spilled.

William Jennings Bryan cheered in a Republican convention, may use that as a lever to force his nomination at the Baltimore convention, contending that he stands well with the savages of the other side.

It is now up to the City council to assist the Fourth of July celebration along in a material manner. The majority of the people will endorse any action of the City council towards that end.

Chairman Miller of the School board may not be in the gilt-edged or spellbinding oratorical class, but he has a logical and forceful manner of saying things right out from the shoulder and making himself understood.

Col. Roosevelt after loudly proclaiming for Woman Suffrage deftly side steps the issue to join the ranks of the suffrage league.

"We are asked to say something about dust," says the Weymouth Gazette." Some poet has said "dust thou art and to dust returneth.' Legend says 'every man must eat a peck of dirt' and the only thing we can say about dust is you can discount the poet and the legend on Broad street and in many other place s in Weymouth."

If the dust is any worse on the main streets in Weymouth than it is on Washington and Hancock streets and most every other street in Quincy we would like to know it. The black greasy dust that blows in clouds into stores and houses is exasperating. Why not sprinkle?

ROOSEVELT AND BRYAN.

There is a similarity between Theodore Roosevelt and William Jennings Bryan, although temperamentally they may be as far apart as the poles. Both, are keen, subtle, able, finished and spectacular politicians although of widely divergent types. Roosevelt is of the "carry all before him" style, while Bryan is keener, more tactful, yet fully as masterful. Bryan would have as easily been president or in the same position which Roosevelt occupies today had he been a member of the dominant party when he first cast his head piece in the ring of National politics. That tile has been kicked around more or less in the past few years, but that does not disturb Bryan. Roosevelt is having his sombrero booted along at the present time but he does not take kindly to the treatment.

In the presence of Bryan at the Republican National convention, as a plain every day working newspaper man, a keen evidence of long headedness, a grasp of situations keenly alive to future conditions is among the possibilities which stamps him as the peer of Roosevelt from a view point of political discernment.

It takes two thirds of the Democratic convention to nominate a candidate. Neither of the candidates to date has a working majority. If divided on important questions neither party at the Baltimore convention could control events if the vote was divided on strictly parisan lines and there would be an uncompromising deadlock.

In an analysis of the conditions is it not reasonable to assume that Bryan's clear and far sighted intellect foresaw just such a contingency.

Cheered by members of a political convention and requested to make a speech by men outside his own party in their convention hall, is he not furnished with a strong card to play at Baltimore.

The Republican party is ripped wide open fore and aft, no matter who is nominated. It is doubtful if any candidate who can be nominated will be elected judging events from the present day situation.

Bryan's keen intellect grasped and figured on this long ago.

With his magnetism, powers of oratory, his grasp of national affairs what is more likely than that he will thrust himself forward as a compromise candidate at the Democratic convention with the added claim that the admiration and deference shown him at a Republican convention augurs well for a strong support from certain wings of that party.

If such was Bryan's plan, fostered and nurtured with calm and calculating discrimination then he is head and shoulders above any of his competitors. Under such conditions who can say that he will not be the Democratic candidate for president.

INVESTIGATE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The report of the state officials upon the conditions of the charitable fad is not a high commentary upon the laws which govern such institutions. There are about 700 charitable institutions in the state. Of the 169 investigated, over 50 per cent were found to be lacking in some of the real qualifications for carrying on such work. To be plain spoken, many of those were mere subterfuges to obtain money for the benefit of the promoter, a regular stand and deliver proposition under the guise of charity. It is nothing new, although much emphasied at this time, that collectors for many so-called charities receive 50 per cent of the donations for their purely, sweetly, philanthropic endeavors.

That is not charity. That is providing some lazy person a means of an easy time in this world who is credited with doing good for others.

The charity commissioner, or whatever his title may be, has pledged himself to purge the state of many of those fake charitable institutions. He should receive the unqualified support and endorsement of every public-spirited citizen. And this brings us naturally to the subject of Associated Charities. Many people have a hazy and not very favorable impression of this institution. Many people contend that it is an institution improperly organized for the proclamation of the unfortunate poor. Such is a decidedly wrong impression of this worthy institution. Its primary object is to protect and assist the poor, but at the same time save the generous public from being imposed upon.

Every case is properly investigated it is true, but this course is necessary to protect the public. No worthy case is rejected and no one worthy of charity have their claims for recognition proclaimed from the housetops, as some people would have you believe.

When the associated charity movement was first started, many well-meaning people opposed it. They were honest in their beliefs and convictions.

It was the supposed practices to which they were an avowed enemy.

A study of the institution, its aims, objects and the good work which is being carried on in secret has caused a change of front on the part of those people.

The yesterday opponents of Associated Charities are the today and tomorrow most earnest advocates of its work and system.

It cannot work harm with honorable men and women managing it for the best interests of all concerned and it is capable of doing a world of good for the public in general and particularly in saving from the mean and grasping undeserving that which rightly belongs to the worthy poor within the precincts of any community.

JULY LIPPINCOTT'S.

Lippincott's has no problems to solve, no continued stories to hinder, and it appeals to you just when you most want it—all of which helps to explain the reason for its fifty-some years of continued popularity. In particular is the July issue of the right sort, every page breathing a spirit in harmony with recreation days. The never failing complete novel is diverting one from H. de Vere Stacpoole, who wrote "The Blue Lagoon," "The Crimson Azaleas," and other books of pleasing memory. His new story, "Molly Beamish," deals with high life in England a century or more ago. In color, in life, in daintiness, and in charm it can be compared only with "Beaucaire"—and it does not suffer in the comparison. "Molly is the adorable daughter of a poverty-stricken but devil-may-care Irish knight, hard put to it to maintain his position in society. In their trouble they are flouted by the rural aristocracy of the place where they are stopping, but Molly is spunky and carefully presents to them several Rolands for each of their Olivers. Yet the odds are fearfully against the girl, and it looks as if she were going to be ignominiously routed, when—well, something happens. It would be a shame to explain here what that something is, and thus give away the clever plot prematurely. The short-stories in the number are as varied in them as they are entertaining in motive.

BUSY SOLONS.

Many important matters are coming up before the meeting of the City Council tonight and the meeting seems likly to be a busy one, with more or less debate.

DOUBLE WEDDING VERY BRILLIANT

Brother and Sister Married at the Same Time

WILL LIVE IN QUINCY

Beneath an array of Japanese lanterns that shone forth resplendently a double wedding in which a son and daughter of Mrs. Winslow Hobart figured, took place on the lawn of her residence, 13 Verchild street, Saturday evening. The first wedding was that of Chester V. Hobart and Miss Mary Kinsman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kinsman of Roxbury, while immediately following it the groom's sister, Miss Lottie A. Hobart was united in marriage to Lindsay L. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Smith of Quincy.

Both ceremonies were performed by Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the First Baptist church, Wollaston, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The bridesmaid at the first wedding was Miss Bertha Cook of Newton Centre, and the best man was Edward Monday of Quincy. The bride was handsomely attired in white silk and lace, while the bridesmaid wore a similar gown.

The bridesmaid at the second wedding was Miss Margaret Morrison of Quincy, while the best man was Ellsworth Smith of Wollaston. The bride was becomingly gowned in white lace and the bridesmaid was dressed in white silk. After the ceremonies, a wedding reception was held from 8 until 10 o'clock, and the brides and bridegrooms were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Winslow Hobart and Mr. and Mrs. James Smith. The ushers were Miss Eva Scarborough, Miss Abbie Livingston, Miss Margaret Foss and Miss Mildred Foss.

The flower girls were Miss Gladys Cook and Miss Marion Hobart. The house was also very pretily decorated with an abundance of ferns, roses and pinks, while a most charming spectacle was presented by the numerous American flags and Japanese lanterns. After a short wedding trip, the newly married couples will reside in Quincy.

Guests were present from Quincy, Braintree, Roxbury, Portsmouth, Va., Hyannis, Centreville, Osterville Middleboro, Newton, North Easton, and Bartley, N. Y.

QUARRELLED ON STREET CAR

Pollar and Budd Arrested at Houghs Neck

POLLAR WAS UNGALLANT

Antonio Pollar of Water street and Arthur Budd from the Quincy Point section were arrested late Saturday evening at Houghs Neck on a charge of disorderly conduct on a public conveyance. The arrest was made on the order of Chief Frank Burrell, who is using every effort to rid the beach resort of all such disturbances.

According to the police Pollar was talking to a young lady passenger in an ungentlemanly manner and caused her considerable annoyance. Budd who happened to be with the young lady resented the tactics and sought to retaliate. A fight ensued and when the car reached Houghs Neck both men were placed under arrest. They were both bailed out.

The arrests were made by Inspectors McKay and Goodhue and Officer James Connoley.

CHEERED THEMSELVES

But Neponset Gang a Nuisance to Others

A gang of Neponset toughs who came from Houghs Neck on the last car Saturday night and walked to Neponset made a nuisance of themselves all the way down Hancock street by their shouting and attempts at singing. It would have been a good thing if they could all have been place under arrest as the hour was near 1 p. m. o'clock Sunday morning.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST CHURCH.

At the annual meeting of the Sunday School Association held at King's Chapel during Anniversary week it was voted that the Sunday school Association should give up its existence as a separate body and become a part of the A. U. A., to be known as the Sunday School Department. Rev. Mr. Lawrance who has served the Association so ably as its President is to be the Superintendent of the new department. It will still be possible and desirable that the Alliances should continue their support of Sunday School work and contributions may be sent from them to the A. U. A., with the request that the money be used for the Sunday School Department.

The summer meetings at the Isles of Shoals will begin on Sunday, July 7, 1912, and will undoubtedly be as interesting as they have proved in former years. One whole day will be devoted to the Alliance—Tuesday, July 9.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Walter H. Commons of East Weymouth occupied the pulpit on Sunday and a good sized congregation was on hand to greet him, and express appreciation of his discourse. He chose his text from John 21:3-17. and was listened to with attention and satisfaction, and it is hoped by many that he may be heard here again.

Mr. Spooner made a good impression with his tenor solo, and the choir rendered Topliffs "Consider the Lilies" most acceptably. Before the meeting closed it was voted to join in the general protest of the churches against holding any exhibitions whatever on the Sabbath during the coming aviation meet at Squantum.

Sunday school met for the last time before summer vacation. Sessions will be discontinued during the vacation months and resumed September 8th.

Friday evening Prayer meeting will be held in the vestry at 7.45 as usual led by Mr. Norton.

Arrangements have been made to hold union services with the Baptist church during the summer. They will be held in the Baptist church on Sundays, July 14, 21, 28, and August 4. They will be held in the Congregational church on Sundays, August 11, 18, 25, and September 1.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Childrens' day was observed Sunday at the Universalist church. Daisies, peonies and roses were banked about the pulpit in profusion in honor of the event.

The following children were christened:—

Carlton Herbert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Stoddard.

Bertha Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E O. Godfrey.

Leslie Vinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Loud.

John King, son of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Ruggles.

Bertha Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Cady Loud.

Kenneth Rex, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Melville.

After the christening, there was the reception of new members into the church.

There were choruses by a choir of young people, solos by Misses Edith Hyland, Annie Wright and Ellen Wright, duet by Misses Katherine Reed and Bessie Grant, Recitations by Russell Olser, Elsie Parmenter, Elizabeth Wheeler, and Elizabeth Reed.

The pastor Rev. Fannie E. Austin, gave a short talk to the children. It was a very pretty service and the young people taking part all did their best.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH

Children's Sunday was appropriately obsrved at the Wollaston Unitarian church and the program was especially happy in its plan and fulfilment The pulpit and choir loft were beautifully decorated with potted palms and great quantities of roses and mountain laurel served to soften and lighten the effect. While the congregation was assembling in the auditorium the Sunday school pupils with their teachers were gathering in the vestry, and during the organ prelude they marched in taking seats reserved for them in the body of the church.

The service was entirely for the children and there was no part of it which could not be fully enjoyed and appreciated by them, the songs and responsive readings being from the Sunday school book indeed it was a service for the children and by the children.

Four infants were brought forward for baptism and to each one a large and perfect rosebud was given as has been the custom in past years.

The children baptized were:

George Frederick Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace C. Bennett.

Dorothy Kimball Hogan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hogan.

Barbara Benson Oldham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Oldham.

Charles Stanley Stiles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hooper Stiles.

Rev. Mr. Horst in a peculiarly close and touching appeal to the young parents, dwelt upon the blessing of childhood's influence upon the life of the world; and one felt in hearing the simple words of dedication that the young child had indeed been welcomed into the household of a strong and protective faith.

Following the christening service was the presentation of a Bible to George Everett Simmons, it being the tenth anniversary of his own christening in the church, this custom having been observed for the first time last year. Four young girls then presented flower-trimmed baskets to receive the offering which this Sunday school makes annually to the Fresh Air Fund.

Gold pins, the last of a series of four kinds, were presented by the superintendent, in recognition of faithful attendance upon every session of the Sunday school during the past year. About fifteen young people were fortunate enough to receive them.

The Junior Lend-a-Hand club, the youngest of the church societies, presented the Sunday school with a large and beautifully framed print of "Christ Blessing Little Children" and the unveiling of this by the young president of the club was a pretty feature in the order of service.

Then followed a few practical and helpful words to the children by the wise minister who realized that the service, already long, had not become wearisome even to the youngest listener, and with rare tact and unselfishness he set aside his sermon and brought the pleasant service to an end by allowing the children themselves to have a part in it and to join in one of the hymns familiar to them. Perhaps never has children's Sunday in this church been one of so much enthusiasm, and certainly it is long since so large a congregation has gathered to give inspiration and encouragement to the teachers and pupils. The faces of so many happy children, the chancel a bower of bloom and fragrance, and the beautiful June Sunday, will form a pleasant memory picture for those present.

Not only the people in our parish but in Wollaston are invited to help the Boston Flower mission this season. The vestry will be open every Monday evening between seven and eight o'clock to receive contributions of flowers for the poor and sick and aged t whom they come as a great blessing.

The Sunday school held its final session yesterday.

The last church service of the season will be held next Sunday, June 30 at 10.45 A. M.

Many out of town friends were at the Children's Sunday service yesterday including Mr. and Mrs. George W Bennett of South Weymouth, Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Barnes of Franklin, Mass., and Mrs. Atwood of Plymouth.

The beautiful largé picture "Christ blessing litle children," the gift of the Junior Lend a Hand Club to the Sunday school greatly enhances the attractiveness of the church vestry.

Rev. Carl G. Horst and family are planning to spend their vacation in New Hampshire.

After next Sunday the church will be closed till the Sunday after Labor day.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

District one connected with the field day of St. John's parish will hold a whist party this evening in St. John's hall, in aid of the coming occasion. A large number of tables have been set for play and the committee has made arrangements to accommodate as many as desire to take part. Refreshments will be served and a short entertainment will be provided.

A whist party and dance will take placé Thursday evening on the lawn adjoining the home of John Bruton, Quincy Point, in aid of district one A board will be erected for dancing and a good time is assured to all who attend.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

At the United Presbyterian church, Rev. Albert M. Thompson, pastor, it was unanimously voted to approve the action of Mayor Eugene R. Stone in refusing permission for the aviation exhibition to be conducted Sundays.

The regular prayer meeting service will be held in the church Friday evening.

The teachers and pupils of the Sunday school will meet at the church, Friday evening.

THREE TO ONE BUT D'JERF WON

Constable Made Plucky Fight Against Opponents

STONES AND GLASS FLEW

Considerably battered by flying glass Constable Oscar D'Jerf, managed to ward off one man and place two others under arrest late Saturday evening, in the vicinity of Finn hall, Nelson street, West Quincy. Constable D'jerf was on duty in the dance hall at the time of the quarrel which arose over his refusal to allow the two men referred to, to enter the hall.

The two men who tried to enter the hall were Oscar Koivas, of 27 Park avenue and Edward Smith, alias Maki of Smith street. Angered because the constable refused them admittance the two men went out on the street and began to throw stones in through the windows of the dance hall. Many of the dancers were hit by the flying glass and some of the ladies became frantic.

D'Jerf went outside to quell the disturbance. Grasping hold of one man he proceeded to place him under arrest. Hardly was he in the act of doing so, when another man pounced upon him. The constable however showed his pluck and succeeded in bringing the two men to the box.

While waiting for the arrival of the police auto, Toplas Keisila tried to get the two men away from D'Jerf, who still clung to his prisoners. The two men were taken to the police station and locked up on the charge of assault and battery.

Keisila was arrested in the afternoon on a warrant charging him with intreference with an officer. All three were admitted to bail later.

HEROIC BRAKEMAN

Endangers His Own Life to Save Passenger Train

Peabody, Mass., June 24.—Scores of people witnessed an act of rare heroism, when Leonard Cross, a spare brakeman of the Boston and Maine, at the risk of his life, leaped aboard a runaway freight car loaded with granite that was thundering along at thirty miles an hour.

Cross managed to bring the car to a standstill a quarter of a mile beyond, with the inward-bound train less than a mile away, its passengers entirely unconscious of impending danger. This train he then flagged; and the engine dispatched after the fugitive freight, arrived a minute later and hauled it back to South Peabody.

WILSON BACKS BRYAN'S VIEWS

The Two Will Fight Murphy and Conservatives

Baltimore, June 24.—The reply of Governor Wilson to the telegram of W. J. Bryan on the Parker situation was made public here. In it the New Jersey candidate takes positive stand alongside Bryan in the latter's announced determination to fight the conservative or reactionary element of the Democratic party to a finish, starting with the attempt to make Alton B. Parker temporary chairman of the convention.

The publication of the text of Governor Wilson's reply threw into complete disorder the ranks of Clark, Harmon and Murphy forces, and there is a belief among the great majority of the rang and file of the delegates that are here now that Parker should withdraw before a fight is precipitated that may render the Democratic party as wide open as the Roosevelt-Taft fight has split the Republicans.

All day long, before it was known positively that Wilson would join in the fight on Parker, conferences were held by the representatives of the various candidates and an attempt was made to formulate some plan for meeting the emergency. But that was all predicted on the belief that Bryan would have to wage his own war, and that the Wilson attitude would be a temporarizing one, though it was not expected that he would attempt to sidestep the issue as did Champ Clark, Governor Foss and others of the candidates to whom Bryan sent similar telegrams.

More and more it has become plain that Murphy, whose strength is sought by all parties, reactionary and conservative, holds the key to the presidential situation. If his candidate for temporary chairman is beaten, however, Murphy may not cut so much figure, and on this very fact the Bryan men are basing their belief that some way will be found to induce Parker to withdraw. If Murphy could be persuaded to substitute Senator O'Gorman for Parker, his prestige would be greatly increased and the difficulty at Bryan smoothed out, the Bryan men admit.

If Murphy sticks by Parker, and Bryan wins, as it is believed he will on the floor of the convention, Murphy's standing as a national leader will suffer a severe jolt. To accentuate that victory, the progressive element would probably share a platform that would not please the interests behind Mruphy. His chief business is to care for those interests and at the same time endeavor to assure success in the elections in New York; so from this quarter also come, it is understood, warnings to proceed very carefully in the fight with Bryan.

As for the New England delegations, they are not in harmony so far as the preliminaries are concerned. Although instructed for Clark, the Massachusetts delegation is looked upon much as is the New York delegation.

That is to say, it is expected to arrive here primed to vote for Clark until he shows himself too weak to get the nomination if that occurs, and then hold itself ready for trading. The Maine delegation is absolutely progressive, according to the best advices obtainable here, and is strongly inclined to Wilson, most of its delegates being favorable to the New Jersey governor.

New Hampshire's position is similar to that of Massachusetts. It is instructed for Clark, but probably will not stick any too long. But New Hampshire is counted more progressive than Massachusetts. In fact Mr. Read said that in his opinion none but a progressive Democrat can carry the country next November.

"From east to west the country is progressive in politics," said Mr. Read, "and it would be foolish for the Democrats to put up anybody who does not stand for progressive principles."

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston and others who have predicted that Governor Foss will loom up strong for the Democratic presidential nomination in the coming convention here will have to get busy pretty quick if they wish their predictions to appear more than idle talk.

To date no one can be found who has heard a single whisper of the Bay State governor's name for the nomination among the big crowd of political leaders assembled here.

William J. Bryan was almost swept off his feet by the enthusiastic crowds that met him when he arrived from Chicago. The division over the selection of a temporary chairman to sound the keynote has brought the Nebraskan into the centre of the stage on the very eve of the Democratic gathering and all the events of the day seemed to await his coming.

Mr. Bryan reiterated the views he expressed in his telegram to the five candidates and declared that he would fight any proposition to make anybody but a progressive chairman of the convention.

SENIORS' DAY.

A large and attentive audience gathered at Thayer Academy on Saturday afternoon to observe Seniors' day and to enjoy the interesting program which had been prepared. Dr. William Gallagher head master at Thayer mentioned the fact that twice before Braintree audiences had listened with pleasure to speakers coming from Boiston University and then introduced the speaker of the afternoon, the newly appointed President of Boston University Lemuel Herbert Murlin. His address was on education. He touched on all its advantages including the end and aim of true education showing how continued effort to conquer all obstacles brought out the finest qualities in man and woman. He explained that the intellectual machinery was disciplined and strengthened by hard study and that brain power, a sound body and good morals were the certain results of the proper study and training given by our many schools, academies and colleges. His remarks were given the closest attention and the bits of life experience quoted added much to the interest of the address.

The diplomas were distributed to the graduates by N. S. District Attorney Asa Palmer French of Randolph and Boston who stated that they were the documentary evidence of work performed at Thayer academy and hoped that their possession would remind the graduates of their loyalty to the school and their gratitude to its teachers and founder.

A new feature this year was the award of the Sewall scholarship. The graduating class of 1883 have always made it a practice to meet each year and at such a reunion one of the members started the scholarship, naming it in honor of Prof. J. B. Sewall, who was head-master at Thayer Academy for nineteen years. A board of three trustees was appointed who raised $1500 which now allows $60 a year to be awarded to the deserving pupil. Miss Florence Helen Perry was the fortunate one who according to her class mates and her teachers' testimony abundantly deserved the award.

Miss Perry has decided to continue her studies at Boston University and Pres. Murlin gave her his promise that he would personally make the first college year a certainty for her. He also said he wished the entire class would enter Boston University. The audience rise to sing the words by Samuel Longfellow, being printed on the program. Miss Jeanette Porter presided at the piano.

Prayer was offered and a benediction pronounced by Rev. Harry Grimes, pastor of the First Congregational church, Braintree. The audience dispersed to inspect the building while the members of the graduating class followed the usual practice of having their pictures taken. One of the most pleasant features of the afternoon was the music which was furnished by Cuff's orchestra. The following program was rendered with much expression.

In the Shadows—Finck.
Cello solo—Evening Star, Wagner.
Sun Rays—Moore.

The cello colo given by Hermann Hecker of Dorchester was most beautifully rendered and displayed this artist's technique and tone expression giving much pleasure to those who admire the rich tones of his instrument. Following is a list of the graduates names and the colleges they expect to attend:—

Gerald Fessenden Beal—Harvard.
Evelyn Harriett Bridgham—
Horace Cleaveland Burnham—M. I. T.
George Lester Fuller—Harvard.
Douglas Roy Gordon—Dartmouth.
Homer Atherton Hunt—Harvard.
Florence Helen Perry—Boston University.
Charles Sumner Ried—M. I. T.
Walter Mial Reed—M. I. T.
Helen Saxe Seavey—Mt. Holyoke.
Richard Loring Small—Harvard.
Dorothy Taylor—
George Frank Whitman—Harvard.
Catherine Jessie Williams—Boston University.
Malcolm Oakman Young—Amherst.

Besides the graduates and the speaker of the afternoon who were seated on the platform there were also Prof. Jotham B. Sewall, Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church, U. S. District Attorney Asa Palmer French, Rev. Harry Grimes of the First Congregational church and Dr. Gallagher.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE BANDANNA NEW PARTY FLAG

Adopted By Progressives Who Nominated Roosevelt

"SUBSITUTE ANY OTHER MAN"

Chicago, June 24.—An hour after Taft had been renominated by the Republican national convention, Theodore Roosevelt was the nominee of the National Progressives, assembled in Orchestra hall.

A little later he had accepted the nomination and had asked those who assisted in launching the new movement to convene again in six weeks and ratify their indorsement of his candidacy.

"The fight is on," was Roosevelt's answer to the bosses.

Assembled in Orchestra hall were the delegates who had been instructed to come to the Republican national convention and nominate Roosevelt. With them were the contestants whose cases had been thrown out by the national committee.

They were determined, enthusiastic, and they were flanked by a great gathering of Roosevelt supporters—a shouting, cheering, singing, screaming, defiant crowd that could say but one thing: "We want Teddy."

It was a simple ceremony, but most significant when viewed in its relation to the country's affairs. A resolution was passed nominating Roosevelt. He spoke in reply, accepting it.

Just before Governor Johnson called the meeting to order the crowd sang patriotic songs and imitated a steam roller. When news of the nomination of President Taft reached the hall all the Roosevelt leaders seemed pleased. The information that Vice President Sherman had been renominated appeared to add to their delight.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT
Nominated a Second Time For the Presidency

Massachusetts degates, with their cry, "Massachusetts, Roosevelt, 18, first, last and all the time," made an ostentatious entrance.

When the hall had been packed the entire audience joined in singing "America," after which the Roosevelt delegates greeted Governor Johnson as he opened the formal part of the meeting.

The speech nominating Colonel Roosevelt was made by Comptroller William A. Prendergast of New York, who was to have presented the colonel's name to the regular convention, seconded by Dean William D. Lewis of the University of Pennsylvania law school.

Representatives of twenty-two states composed the notification committee which informed Colonel Roosevelt of his nomination and, in a sense, stood as sponsors for the movement.

When Colonel Roosevelt appeared on the stage at the mass meeting the crowd went wild with enthusiasm. Men flung their hats in the air and women tossed their gloves and fans about. Cheering was deafening, and it was some time before order could be restored.

The bandanna handkerchief was adopted as the "Roosevelt battle flag." Most of the delegates wore bandannas tied around their arms and others were distributed by the hundreds to the crowd. The bandanna, it was explained, stands for the plain people who ordinarily use them.

Colonel Roosevelt gave his sanction to the "battle flag," by appearing with one in his hand, which he waved to the crowd on the street. His daughter, Mrs. Longworth, wore a bandanna on her hat.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, a Democrat, arose.

"Surely there can be no more solemn occasion than this one," he said. "We are beginning, on Sunday, a great new movement. I believe that we should begin it by asking the guidance of Him for whom we are here."

Dr. W. H. Mixon of Selma, Ala., a negro clergyman and a Roosevelt delegate who was excluded from the Republican convention, began to recite the Psalm which begins: "The Lord is my Shepherd." The delegates arose and repeated it with him.

344 DELEGATES REFUSE VOTE

Chicago, June 24.—At 9:25 Saturday night William H. Taft was nominated for the second time for President of the United States. The nomination came after a roll call in which the bitterness of the convention was reflected. Clash after clash resulted. Roll calls were challenged One hour later James S. Sherman was renominated for vice president, after the nomination had been turned down by Hadley of Missouri, Deneen of Illinois and Borah of Idaho, when proffered it by the Taft leaders.

The convention was in an uproar. The Massachusetts delegates defied "a steam roiled" decision of Chairman Root, who held that when the vote was challenged it was not sufficient to answer "present." The ruling was appealed. The ruling on the appeal was not pushed and did not go before the house.

PRESIDENT TAFT
Second Time Nominated by His Party

The Massachusetts men were in the exact centre of the building, standing on their chairs, shaking their fists, hissing and hurling execrations at the chairman, who had retired to his desk. When thirty policemen were called they quieted down and voted.

Many of the Roosevelt men, following the instructions of the colonel, sat silently in their seats while the votes were being cast, taking no part at all in the proceedings.

Walter G. Harding of Ohio, presented the name of the president to the convention. John Wanamaker and Nicholas Murray Butler were among those who made seconding speeches. M. B. Olbrich of Wisconsin made the chief nominating speech for La Follette.

The vote for president was: Taft, 561; Roosevelt, 107; Cummins, 17; La Follette, 41; Hughes, 2; not voting, 344; absent, 6. Total, 1078.

The vote for vice president was: Sherman, 597; Borah, 21; Merriam, 20; Hadley, 14; Beveridge, 2; Gillette, 1; absent, 71; present but not voting, 352. Total, 1078.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

"You run play a few minutes, Billy," he said. "I want to talk to the nice lady."

The nice lady was looking rather stupefied as Sinton approached her.

"Where in the name of sense did you get that awful child?" she demanded. Her husband told her Billy's story.

"He's half starved. I want to wash him and put clean clothes on him and give him some supper," he said.

"Have you got anything to put on him?"

"Yes."

"Where did you get it?"

"Bought it. It ain't much. All I got didn't cost a dollar."

"A dollar is a good deal when you work for it the way we do."

"Well, I don't know a better place to put it. Have you got any hot water? I'll use this tub at the cistern. Please give me some soap and towels."

Instead Margaret pushed by him with a shriek. Billy had played by producing a cord from his pocket, and, having tied the tails of Margaret's white kittens together, he had climbed on a box and hung them across the clothesline. Wild with fright, the kittens were clawing each other to death, and the air was white with fur. The string had twisted, and the frightened creatures could not recognize friends. Margaret stepped back with bleeding hands. Sinton cut the cord with his knife, and the poor little cats raced under the house bleeding and disfigured. Margaret, white with wrath, faced Sinton.

"If you don't hitch up and take that animal back to town," she said, "I will."

Billy threw himself on the grass and began to scream.

"You said I could have fried chicken for supper," he wailed. "You said she was a nice lady."

Sinton lifted him, and something in his manner of handling the child infuriated Margaret. His touch was so gentle! She reached for Billy and gripped his shirt collar in the back. Sinton's hand closed over hers.

"Gently, girl!" he said. "This little body is covered with sores."

"Sores!" she ejaculated. "Sores? What kind of sores?"

"Oh, they might be from bruises made by fists or boot toes, or they might be bad blood from wrong eating, or they might be pure filth. Will you hand me some towels?"

"No, I won't," said Margaret.

"Well, give me some rags, then."

Margaret compromised on pieces of old tablecloth.

Sinton led Billy to the cistern, pumped cold water into the tub, poured in a kettle of hot and, beginning at the head, scoured him. The boy shut his little teeth and said never a word, though he twisted occasionally when the soap struck a raw spot. Margaret watched the process from the window in amazed and ever increasing anger. Where did Wesley learn it? How could his big hands be so gentle? Sinton came to the door.

"Have you got any peroxide?"

"A little," she answered stiffly.

"Well, I need about a pint, but I'll begin on what you have."

Margaret handed him the bottle. Wesley took a sup, weakened the drug and said to Billy: "Man, these sores on you must be healed. Then you must eat the kind of food that's fit for little men. I am going to put some medicine on you, and it is going to sting like fire. If it just runs off I won't use any more. If it boils there is poison in these places, and they must be tied up, dosed every day, and you must be washed and kept mighty clean. Now, hold still, because I am going to put it on."

"I think the one on my leg is the worst," said the undaunted Billy, holding out a raw place. Sinton poured on the drug. Billy's body twisted and writhed, but he did not run.

"Gee, look at it boil!" he cried. "I guess they's poison. You'll have to do it to all of them."

Sinton's teeth were set as he watched the boy's face. He poured the drug, strong enough to do effective work, on a dozen places over that little body and bandaged all he could. Billy's lips quivered at times, and his chin jumped, but he did not shed a tear or utter a sound other than to take a deep interest in the boiling.

"Now am I clean?" asked Billy.

"Yes, you are clean outside," said Sinton. "There is some dirty blood in your body, and some bad words in your mouth, that we have to get out, but that takes time. If we put right things to eat into your stomach that will do away with the sores, and if you know that I don't like bad words you won't say them any oftener than you can help, will you, Billy?"

Billy leaned against Sinton in apparent indifference.

"I want to see me!" he demanded.

"How long until supper, Margaret?" asked Sinton.

"You are going to keep him for supper?" she asked.

"Sure!" said Sinton. "That's what I brought him for. It's likely he never had a good square meal of decent food in his life. He's starved to the bone."

Margaret arose deliberately, removed the white cloth from the supper table and substituted an old red one she used to wrap the bread. She put away the pretty dishes they commonly used and set the table with old plates for pies and kitchen utensils. But she fried the chicken and was generous with milk and honey, snowy bread, gravy, potatoes and fruit.

Sinton repainted the scratched wheel. He mended the fence, with Billy holding the nails and handing the pickets. Then he filled the old hole, digged a new one and set the hitching post.

Billy hopped on one foot at his task of holding the post steady as the earth was packed round it. There was not the shadow of trouble on his little freckled face. Sinton threw in stones and pounded the earth solid around the post. The sound of a gulping sob attracted him to Billy. The tears were rolling down his cheeks. "If I'd a knowed you'd have to get down in a hole and work so hard I wouldn't 'a' hit the horses," he said.

"Never you mind, Billy," said Sinton. "You will know next time, so you can think over it and make up your mind whether you really want to before you strike."

Sinton went to the barn to put away the tools. He thought Billy at his heels, but the boy lagged on the way. A big, snowy turkey gobbler resented the small intruder in his especial preserves, and with spread tail and dragging wings came at him threateningly. If that turkey gobbler had known the sort of things with which Billy was accustomed to holding his own he never would have issued that challenge. Billy accepted instantly. He danced around with stiff arms at his sides and imitated the gobbler. Then came his opportunity and he jumped on the big turkey's back. Wesley heard Margaret's scream in time to see the flying leap and admire its dexterity. The turkey tucked its tail and scampered. Billy slid from its back and as he fell he clutched wildly, caught the folded tail and instinctively hung on for life. The turkey gave one scream and relaxed its muscles. Then it fled in disfigured defeat to the haystack. Billy scrambled to his feet holding the tail, and his eyes were bulging.

"Why, the blasted old thing came off!" he said to Sinton, holding out the tail in amazed wonder.

Sinton, caught suddenly, forgot everything and roared. Seeing which, Billy thought a turkey tail of no account and flung that one high above him, shouting with childish laughter as the feathers scattered and fell.

Margaret, watching, burst into tears. Wesley had gone mad. For the first time in her married life she wanted to tell her mother. When Wesley had waited until he was so hungry he could wait no longer he invaded the kitchen to find a cooked supper baking on the back of the stove, while Margaret with red eyes nursed a pair of demoralized white kittens.

"Is supper ready?" he asked.

"It has been for an hour," answered Margaret.

"Why didn't you call us?"

That "us" had too much comradeship in it. It irritated Margaret.

"I supposed it would take you even longer than that to fix things decent again. As for my turkey and my poor little kittens they don't matter."

"I am mighty sorry about them, Margaret, you know that. Billy is very bright, and he will soon learn"—

"Soon learn!" cried Margaret. "Wesley Sinton, you don't mean to say that you think of keeping that creature here for some time?"

"No; I think of keeping a decent, well behaved little boy."

Margaret set the supper on the table. Seeing the old red cloth, Wesley stared in amazement. Then he understood. Billy capered around in delight.

"Ain't that pretty?" he exulted. "I wish Jimmy and Belle could see. We, why, we ist eat out of our hands or off a old drygoods box, and when we fix up a lot we have newspaper. We ain't ever had a nice red cloth like this."

Wesley looked straight at Margaret, so intently that she turned away, her face flushing. He stacked the dictionary and the geography of the world on a chair and lifted Billy beside him. He heaped a plate generously, cut the food, put a fork into Billy's little fist and made him eat slowly and properly. Billy did his best. Occasionally greed overcame him, and he used his left hand to pop a bite into his mouth with his fingers. These lapses Wesley patiently overlooked and went on with his general instructions. Luckily Billy did not spill anything on his clothing or the cloth. After supper Wesley took him to the barn until he finished the night work. Then he went and sat by Margaret on the front porch. Billy appropriated the hammock and swung by pulling a rope tied around a tree. The very energy with which he went at the work of swinging himself appealed to Wesley.

"Mercy, but he's an active little body!" he said. "There isn't a lazy bone in him. See how he works to pay for his fun."

"There goes his foot through it!" cried Margaret. "Wesley, he shall not ruin my hammock."

"Of course he shan't!" said Wesley. "Wait, Billy; let me show you."

Thereupon he explained to Billy that ladies wearing beautiful white dresses sat in hammocks, so little boys must not put their dusty feet in them. They must just sit in them and let their feet hang down. Billy immediately sat and allowed his feet to swing.

"Margaret," said Sinton after a long silence on the porch, "isn't it true that if Billy had been a half starved sore cat, dog or animal of any sort that you would have pitied and helped care for it and been glad to see me get any pleasure out of it I could?"

"Yes," said Margaret coldly.

"But because I brought a child with an immortal soul there is no welcome."

"That isn't a child. It's an animal."

"You just said you would have welcomed an animal."

"Not a wild one. I meant a tame beast."

"Billy is not a beast," said Wesley hotly. "He is a very dear little boy. Margaret, you've always done the church going and Bible reading for this family. How do you reconcile that 'suffer little children to come unto me' with the way you are treating Billy?"

Margaret arose. "I haven't treated that child. I have only let him alone. I can barely hold myself. He needs the hide tanned about off him."

"If you'd cared to look at his body you'd know that you couldn't find a place to strike without cutting into a raw spot," said Sinton. "Besides, Billy has not done a thing for which a child should be punished. He is only full of life, no training and with a boy's love of mischief. He is just a bully little chap, and I love him."

"Oh, good heavens!" cried Margaret, going into the house as she spoke.

*Chairman Root had ruled that since the Masaschusetts delegates-at-large had refused to name their choice for president he would call upon the alternates-at-large to vote. This decision meant that eight alternates-at-large, who were all elected pledged to Taft, would be permitted to vote. It was a fine taste of the steam roller methods.

however was held in abeyance until Wednesday evening.

A letter received from Chief Litchfield of the Fire Department gave the number of still and bell alarms on July 3 and 4 of the years 1907 to 1911 inclusive. They were as follows:—1907, 12 alarms loss $280, 1908 5 alarms loss $5, 1909 10 alarms $1,100 loss, 1910 5 alarms no loss, 1911 11 alarms $275 loss.

At this point Col. Kincaide of the automobile parade came in and made his report. He said that circulars had been sent to every automobile owner with list of prize and an invitation to participate. He also has personally seen many automobile owners and he had every reason to believe that this feature would be an unqualified success. Arrangements had been made for the bands to ride in auto trucks during this parade.

The question of having children ride in the automobiles was brought up and Col. Kincaide said that this was uncertain. If anyone had a friend who owned an automobile truck would get in touch with them and urge them to enter their truck it might be possible to carry out this feature.

James E. Neary of the athletic sports committee reported that it had been planned to have an amateur base ball game in Wards 2, 3 and 4 in the morning and he hoped to have a professional game at Merrymount park in the afternoon. It was very much desired that a game between teams of the City League should be played but this game would cost $100. The morning games would cost $10 each. The professional game seemed to meet with favor with the committee, but it was left open until Wednesday evening to see how well funds came in. It was also suggested that there should be a marathon race between purely local runners. This would cost about $35. While generally favored this was also left open until Wednesday evening.

The matter of program was then taken up. The plan seems to be to issue a program in colors giving the program of the day to be posted about the city. This is to cost considerable and seems like a useless expense. At best it will be late next week before the program can be gotten out and the money expended for this purpose could well be expended in another direction, as the local papers can be depended upon to publish, gratis, the full and complete program when fully arrange.

The matter of an entertainment for children also came up but the chairman of this committee was absent and it is not known just what is to be done for the children. One suggested that each child be provided with an ice cream met with favor.

It was also announced that the Town River Yacht club were to hold a series of water sports in the early afternoon.

George F. Elcock reported that he had contracted for the fireworks display which would take place at Merrymount park at 8.30. There would be 128 displays. A complete list of the displays will be published in the Ledger in a few days.

The meeting then adjourned until Wednesday evening.

EXTRA INNINGS THE HOODOO

For South Quincy in All Games Played This Season

South Quincy, leaders in the Quincy City League was defeated by the Winthrop Athletics in an eleven inning game at Winthrop Saturday, by a score 3 to 2. It was the third time this season that the local boys have played in extra innings games and each time they have lost out by a single run.

South Quincy took the lead in the first half of the fourth only to have the home team even up matters in its session. The Winthrop players tallied on timely hitting with none out. The winning run was scored by Anderson, whose playing was one of the features of the game.

Hagman was in the points for the winners and only seven hits were registered off his delivery three of which were made by "West" Ganzel, who had returned home from Nova Scotia, preparatory to starting for other parts. The South Quincy tossers played an exceptionally fine fielding game.

Tewksbury and Norton and Atchison excelled for the winners, while Ganzel and McCarthy played best for the losers.

under arrest after a hard struggle.

At the box Kuresla tried to get the two men away. He was arrested by officer Broberg. Dr. John H. Ash, City physician, testified as to treating thec ut received by Djerf, and added that it was a very deep wound, but said that the officer will recover all right. The cut was about an inch and a quarter in length a little above the temple.

According to Budd, who was standing on the running board of the car, Pollara was throwing candy, peanuts and other eatables at different passengers. He said that he was with some girls at the time, who were offended at Pollara's actions. He said he made a couple of passes to strike Pollara but did not hit him.

Pollara denied having caused any disturbance and said that Budd struck him a number of times for no reason at all. Many witnesses were heard, among whom were Inspector Frederick Goodhue and officer J. Connely, who made the arrests.

FIFTH FATAL FOR QUINCY A.A.

Makaria Welcomed Mr. Hebert on the Slab

OTHER SATURDAY GAMES

Makaria hit Hebert quite freely Saturday afternoon on the Water street grounds and thus enabled to defeat the Quincy A. A. team by a score of 7 to 3. The game was attended by a large number of spectators and the only bad inning was the fifth, when costly errors aided by timely hit allowed Makaria to tally four runs. The features of the game were the all round work of Brittingham, the playing of Artis, Smith and Jenkins for the winners and of Boyle and Keohane for the losers.

The game in detail:

Makaria took the field and Keohane and O'Rourke grounded to Rus Bates and were out at first. Sid Duggan hit to Nichols and for third down. Mil Chapman the top lister for the Missionaries received a pass and was caught stealing second. Artis hit to left and took second on McCarthy's error of Ganzel's drive. Jenkins hit to short and McCarthy tagged second and snapped to first for a double.

Bill Duggan opened the second with a fly to Artis and McCarthy reached first when Mil Chapman dropped his high fly. He was caught stealing and Leary hit to short who relayed to Jenkins. Boyle hit to Brittingham who tossed to first for the third out. Rus Bates fanned on his first appearance and Fred Smith hit to right. Nichols hit to Cummings who threw Smith out at second. Leary let the ball go out of the diamond when Hebert snapped to catch Nichols and he went to second. Brutus Chapman hit Hebert who threw him out for the third.

Cummings opened the third by flying into Fred Smith's hands and Brittingham took Hebert tickler for two out. Keohane died when Brit blocked a grounder. Brittingham made good the first time up by hitting between centre and right for three bases. Mil made first on McCarthy's error and Brit scored. Artis bunted to Hebert who threw to McCarthy, stopping Chapman. Ganzel hit a high one to O'Rourke who dropped the ball in back of second, but he recovered it in time to stop Artis at second for two out. Ganzel took second, Jenkins hit over second and they worked a double steal. Rus Bates filled the bases by being hit by Hebert making three men on bases.

The fourth started by O'Rourke fanning. Sid Duggan reached first on an error by Nichols, stole second when Bill Duggan struck out and then stole third. He was left on base when McCarthy grounded to Rus Bates who fielded the ball for the third. Nichols opened the Missionaries' half by getting a two bagger and took third on Brutus Chapman's sacrifice. He scored on an infield hit by Brit who died at second on a corking stop of M. Chapman's speedy drive to Boyle. Artis made three out by flying to Ted Keohane.

Leary received a pass in the fifth and Boyle hit to Brit who stopped Leary at second. Boyle stole second and made third on an error by Nichols. Cummings fanned and Hebert hit to Nichols who threw to Jenkins for three down. Ganzel reached first on McCarthy's error and made second on a passed ball by Sid. He reached third on Jenkin's hit, Rus fanned and Smith scored Jenkins. He reached third on a bad throw and scored on Bill Duggan's bad throw who handled a smash by Nichols. Nichols made second while Smith scored, stole third and crossed for the fourth run on Brutus' sacrifice. Brit bit a liner which Cummings snapped for three out.

Keohane, intent on starting something, drove the ball to left but Mil took it and then pulled the same stunt on O'Rourke. With two down Sid hit to short and took second on Bill Duggan's hit. McCarthy was passed, forcing Sid and Bill and Sid scored on a passed ball by Brutus. Bill Duggan took third, tried hard to make home, but Leary fanned. Mil died at first on an assist by McCarthy and Artis was passed. He stole second and third and Ganzel hit for a safe and scored Artis. Jenkins fanned, Rup stole and Rus flied to Mattie for three out.

Boyle took his place in the second with his face wreathed in smiles. He fanned. Cummings flied to Mil and Hebert flied to Nichols. Umpire King introduced Boyle as the new catcher and Sid went to third. Smith was thrown out at first by Hebert and Nichols fanned. Brutus lost out on a high one to Bill Duggan.

The Cannibals trotted in for the eighth, planning to do something. Ted called for heads up and hit to left. He took second on O'Rourke's sacrifice, made third on a passed ball by Brutus and scored on Sid's sacrifice. W. Duggan smashed a hard one to Rus who stoped it in back of third and threw first for the last out. Boyle started injecting a little comedy talk into the play and as Brit took his place at the bat he kidded him. Brit came back and Bernie told him to fan. Brit got anxious and bet the drinks. Bernie signalled for a high one and the ump called it a strikeout. Brit looked feazed, but shook with Bernie. Mil made two out by hitting high to Boyle and Artis retired the side by fanning.

McCarthy started the last by hitting to left, stealing second when Leary fanned and reached third on Brit's wild heave. Boyle hit to short and scored Mac. Bernie stole second and drove to third. Cummings fanned and the game ended by Hebert flying to Jenkins.

WEARIED RUNNING BASES.

The Unity class of Bethany church had an easy time with the Wollaston Baptist nine and experienced little difficulty in rolling up a 24 to 9 victory. The feature of the game was a home run by Orr, of the winners, which went clean out onto Hancock street. The batteries for the winners were Finlayson and McDonald and for the losers Church and Welsh.

WON TWO EVENTS.

Harry Kinsbury, a Quincy High athlete, competing for the Quincy Y. M. C. A. at the tenth annual Massachusetts and Rhode Island Y. M. C. Athletic meeting held at Newton, Saturday, won the 880 yard handicap run and the 440 yard run.

Mr. George J. Edwards, of Old Colony street, Atlantic and her friend Mrs. Albert E. Parsons of Watertown left Boston on Saturday on Steamer Halifax on a visit to Nova Scotia and Cape Breton. Their many friends wish them a pleasant vacation. They do not expect to return until the middle of August.

CLOSE MATCH ALDEN vs SMITH

Former Landed Wollaston Golf Championship

VICTOR IN OPEN EVENT

M. Alden won the championship title of the B. A. A. today at the Wollaston Golf Club, defeating V. M. Smith in the final at 18 holes, by 2 and 1. Alden also won the handicap vs par competition for members of the Wollaston Golf Club, with a score of 4 up, on a handicap of 15.

NARROW ESCAPE.

People near the First church on Hancock street this morning were horrified to see a child fall from the seat of J. Moorehead's milk wagon behind the horse which was drawing it, and expected every minute to see the little one kicked or trampled by the animal.

The boy, Pressy Andrews about four years old was on the seat with his uncle. As the wagon came along the forewheel caught in the frog of the street car track. The jolt threw the boy forward and to the ground before a restraining hand could be reached out to save him, and he fell directly behind the horse, so that the hind hoofs almost touched him.

The intelligence of the horse alone saved the boy from serious injury.

The animal was used to the check strap on the forward wheel. As soon as he felt the resistance offered by cramp in the frog he concluded that the wheel was clamped by the usual method and it was up to him to stop which he did. The driver jumped from his seat, picked the boy out from his perilous position, but for the few seconds consumed by this operation the spectators held their breath fearful of the consequences if the horse should move. But horsey was as docile as a lamb. That animal deserves a Carnegie decoration.

CHURCH LAWN PARTY.

The annual lawn party of the parishioners of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, will be held on Saturday, July 27, and not as previously announced July 13, in order that there will be no confliction with the lawn party of St. Mary's church, West Quincy, which takes place on latter date.

WEAK AT BAT W. QUINCY LOST

They Settled Down After the Second Inning

With the lineup considerably changed West Quincy of the Quincy City Base Ball league crossed bats with the strong Newton Catholic club team at Newtonville and were defeated by the close score of 3 to 2. The game was conceded to be one of the best every played on the home grounds of the winning team and was witnessed by a large number of spectators. The home team made all its runs in the first two innings on opportune hitting and a couple of errors which proved costly, but after this stage of the game was unable to do any further scoring.

The West Quincy team played well in the field but failed to show up to advantage with the willow as only three hits were credited to the entire combination.

The score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
N. C. C.	2	1	0	0	0	0	0	0		—3

CITY COUNCIL GRANT $1,000 FOR FOURTH CELEBRATION

Clever Move to Kill it by Finance Committee Promptly Blocked in Open Session

Mayor Stone Lectured Council on Shifting Responsibility on Matters Where Money Was Not Available

The air was hot and sultry Monday night in the Council chamber, yet the large number of spectators remained until after the order calling for an appropriation of $1,000 for the proper celebration of the Fourth of July had been disposed of. As was anticipated there was considerable opposition to the passage of the order and the Finance committee to whom it was referred during a recess of ten minutes attempted to amend the order borrowing the money on a one year loan, which meant that the order could not possibly pass at this meeting. The councilman in favor of the order saw the move however and the report of the committee was rejected and the order passed in its original form, which was to transfer the amount from the unexpended tax receipts of 1911 collected in 1912. The vote being 14 yes and 6 no.

President Hobbs presided although Mayor Stone was around the hall all the evening.

There was also considerable scrapping on other orders for street improvements and while the report of the committee in these cases was first accepted the votes were reconsidered and the orders laid on the table. The amendment to the police ordinance was treated in the same manner for while the Finance committee reported adversely on the order their report was rejected and the order passed.

Councilmen Sandberg and Mahoney were absent.

A communication was received from the Board of Trade asking for a public hearing on the sidewalk orders pending. Referred to the Committee on streets, where it will probably die as the orders in question were passed later in the evening.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing F. L. Merritt, Oscar C. Djerf and Daniel Butters as constables and Andrew Stewart as Superintendents of Gypsy Moths, all of which were confirmed.

PETITIONS.

Petitions from the Q. E. L. & P. Co., for a relocation of poles and from the Telephone Co., for permission to enlarge its underground conduit were granted. A second petition from the Electric Light Co., for a new location for poles was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Citizens' Gas Co., petitioned for permission to lay gas mains. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A number of applications for minor licenses were received and referred to the Committee on Licenses.

An application of W. T. Donovan for an auctioneer's license was laid on the table until later when it was granted.

Councilman C. A. Ross presented a petition for the acceptance of Roberts street. To Street Commtitee.

Councilman Barker presented a petition for the acceptance of Chester street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Barker presented a petition for the continuence of the granolithic sidewalk on Elmwood avenue. To Street Committee.

REPORTS.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order for $3,400 for furnishings for the Montclair school. Rules suspended and order passed.

The same committee reported ought not to pass on the order for $2,500 to complete the rebuilding of West street. Report rejected. Order ordered to a second reading and the rules suspended. The order was then laid on the table until later in the evening when Councilman Boyd offered an amendment to the order adding the borrowing clause. This was read and placed in the calender.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order for $9,000 for paving Penn street. Report accepted, order read and rules suspended.

Councilman Richards spoke in favor of the order and Councilman Abele against.

Councilman Bailey asked the Commissioner if he had made any count of the use of this and some of the other main streets, The Commissioner replied that he had. In an eight hour day 127 teams had used Penn street, 170 Independence avenue, 1,000 Adams street and 700 Washington street. The character of the traffic was fully as heavy on Washington street as on Penn street. In reply to

NORTH DAKOTA FOR QUINCY

This Ship Was Built at the Fore River Co. Yard

WILL GET GREAT WELCOME

The battleship North Dakota will probably be the naval vessel assigned to Quincy for July Fourth as this craft was built at the Fore River Company plant and it seems appropriate that she should be sent here on Independence day as she has not visited this port since she took her first plunge in the waters of Fore River.

Eight ships have been assigned to New England ports and four, the Florida, Utah, Delaware and North Dakota are scheduled for Quincy, Newport and Belfast but the particular designation has not yet been made known by the navy department.

These ships form the First division of the North Atlantic fleet and Rear Admiral Aaron Ward will fly his flag from the Florida.

Variety the Great Charm in Entertainment of New Bedford Brethren

Everyone of the three hundred who participated in the first annual pilgrimage of Quincy Commandery, Knights Templars, Monday agreed on the verdict. It was that the day had been an ideal one and the outing a most successful and enjoyable one in every way. The program was carried out with almost clockwork regularity and there were none of those tiresome waits, that so often characterize outings, of this character.

The parade was a good one and fully long enough considering the hot day. Sutton Commandery arrived in a special train at 10 'clock and after greetings were exchanged the line was formed as announced in Monday's Ledger.

With Sutton Commandery was Em. Sir Charles R. Hunt, G. L. who was the inspecting officer of Quincy Commandery, while with Quincy Commandery marched Em. Sir Albert W. Fay, G. L. who was the inspecting officer of Sutton Commandery, thus were these two Commanderies linked to-

EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

In all decency the public should be spared publication of further details of Evelyn Thaw's life.

Bryan unlike his Chicago friend is minus the support of the six little governors in his effort to start a side show at Baltimore.

We have heard the word progressive handed around for some time now, with various accompaniments. The great mass of the people would like to know something definite as to the position of the disciples of this creed in regard to reducing the cost of living, harboring trusts, the present unrest in the country and perhaps a few things about Tennessee Coal and Iron.

Rowdyism will not be tolerated at Houghs Neck and the quicker a certain class get this little bit of wisdom through their brain pan the better they will be for it.

Peddock's island is a gem of a place As compared with Sunday aviation, the latter is like a Sunday school convention alongside a bedlam.

Automobiles kick up a considerable bit of dust on the road to Houghs Neck.

The Spanish War Veterans would like to know why Mayor Stone has on two occasions side-stepped their invitations to attend their gatherings.

Are the street car strike and Italian war ended? Neither cut much figure in the daily papers the past week.

Two friends were discussing the various qualities and benefits of different kinds of food when one of them remarked that he heard fish was the greatest brain food produced. This gave his friend the chance to remark "then you certainly need a whale."

The Bandanna as a banner is by no means progressive. It looks very much like going way behind the war time for inspiration.

The prophets who predicted Taft's defeat in the convention are again on the job and the president should feel perfectly happy as they all united in predicting his defeat at the polls.

It didn't require a Solomon to realize that if a regular delegate did not perform his functions the alternate was in line on the job. In this as in many other details which good management would have foreseen the Progressives were not equal to the task before them. The question naturally arises if they fell down on little things that the most casual parliamentarian or leader would have known what will they do when it comes to running a big nation?

What message will the Massachusetts delegates bring home from the Chicago convention. They owe some explanation for a good many things to the voters of the state.

UNSAVORY RECITAL.

There is no good reason why Evelyn Thaw should again be forced to go over the details of that horrible story which formed such a sensation in the trial of her husband for the murder of Stanford White. That was threshed out years ago. Bringing it up again like an unclean spirit at this time can work no good in the present fight of Thaw for release from Mattaewan. Thaw was willing to shield himself behind the skirts of his wife and the "brainstorm" argument of his counsel to preserve his life. Now he wants his freedom. His commitment under the action of the court was the ransom for his life.

The wife's conduct before of after Thaw's commitment can have no bearing upon his present plea for freedom. If he is sane now he was sane at the murder and trial. And if he is sane then instead of taking up the time of the courts in his efforts at release he should, if such a thing were possible be brought into court to answer for the crime which he committed. A criminal similarly situated, without the immense wealth at his control, would have been forgotten long ago, but every little while the public is treated to this farcial juggling with justice and threatened with more revelations in the life of that "Angel Child." As a whole the public is pretty well satisfied to let the matter drop and let Thaw cool his heels behind the peaceful confines of Matteawan.

FOR SALE, WELL?

Down at the end of Houghs Neck, there is a little three cornered bit of land, resembling the jib piece of a small yacht sail. It is surrounded on every side by buildings and the travelled highway on either of the sides of this triangle is not very wide.

The triangle is offered for sale. Its position, surroundings and the sign upon it furnish food for amusement.

The erection of another building on this land would eclipse any of the worst crowded tenement house districts in New York. As a little bit to give a touch of decoration to an otherwise unattractive surrounding, it should be permitted to remain in its present condition. It is the one striking oasis in an unattractive desert of polyglot structures which have neither beauty of architecture or surroundings to favor them. It should be preserved in its present state. To build on it would only add to the horrors of the scene.

The citizens of Houghs Neck should club together and buy this little piece of land and rescue it forever from the fate of the land on all sides of it.

BOSSES NOT WANTED.

If any one takes the trouble to harken back to the Constitution they will learn that this very fine and rare document does not provide a brief for any one single individual, or coterie of individuals, to dictate the affairs of this great country. The country is big. It is for and by the people. The people will rule. They may be mistaken, dazzled and mislead by false prophets, temporarily prejudiced one way and another, so that their judgment is warped and they may bow the knee to the wrong kind of leadership, but as a whole and in the majority of cases they will sift out the gold from the dross. One attempt at bossism and a violation of the most sacred traditions of the country handed down by the Great Washington himself was foiled. Another would-be dictator is attempting to force his personal opinions upon another great body this week. He should have wisdom and foresight enough to have profitted by the fate of the other. But perhaps the spirit of wrecking is just as strong in this instance as in the other. At any rate with all due respect to the ability of the persons referred to, to gain public favor and then profit by it on the lecture platform or in other branches the great mass of the people are somewhat wearied of the performance They want the scene shifted, the curtain rung down, and a return to an orderly condition af things.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR BRAINTREE

Grade Crossing Commission Recommend Many Changes

DEPOT TO BE RELOCATED

The commission appointed by the superior court, consisting of ex-Gov. John L. Bates of Boston, Winfield S. Slocum of Newton and Arthur H. Wellman of Malden, to abolish certain grade crossing at Braintree has filed its report.

It calls for doing away with the School street crossing and for a new overhead bridge 40 feet wide from Pleasant street to President's road and for the elimination of Capen's bridge. A new 50-foot bridge is to be built north of Elm street. A 36-foot steel and concrete bridge is to be built off River street; and over Monatiquot river there is to be an arched bridge. The railroad station is to be located near what is now School street. A new freight station is to be erected south of River street.

The railroad company will do all the work and pay 65 per cent of the cost. The commonwealth will contribute 25 per cent and the town 10 per cent.

INSTITUTE OF INSTRUCTION

Annual Convention at North Conway Next Month

The 81st annual convention of the American Institute of Instruction will be held at North Conway, N. H., July 2 and 5 inclusive. The program is an interesting and varied one. Tuesday evening there will be a reception and address by President Charles T. C. Whitcomb and others, closing with a business meeting.

Morning, afternoon and evening sessions will be held the remaining days of the gathering with addresses, discussions, interspersed with outings, golf, tennis, automobile trips and coaching parties.

Fourth of July rates will be in force from all main points on the Boston & Maine Railroad for trip to North Conway and return during the week July 2-9 for a single fare. This is just one-half the regular rate.

The New England Passenger Association has authorized for all the railroads of New England a rate of a fare and three-fifths for the Convention upon the certificate plan. This rate will prevail only provided 200 certificates are validated.

MR. FARLOW'S STATEMENT.

Boston, June 19, 1912.

Editor of the Quincy Daily Ledger,
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—In your issue of the 13th appeared a Philadelphia dispatch to the effect that Mrs. Elizabeth Dunsel who had served a time in the hospital on account of a broken ankle, suddenly called to mind the fact she was a Christian Scientist and forthwith called the nurse and informed her that her ankle was not broken, and "the supposed trouble in that portion of her anatomy was merely an error of mind."

It is to be supposed that this report is merely a joke, but it contains, nevertheless, a point which may be misleading. Christian Scientists do not in this flippant manner undertake to dispose of a broken ankle. They employ the skill of a surgeon and handle the case in the same careful manner that is employed by others.

A. F. R. Yours truly,
Alfred Farlow.

A JUNE MORNING.

Anna Frances Rice.

The birds awake!
The shadows break!
The morning dawns o'er vale and hill
The sunshine bright,
Bathes earth in light!
How sweet the air, and fresh and still!

The blossoms fair
With perfume rare,
Lift up their heads the day to greet!
The crystal streams
With silvery gleams,
Flow gently, murmuring at our feet.

All nature sings,
On joyful wings,
The glories of the morning hour
Glad hearts we raise
In grateful praise,
To Him, the all-wise loving Power,

CITY COUNCIL

further questions the Commissioner said that he could build a macadam street on Penn street for $2,000 which he considered better for this street than paving as the street was flat and easily drained.

Councilman Richards said that he could not understand the present turn this matter had taken. It had always been argued that on heavily travelled streets that paving was the only proper method. Candidly he took but little stock in what the Commissioner had said.

Councilman Cunningham spoke in favor of the paving of the street as did Councilman C. A. Ross.

The vote stood 13 yes and 7 no, which killed the measure but on motion of Councilman Richards the vote was reconsidered and the order laid on the table.

The Finance Committee reported the following amendments to sidewalk orders, striking out the borrowing clause on each. Changing the sidewalk on the west side of Newbury avenue from a tar concrete to a granolithic, changing the sidewalks on East Elm avenue and Grand View avenue to granolithic and striking out the sidewalk on Marion street. Accepted.

On motion of Councilman Sodergren the Newbury avenue sidewalk order was amended by cutting out the sidewalk on the east side. The orders were then passed.

The Finance Committee reported a loan order for $13,300 to provide funds for the various sidewalks. Ordered to a second reading.

The Committee on Fire Department reported a substitute order for $100 for fire alarm boxes on Elm and Vernon streets. Referred to Finance Committee.

The Committee on Police reported ought not to pass on the order for a police signal box on Edwin street. Accepted.

The Finance Committee reported reference to the Executive on the order for $500 for the mosquito pest. Accepted.

The same committee reported reference to the Executive on the order for $25 for a culvert on Canal street also the same on the communication from the School Commitee relative to covering the steam pipes in the High school.

MAYOR LECTURES COUNCIL.

Mayor Stone addressing the Council objected to the reference of these matters to the Executive as he had no money for the matters and it gave the citizens a wrong impresion.

The report was accepted without debate.

The same committee reported ought not to pass on the order for $8,000 to rebuild Independence avenue. On motion of Councilman Craig the report was laid on the table.

The same committee reported ought not to pass on the order for $4,400 for the purchase of land for a playground at the Massachusetts Fields school. Accepted. Later in the evening Councilman Gilliatt made an effort to have the vote reconsidered but his motion was rejected.

The same committee reported ought not to pass on the order for $3,000 to purchase the Norteman lot at Houghs Neck for a playground. Report accepted.

The committee on Public Buildings reported an amendment to the order $566 for extending the water mains at Mt. Wollaston cemetery by adding the borrowing clause. Referred to Finance Committee.

Councilman Abele offered an order authorizing the Mayor to sign a confirmatory deed of land on Spear street sold by the Town of Quincy, years ago. adopted.

HEARING.

A public hearing was held at 8.15 on the petition of the street railway for a change of location of its tracks at Squantum and Houghs Neck. Later in the evening Councilman Studley offered an order granting the locations which was referred to the Committee on Streets.

ORDERS.

Councilman Bailey offered an order for $32,000 for the extension of the sewer service of the city. To Committee on Finance.

Councilman J. R. S. Ross offered an order which prohibited the storing of junk for commercial purposes on any premises of the city without a permit from the City Council. Adopted.

Councilman Studley offered an order for $300 for the purchase of three acres of land near the Quincy Home. To Committee on Public Buildings.

MRS. BOYNTON SAYS JEALOUSY

By Women Cause of Her Husband's Suit Against

WOLLASTON PARK MINISTER

Jealous women of the congregation of the Park and Downs Church at Norfolk Downs are according to Mrs. Helen W. Boynton of Wollaston, responsible for her husband's suit against the Rev. William B. Ayres, pastor of the church, for the alienation of her affections.

Mrs. Boynton is at present living with her parents at 138 Bromfield street, Wollaston, while her husband, who is a manager of a Boston department store is living in Revere.

Mrs. Boynton is convinced that her husband has been induced to take the action that he has through anonymous letters sent him by other women of the church bringing gross calumnies against Mrs. Boynton and Mr. Ayres.

Mrs. Boynton is quoted as saying: "The whole trouble arose through the rivalry that started when we attempted to raise money for the church. Both my husband and myself worked very hard for this, and he gave me all the credit for our successful work. Others of the women in the church who had also been attempting to raise money were not so successful as I was and they envied me the praise and credit I received. I never dreamed at first, though, that they would descend to such steps as this to gain their ends.

"It was through anonymous letters that my husband received that caused us to separate some time ago and the jealous women were not satisfied with that, but went on with their work. Now they have put not only myself, but Mr. Ayres in a most embarrassing position. All who know us both know that there are nothing but malicious falsehoods behind this trouble, and my friends will believe nothing that is being said. Furthermore, I know very well where these letters came from and you need not be surprised if some action is taken."

Mr. Ayres conducted his services at the church as usual Sunday, but made no reference to the main topic of conversation among his parishioners. He declared that so far as he knew no proceedings against him had been begun by Mr. Boynton and until he received some notification of such proceedings he would make no statement.

"The charge is ridiculous," said he, "and all of my parishioners know full well that it is ridiculous."

Mr. Boynton himself would say nothing of the case, as he declared that his attorney would do all the talking necessary.

15 FLYERS RACE FOR $20,000

Great Gathering of Birdmen and Women at Squantum

NO SUNDAY FLYING

Farnum Fish, 18 years old, the youngest aviator in the world, has entered for the events at Squantum, Saturday. Aviator Fish began to take lessons when but 16 years old and at the age of 17 was the holder of a pilot's license. The first to arrive at the field was George A. Gray, a Boston boy, who is the pilot of a Burgess-Wright biplane. Aviator Gray flew from the Point of Pines in his hydroplane and landed on the water near the Harvard field.

At this year's meet fifteen of the greatest aviators in America will compete for $20,000 in prizes. The aviators who have already signed are Lincoln Beachey, Miss Harriet Quimby, Miss Blanch Stuart Scott, Glenn L. Martin, Frank Coffyn, George W. Beatty, Charles K. Hamilton, Frank A. Tirrell, Farnum Fish, Charles Niles and George Catmore. Entries from five or six other aviators are expected.

Manager Willard has notified the Quincy Ministers' Association and Mayor Stone of Quincy that there will be no flying on the field on the Sundays during the meet.

RECREATION CONGRESS

A Recreation Congress is to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, June 5th-8th, under the auspices of the Playground and Recreation Association of America. Among the leaders in this organization are: Joseph Lee of Boston, Jane Addams, Jacob Riis, and Liberty H. Bailey of Cornell University.

Within the last eighteen months this Association has secured four "recreation efficiency engineers" who gave their entire time to helping cities plan municipal recreation. A department of commercial recreation has also been organized to help cities in dealing constructively with dance halls and motion picture theatres.

WHIST PARTY.

Twenty-five tables were in play at the whist party held in St. John's Parochial school hall Monday evening under the auspices of division one connected with the field day which takes place Saturday. The ladies' trophies were won by Miss Mary Cahill and Mrs. Joseph Griffin and Miss Agnes Colligan received consolation trophy.

The men's trophies went to John Cook and Patrick J. Ferguson, while the consolation was won by William Griffin.

Frappe was served at the conclusion of the whist and a short entertainment was furnished by talent present. The committee in charge included Mrs. Daniel Deasy, Miss Agnes Colligan, Michael T. Sullivan and John Mahan.

The Satan of the Greeks.

The Greek conception of the evil one whom they call Yama, makes that personage one of the most satanic of the whole evil tribe. According to their ideas of him, he is 240 miles high and the hairs on his body stand out like palm trees on a mountain side. He punishes the doomed beings submitted to his charge by putting them in beds of boiling oil, sawing their bodies in two, pouring molten lead in their ears and such other little pranks as pulling out their tongues, toe and finger nails and gouging out their eyes. He is a heartless old fiend of the most fiendish kind and has many other exquisite little tortures laid up for the helpless wretch consigned to his "chamber of horrors."

—Now that the summer, so long delayed by rain and cold, is fairly here, let our sympathy go out to the small boy, or the boy not so very small, who wishes to play ball on Sunday. Let him be postponed till afternoon, if you please, leaving churches and church-going people in quiet; but then let his muscles get their due and his mouth open in laughter. Games for admittance fees or where they will disturb thickly-settled areas of population may perhaps be prohibited; but that a law, which has neither Old Testament nor New upon its side, should torment the children of today is unbearable. Besides has any opponent of sports on Sunday afternoon considered what the boys would be doing if they were not at innocent play, or what things are done by men against law?—Christian Register.

FOSS WILL GO TO BALTIMORE

Quietly Seeking the Democratic Nomination for President

That Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president is now an assured fact.

GOVERNOR FOSS.

Governor Foss will go to Baltimore Thursday and be on hand to conduct his own campaign.

He has a young man on the scene already looking after his interests.

The Massachusetts delegation pledged to Champ Clark will vote for him on the first ballot.

As a two thirds vote is necessary for a choice, it is doubtful if Clark can land the job if the delegates stick to their pledges and the unit rule is used.

After the first ballot it is believed that the Bay State men will vote for Gov. Foss.

Go. Foss very adroitly declined to be drawn into the fight of the "Peerless One" over the temporary chairmanship. Gov. Foss considers himself a Progressive in every sense of the word. He stands well with delegations from other states.

DONOVAN SURPRISED.

Golf enthusiasts at the Wollaston course are talking about the recent feat of James L. Donovan. He made the 17th hole in one stroke. Incidentally he got the surprise of his life. Mr. Donovan was playing with W. G. Kendall, and drove from the 16th tee. The next is a "blind" hole; that is, it is invisible from the point where Mr. Donovan made his drive. After the drive the gentlemen walked the 200 or more yards and began to hunt for the ball. It seemed to have disappeared. Finally Mr. Kendall happened to glance into the hole—and there it was.

SUFFRAGETTES RELEASED

To Save Life From Self Imposed Starvation In Holloway Jail

London, June 25.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, who was sentenced on May 22 at the Old Bailey session to nine months' imprisonment on the charge of conspiracy and inciting to malicious damage to property, has been released from Holloway jail, owing to her health breaking down on account of the hunger strike which she and her imprisoned followers recently began. The other prisoners, including Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, one of the editors of Votes For Women, who was sentenced at the same time as Mrs. Pankhurst, have been forcibly fed.

Mrs. Pethick Lawrence was also released. Mrs. Pankhurst was released because she was found to be at the point of death. All attempts to forcibly feed her had failed. Reginald McKenna, home secretary, admits that Mrs. Pankhurst's heart was too weak to permit of forced feeding.

Hard Blow to Czar

Vienna, June 25.—The Czarevitch, Alexis, 8 years old, is suffering from tuberculosis of the right knee, and will never be able to walk again, according to advices received here through court circles.

SEEKS AGAIN STATE SEAT

Joseph Walker Announces His Candidacy For Governor

Boston, June 25.—Joseph Walker, former speaker of the Massachusetts house of representatives, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor. He was a candidate last year in the triangular contest with former Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham and Norman White.

Mr. Walker asserts the Republican party in Massachusetts is progressive and he appeals to the progressives to do their fighting within the party.

CONDUCT OF DELEGATES.

The Taft New Hampshire arriving in Boston did not hesitate to give full and free expression of their impressions of the conduct of the Massachusetts Roosevelt supporters In connection with this it must be remembered that a few Rosevelt men from the Bay State who were not delegates "butted" into the delegation reservation and were reported far more conspicuous than the delegates. Here are some of the opinions expressed by the New Hampshire men:

F. W. Hartford of Portsmouth said: "As for the Massachusetts delegation, I am ashamed to have represented New England with them. I hesitate to say openly what I and the other New Hampshire men have thought of them, but I feel it is only justice to do so.

"At times they acted like ruffians on the floor, shouting and hooting at the tops of their voices, and sometimes entering into demonstrations, which would sooner become hoodlums. When any Roosevelt man was talking on the floor, every Taft man in the place was quiet and respectful, but not so the other way. When a Taft man arose he was insulted disgracefully, and that was the reason that Mr. Root had to interrupt time and time again and tell the Roosevelt men that they were doing everything to hurt their own cause and that he could give them no preference inmatters of doubt.

"The Massachusetts men were the only Roosevelt delegates elected in a State which had expressed a Taft preference as a whole, who failed to vote for Taft. In this way they incurred the enmity and disgust of all Taft men. I can say for the whole New Hampshire delegation that we were sorry for Massachusetts at the convention."

F. C. Marshall of Manchester ,was another who had "no use for the Massachusetts bunch."

"They acted like clowns most of the time," said he, "and at no period did they act in a way becoming the representatives of the good, old Commonwealth. There was one little fellow who apparently was one of the leaders in the Massachusetts delegation; he was always in the thick of the fight. Apparently he would have been tickled to death if he could have started a fist fight."

—Not much attention appears to have been paid by the general run of newspapers to the statement that "Ice King" Morse paid a fee of $100,000 to the lawyer who acted in his parole proceedings. Appearances in such roles, as well as for pardons or commutations, are getting to be quite numerous. The inference is fair that there is money in it. Where circumstances are such that fat fees are out of question, there is the advertising factor to be taken into account. By the latter means, lawyers who are quite unknown outside of the circle of their intimates may manage to get into the limelight, and that distinction is presumed to make busines for them.—Salem News.

NOT DEPENDING ON BALTIMORE

Permanent Organization For Coming Campaign Expected

"FIGHT THE BATTLE THROUGH"

Answer Made by Colonel Roosevelt—National Organizing Committee to Be Increased—Temporary Uutil New Convention Gives Permanency—Presidential Nominee Not on California Ticket

Chicago, June 25.—The nomination of a pronounced progressive by the Democratic convention at Baltimore will make no change in the plans of Colonel Roosevelt to head the new party which was born at the close of the Republican national convention on last Saturday. A positive statement came from Roosevelt on the subject after there had been some discussion around headquarters of the possibility that a known "progressive" might receive the Democratic presidential nomination. In answer to a question: "Will your position be influenced by any act of the Baltimore convention?" Roosevelt said:

"It will not be. I shall not depart from what I said on Saturday night. I shall accept the progressive nomination on a progressive platform and shall fight the battle through to the end."

Governor Johnson of California announced the personnel of the committee on organization, which for the present at least will be the managing committee of the new party. Instead of seven members, as was the announced intention, Governor Johnson named eighteen, all of whom, it was announced, had been notified and had accepted their appointment. The committee is headed by Governor Johnson, who will be acting chairman. The other members are:

Senator Moses E. Clapp, Minnesota.
Senator Joseph M. Dixon, Montana.
Senator Miles Poindexter, Washington.
Governor C. A. Aldrich, Nebraska.
Governor R. S. Vessey, South Dakota.
E. A. Van Valkenburg, editor Philadelphia North American.
Colonel W. R. Nelson, owner and publisher Kansas City Star.
Former Congressman Richmond Pearson, North Carolina.
William R. Prendergast, New York.
James R. Garfield, Ohio.
William Allen White, Kansas.
Clifford Pinchot, California.
Judge Ben B. Lindsey, Colorado.
Matthew Hale, Massachusetts.
George L. Record, New Jersey.
Charles H. Thompson, Vermont.
Colonel E. C. Carrington, Maryland.

The committee Governor Johnson declared, was merely temporary and would be added to from time to time.

California Has Peculiar Law

San Francisco, June 25.—A peculiar situation has arisen in California regarding the election of members of the electoral college. Under the primary law in effect in this state the nominee of the various parties to the state legislature, together with the holdover senators, will meet Oct. 1 to nominate the party candidates for the electoral college, but the name of the presidential nominee will not appear on the ballot in November. In California with the Republican political machinery dominated at present by Theodore Roosevelt's supporters, the electors nominated by the state senators and assemblymen may easily be Roosevelt men who would secure the regular Republican column on the ballot submitted to the voters in November. In that event if the supporters of the president placed an electoral ticket in the field they probably would have to do so by petition, if that can be done.

La Follette Watching Baltimore

Madison, Wis., June 25.—Progressive Republicans at the state capital are refusing to talk of a third party until they know the outcome of the Democratic convention at Baltimore. Four officials and others high in the Republican councils say that if Bryan were nominated at Baltimore on a progressive platform, the third party movement would be dead. All agree, however, that if the Bryan progressive program should be defeated, Wisconsin progressives woul favor the formation of a new party without Theodore Roosevelt at its head, which would embody the followers of La Follette and Bryan. Some even go so far as to predict that these two might become leaders of the ticket. An interesting dilemma has developed from the fact that the Republicans of Wisconsin have chosen progressive Republican presidential electors who, unless they resign, must appear on the platform ticket as Taft electors and according to an written law, they would be morally bound to vote for the president. Some of the electors will resign, it is expected.

KNIGHTS TEMPLARS

gether by an unusual bond of friendship.

The trip from Quincy to Nantasket was uneventful, the famous resort being reached shortly after noon. The party were landed near the head of the steamboat wharf from which point they marched to Paragon Park arriving at the dining room at 12.30 o'clock, the hour set for the dinner. One half of the immense dining room was reserved for Quincy and Sutton Commanderies while the other half was reserved for Palestine Commandery of Malden and St. Alban Commandery of Portland, Me., who arrived shortly after the Quincy party.

During the dinner the vaudeville artists who take part in the cabaret show put on their entertainment and each number was loudly applauded.

The menu was an excellent one and well cooked and served and was as follows:—

Chilled Cantaloupe
Clam Chowder
Olives Radishes
Fried Chicken Lobster, Tartar Sauce
Fried Duxbury Clams
Pickles Sliced Cucumbers
Saratoga Chips
Broiled Spring Chicken on Toast
String Beans Delmonico Potatoes
Vanilla and Strawberry Ice Cream
Assorted Cake
Roquefort Cheese Toasted Crackers
Rolls Coffee

Immediately after dinner the bands struck up a lively air and a march in the go-as-you-please order was taken for the steamboat wharf where the steamer Old Colony was in waiting for the party.

A few minutes later the lines were cast off and the steamer headed out into the river. One of the bands was stationed in the bow of the boat and the other in the stern and there was a continuous concert during the whole trip.

Out into the lower harbor went the steamer where old ocean was found to be as quiet as a mill pond. The steamer went out as far as the lightship and then came back to Nantasket the wharf being reached exactly on time. During the water trip a continuous lunch was served on one of the lower decks.

On arriving at Nantasket the four large special cars were found waiting and at 5.15, two bells were sounded and the party was homeward bound. Quincy was reached at 6.30 o'clock.

A lunch was then served in the asylum after which the party were entertained with a stereopticon lecture on Historic Quincy by Brother Charles H. Johnson.

Shortly before 9 o'clock a march was taken to the depot where the special train of Sutton Commandery was in waiting the band playing "Auld Lang Syne."

With cheers loud and long the special pulled out of the depot and thus ended a day that had been brim full of pleasure for all who had participated.

STILL ALARM.

The Wollaston apparatus was called out on a still alarm at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon for a small grass fire in the rear of the pneumatic scale works at Norfolk Downs. The fire was quickly subdued with no loss to property.

ADAMS SCHOOL

mittee voted to approve the plans with some slight modifications. The plans are those of Albert H. Wright, and are practically the same plans used for the new Wollaston school building.

The appropriation for that building however, was $75,000 while $80,000 is asked for the Adams school building. It is claimed in the first place that the contractor on the Wollaston school got stuck on his bargain and that for this reason the bids for the Adams school would be higher. Then again it is claimed that the long haul of lumber and material to the site of the Adams school will cost more and that there will be an added expense on account of the additional work necessary on the foundation.

The order is now before the Finance Committee who will probably report next Monday evening. As there was no loan provision attached to this order this means that two readings will be necessary to pass the order, should the Finance committee report favorably.

MEXICAN REVOLT IS DYING OUT

Insurrectos Are In a Desperate Need of Funds

Chihuahua, Mex., June 25.—General Pascual Orozco, the rebel chief, has decided to ask General Huerta, the federal commander, advancing northward with 6000 to agree to the policing of this city by a rebel garrison whose neutrality should be respected. General Orozco said he did not wish to place the city with its foreign residents in peril of a mob. Officials at rebel headquarters are reticent, but the intention to negotiate for the possible abandonment of Chihuahua is taken to mean, in connection with other evidences of disorganization here, that the revolution soon will pass from an organized revolt into guerilla warfare.

Efforts to convert into cash gold bullion confiscated within the last few days indicate the desperate straits of the rebel army. Discontent in the ranks and among the officers' headquarters is apparent. When General Orozco vacates the city it is feared that certain leaders will satisfy grudgesand that the disgruntled element will seek recourse to mob violence.

Significance attached to the granting of honorable discharges to Sam F. Drebin of Philadelphia, Tracey Richardson of Lamar, Me., and Jock Zimmerman of Pulaski, Pa., three American soldiers of fortune who have handled the artillery for rebel columns under General Campa.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Girls' Tailormades—Pretty Suits That Go Everywhere—the Latest Blouses—Gloves and Neck Fixings.

For various conditions of weather nothing is so satisfactory as the tailormade, and this year especially there are so many pretty changes rung in the buttons and trimmings of these that they are quite in place for any day occasion.

THE NEWEST BLOUSES.

The blouse worn with such a costume makes all the difference and clever is the girl who manages these, so that they always add to her attractiveness when she lays aside her coat. Notwithstanding its long use baby

The above design is by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

Irish lace remains very desirable for waists and neck fixings, while prices have come down so that anyone can own enough to lend an air to her costume.

Waists built all of this lace are handsome and rather costly, but tucked net with Irish trimmings is equally pretty and becoming. Shirt waists of white washable satin or of striped silk are liked for shopping and informal wear, and waists of voile in semi-tailored styles with crochet buttons are smart and new.

NECK FIXINGS.

The revers that came ready to pin on one side of the coat, made of lace and lingerie embroidered by hand are things that go well with the tailored street costume, as are the wider shoulder collars, some almost capes that slip under the velvet collar and end in front, a few inches below the shoulders. Belts of crushable leather, vie with narrower stiff belts of patent leather to set off belted jackets, and the girls change off these for stiff girdles of folded taffeta or satin that finish with one stiff sash end weighted by matching fringe. While buttons of bone or crystal are popular on light and dark tailormades, and are often accompanied by makebelieve button holes of narrow white silk. There is no end to the buttons and they are placed without rhyme or reason, except that they add a touch of ornament where the designer wants it.

Whip cords are being done to death in both plain tones and contrasting weaves. Silks are tailormade as much as woolens. Serges and mohairs are best wearing in the long run, but silk serges, failles and other corded weaves can be relied on for almost any occasion where a nice rig is desirable. Foulards in tailormade form are cool and practical. Lucy Carter.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BRYAN FIGHTS PARKER HOTLY

Perhaps Will Be Candidate For Temporary Chairman

POSSIBLE HEAD OF TICKET

Twenty-First National Democratic Convention Opens—Contest Between Conservatives and Progressives—Conservative Slump Due to Republican Bolt—Tammany Boss Seeks to Control National Politics

Baltimore, June 25.—At noon today Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, called the convention to order and presented the name of Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, former candidate for president, chosen by the committee as temporary chairman, then the contest between progressism and conservatism was on.

All hope of averting a fight from the fall of the gaven today in the Democratic national convention vanished when the national committee approved the selection of former Judge Parker as temporary chairman by vote of 131 to 22, in defiance of the threat of William J. Bryan to make an issue of the alleged conservatism of Judge Parker as opposed to the progressivism which the distinguished Nebraskan declares should prevail.

Mr. Bryan announced that if no other good progressive could be prevailed upon to make the race, he would enter the field himself as the opponent of Judge Parker.

Colonel Bryan is the dominant figure on the eve of the great convention.

That he will have sufficient strength to direct the convention in its choice of its presiding officer, as well as in the choice for president, is generally conceded.

This was the real significant development of the day so far as the action of the convention is concerned. Bryan stuck out all over the city. In the hotels his name was constantly mentioned as a candidate for president.

Mr. Bryan didn't deny at any stage of the proceedings that he wouldn't like to be around in case the lightning should strike.

The slump in the campaign of the conservatives is due to the results of the action taken by the Republican national convention in Chicago. The feeling is unanimous that the country demands a progressive and the delegates intend to produce one, somebody that Colonel Roosevelt might take the stump for.

Up to date the only talk of a compromise candidate centres around Colonel Bryan. It was stated by Hon. George F. Williams of Massachusetts that information had been received at the Clark headquarters during the day, that an attempt was going to be made to stampede the convention for the colonel.

Whether the progressives or the conservatives will control the convention is the overshadowing and doubtful question in Baltimore. The battle lines are tightly drawn. Leaders of both sides have been busy sounding the delegates as they arrive in the city. Victory is claimed by both sides.

A progressive victory over the temporary chairmanship over which the progressives and the conservatives will make their first clash, will help Wilson, for the New Jersey man has lined up with the Nebraskan on that question and has not straddled it like Clark and other Democratic aspirants. A conservative victory dooms Wilson and will help Clark or Underwood. Harmon, though favored by all the politicians, some openly and others quietly, is believed to be eliminated because he cannot get the Bryan support, and this would make his candidacy impossible in the western states against Roosevelt and hazardous in the eastern states against Taft.

Whether the progressives or the conservatives will win the chairmanship depends upon the Clark delegates more than upon Clark himself. They hold the key. If they follow their leader into the conservatives' camp Bryan and Wilson are doomed. If they believe Clark has desired by combining with the conservatives to get the nomination Bryan and Wilson may win. It is reported that the Clark forces are badly split over the temporary chairmanship.

If Clark cannot deliver all delegates to Parker so as to elect him it needs no guessing to say that the Murphy-Taggart-Sullivan combination will not feel called upon to throw their strength to the Clark column on the nomination roll call. It can hardly be possible, however, that the Murphy-Hearst-Clark conservative alliance would have been entered into unless it was certain that Clark so could swing his entire 350 or 400 votes into the Parker camp against Bryan.

A straw as to how the wind is blowing in regard to the Clark claimed delegates is shown by the attitude of the Massachusetts delegates. According to Major Robert Green, Governor Foss' chief of staff, the majority of the Massachusetts delegates will be found on the Bryan side in a contest between the progressives and the conservatives. Again Governor Vardaman of Mississippi, a strong Bryan man, does not want to fight Parker, fearing it will hurt Underwood, so he is counselling Bryan to make peace.

Conditions at Baltimore this morning are not entirely unlike those at Chicago. Before anything like an accurate estimate of the outlook here can be had the same old fight between the progressives and the conservatives for the control of the convention must be met and settled. The victorious forces will then name the candidate and write the platform.

By an alliance with the Hearst-Murphy combination in the event of a Democratic victory Clark will get the presidency, Underwood the speakership, Francis Burton Harrison, a Tammany congressman, the chairmanship of the ways and means committee of the house, and Congressman Fitzgerald, another Tammany congressman, shall retain the chairmanship of the house committee on appropriations. This would place Tammany in a position of power in national legislative halls, which many thousand Democrats do not want Charles Francis Murphy to occupy. It would be an extension of Murphy's political zone and furnish a sweet morsel for Theodore Roosevelt to chew on when he begins his campaign as a progressive. Murphy would deliver the New York ninety votes and following them would come the Harmon, Marshall and Underwood delegates and the uninstructed conservatives. With Clark's aprpoximately 400 delegates, these, it is believed, would give him the necessary two-thirds majority.

Taft's nomination at Chicago, with a prospect of a Roosevelt bolt, has not helped the conservatives. The alarming reports that thousands of Democrats stand ready to support Colonel Roosevelt in the event of a conservative nomination at Baltimore has made many leaders believe that it would be wise to name a progressive, but just what degree they have not decided. It may be an ultra-progressive like Wilson, or a near-progressive like Gaynor or Clark.

ELEVATED DIRECTORS REJECT STRIKERS

Refuse Arbitration or Recognition of Carmen's Union

Boston, June 25.—The board of directors of the Boston Elevated company at a lengthy session yesterday voted to reject the offers of settlement made by their striking employes through Mayor Fitzgerald.

This action means that the Elevated strike which has been on nineteen days today, is as far from adjustment as ever.

The directors refuse the offers of arbitration and the recognition of the union, which were the propositions submitted to the company by Mayor Fitzgerald for the striking carmen.

In reply to the vote of the directors the executive committee of the strikers said last night they had expected no different action from the board. They declare they are neither disheartened nor discouraged, but are in the fight until they are victorious.

The only hope of a termination of the strike now rests with the state board of arbitration.

EVELYN THAW AFRAID

White Plains, N. Y., June 25.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, chief witness against her husband, Harry K. Thaw, who is seeking to prove his sanity and thereby gain his release from the Matteawan insane asylum, was called to the stand. She admitted that at Thaw's first trial in 1907 she testified he was sane.

"Did you ever discuss the Thaw case with Dr. Flint?" she was asked. "We discussed Thaw's threat to shoot me. I don't intend to have Thaw come out and shoot me next."

WARREN WOMAN SUICIDES

The woman had been suffering with acute melancholia for some months, and in March attempted to drown herself in the Warren river, but was rescued.

Besides her husband she leaves a child 8 months old.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

TOOTHSOME BUNS.

THE slightly sweetened rolls or biscuits known as buns are delicious to serve at summer luncheons where fruits and vegetables should be the chief dishes.

Buns are baked in various shapes, but they are all prepared in about the same way.

Never try to make buns with poor yeast.

Bath buns are buns made with currants.

These Are Quickly Made.

Breakfast Buns.—Take a cup of butter, a cup of sugar, three eggs and beat them together. Add a quart of bread sponge. Work as for light bread. Let rise, then roll and cut into cakes. Place in greased tins. Let rise three or four hours and bake in a quick oven ten minutes.

Crisp Cakes.

Rich Luncheon Buns.—Mix a pound of butter with a pound of sifted flour. Beat the yolks of six eggs with a pound of sugar and add to the flour and butter. If too stiff add a little milk. Whip the whites of egg stiff and stir in last with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake half an hour in a pan well greased and with the bottom lined with paper. If the cakes brown too fast put a buttered paper over the tops to be removed at the last to allow proper browning.

This recipe makes a crisper cake than the usual one, where butter and sugar are creamed together.

With Currants.

Bath Buns.—Take a pint of milk, heat it and add a half cake of compressed yeast. Stir in a quart of sifted flour. Set aside to rise for about three hours. Then put in a half cupful of butter rubbed to a cream with one cupful of powdered sugar, one beaten egg, flour enough to make a soft dough and a cupful of floured currants. Knead quickly, let rise until light, then make into small buns. Set them close together on pans and let rise again. When light brush the tops with a little milk and sugar and bake in a quick oven for fifteen or twenty minutes.

An Old Fashioned Recipe.

Colonial Buns.—Mix two cupfuls of sugar with three eggs. Then stir in three cupfuls of lukewarm milk and two-thirds of a cupful of yeast. Add enough flour to make a light sponge and let it stand until morning. Then mix with half a cupful of melted butter, a teaspoonful of soda and as much flour as will make it stiff. Sift the soda with the flour before adding it to the mixture. Let the mixture rise until light. Then roll out and cut, put the cakes into the pans, rub the tops with melted butter and sugar and let them rise. Bake as usual.

Anna Thompson.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

CHAPTER XI.

Wherein Mrs. Comstock and Mrs. Sinton Clash Over Billy.

SINTON sat still. At last Billy, tired of the swing, came to him and cleaned his slight body against the big knee.

"Am I going to sleep here?" he asked.

"Sure you are," said Sinton.

"Where can he sleep?" he asked Margaret.

"I'm sure I don't know," she answered.

"Oh, I can sleep ist any place," said Billy, "on the floor or anywhere. Home I sleep on pa's coat on a store box, and Jimmy and Belle they sleep on the store box too. I sleep between them so's I don't roll off and crack my head. Ain't you got a store box and a old coat?"

Sinton arose and opened a folding lounge. Then he brought an armload of clean horse blankets from a closet.

"These don't look like the nice white bed a little boy should have, Billy," he said, "but we'll make them do. This will beat a store box all hollow."

Billy took a long leap for the lounge. When he found it bounced he proceeded to bounce until he was tired. By that time the blankets had to be refolded. Wesley had Billy take one end and help, while both of them seemed to enjoy the job. Then Billy lay down and curled up in his clothes like a little dog. But sleep would not come. Finally he sat up. He stared around restlessly. Then he arose, went to Sinton and leaned against his knee. Sinton picked up the boy and folded his arms around him. Billy sighed in rapturous content.

"That bed feels so lost like," he said. "Jimmy always jabbed me on one side and Belle on the other, and so I knew I was there."

Billy slid from Sinton's arms and walked toward Margaret until he reached the middle of the room. Then he stopped and at last sat on the floor. Finally he lay down and closed his eyes. "This feels more like my bed; if only Jimmy and Belle was here to crowd up a little so it wasn't so alone like."

"Won't I do, Billy?" asked Sinton in a husky voice.

Billy moved restlessly. "Seems like—seems like—toward night as if a body got kind o' lonesome for a woman person—like her."

Billy indicated Margaret. "You don't like boys, do you?" he questioned.

"I like good boys," said Margaret.

Billy was at her knee instantly. "Well, say, I'm a good boy," he announced joyously.

"I do not think boys who hurt helpless kittens and pull out turkeys' tails are good boys."

"Yes, but I didn't hurt the kittens," explained Billy. "They got mad 'bout ist a little fun and scratched each other. I didn't s'pose they'd act like that. And I didn't pull the turkey's tail. I ist held on to the first thing I grabbed and the turkey pulled. Honest, it was the turkey pulled." He turned to Sinton. "You tell her. Didn't the turkey pull? I didn't know its tail was loose, did I?"

"I don't think you did, Billy," said Sinton.

Billy stared into Margaret's cold face. "Sometimes at night Belle sits on the floor and I lay my head in her lap. I could pull up a chair and lay my head in your lap—like this, I mean." Billy pulled up a chair, climbed on it and laid his head on Margaret's lap. Then he shut his eyes again. Margaret could have looked little more repulsed if he had been a snake.

Billy was soon up.

"My, but your lap is hard," he said. "And you are a good deal fatter 'an Belle, too." He slid from the chair and came back to the middle of the room.

"Oh, but I wisht my pa wasn't dead!" he cried. The flood broke and Billy screamed in desperation.

Out of the night a soft, warm young figure flashed through the door and with a swoop caught him in her arms. She dropped into a chair, nestled him closely and drooped her fragrant brown head over his little bullet eyed red one and rocked softly as she crooned over him:

"Billy, boy, where have you been?
Oh, I have been to seek a wife.
She's the joy of my life.
But, then, she's a young thing, and she can't leave her mammy!"

Billy gripped her with a death grip. Elnora wiped his eyes, kissed his face, swayed and sang.

"Do you love me tight as that?" he questioned blissfully.

"Yes, bushels and bushels," said Elnora. "Better than any little boy in the whole world."

Billy looked at Margaret. "She don't!" he said. "She don't want me here 't all."

Elnora smothered his face against her breast and rocked.

"You love me, don't you?" he said.

"I will if you will go to sleep."

"Every single day you will give me your dinner for the bologna, won't you?" said Billy.

"Yes, I will," replied Elnora. "But you will have as good lunch as I do after this. You will have milk, eggs, chicken, all kinds of good things, little pies and cakes, maybe."

Billy shook his head. "I am going back home soon as it is light," he said. "She don't want me. She thinks I'm a bad boy. She's going to whip me—if he lets her. She said so. I heard her. Oh, I wish he hadn't died! I want to go home." Billy shrieked again.

Mrs. Comstock had started to walk slowly and meet Elnora. The girl had been so late that her mother reached the Sinton gate and came up the path until the picture inside became visible. Elnora had told her about Sinton taking Billy home. Mrs. Comstock had some curiosity to see how Margaret bore the unexpected addition to her family. Billy's voice, raised with excitement, was plainly audible. She could see Elnora holding him and hear his excited wail. Sinton's face was drawn and haggard and Margaret's set and defiant. A very imp of perversity entered the breast of Mrs. Comstock and danced there.

"Hoity, toity!" she said as she suddenly appeared in the door. "Blest if I ever heard a man making sounds like that before!"

Billy ceased suddenly. Mrs. Comstock was tall, angular, and her hair was prematurely white, for she was only thirty-six, though she looked fifty. But there was an expression on her usually cold face that was attractive just then, and Billy was in search of attractions.

"Do you like boys?" he questioned.

"If there is anything I love it is a boy," said Mrs. Comstock assuringly. Billy was on the floor.

"Do you like dogs?"

"Yes, almost as well as boys. I am going to buy a dog just as soon as I can find a good one."

Billy swept toward her with a whoop. "Do you want a boy?" he shouted.

Katharine Comstock stretched out her arms and gathered him in.

"Of course I want a boy!" she rejoiced.

"Maybe you'd like to have me?" offered Billy.

"Sure I would," triumphed Mrs. Comstock. "Any one would like to have you. You are just a real boy, Billy."

"Will you take Snap?"

"I'd like to have Snap almost as well as you."

"Mother!" breathed Elnora imploringly. "Don't! Oh, don't! He thinks you mean it!"

"And so I do mean it," said Mrs. Comstock. "I'll take him in a jiffy. I throw away enough to feed a little tyke like him every day. His chatter would be great company while you are gone. Blood soon can be purified with right food and baths, and as for Snap I meant to get a bulldog, but possibly Snap will serve just as well. All I ask of a dog is to bark at the right time. I'll do the rest. Would you like to come and be my boy, Billy?"

Billy leaned against Mrs. Comstock, reached his arms around her neck and gripped her with all his puny might. "You can whip me all you want to," he said. "I won't make a sound."

Mrs. Comstock held him closely and her hard face was softening. Of that there could not be a doubt.

"You like boys!" exulted Billy, and his head dropped against Mrs. Comstock in unspeakable content.

"Yes, and if I don't have to carry you the whole way home we must start right now," said Mrs. Comstock. "You are going to be asleep before you know it."

"Billy, are you going to leave without even saying goodby to me?" asked Sinton, with a great gulp in his throat.

Billy held tight to Mrs. Comstock and Elnora.

"Goodby!" he said casually. "I'll come and see you some time."

Wesley Sinton gave a smothered sob and strode from the room.

Mrs. Comstock started for the door, dragging at Billy as Elnora pulled back, but Mrs. Sinton was before them, her eyes flashing.

"Kate Comstock, you think you are mighty smart, don't you?" she cried.

"I ain't in the lunatic asylum, where you belong, anyway," said Mrs. Comstock. "I am smart enough to tell a dandy boy when I see him, and I'm good and glad to get him. I'll love to have him!"

"Well, you won't have him!" exclaimed Margaret Sinton. "That boy is Wesley's. He got him and brought him here. You can't come in and take him like that. Let go of him!"

Wesley Sinton appeared behind Margaret in the doorway, and she turned to him. "Make Kate Comstock let go of our boy!" she demanded.

"Billy, she wants you now," said Wesley Sinton. "She won't whip you, and she won't let any one else. You can have stacks of good things to eat, ride in the carriage and have a great time. Won't you stay with us?"

Billy drew away from Mrs. Comstock and Elnora.

He faced Margaret, his eyes shrewd with unchildish wisdom. Necessity had taught him to strike the hot iron, to drive the hard bargain.

"Can I have Snap to live here always?" he demanded.

"Yes, you can have all the dogs you want," said Margaret Sinton.

"Can I sleep close enough so's I can touch you?"

"Yes. You can move your lounge up so that you can hold my hand," said Margaret.

"Do you love me now?" questioned Billy.

"I'll try to love you if you are a good boy," said Margaret.

"Then I guess I'll stay," said Billy, walking over to her.

Out in the night Elnora and her mother went down the road in the moonlight, and every few rods Mrs. Comstock laughed aloud.

"Mother, I don't understand you," sobbed Elnora.

"Well, maybe when you have gone to high school long you will," said Mrs. Comstock. "Anyway, you saw me bring Mag Sinton to her senses, didn't you?"

Niagara Pleasure Excursion Turned to Mourning

TWENTY-EIGHT LIVES LOST

Sad Catastrophe at a Pleasure Park—Excursionists Go Down With Old Rotten Dock—Families Torn Apart by Rushing Waters—Members and Families of Foresters of America—Ghouls Ply Their Trade

Buffalo, June 25.—The scene of the terrible catastrophe whereby hundreds were thrown into Niagara river, when a dock collapsed, has been one of constant sorrow. Up to the present, nineteen bodies have been recovered and at least nine persons are missing.

George Richmeyer, who lost his wife and ten-year-old son, saw them swept clear of the wreakage by the current that moves past the dock at the rate of ten miles an hour and carried away in the gathering twilight. He was clinging to a pile holding his infant son in his arms and could do nothing to save the other members of the family. George McKee, who also lost his wife and infant son, saw them go down in the mass of struggling people and they did not reappear. Many others, it is feared, were swept away, and, until a careful canvass is made of the city the exact number of dead will not be known.

The section of the dock which gave way precipating the crowd of men, women and children into the river was about fifty feet in length and twenty-five feet in width. The medical examiner who examined the wreckage and said that many of the broken planks were rotten and that directly beneath the collapsed portion of the structre there were no supporting piles. The platform of two-inch planks rested on cedar beams laid across the full width of the dock, and many of these showed signs of decay. Boats were sent down the river from Eagle park to recover the bodies. A mile below the landing there is a reef running several hundred feet out into the water, which, with a shore swing of the current, forms a natural basin and into this, it is believed, the bodies will be carried.

The water at the point where the dock collapsed is ten feet deep, but the current rushes by at the rate of nine miles an hour and some bodies may have been carried over the falls. Boats are patrolling the river between Eagle park and Chippewa, Ont., in the hope of recovering bodies still in the water.

Ghouls got to work early. A valuable diamond ring disappeared from the hand of a woman. Other valuables were stolen from other bodies. Finally the rescuers gathered up purses and jewelry and placed them in charge of the Eagle Park hotel.

The excursionists were members and friends of Court Amherst Lodge, No. 232 Foresters of America, who were on their annual outing. They were taken to Eagle park on board the steamer Henry Koorber and the barge Lottie Koeber. The boats were warping into the dock to take on passengers for the return trip when the crowd began to gather on the dock.

SENTENCE IS UPHELD

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Are Guilty In Bucks Stove Case

Washington, June 25.—Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell, the labor leaders, were held guilty of contempt of court by the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in connection with a court injunction in the Bucks Stove and Range boycott case. Gompers was sentenced to one year in jail, Mitchell nine months and Morrison six months.

They appealed again to the supreme court of the United States, which reversed their former conviction.

In its previous review of the case the supreme court reversed the conviction on the ground that the contempt proceedings had been improperly instituted. New proceedings were at once begun. The sentences under the first conviction were: Gompers one year, Mitchell nine months and Morrison six months.

Santiago, June 25.—General Pedro Ivonet, the rebel leader, announced today, according to a report on good authority, that he would continue fighting.

He declares he will not surrender until the intervention of the United States, which he desires, as he is convinced the Cuban government will never repeal the Morua law, prohibiting the formation of political parties on racial lines.

Cake and Other Things Given City Official

ON HIS BIRTHDAY

One of the popular City Officials at City Hall passed another milestone in his eventful career Monday. He is not saying which. He had not made any preparations for celebrating the annual event but when he returned from his noon lunch hour he found that some of his friends had been there since he had been gone.

On his desk was an appetizing looking cake from the top of which burned a number of candles, (number withheld.) Near by was a neat looking package which upon being opened was found to contain a pair of bright red silk socks, in which he will patter around on his Adams Shore piazza during the warm evenings. In addition to this there were other gifts such as cigars, toothpicks and other articles too numerous to mention. The cake was cut and everybody was invited to have a slice and it is said by the fortunate ones that it tasted as good as it looked.

THE TARIFF IN THE CAMPAIGN

Early Tariff Acts Designed to Build Up Home Manufactures

WORKERS FOR PROTECTION

Many Democrats Believe In Protection—Wilson Bill Helped British Industries While In Force

The attitude of the Democrats makes it clear that one of the chief issues of the coming campaign will be the tariff. The Democrats in congress have refused to continue the appropriation for the support of the tariff board and have all along seemed to indicate that a scientific revision of the tariff did not interest them.

The question of the tariff in the United States has been a disputed point from the very foundation of the union. The question of raising a sufficient national revenue for government needs was one of the most important points discussed by the congress of 1789. The first tariff, passed in that year, was nominally protective. It was largely the work of Madison. The early years of the republic made it apparent to the leading spirits of those days that it was necessary for the United States, which up to that time had been largely dependent upon foreign manufacturers, to build up manufactures of her own, in order that she might be independent of other nations in time of war and, in fact, in times of peace.

The Early Tariff Acts

The tariff of 1816 increased the duties on manufactured goods and, in the case of cotton was 25 percent. The movement toward a higher protective tariff continued steadily with now and then a reactionary measure. In 1842 a tariff act was passed which averaged about 33 percent. In 1846 the Democrats passed the Walker tariff act which cut the rate to about 25 percent, which was in 1857 reduced to something like 20 percent. The Morrill tariff, enacted in 1861, had a protective character. During the Civil war the tariff was increased very heavily and it was not lowered until 1870 and 1872. In recent years the tariff has become a political issue, the Republicans standing for a protective tariff and the Democrats oscillating from a revenue tariff and tariff reform to free trade. Some Democrats have favored a revenue tariff with incidental protection.

Tariff Revision Hazardous to Parties

Political parties have in recent years hesitated to make a revision of the tariff. The political party entering upon such a revision has usually been overthrown at the next election. In 1883 the Republicans passed an act revising the tariff, and almost immediately the Democrats gained control of the house and in 1884 elected their candidate for president. In 1888 the Democratic house passed the Mills bill and the Democrats were defeated in the fall of that year. In 1890 the Republicans passed the McKinley tariff and at the congressional election that fall that party met a Waterloo throughout the country, and in 1892 the Democrats elected both the executive and the two houses of congress. The Wilson bill was passed by the Democrats in 1894 and the Republicans were successful in the congressional elections that year and in the presidential election of 1896. The Republicans passed the Dingley bill in 1897 and in this case party defeat did not follow. In 1909 the Republicans passed the Paine tariff act, in which there were 656 decreases of duties, 220 increases and 1150 items of the dutiable list were unchanged. In the congressional election of 1910 the country elected a Democratic house; the result being due, perhaps, more largely to the increased cost of living than to the tariff.

Many Democrats Are Protectionists

Undoubtedly a large element in the Democratic party believes in the principle of protection. This is due to a considerable extent to the fact that many of the wage earners are convinced that protection does increase their wages over what they would be under a revenue tariff or a free trade system. The wage earner is probably convinced of this by reason of the fact that the wages paid in this country are practically double the wages paid in the same lines of labor abroad. The report of the tariff board, recently submitted to congress, shows that American workers in the comparatively unskilled work in the textile factories earn more than many skilled workers in the same industries in Great Britain. Also that the skilled American workers earn practically double the average wage of skilled employees in the same lines in British mills.

The tariff has been so generally discussed in the newspapers and upon the stump that the workers are thoroughly familiar with the history of such countries as Germany, where protection has increased wages paid, and also extended and built up native manufactures. They have also become familiar with the history of free trade in Great Britain and its disastrous effects upon agriculture and upon the working classes of people. Those who have come here from foreign shores know for themselves that wages paid in this country are practically double, and in many cases treble, those paid in any country in Europe. Working men born in this country have not such intimate knowledge of the low wages paid in England, but they have become thoroughly familiar with them through their reading and through the campaigns which have been waged in this country in which the tariff was a leading issue.

American and Foreign Wages

Some of the figures show for themselves the difference in wages paid. In the woolen industry for instance, in this country wool washers get $8:21 per week, while for the same work in England they are paid $4.93; comb tenders here receive $7.85, in England $4.26; gill minders are paid $5.84 here, in England $2.83; drawing frame tenders, $6.21 in the United States, $2.68 in England; female spinners $6.40 here, $2.25 in England; weavers $10.54 in this country, $3.85 in England. Of course these are average weekly wages and some make a great deal more than the average in each of these various occupations.

The very fact that such large numbers of foreigners come to this country seems to the native working man proof positive that conditions here are much better than abroad, otherwise there would be no sense in these people leaving their native land, their friends and relatives to come to a strange country among strangers.

When this country adopts a low tariff the effect is not confined to the United States. A Democratic congress in 1894 enacted the Wilson bill on a tariff-for-revenue basis. The people of this country well remember the wide-spread shutting down of mills, factories and workshops which followed the passage of that act, and the 3,000,000 workmen who were thrown out of employment at the time. It was, however, a great thing for England, as may readily be seen from the following article published in 1896 in the London Times:

Low Tariff Helped English Factories

"The year 1895 witnessed a revival in the worsted industry of such magnitude as to be a matter not only for local but national congratulation. After long years of depression, the great manufacturing district, of which Bradford is the centre, was visited last year by the full sunshine of prosperity. Roughly speaking the Wilson tariff, which came into effective operation in the last month of 1894, in place of the strangling system of duties associated with the name of McKinley, reduced the custom house charges upon the principal products of the Bradford district imported into the United States from 100 percent of their value to 50 percent. Thus it came about that the value of worsted coatings imported from the Bradford district into the United States in the first five months of 1895 was more than double that of the like imports during the whole year, December, 1893, to November, 1894, and the value in dollars for the whole of 1895, as compared with the whole of 1894 (years ending Sept. 30) was $7,575,052 against $1,275,626, being an increase of fully 600 percent."

This reprint shows plainly that the money formerly paid to American operatives for their labor in the worsted and woolen mills in this country went to operatives in England during the life of the Wilson bill by reason of the provisions of that Democratic tariff act.

Mrs. Darrow Will Testify

Los Angeles, Cal., June 25.—Not only will Clarence S. Darrow take the stand in his trial for alleged jury bribery, but Mrs. Darrow also will be a witness for the defense.

Married the Family.

When Lafcadio Hearn married his Japanese wife all his wife's family accompanied him to his new quarters. He mentions that he had nine lives dependent upon him—wife, wife's mother, wife's father, wife's adopted mother, wife's father's father, then servants and a Buddhist student. This wouldn't do in England, but it is nothing in Japan.—"Lafcadio Hearn—His Life and Work," by Nina H. Kennard.

GOSSIP OFF AND ON THE DIAMOND

Orients Claiming Supremacy Will Take on All Comers

INTERESTING COMMENT

With the Quincy A. A., the "Cannibals" tasting defeat Saturday for the second time this season, the South Quincy team, otherwise known as "The War Cries," secured a still firmer foothold on first position in the Quincy City Base Ball league. The South Quincy boys are a fast combination and their ability as base ball players has been adequately tested by the number of strong teams which they have encountered this season. Thrice have they gone down to defeat, but all of these games went for extra innings and in every contest they have lost out by a single run, after a hard gruelling struggle.

It is hoped that there is no foundation in the report that Gillis has "bolted" the South Quincy team to play with the Clapp Memorial nine of Weymouth. He certainly is playing a fine game this season but it is claimed he would do well to continue playing around the third sack for the "War Cries."

When the Quincy league was started "Charlie" Ganzel, "Gus" Bates and a few other officials said that its principal object was to develop local talent. Such being the case, every one looks to the Quincy A. A. team to follow out this assertion. In the first part of the season, Creswell, a Quincy boy was tried out on the initial sack. Creswell needs no introduction to the fans of Quincy, for his work with the Fore River Apprentices and Manets was sufficient to augur for his future career on the diamond. He played his usual fielding game with the "Cannibals," but it must be admitted for the sake of argument, that his batting was not up to the standard.

Some one in the Quincy A. A. camp murmured the name of Leary and he was lauded as nothing short of a wonder. The result was that Creswell was let go and Leary was placed at first base to show what an improvement was to be made. Leary has already played in three games and the majority of fans have failed to see him display an article of ball superior to what Creswell displayed. In fact, it is claimed that the fans would much rather see Creswell there.

Some people would like to see such pitchers as Saunders and Bradley given a try-out in the Quincy City League.

Some interesting games bid fair to be played on the Fourth of July in connection with the celebration.

Manager Barry announces that he has made considerable changes in the lineup of the West Quincy team. The changes were evidently productive of much good, for the strong Newton Catholic club barely nosed out a victory Saturday.

It has been rumored that "Smiling Mike" Shea, who managed the champions of the Old Colony League two years ago, is to assume duties at the helm for the West Quincy team, but as yet nothing definite has been done.

With a clean record of eleven victories to their credit, the Orients, composed mostly of ball tossers who live in the South Quincy district, are now laying claim to the championship of the city and are thus willing to try conclusions with all comers. By defeating the Quincy Y. M. C. A. nine last Saturday, the Orients claim they won the amateur championship of the city, for the Association boys have already taken the measure of the Colonials of West Quincy, who were considered to be the runners-up for the title.

Manager Cremins feels confident that his team is giving the fans of Quincy a good article of ball, wants to try conclusions with the teams of the Quincy Base Ball league.

Hundreds of fans would be interested in such a match and it would prove a great drawing card.

Of all the players of the City league undoubtedly none will bear more watching than Russell Mannex, who covers third base for West Quincy. Considering his age he is about as fast and as neat an infielder as one would desire to see. His pegging to bases is very accurate and he uses his head at all times. A little development with the willow will make him one of the best ever turned out from Quincy.

His work with the Stone school nine was of the top notch order and since it is said that he will enter Georgetown College in the fall, his many friends and admirers will surely keep a close eye upon him, for he gives every promise of rounding out into a college player of some note.

CLAIM CITY CHAMPIONSHIP

Orients With 11 Straight Victories Quite Cocky

The Orients, the only Quincy nine which has a clean record of victories, made it eleven straight by defeating the Quincy Y. M. C. A. team at the Ward three playgrounds, Saturday.

The Association players secured more hits than the winners. The features of the game were the playing of the Markham brothers and Cremins. The Orients claim the championship of the city and say they will try to defend the title against all comers.

—Motion pictures were put to a new use when Gloucester men exhibited before a congressional committee pictures showing the methods employed in "beam trawling," which it is asserted will destroy the fishing industry, if not prohibited. The pictures conveyed a much more vivid impression than could possibly be produced by words. This instance suggests many possibilities in the use of motion pictures in the future. As yet they have been employed but little, if any, in court trials, but it is easy to conceive how useful they might prove in many cases.—Milford Gazette.

MAYOR TILDEN IF YOU PLEASE

Treasurer Designated to Fill the Chair Pro Tem

HEN'S HOSE A DECORATION

Mayor Stone left early this morning for the northern part of Maine where he will be absent for a few days. Before he took his departure however he designated City Treasurer, Henry F. Tilden as Mayor pro tem, or acting Mayor, as provided for by the City Charter.

TREASURER HENRY F. TILDEN, Acting Mayor of the City.

Some people are continually seeking honors while others are fortunate enough to have honors thrust upon them. Mr. Tilden, or "Hen" as he is familiarly called by his friends is one of the latter class. When seen this morning he did not seemed to be at all swelled up over his new honor, as honors rest lightly on his broad shoulders.

One of his first acts on assuming the reins of office this morning was to walk into the Mayor's private office and try the swivel chair, which he said fitted all right. He then pushed the little button under the desk that rings a bell in the City Messenger's office and when Harry came in on the run he was directed to send the little fellow in the Tax Collector's office in to him.

When the Tax Collector appeared pale and trembling, the acting Mayor demanded to know why he did not get in more money. The city needed all the funds it could get, and unless the Tax Collector got onto his job he would be fired. If any person has money coming to him from the city, who has not paid his taxes, grab it. There is no reason why the city should pay any man money every week when that same man did not liquidate his obligations to the city. "Now Dick you have got the law on your side, go ahead and get some money and do it quick," was the parting injunction of Mayor "Hen."

The City Engineer was then called in and ordered to make a plan for taking off the corner of City Hall at the junction of Hancock and Depot street so that the treasurer could look around the corner without breaking his neck, and also to design a special color in flashy hose.

"My but it is hard work holding down two offices at the same time" was the acting Mayor's remark as he looked out through the window and saw the apparently care free people hurrying for the trains and electric cars and perhaps wished he too might be free from political obligations, that he might join with the afternoon shift in a game of whist. But it was not so to be, and wiping the perspiration from his fevered brow he ordered another bottle of ice water and leaving the City Clerk to see that the Mayor's office did not run away he went back to the Treasurer's office and got ready to spend some more of the city's wealth.

Mayor Stone impresed the acting Mayor to do nothing rash during his absence and told the acting Mayor if he wanted a little diversion he might cut down a clothes line or two for recreation, that is if the City Solicitor would put about him the protecting arm of the law.

When seen this noon, the Mayor pro tem, said that if this hot weather continued much longer he was going to have the Commissioner run a pipe from City Hall to Charlie Hearn's soda fountain.

There is no guess-work in the bakery where PRATT'S BREAD is made.

JOHNSON FOUND GUILTY ATTEMPTED LARCENY

Court Then Withheld Four Months' Sentence and Continued Case Until Thursday

Defendant Indulged in Suspicious Actions in City Square

The continued case of Charles Johnson, who it is alleged to be one of the light fingered fraternity came up before Judge Avery in the district court this morning. Johnson was arrested by Inspector McKay in City Square last Sunday evening for attempting to commit larceny from the person.

The principal witness this morning was James E. Parker. Mr. Parker testified that Sunday afternoon he saw the young man, whom he positively identified, mingle with the crowd getting on and off the street cars in City Square. He then saw the fellow place his hand beneath a man's coat on the car, after which he jumped off. He then went toward Saville street where he was joined by a man and a woman. The three started toward the depot. Mr. Parker went to the depot by another route where he saw the two men enter the toilet room. They remained there a few minutes when they came out and joined the woman. The three then took a car for Houghs Neck.

Inspector McKay testified that receiving a telephone account of the occurence he came to City Square and saw the parties when they came from Houghs Neck. He saw Johnson mingle with the crowds getting on and off the street cars. They then boarded a Boston car which the Inspector also boarded and placed Johnson under arrest.

Charles Austin the street railway starter testified that he saw Johnson circulating about the crowds getting on and off the cars when they arrived but he did not see him do anything.

Inspector McKay said that information had just reached him that a young man at Quincy Point whose name he did not know had been robbed Sunday of $14. This was the exact amount found in Johnson's pocket.

The court found Johnson guilty and sentenced him to four months in the House of Correction. Johnson intimated that he would appeal. The sentence was then withdrawn and the case continued until Thursday morning to enable the prisoner to secure bonds to prosecute his appeal.

TIME IS SHORT PLENTY WORK

For All Concerned in Fourth Celebration

MEETING TONIGHT

An important meeting of the general Fourth of July celebration committee will be held tonight at the rooms of the Board of Trade. It will probably be definitely known, or practically so, tonight just how much money the committee will have at its disposal for the celebration and it will then be able to determine about how much can be given for each event.

Collectors in the several wards have been requested to make a report through the ward chairmen this evening as to how collections in their particular ward are coming in.

The time is now getting short and while Mayor Stone the president of the committee will be unable to be present a large attendance of the committee and all interested in making this year's celebration the best ever.

CANOE OVERTURNED, LIVES OF THREE QUINCYITES ENDANGERED

Stan Bates, James Fay and John Murray Five Minutes in Water Before Rescued

Fay Suffered Most From Ducking Being Heavily Clothed

Stanley Bates, James Fay and John Murray, three base ball players well known to Quincy fans, had a narrow escape from drowning at Fredericton, N. B. last Saturday. The three went out canoeing about noon time and were about a half a mile from shore, when the water suddenly became very rough.

The waves went into the canoe and the occupants were thrown into the water, which was some thirty feet deep. The three players kept floundering about for fully five minutes and were gradually becoming exhausted. Their cries for help failed to bring succor. A tug happened to be in the vicinity and sighted the three men in the water.

The three men were pulled into the tug. Fay seemed to be the worst of the three, for he had on heavy clothing and had great difficulty keeping above water. All three clung as long as they could to the capsized canoe and only the timely approach of the tug saved their lives.

They are all members of the Fredericton base ball team.

Many Aviators Will Reach Scene of Action Today

TRYOUTS IN ORDER

Charles F. Niles, who operates a Thomas biplane, Tuesday gained the distinction of being the first aviator to arrive in Boston for the third annual Boston aviation meet, which opens at the Harvard Aviation Field Saturday. Niles will assemble his machine today and will endeavor to qualify before Prof. R. W. Willson for a pilot's license.

Niles has been flying around Bath, N. Y. for a year and a few weeks ago was forced to give up an attempt to create an American duration record because of engine trouble. He will make a second attempt on the duration record next week.

Miss Blanche Stuart Scott and Glenn Martin, the western aviators, will arrive today and Friday Miss Harriet Quimby and Lincoln Beachey will arrive at the field. Beckwith Havens, the New York society flyer, will replace Beachey on July 4, when the latter will be forced to fill a prior engagement for the day. Frank J. EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Mayor Stone's lecture to the City Council did not appear to change that body much.

Any reasonable person will agree that granolithic is preferable to tar concrete for sidewalks.

The powers that be, in the future, when granting building permits should set the line of the building back from the street with a view to possible future improvements or widening.

Every one is happy now that the City has given $1000 for the Fourth of July celebration. That clever little move of the Finance committee failed of its object.

The funeral of the Norteman lot proposition was accomplished without much mourning.

Those warm days make one lazy, logey and hardly fit to take up the daily routine of events.

Make the horrible procession a good one, worthy of its name, or of such a character that it will be forever eliminated from future celebrations. As a whole this feature of celebrations is fast falling into disfavor.

The acoustic properties of the City hall are not of the best, so that it frequently happens that even members of the City Council have no idea what is being read in the way of orders or said in way of debate.

No doubt the people as a whole would like to see one game between teams of the City league as part of the Fourth of July celebration.

That bubbler in City Square is worked over time these warm days.

The Ancients will make their contribution to old Neptune next week.

Joe Walker will find he has no walkover in the Republican nomination seeking race this fall.

It is said that Secretary of the Navy Meyer has a longing desire for that senate seat soon to be vacated by "Uncle Murray" Crane.

The Bandanna factories will feel a revival of trade. How much will they contribute to the campaign fund?

Roosevelt is magnanimous. He would step aside for any one whom his party should select. As he is the head and front of the party his declaration is well taken.

Senator Lodge's requiem to the Chicago convention was just what one would expect from him, a condemnation of the wicked Democrats and the olive branch of peace to the erring Republicans.

DIRECTORS MAINTAIN POSITION.

The directors of the Boston elevated railroad have courteously but plainly turned down the proposition of Mayor Fitzgerald for the settlement of the strike. The deep and abiding interest which the mayor takes in this subject may be judged from the manner in which he hied himself to Baltimore to attend a National convention.

The proposition submitted required the immediate reinstatement of all the strikers, with right to maintain membership in the union and in case of future differences to meet committees of the employers.

No reference was made to the men who have stood loyal to the company in this trying period.

Many will concede that some reference to them is most important at this time.

The directors evidently incline to that opinion. Whether the course of the directors is wise or otherwise the future will determine.

The people of the metropolitan district will watch the outcome with interest and without prejudice or bias only in as much as the public safety and convenience may be affected.

THE CONTEMPT SENTENCES.

The supreme court of the District of Columbia has held that Samuel Gompers, Frank Morrison and John Mitchell are guilty of contempt of court in the Buck Stove and Range Boycott case. This would mean that the sentence of the lower court of several months' imprisonment for each must stand, but they have another loop hole. They can appeal to the United States supreme court. Some years have elapsed since this case first found its way into public notice. If it goes to the United States supreme court there is no knowing how long before this last court of appeal will render its decision.

The case is an important one. It should have the judgment of the best legal minds in the country. The final outcome will stand as a precedent for a long time to come. The decision handed down by the District of Columbia court was a long one, taking two hours to read.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Whenever the appeal for government ownership of a transportation or other public service corporation is mentioned, there is always the claim that such an undertaking cannot be profitable, that experiments in those fields have led to municipal loss. It is pointed out that the standard of efficiency is not maintained in such undertakings. With regard to the first claim the post office might up to the present time be pointed to as a horrible example of such contention. On the other hand its efficiency is beyond question. Then it must be remembered that within the past few years under a thorough change of policy and a business like administration of affairs, the department has been able to hold its own and is not demanding an appropriation to meet any deficit. It should also be remembered that the postal fees are much less than any private concern would perform the same service. But the government has another shining example of the success of government ownership and control. The United States government owns everything in the Panama zone. It controls the markets, bakeries, laundries, ice plants, and everything, supplying the residents in the most efficient manner.

The residents are supplied with everything that they need for the table and other creature comforts and everything is delivered and put in its proper place.

Furthermore the price charged is less than the people of other sections of the country have to pay and the government derives a profit at that.

Here is a sample of the cost of articles, in the grape fruit. They are delivered at the home of the people working in the Panama zone for eight cents each. The average price in New England is at this time about 15 cents.

Meats, both fresh and salt, although they have to be transported thousands of miles are sold at less than in any part of the United States.

Not only this but everything that the government furnishes must stand a proper test for its perfection of quality. There is no monkeying with the government men in charge of this department. Everything purchased must be up to the standard or it is thrown back upon the contractor.

If this can be done at Panama why cannot it be done in other parts of the country.

By this we do not mean that the government should take it up, but in every community the people should unite for proper protection against the present high prices and if necessary ereet a public market, with efficient managers who would purchase articles needed in bulk and dispense with reasonable profit to defray the expenses of the undertaking and the help needed. In other words co-operative markets in all cities would speedily do away with the present abuse of high prices.

THE FOURTH WORTH-WHILE.

Independence day will soon be with us. In the nine years from 1903 to 1912, 1719 people were killed by Fourth of July celebrations, and 37,410 were wounded more or less severely——a total of 39,129 casualties, or the equivalent of more than 39 regiments of soldiers in nine years' time. But there is this to be said of the figures: They are decreasing with the spread of "sane Fourth" laws.

In 1909 the record was 215 killed, 5092 injured—Total casualties 5307, as against a total of 5623 for the year before that. In 1910 the number killed dropped to 131, the wounded to 2792, and the total to 2923 for the entire country. Last year, with the "sane Fourth" in vogue in more places than ever, the amazing result was only 57 killed, only 1546 wounded, and a total of casualties of only 1603—a reduction of almost exactly 4000 in four years, due simply to laws restricting the indiscriminate use of fire crackers and pyrotechnics.

In 1908 the various hospitals of Washington, D. C. treated 104 cases of accidents due to Fourth of July. In 1909, when fireworks were prohibited save under established and expert authority, no one single case was treated in that city!

Is it not worth doing? Why should any city deliberately sanction wholesale slaughter, when it is so clearly evident what a saving of human life may be effected by a little legislation—and its enforcement?—Framingham News.

THE MINISTERS' POSITION.

Atlantic, Mass., June 25, 1912.

To Quincy Daily Ledger, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sirs:—May I have a little space in your paper to make the Ministers' position clear in regard to an article in your issue of June 22nd "Is Sabbath Flying Harmful?"

The writer seemed either to have misunderstood the objections of the clergymen, or did not know their attitude.

To begin with the Ministers took observations from every view point before they protested against the Aviation meet being held on Sunday. They have not protested against any one taking recreation, either behind the "Deacon's horse" or riding in an auto, or swimming, boating, tennis, golf, flying, or any other form of recreation that does not make other men labor for their sport They did not take exceptions to the word "Sport."

They objected to the commercializing of the Lord's Day, and the selfishness that would make a vast army of railroad men and others work to gratify a pleasure-seeking public.

Some of that committee of ministers (Speaking only for themselves) took the most liberal attitude for men in their profession—their liberality would be considered almost too broad for the average laymen. The article spoke about giving 'the working man some consideration.' Every minister, and most likely every priest in Quincy has come from the home of a working man, and it is in the interest of the working man that they have taken their attitude.

At the last meeting of the Ministers, one of the committee who expressed objections to the Aviation meet told of the men from the local Labor Union, asking him to have the ministers take a stand against the Sunday labor which the meet would demand. The same man told of a street car conductor (not a strike breaker) telling him that last week, he worked 108 hours.

Another one of that committee said that the actors, trainmen, and men from all walks of life are looking to the Church to protect them against the greed and commercial cannabalism which is not allowing them a breathing spell even on the Lord's Day.

In regard to the members of the State Militia making experiments in Aviation we all surely know they could do that any day, and would be at liberty to accept the invitation any time as well as Sunday.

The Ministers have considered the workmen, and most can attend either Saturday afternoon, or the Fourth of July. They have also considered the demoralizing effect on the community of having a great mass overrun this section of the city on the Lord's day. The ministers are interested in every scientific invention, and appreciate the sacrifices men make for discovery, but it is one thing for a circus to arrive in town on Sunday morning, and it is quite a different thing to condone a performance.

I consider arguments for and against the Aviation meet on the Lord's Day, would also hold good for a circus.

Respectfully yours
T. W. Davison

MEN WHO FAVOR SUFFRAGE

For Women Submit Review of Statements by Others

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT

The Massachusetts Men's League for Woman Suffrage submits a review of a statement just issued by the Men's Association against Extension of Suffrage, answering the various objections to woman suffrage contained in that statement which are in part:

1. That suffrage is not a natural right. Dr. James Freeman Clarke said: "If all women were forbidden to use the sidewalk, and they compained of the injustice, it would be no answer to tell them that it was not a natural right."

2. That taxation without representation is not tyranny in women's case. If both men and women were taxed, but women alone were allowed to vote on the expenditure of the tax money, men would see a new light on this point.

3. That fewer women than men pay taxes. All citizens pay indirect taxes, and heavy ones.

4. That the Socialist party advocates woman suffrage. It also advocates international peace. Ought we therefore to fight the peace societies? As it happens, every conspicuous triumph that Socialism has thus far won in the United States has been won where women did not vote.

5. That suffrage will make homes unhappy and cause neglect of children If so, the clergy would find it out Julia Ward Howe sent a circular letter to all the ministers of four leading demoninations in the suffrage States asking if the results were good or bad Out of 624 answers received, only 62 were unfavorable. In all the equal suffrage States and countries put together, opponents thus far have not found a dozen respectable men who assert over their own names and addresses that it has had any bad results.

6. That the ballot cannot affect wages. Hon. Carroll D. Wright, National Commissioner of Labor said: "The lack of direct political influence constitutes a powerful reason why women's wages have been kept at a minimum.

7. That it would hurt women's influence. Every vicious interest in Massachusetts would rather contend against the influence of women unenfranchised than of women enfranchised.

8. That city business would be badly managed because women lack business experience. Women have municipal suffrage in England, Scotland, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and several other countries. City government in all these places is better than in America. The corrupt politician everywhere opposes woman suffrage.

9. That civilization advances through division of labor. Its advance has been marked by a growing division of labor among individuals, but not by a growing restriction of the suffrage.

10. That the ballot would add unduly to women's burdens. On the contrary, it would lighten them.

11. That women ought not to vote because they do not fight. Not one of our 48 States makes a man's right to vote depend on his power to bear arms.

As a matter of practical experience, the laws are as well enforced in States and countries where women vote as in those where they do not. Once there was some need for women to take part in war, and their heroic service in the great struggle in Holland will not be forgotten but happily that period has long passed.

The ballot should be granted to women on grounds both of equity and of expediency.

K. OF C. TO GREET LADY FRIENDS

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY

Provisions of New Law Going Into Effect July 1

OF VITAL INTEREST TO ALL

All employers of labor in Massachusetts and their employees, and the dependents of these employees, except domestic servants and farm laborers, are vitally concerned with the provisions of the new Workmen's Compensation Act, which becomes effective July 1st. The new Industrial Accident Board, to which employers under a penalty of $50 for each failure, must send reports of all injuries to their employees, within forty eight hours of the time of the accident, have framed a series of forms and rules for the purpose of making the law effective, which may be had upon application in person, or by mail, at the headquarters of the board in the Pemberton Building, Boston.

If an employee suffers only a minor injury and is incapacitated for not over two weeks, the act requires proper medical and hospital services and medicines when they are needed, to be provided by his employer, through the insurance association or company. If his injury compels him to remain away for a longer period than two weeks, compensatory payments begin immediately at the end of the second week and are based upon half the amount of his average weekly wage, not to exceed $10, not to be less than $4 per week, during the period of his inability to work; not to exceed 500 weeks, or a total compensation of $3,000.

If death results from the injury, payments are to be made to the dependents of the deceased and may cover a period of 300 weeks, thus bridging over a critical period in their lives after the supporting member of the family has been taken away. Special provisions in the law cover a variety of injuries which provide an additional compensation for the loss by severance of both hands at or above the wrist, or both feet at or above the ankle, or the loss of one hand and one foot, or the reduction to one-tenth of normal vision in both eyes with glasses, in which cases payments continue for a period of one hundred weeks in addition to the compensation for disability; for the loss by severance of either hand, above the wrist, or either foot above the ankle, or the reduction to one-tenth of normal vision in either eye with glasses, the additional payments continue for fifty weeks; for the loss at or above the second joint of two or more fingers, including thumbs, the period of compensation is fixed at twenty-five weeks. For minor disabilities, such as the loss by severance of at least one phalange of a finger, thumb or toe, additional payments continue for a period of twelve weeks.

TAUNTON BRIDE FOR QUINCY MAN

Arthur S. Townsend and Cora H. Whittaker Wedded

WILL LIVE IN QUINCY

Mr. Arthur S. Townsend of Quincy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur N. Townsend of Quincy and Miss Cora H. Whittaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Whittaker of Taunton, were united in marriage at the latter city, Tuesday evening.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a brilliant gathering of relatives and friends in the Broadway Congregational church, by the pastor, Rev. Lincoln B. Goodrich, at 6.30 o'clock in the evening. The bride was given away by her father.

The bride was attired in a becoming gown of Ivory satin veiled with a silk marquisette caught up with lilies of the valley. The dress had a long court train. She also wore a large veil fastened with lilies of the valley and carried a shower bouquet of the same sweet flowers.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Florence L. Whittaker of Anthony, R. I. as maid of honor, who wore a gown of blue silk veiled with chiffon and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses.

Rodney C. Walker of Bellows Falls, Vt., was best man. As the bride leaning on the arm of her father, and preceded by the ushers and maid of honor marched up the aisle of the church Prof. Frank Wrigley of Quincy played the wedding march on the church organ. The bridal party was met at the chancel rail by the groom and his best man.

The church was very prettily decorated with white birches and field daisies. A brief reception at the church followed the ceremony and from 7.30 to 9 o'clock another reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The parents of the bride and groom assisted them in receiving the congratulations of their friends.

The ushers at the church and house reception were George H. Gilbert of Taunton, Merrill F. Walker of Newport, R. I., H. Forest Wilson of Quincy and Alfred T. Whittaker of Taunton.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold pendant set with pearls. His gifts to the ushers were monogram signet scarf pins and to the best man monogram cuff links.

The bride's gift to the maid of honor was a monogram signet ring.

After the reception the newly married couple departed on a wedding trip to the western part of New York state and the White Mountains. On their return they will live at Minnehaha cottage, Rock Island, until their new home on No. 27 Avon way, Quincy is completed. They will be at home to friends after December 15.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Brown University of the class of 1905. Mrs. Townsend was formerly a teacher of Latin in the Taunton High school.

ROSBHOUT HIT THE PAVEMENT

As Car Bowled Merrily Along to Its Destination

CHEEKBONE BROKEN

Tahanki Rosbhout of 28 Walnut street fell from an electric car near the Neponset bridge late Tuesday evening and suffered a fracture of the cheek bone. The police ambulance of Station 11 Dorchester was called and he was removed to the Boston City Hospital.

The accident created no end of excitement at the time. Rosbhout was on an Ashmont and Milton car which was followed by Quincy car. As the latter bowled along a short distance from the car barn, the motorman was held up by a crowd on the track. He finally run by, then reversed and went back again. Rosbhout fell or was thrown from the other car which was crowded. No one on the car from which he fell took any notice of his mishap. It is probable that no one noticed his fall. He was picked up unconscious and laid on the steps of a nearby residence until the ambulance arrived.

CHRIST CHURCH PLAN PICNIC

Glen Echo Park, Stoughton, Their Mecca

Christ church picnic will be held at Glen Echo Park, Stoughton, Thursday. If stormy, the following day. A good program of sports has been arranged. Blue and red ribbons will be given as first and second prizes, and two medals, will be awarded the two boys winning the most points in these departments of the Sunday school.

The feature of the day will be the ball game between the Boys' clubs of Christ church and St. Chrysostom's, Wollaston. A handsome cup of burnished copper with pewter trimmings put up by the two churches will be played for. Tomorrow's game will be the first in a series for the possession of the cup.

Special cars will leave Christ church corner of Elm street and Quincy avenue at 8.20, returning leaving the grounds at 5 o'clock.

PICNICKERS TO THE TALL PINES

Church People Young and Old on an Outing

It required three trolley cars to convey the number of children of the Bethany Congregational Church who went on a picnic this morning to Rich Hill Grove, Hingham. The cars started from Quincy Square at 9.30 and it is expected that the party will arrive home this evening about seven. The trip was in charge of Delcevare King.

Six trolley cars, filled with children and parishioners of the Universalist Church, left Quincy Square at 8.30 o'clock this morning bound for Glen Echo Park, where the annual picnic of the parish will be enjoyed. It was a happy sight to witness the numbers of children waving flags and singing songs as they started on their journey. Games of all sorts will be held and the return to Quincy will be made about six o'clock.

WOLLASTONITES COMPLAIN

Over Removal of the Drinking Water at Beach

MOVE FOR ITS RETENTION

The removal by the city of the water facilities at the bathing beach, Wollaston, has been the cause of much complaint by bathers old and young.

For years there has been a faucet, located near the bath houses owned by Arthur E. Linnell, which has been used by hundreds daily.

This year the city has discontinued the service claiming that the bath houses were a private enterprise.

Mr. Linnell takes the reasonable stand that it would be unjust for him to provide a metered service for all the patrons of the beach besides the occupants of his bath houses.

The controversy has resulted in a petition, signed by hundreds asking the city to replace the faucet which has been regarded as one of the fixtures of the beach.

—At a food convention in London some of the scientists decided that a child was enough of an animal to know what it ought to eat, and the best thing to do was to give the youngster what it wants and let it go at that instead of trying to force down such a diet as it manifestly doesn't enjoy. What do parents think of that rule during green-apple time, asks the Salem News.

PARKER'S KEY-NOTE SPEECH

Praises Personnal of the Baltimore Convention

RAPS THIRD TERM ASPIRANT

Great Wealth For the Few Caused by Present Tariff—Republicans Failed to Fulfill Campaign Pledges—Roosevelt, Perkins and the Harvester Trust—All Democrats Are Progressive

Baltimore, June 26.—Alton B. Parker, temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention, spoke as follows on assuming the chair:

We meet while the hills yet echo to wild cries of liar, thief and traitor, and furious wails of fraud, bribery, treachery and corruption, and our ears are weary with the din of the inarticulate shrieking and passionate villification of the most shameful brawl of our political history.

Our candidates, however, are without exception men of such lofty mien that we meet immune from the distemper which seized the Chicago convention, and privileged to discharge a solemn public duty calmly, deliberately, seriously.

The cause of government by the people, the world over, has been materially checked by the disgraceful brawl which terminated in the bedlam of Chicago. Every good citizen has been put to shame by the brutality and the abuse which characterized this wrangle between a president and an ex-president. Gratitude, friendship, party loyalty, patriotism and common decency were forgotten in the tussle.

ALTON B. PARKER

The assault upon the unwritten prohibition against a third term, made in the wild scramble for the Republican nomination, warns us of the vital necessity of incorporating in our constitution a safeguard against repeated terms.

In the very beginning of our constitution-making it was urged by delegates participating that safety required a constitutional limitation of the period of years one man might hold the office of president.

Warning of History

History warned them of the coming of a man whose insatiable lust of power would be as consuming as Caesar's, pessimists to have passed with the towering high above his love of country. The danger seemed, even to the establishment of a precedent by Washington, Jefferson and their successors. Indeed, where lives the man who has not either heard or said, that an unwritten law forbids more than two terms, and if any one could be so fool-hardy as to seek further, he would be crushed by the wrath of a patriotic and intelligent people.

Would the man who threw his hat in the ring and sought to slug his opponent over the ropes in his fight for a third term, rest satisfied with its achievement? Clearly his lust for power would have brooked no such limitation. A third term would have but whetted his desire for more, and as the terms slipped away each renewal would discover greater injury to our constitution, to the form of government established under it and to every legal curb on his imperious will.

Unquestionably, we have been wrong in assuming that a tradition against a third term constitutes a sufficient safeguard against unscruplous ambition for unlimited power. We need a definite constitutional limitation, which shall prevent imperialistic souls from forcing personal continuation in office for long periods or for life, or for the personal selection of a successor in office. And the constitutional provision should go one step farther than our recently assailed tradition. The provision should limit to a single term.

Great Wealth For the Few

In this great country which boasts of a wealth of one hundred and thirty billion as against eighty billions for Germany, all are conscious that a very large part of our wealth has been secured by a small percentage of our population and that the cost of living rises faster than the average income.

The principal cause of all this is to be found in the tariff statues, and in the combinations restraining trade and competition created for the purpose of wringing from the public every dollar which the tariff statutes make possible.

The average of duties under the tariff of 1789 was 8½ percent. Now the average is 50 percent. In 1842 the average was 32 percent. In 1846 it was reduced to 25 percent, which worked so well that a reduction to an average of 20 percent followed in 1857.

Protected interests benefited by two increases during the war, the first to an average of 37½ percent, the second to 47 percent. That high average, then excused solely by the exigencies of the war, is exceeded now, as the average is nearly 50 percent.

The Republican party has thus geared the machine of government to enrich the few at the expense of the many. That increase of 30 percent in the average has taken thousands of millions from the general public and devoted it to the creation of swollen fortunes.

An awakening of the people led the Republican national convention of 1908 by its platform to promise a revision.

In vain did the people demand of congress the fulfilment of the Republican pledge for the masters of that party—the protected interests insisted upon the pound of flesh nominated in the bond and it was yielded. Congress passed and the president signed the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Taft's Tariff Vetoes

One item of this breach of faith was a Democratic house which has acted so wisely and courageously as to arouse the enthusiasm of the people and inspire the Democratic party with justifiable hope of early opportunity to render a public service sorely needed.

Under sagacious and intrepid Democratic leadership special bills have passed having for their purpose a revision of the tariff downward, ultimately to a revenue basis. These bills are known as free list, wool, cotton, metals, chemicals, sugar and excise.

The president's use of the veto power has postponed, however, the hour when the people enter into the enjoyment of the relief proposed, until after the inauguration of the next president.

The temporary failure, owing to the action of the electorate of Canada, of the effort to effectuate reciprocity with that country, is regrettable. The agreement proposed was in the interest of the people of both countries.

All honor to the Democratic house, which stood for the good of the nation as a whole and prevented the repeal of the reciprocity act, thus leaving the door open to Canada if her people shall later elect to accept our proposaal.

For the ills that flow from that tariff increase from an average of twenty percent to fifty, the Republican party is responsible. For the continuance of that rate against the efforts of a Democratic congress, a Republican president is to blame. It is evident, therefore, that relief can only come through the election of a Democratic president and congress.

"Fruitful Mother of Trusts"

During all these years of enforced levies upon the many for the benefit of the few it has been abundanly demonstrated that the tariff is, as accurately described by a trust magnate, "a fruitful mother of trusts."

Mr. Taft said in a speech in 1908 that during the precedent ten years nine-tenths of the combinations to restrain trade had come into existence. During nearly all that time the Republican party was in control of every northern, eastern and western state.

Little was done by the party in power to retard the weedy growth and that little feebly. That an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure was never so forcefully illustrated. The prevention of commissions would have protected all the people and harmed none. The process of declaration punishes the innocent investors, as well as the guilty organizers.

The reason for the encouraging inactivity of the Republican officials is plain. The tariff beneficiaries were and for many years had been contributors to funds of the party in which in turn protected the special privileges enjoyed by the donors. But competition prevented in some instances the collection from the people the sum stipulated in the tariff. To secure it all tempted the cupidity and stimulated the engenuity of the beneficiaries. But one way could not be found—combination to control the price up to the point where the statue let in foreign competition.

Roosevelt and Perkins

The same party which shut out foreign competition was found willing to permit the formation of combinations which effectually banished home competition. The common law on the subject and the Sherman act were treated by Republican officials as repealed by implication. Need it be said that the protected interests, for these larger privileges, made larger contributions.

We are indebted to the president for the evidence that his predecessor, having first enjoyed an interview with George W. Perkins, restrained his attorney general from bringing suit against the Harvester combination.

For the steel corporation he went further for he wrote his attorney general in advance of its absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company that he had decided "to interpose no objection."

Indeed, he apparently stood ready to perform similar kindly offices for all corporations, for he advocated the passage of a statute permitting voluntary submission of all engaged in interstate commerce to federal authority with the advantage to them of immunity from prosecution because of contracts made if stamped in advance with executive approval as reasonable.

The view of executive duty which these acts suggest is diametrically opposite to that of that sterling Democrat, President Jackson, who wrote: "The laws of the United States must be executed. I have no discretionary power on the subject; my duty is emphatically pronounced in the constitution."

Combine's Great Increase

The effort of these and similar acts in the circumstances induced the result which Senator La Follette referred to in a recent speech in these words: "When Roosevelt became president the total amount of the stock and bond issues of all combinations and trusts, including the railways then in combination, was only $3,784,000. When he turned the country over to Taft, whom he elected as his successor, the total capitalization of the trusts and combinations amounted to the enormous sum of $31,672,000, more than 70 percent of which was water."

Whatever of excuses may be offered, the ugly truths is that the Republican national machine has received the moneys of the corporate and individual beneficiaries of the tariff and combinations and in return has compelled congress to keep high tariff rates and their attorney generals to keep closed their eyes to violations of the law.

Not until the special session of congress in 1909, however, did the people generally appreciate that the protected interests held the Republican congress with such an iron grip that congress would repudiate.

The pledge of its party was to revise the tariff as the people understood the promise—downward. Now the truth is appreciated. Of that the election of an overwhelming Democratic majority to the present house is evident. It is still true, however, that many have not discovered that the real power that chained the party to the interests was money contributed to help on campaigns and worse still a large part of the money obtained was not thrust upon the party by the interests, but was wrung through organized importunity in which the public officials took part.

Gentle and Polite

On occasion, even the President of the United States was known to have solicited aid from a big railroad president over whose railroad the executive department might hold a stern or a gentle sway. The presidential attitude was gentle and polite, but firm and insistent.

Several letters failing to produce the sheep for the shearing, another was addressed to "My Dear Mr. Harriman." Mr. Harriman read between the lines of that letter, hurried to Washington, hurried back and promptly raised the quarter of a million dollars demanded and $10,000 over for good measure.

This incident plainly discloses the ligament that binds the Republican party to the interests preying upon the people and defying the law.

The latter furnished the money with which the former debauched the electorate in every debatable state. Adams county, Ohio, is but an illustration of the loathesome conditon which resulted.

A Debauched Party

The time has come when the salvation of the country demands the destruction of the leaders of a debauched party, and the restoration to place and power of men of high ideals who will wage unceasing war against corruption in politics, who will enforce the law against both rich and poor and who will treat guilt as personal and punish it accordingly.

Victory will be ours if we but do our duty this year.

What is our duty? To think alike as to men and measures? Impossible. Even for our great party. There is not a reactionary among us. All Democrats are progressive. But it is inevitably human that we shall not all agree that in a single highway is found the only road to progress, or each make the same man of all our worthy candidates his first choice. It is possible, however, and it is our duty to put aside all selfishness to consent cheerfully that the majority shall speak for each other, and to march out of this convention shoulder to shoulder intoning the praises of our chosen leader—and that will be his due, whichever of the honorable and able men now claiming our attention be chosen.

PARKER WINS OVER BRYAN

Nebraskan Nominated by Kern as Temporary Chairman

CONSERVATIVES IN SADDLE

Parker Secures 579 to Bryan's 510—Majority of New England Delegates For Parker—Kern Withdrew and Invited Parker to Do the Same—Clark's Chances Seem Brightest Now

Baltimore, June 26.—The twenty-first national Democratic convention began its session with a contest between two former candidates for president, William J. Bryan and Alton B. Parker, in a fight for supremacy as temporary chairman of the convention, resulting in a signal defeat of the former.

Today the convention will hear the credential committee report and should effect permanent organization, followed by the adoption of the platform.

The first day's session was opened by Chairman Mack of the national committee, who proposed Judge Parker as temporary chairman.

On the vote for temporary chairman New England delegates cast their ballots as follows:

Connecticut, Parker 12, Bryan 2.
Maine, Parker 11, Bryan 1.
Massachusetts, Parker 15, Bryan 18, O'Gorman 3.
New Hampshire, Parker 3, Bryan 5.
Rhode Island, Parker 10.
Vermont, Parker 8.

The total vote of the convention was Parker 579, Bryan 510, O'Gorman 3, Kern 1.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN

A last desperate effort to avert a bitter factional fight was made by the Bryan forces when the Democratic convention took up the problem of selecting a temporary chairman. So sharp did the lines divide that Mr. Bryan himself became a candidate for the temporary chairmanship. After Bryan had made a speech nominating Senator Kern of Indiana and attacking Alton B. Parker Kern took the stand. He made a plea for harmony, asked Parker to join him in withdrawing from the contest for temporary chairman and substituting any one of a list of several men. After waiting in vain for a reply from Parker, Kern himself withdrew and nominated Bryan. Again Bryan took the platform. He accepted the nomination and the lineup for the struggle was complete.

The vote by which Parker was elected over Bryan—579 to 510—was interpreted in many ways. The Clark adherents are openly claiming the nomination, and there were many at the convention who were inclined to agree that it would either be Clark or a "dark horse."

Talk of Bryan has not ceased by any means. Some of his friends claim the vote was no test; that many of his most ardent supporters were compelled by circumstances to vote against him as temporary chairman. They claimed on the other hand, that the vote of 510 given to Bryan indicated that he held a "veto" power in the convention which put him in a position of dominance as to who should be the nominee.

The conservative element, it may be stated, is practically prepared to accept a radical or progressive candidate. They frankly admit that to name a conservative, or so-called reactionary, would result in strengthening the hand of Roosevelt in his organization of a third party. This the leaders are anxious to avoid.

The turn of political affairs in the past few days is regarded here as having been decidedly favorable to Clark's candidacy. The straight cut Wilson delegates yesterday threw their support solidly to Bryan in his fight against Parker. This, the leaders figured, would make the conservative element choose Clark in preference to the New Jersey governor as the progressive candidate.

There is a report abroad that the ninety votes of New York, a controlling factor in the situation, would go to Clark. This report was based largely upon the action of New York in voting against Bryan. The fact that the Missouri delegation also gave Parker a majority of its votes—22 to 14—quickly called out reports of a coalition of interests between New York and Missouri.

This naturally led to talk of Clark for president and a New York man for vice president. The man mentioned most prominently in this connection was Senator O'Gorman. There was talk last night, also, that the Underwood forces might come into this combination, the plan being that Underwood should have the speakership of the house in the event of Clark's elevation to the presidency.

Most of the Underwood states are said to be against Bryan on almost any proposition whatever. Certain it was that most of the states, located in the solid south, voted against Bryan as temporary chairman.

Judge Parker started to read his speech, but the disorder was so great the effort had to be abandoned and it was read at a night session. Mr. Bryan was not in attendance.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER

Beheaded Body of Unknown Woman Found In Blackstone River

Woonsocket, R. I., June 26.—The headless body of a woman, whose identity is a mystery to the police, was found in the Blackstone river near Janes Grove. The body is thought to have been in the water two months or more, and apparently had been weighted down with a heavy stone when first thrown into the river, but the ropes which held the stone had become loosened and allowed the body to rise.

The woman was about 35 or 40 years of age, and in life would have weighed about 150 pounds, the police say. The hands had been tied behind the back and every particle of clothing removed to conceal the identity. The manner of the severing of the head indicated little or no knowledge of surgery, according to physicians.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

VARIOUS SHORTCAKES.

NOW that so many varieties of fruit are available, or will be available soon, lovers of shortcake have an opportunity to revel in these delicious concoctions.

Some people like a basis of sweet cake, some prefer the biscuit filling, while still others think none so good as the pie crust kind.

For Sweet Shortcake.

Sweet Shortcake.—This recipe will please those who like a sweet shortcake. Take three eggs, a cupful of sugar, two of flour, one scant teaspoonful of cream of tartar, a small half teaspoonful of soda and one tablespoonful of butter. Beat the butter and sugar together and add the eggs, well beaten. Mix the soda and cream of tartar with flour and rub through a sieve. Stir the beaten eggs and sugar into these dry ingredients and bake the batter in four layer tins.

A Biscuit Dough.

Biscuit Shortcake.—Use a pint of sifted flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a cupful of milk, a half teaspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix as for biscuit. When the dough is mixed fill into one large or two small layer cake tins. See that it is even, but do not press down too hard. The less the dough is handled the more delicate it will be. Bake in a brisk oven. This can be broken into halves or baked in two small tins, set one aside and next day repeat and use with a different kind of filling.

A Berry Shortcake.

Special Shortcake.—Boil two cupfuls of sugar in a cupful of water and then let it cool. Separate the whites from yolks of four eggs. Beat the yolks until thick; then add the sirup to them, beating constantly. Now stir in two cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Put in a pinch of salt and one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Then fold in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and dry. Spread in two layer cake pans. Bake in a quick oven. When done remove to a warm platter, spread with sugar and berries crushed. Place on top a thick meringue of beaten egg whites with sugar or whipped cream and sugar. Arrange berries around the cake.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

Billy's father dies, and the lad is taken home by Sinton, who makes provision for his brother and sister.

Margaret finds Billy mischievous, but her heart softens, and he is adopted.

On Sunday, while Mrs. Comstock was in town with the Sintons, Elnora, although repeatedly cautioned not to enter the Limberlost alone, went after specimens and was soon carrying five fine cocoons of different species as her reward. She pushed back her hair and gazed around longingly. A few rods inside she thought she saw cocoons on a bush, to which she went and found several. Sense of caution was rapidly vanishing; she was in a fair way to forget everything and plunge into the swamp when she thought she heard footsteps coming down the trail. She went back and came out almost facing Pete Corson.

That ended her difficulty. She had known him since childhood. When she sat on the front bench of the Brushwood schoolhouse Pete had been one of the big boys at the back of the room. He had been rough and wild, but she never had been afraid of him, and often he had given her pretty things from the swamp.

"What luck!" she cried. "I promised mother I would not go inside the swamp alone, and will you look at the cocoons I've found! There are more just screaming for me to come get them, because the leaves will fall with the first frost, and then the jays and crows will begin to tear them open. I haven't much time, since I'm going to school. You will go with me, Pete! Please say yes! Just a little way!"

"What are those things?" asked the man, his keen black eyes fast upon her.

"They are the cases these big caterpillars spin for winter, and in the spring they come out great night moths, and I can sell them. Oh, Pete, I can sell them for enough to take me through high school and dress me so like the rest that I don't look different, and if I have very good luck I can save some for college. Pete, please go with me?"

"Why don't you go like you always have?"

"Well, the truth is, I had a little scare," said Elnora. "I never did mean to go alone. Sometimes I sort of wandered inside farther than I intended, chasing things. You know Duncan gave me Freckles' books, and I have been gathering moths like he did. Lately I found I could sell them. If I can make a complete collection I can get $300 for it. Three such collections would take me almost through college and I've four years in the high school yet. That's a long time. I might get them."

"Can every kind there is be found here?"

"No; not all of them, but when I get more than I need of one kind I can trade them with collectors farther north and west so I can complete sets. It's the only way I see to earn the money. Look what I have already. Big gray cecropias come from this kind, brown polyphemus from that and green lunas from these. You aren't working on Sunday. Go with me just an hour, Pete!"

The man looked at her narrowly. She was young, wholesome and beautiful. She was innocent, intensely in earnest and she needed the money—he knew that.

"You didn't tell me what scared you," he said.

"Oh, I thought I did! Why, you know, I had Freckles' box packed full of moths and specimens, and one evening I sold some to the Bird Woman. Next morning I found a note telling me it wasn't safe to go inside the swamp. That sort of scared me. I think I'll go alone rather than miss the chance, but I'd be so happy if you would take care of me. Then I could go anywhere I chose, because if I mired you could pull me out. You will take care of me, Pete?"

That was the finishing stroke.

"Yes, I'll take care of you," promised Pete Corson.

"Goody!" said Elnora. "Let's start quick! And Pete, you look at these closely, and when you are hunting or going along the road if one dangles under your nose you cut off the little twig and save it for me, will you?"

"Yes, I'll save you all I see," promised Pete. He pushed back his hat and followed Elnora. She plunged fearlessly through bushes, over underbrush and across dead logs. One minute she was crying wildly that here was a big one, the next she was reaching for a limb above her head or on her knees overturning dead leaves under a hickory or oak tree or pushing aside black muck with her bare hands as she searched for buried pupae cases. For the first hour Pete bent back bushes and followed, carrying what Elnora discovered. Then he found one.

"Is this the kind of thing you are looking for?" he asked bashfully as he presented a wild cherry twig.

"Oh, Pete, that's a promethea! I didn't even hope to find one."

"What's the bird like?" asked Pete.

"Almost black wings," said Elnora, "with clay colored edges and the most wonderful wine colored flush over the under side if it's a male and stronger wine above and below if it's a female. Oh, aren't I happy!"

"How would it do to make what you have into a bunch that we could leave here and come back for them?"

"That would be all right."

Relieved of his load, Pete began work. First he narrowly examined the cocoons Elnora had found. He questioned her as to what other kinds would be like. He began to use the eyes of a trained woodman and hunter in her behalf. He saw several so easily and moved through the forest so softly that Elnora forgot the moths in watching him. Presently she was carrying the specimens and he was making the trips of investigation to see which was a cocoon and which a curled leaf, or he was down on his knees digging around stumps. As he worked he kept asking questions. What kind of logs were best to look beside, what trees were pupae cases most likely to be under, on what bushes did caterpillars spin most frequently? Time passed, as it always does when one's occupation is absorbing.

When the Sintons had taken Mrs. Comstock home they stopped to see if Elnora was safe. She was not at home, and they had not seen her along the way. Mrs. Comstock called about the edge of her woods and received no reply. Then Sinton turned and drove back to the Limberlost. He left Margaret and Mrs. Comstock holding the team and entertaining Billy and entered the swamp.

Elnora and Pete had left a wide trail behind them. Before Sinton had thought of calling he heard voices and approached with some caution. Soon he saw Elnora, her flushed face beaming as she bent with an armload of twigs and branches and talked to a kneeling man.

"Now go cautiously," she was saying. "I am just sure we will find an imperialis here. It's their very kind of a place. There! What did I tell you! Isn't that splendid? Oh, I am so glad you came with me!"

Sinton stood and stared in speechless astonishment, for the man had risen, brushed the dirt from his hands and held out to Elnora a small shining dark pupa case. As his face swung into view Sinton almost cried out, for he was the man of all others Wesley knew with whom he most feared for Elnora's safety. She had him on his knees digging pupae cases for her from the loose swamp loam.

"Elnora!" called Sinton. "Elnora!"

"Oh, Uncle Wesley," cried the girl, "see what luck we've had! I know we have a dozen and a half cocoons, and we have three pupae cases. It's much harder to get the cases because you have to dig for them, and you can't see where to look. But Pete is fine at it. He's found three, and he says he will keep watch along the roads and through the woods as he hunts. Isn't that splendid of him? Uncle Wesley, there is a college over there on the western edge of the swamp. Look closely and you can see the great dome up among the clouds."

"I should say you have had luck," said Sinton, striving to make his voice natural. "But I thought you were not coming to the swamp?"

"Well, I wasn't," said Elnora, "but I couldn't find many anywhere else, honest I couldn't, and just as soon as I came to the edge I began to see them here. I kept my promise. I didn't come in alone. Pete came with me. He's so strong. He isn't afraid of anything, and he's perfectly splendid to locate cocoons. He's found half of these. Come on, Pete. It's getting dark now, and we must go."

They started for the trail, Pete carrying the cocoons. He left them at the edge, while Elnora and Sinton went on to the carriage together.

"Elnora Comstock, what does this mean?" demanded her mother.

"It's all right. One of the neighbors was with her, and she got several dollars' worth of stuff," interposed Sinton.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WHOLLY NEW PARTY PLANNED

Roosevelt Refused the Regular Nomination at Chicago

IS STATEMENT NOW ISSUED

Says It Was His For the Asking—Proposition Made by Southern Delegates

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 26.—Colonel Roosevelt, after a visit to his editorial rooms, upon his return from Chicago, came directly to his home.

He said he had no statement to give out at present, but added that probably within a week there will be a conference in New York with members of the committee selected to conduct this third party campaign.

As an indication of his determination to build a new party from the ground up and not to consider an independent Republican party, he said that when he rested at Oyster Bay he would communicate with a number of Democrats, whom he thought might wish to join the new party. When he had left Chicago with the first plans completed and his leaders scattered in all parts of the country, Roosevelt expressed himself as pleased with the outcome of the week, although it was unexpected to him.

The Republican nomination for president, Colonel Roosevelt said, was his for the asking on the day that President Taft was renominated. He declined to accept it, he said, on the terms under which the offer was made. On his way back to Oyster Bay the former president gave a glimpse into the secret history of the last day of the convention, on which it was apparent that the tide of battle was resistlessly against him. It was a plan to seize control of the convention at the last moment by a sudden move, overturn the Taft majority and make Roosevelt the nominee. This was the story as he told it:

Early Saturday morning a group of delegates from southern states arranged a private interview with Colonel Roosevelt. They told him they had come to offer him the nomination. They had with them a list of the known Roosevelt delegates, and stated that they were authorized to speak for a block of Taft delegates who were willing to swing over to Roosevelt to avert a rupture in the party, large enough to nominate him or any other candidate he might name."

One provision was made, Colonel Roosevelt continued. It was that he must accept the nomination from the convention as then composed and not insist upon removal of the seventy-eight delegates whom he contended were fraudulent before he would recognize any act of the convention.

Colonel Roosevelt said he informed these emissaries that if he should be nominated under these conditions he would not accept the nomination. He told them to go to the delegates whom they represented and bring back to him a pledge signed by thirty delegates agreeing to combine with the Roosevelt delegates and make the attempt to start all over again to organize the convention and to unseat the seventy-eight contested delegates. The attempt failed. Colonel Roosevelt said that a considerable number of signatures to the pledge were obtained, but that it had proved impossible to hold a sufficiently large part of the delegates in line for the course of action upon which he insisted to give it the chance of success.

$1000 FOR THE CELEBRATION

Objected to by Marshall Adams Who Presents His Reasons

Editor Quincy Ledger:—

For a city which is struggling to keep its tax rate for the current year below $23 the appropriation of $1,000 by the City Council towards the 4th of July celebration is ridiculous in the extreme. This poor city of ours is, acording to all accounts, both official and unofficial in an extremely precarious financial condition: Mayor Stone has pared the annual budget so close that some of the departments claim that they are being operated under crippled conditions. If Mayor Stone signs this needlessly extravagant $1,000 appropriation what will we poor taxpayers think of his professed economies in the budget? Keep the tax rate down and hang up the $1,000 order for another year. The citizens are giving liberally towards the celebration. For the city to borrow $1,000 and pay interest on it to help celebrate the glorious 4th shows how lacking our Council is in level headed business men. Shades of the "Wisdom Corner," What are we coming to?

June 26, 1912. Marshall Adams.

GOVERNOR'S HANDS OFF.

The Governor of New Mexico has decided not to interfere with the proposed fight between Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn and the contest will take place at Las Vegas on July 4 as per schedule unless one or the other of the contestants get cold feet.

READY TO OIL ALL STREETS

Abutters Have Only to Put up The Four Cents Per Foot

AND THE TRICK IS DONE

Several strets not down in the schedule passed by the City Council to be watered or oiled have been oiled this week, and has occasioned some comment the report being circulated being that the parties on that street had a pull wih the administration. Commissioner Tupper when seen this noon about the oiling of such streets said that there were a number that had been oiled and that the expense of the oiling had been paid for by the parties in front of whose property the street was oiled. He stated that any resident of the city could have the street in front of his premises oiled by paying for it. All that was necessary was to call at his office at City hall and deposit the sum of four cents per running foot and the street would be oiled at once which would be about all that was required for the season.

It will doubtless be good news to many to learn that they can thus have the dust laid in front of their premises if they wanted to pay for it.

BOYS CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Were Having Gay Time in Latour's Store

WHEN MORRISON ARRIVED

A youngster who gave his name as Antonio Cornelius, of Revere road, was caught by James K. Morrison, proprietor of the Morrison dry goods store at 11 Cottage avenue, in the act of stealing goods from the store of John Latour, 9 Cottage street, shortly after four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Two other lads were with Cornelius at the time, but managed to escape.

Cornelius admitted the theft and said that his two pals were Charles Meehan and Walter Teasdale. It seems that the proprietor of the store had gone away for a few minutes and had locked the door. The lads it is said gained entrance through a window in the rear of the store and when the youth in question was caught, a number of packages of fish, together with nine or ten pounds of crackers and other articles of food, were found which the lads had evidently passed through the window, preparatory to taking away with them.

The Sunday previous, Latour said that he had left seventy cents in pennies in the cash register and missed them Monday morning, together with some frankfurts and milk which must have been stolen, since he was sure he had locked the doors. Latour has called the attention of the police to the matter.

MORE MUSIC NEEDED FOR PARADE CRY OF FOURTH BAND COMMITTEE

Auto Show Will Travel Over 12 Miles of Road. Other Line in Proportion

Money Needed Now to Make Plans of Committee Success

A well attended meeting of the July 4th celebration committee was held Wednesday evening. In the absence of President Stone, James H. Elcock presided. Partial reports were received from the collectors which showed that there had now been collected $600.

Nothing definite has as yet been decided by the Mayor as to how much of the $1,000 appropriated by the City Council shall be devoted to paying the bills of this association. Last year Mayor Shea gave the central association $800 and the Atlantic people $200, and it is fair to presume that some such division of the amount will be made this year.

Taking this as a basis the celebration committee have practically $1,400 at its disposal at the present time. As sums aggregating $1,600 have been appropriated it will be seen that between now and the Fourth it will be necessary for the collectors to get in at least $200 and even more should be collected to carry out what the committee desire and make this year's celebration eclipse anything of the kind ever held in this city.

President Elcock endeavored to impress this fact on the collectors and until it is known just what the committee can depend on some of the features desired are held in abeyance.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide chairman of the automobile parade said that the auto parade would go into every ward of the city. While a definite route has not as yet been arranged the route as roughly drafted covered about 12 miles.

Ex-Councilman William H. Flynn spoke at length about the antique parade entering Ward Two. He said that a number had spoken to him who felt that the Ward had been slighted last year in this respect. He knew for a fact that if it was assured that the parade was to enter Ward Two considerable more money would be contributed.

Capt. George A. Wardwell chairman of the parade committee said that is was impossible on a hot day, and unfair to ask the men marching in the line, who were weighted down with uniforms and paraphenalia, to go over too long a march. While the definite line of the parade had not as yet been given out he could assure Mr. Flynn that the parade would enter Ward Two. It was also proposed that it should take in a part of Wards 3 and 4.

The matter of athletic sports was then taken up. G. B. Bates, president and Charlie Ganzel, vice-president of the City League stated that at a meeting of the directors of the league action had been taken on the Fourth of July games. This was one of the best paying days of the league, and it had scheduled two games for that day. If the committee would guarantee them $200 both the league games would be played at Merrymount park in the afternoon. They believed this would be a big drawing card and while even at that price the league would be losing money it was willing to co-operate with the committee.

They fully realized the financial condition of the committee but said that they could almost guarantee that $100 could easily be raised by selling score cards. Mr. Ganzel said that he would guarantee two or three ads on the score card at $5 each, which would more than pay for the printing. From past experience he knew that $100 could be easily raised in this way.

While it was most desirable that these games should be played on the park as outlined the committee did not feel warranted at this time in closing this event. Mr. Ganzel and Mr. Bates then said that they would hold the matter open until Saturday night.

At the suggestion of James E. Neary, chairman of the athletic sports it was voted to have amateur ball games in Wards 2, 3 and 4, and a running race closed to Quincy runners.

Mr. Neary stated that at the present time he had but four amateur teams and their games had been arranged as follows.

The Starling Outing club and the Orients would play on the Ward Three grounds at 3.30 o'clock.

The Y. M. C. A. and Colonials would play on the Ward Two grounds at 4 o'clock.

The Town River Yacht club had agreed to arrange their water sports about one o'clock so as not to interfere with this game and at the water sports it would be announced that the ball game would be played at four o'clock. The sum of $10 would be given for each of the ball games. He also stated that he hoped to be able to arrange for a game in Ward 4.

The running race would be a feature of the day. This race will be open to all Quincy athletes. Prizes would be given for the first six places in addition to a time prize.

Applications for entries for this race should be made to Mr. Neary or to A. F. LaRose, physical instructor at the Y. M. C. A.

The entries for this race will close July 3.

The route of the runners as outlined by Mr. Neary is as follows:

Starting in City Square they wil go up Hancock street, to Quincy avenue,

CONSISTORY DESCRIBED

By Wm. F. Kenny Who Made Trip With Card. O'Connell

AT K. OF C. LADIES' NIGHT

A large number were treated to a most interesting lecture on the "Papal Consistory at Rome," illustrated by stereopticon, given in Colonial hall, Wednesday evening by William F. Kenney, who accompanied Cardinal O'Connell to Rome.

The occasion was the "Ladies' Night" held under the auspices of Quincy Council, No. 96, Knights of Columbus.

The guests of the evening included Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of St. John's Church and assistant, Rev. Fr. John J. Casey, Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic and City Solicitor John W. McAnarney.

Previous to the lecture an entertainment took place and all the contributors to this portion of the program rendered their respective numbers in a manner that caused them to merit prolonged applause.

Marcus Mahon, assisted by his brother John Mahon, organist at St. John's Church, gave a violin solo that was most favorably received and appreciated.

This was followed by a reading by Miss Margaret Heaney, which was so impressive that she was forced to respond to an encore. Her impersonations were the subject of much favorable comment and her talent fully appreciated

A soprano solo by Miss May McManus with Miss Margaret McManus as accompanist proved a decided hit. The varied tones of her sweet voice captivated the audience and her work elicited loud applause.

Miss Margaret White and Miss Florence White rendered a violin duet and their playing evoked the greatest possible appreciation on the part of the audience.

The last contributor to the musical program was Master Edward Roddan, who made a decided hit with a cornet solo. His sister Miss Helen Roddan played the accompaniment. The youngster took the entire audience by complete surprise and was forced to respond to several encores. His calm manner of rendition immediately made him a favorite and his work was such as would reflect credit upon professional talent.

At the conclusion of the concert, Grand Knight Edward D. Barrett presented the lecturer of the evening in William F. Kenney. The speaker started in by telling of his many experiences with the Knights of Columbus, especially among the pioneers of the order. He brought to mind the time when the local order was instituted, adding that it was a night about as hot as Wednesday night, and even hotter at certain times.

He then went on to tell of the great demonstration manifested when it became known that three distinguished American members of the Hierarchy were to be raised to the Cardinalate by Pope Pius X. Mr. Kenney took his auditors with him from Boston, until arrival was made at Rome, showing slides of many incidents that happened on the journey. The most interesting portion of the lecture concerned the magnificent ceremonies at Rome, when thirteen achbishops were made cardinals.

Various buildings and historical places, together with a number of pictures of famous places, added to the interest of the lecture.

The great personality of Cardinal O'Connell occupied a considerable part of Mr. Kenney's lecture. He spoke of his broad minded spirit and the manner in which he had appealed to all the passengers on the boat, talking and chatting with them and even playing the piano and singing to their pleasure.

He told of how the Bishop of Gibralter had come to greet the American Cardinals when the ship passed through there. The speaker went into a lengthy description of different places in Rome.

WILSON LOOMS UP AS PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY

Friends of Governor Foss Have Not Given Up Hope That He Will Not Land the Job

Strong Feeling That Convention will Nominate Candidates Today

(Special to the Quincy Ledger)

Baltimore, June 27—Everything is quiet along the Potomac today.

The avrogation of the Unit rule yesterday was a victory for Woodrow Wilson.

Wilson looms up bigger than ever as a presidential possibility.

It is expected that the convention will reach the nomination for President and Vice president today.

Neither of the candidates has a clean majority.

It takes a two thirds vote to nominate.

This means that some will be deserted by their delegates.

The Massachusetts people still have hopes of nominating Foss. Plenty of Foss literature is being distributed.

No candidate will win on the first ballot.

There is also a growing feeling that the name of William Jennings Bryan will be placed in nomination.

The name of Gov. Foss will not be mentioned until the fourth ballot.

INDISPOSITION PREVENTED FURNALD IN FLIGHTY WEDDING

Couple Wanted Him to Go Up in an Aeroplane With Them and Perform Ceremony

Despite His 84 Years and Illness Now Sorry He Did Not

Because he happened to be feeling unwell, Napoleon B. Furnald, 82 years old, of 90 Washington street, the well-known constable and justice of the peace, did not accept the offer made to him Tuesday afternoon to unite a couple in wedlock, while soaring aloft in an aeroplane. The gentleman who seemed to be the most interested in the scheme, implored. Mr. Furnald for fully ten minutes to comply with the requests, but all his efforts were in vain.

According to Mr. Furnald, the party, comprising two men and three ladies drove up to his home in an automobile. One of the gentlemen alighted from the machine and asked for Mr. Furnald. The latter happened to be in the yard at the time and asked the man what he wanted.

„Is this Mr. Furnald?" asked the stranger. "Yes sir," was the prompt reply. "Are you a justice o f the peace."

"I am, sir."

"Well would you like to marry a couple in an aeroplane?"

Mr. Furnald would have been tickled to death to have been a participant in this novel undertaking, but just at that time he was not feeling up to concert pitch and so was forced to decline. "If they came yesterday or today I should have gone with them all right and tied the knot," he said. He did not find out who the parties were or where they came from. All he knew about them was the number on the automobile, which was 34377.

Mr. Furnald is now sorry he did not accept. He is feeling well now and hopes that the parties concerned will again come and make him the offer. He is especially anxious to perform such a service and regrets very much that his condition at the time forced him to reject the opportunity.

WILL LIVE IN QUINCY.

Most sock makers take care of the toe and heel, but let the sole and ankle take care of themselves.

The makers wear-proof the toe, heel, sole and ankle of Interwoven Socks

It's done by machines that are almost human—invented, owned, built and operated exclusively by the Interwoven Stocking Company.

That is why Interwovens are the only light-weight socks that really wear.

Perhaps you don't know this: It took the makers 50 years to perfect the interwoven process---to make light-weight socks that will wear as well as or better than heavy, clumsy ones. Being knit to form, the shape and fit of Interwoven Socks are permanent. Ten million pairs of Interwoven Socks were sold in the United States the past year---more than of any other millbrand. Try one pair---will convince you.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Taft managers need a board of strategy to blue pencil some of the screeches of "has beens" in the party, who are rushing into print about party loyalty without regard to the conditions of the country, for the sake of getting on the band wagon. The contest this year is bigger and broader than any party movement. The party that wins must give some assurance to the people that the hippodrome efforts to relieve the high cost of living must cease and a determined and successful campaign along those lines inaugurated.

Are we to have another repetition of the fearfully warm wave of a year ago?

It is to be hoped that the success of the Squantum aviation meet will not be marred by any distressing accident.

Get into line for the Fourth of July celebration.

Is it possible that the acting Mayor carries his bandanna at the lower extremity?

People suffering from the heat of those warm days find considerable relief in evening rides.

Morgan the guest of the Kaiser. Can any one assert with any idea of accuracy the limit of the game?

China objects to the proposed loan but as she is in the grip of the octopus will probably have to submit.

The office devil is on a picnic today. Some people unkindly assert that he is having a picnic with the gang all the time.

All hail the introduction of the non-combustible moving picture films.

The man who tried to bribe his wife by taking her to a show the other night found it warmer at the theatre than at home.

An amendment to the constitution to limit the terms of presidents would save us from the fate of Mexico at the hands of Diaz.

Women of West End, Boston, have closed the Kosher shops. That does not relieve the situation. The meat barons still control the situation and the poor retailers are the only sufferers from loss of business.

The new party has just two custodians in Massachusetts to date. They will not need an aviation field in which to stow their followers.

Congress has failed to pass the naval appropriation bill and the navy yards must close throwing thousands out of employment. Look in the dictionary to find the names hard enough to call that congressional bunch.

If the Democratic delegates do not find it warm enough in Baltimore they can take a trip over to Sparrow's point.

THE ITALIAN—TURCO WAR.

The Italian-Turco war goes merrily on, or at least we have not heard anything about a discontinuance of hostilities. But then the bloodless carnage of words at both Chicago and Baltimore have knocked almost everything else from the newspaper headlines.

Where are the peace advocates? Where are the men who are so eager to preserve the peace of the world that they are never at peace with any one but forever attempting to make other people more observant of the golden rule.

Wake up gentlemen there is a chance to win, fame and fortune by butting into this thing. The fame will come first and then a lecture tour under a good press agent will bring in the fortune to wind up in the soft padded chair of an editor which is only working about one hour in every calendar month.

MODEST BILL SULZER.

Congressman William Sulzer of New York is described as one of the most delightfully modest men now enjoying the privileges of public life. Sulzer has been elected for several years as a Democrat in New York Republican city district. He has spurned Tammany hall, twisted the tail of the tiger until that animal has changed its spots and still Congressman "Bill" holds his congressional job. That certainly is a wonderful record. He must have a secret of some kind which no doubt the numerous slaughtered innocents at the two conventions would be willing to come down handsomely to learn. The congressman may be modest but in the strictest confidence it can be communicated to a few that he has a pres agent who is by no means handicapped by this retiring quality of the aforesaid chief. The press agent's diatribe of "Sulzer" is of the screeching, mushy kind that one should take with a small portion of "lemon." Just at present this delightfully modest New York congressman is pursuing a still, silent and retiring hunt for the democratic nomination for vice president. He can find places enough to hide and retire in at Baltimore.

HANDY AT HOUSEWORK.

Isaac Danielson, weighing 200 pounds is a handy man around the house and does all the work while his better half patters out each day to a millinery shop and makes the living for both. The other day however Ike fell by the wayside. His better half gave him 50 cents to go out and buy thread. Drinks appealed to him however and he stood up in front of the bar until he had lost all attachment to that 50 cents and then the police gathered him up. He admitted his wife could make more money than he could. The wife thought he would be more useful at home than in jail as he could do the housework which she could not. "Ike" went back to his pots and pans and Mrs. "Ike" trudged off to the millinery parlors. And that man can vote. The woman—may be she does not want the weapon of the ballot but she is more entitled to it than that misplaced 200 pound kitchen artist.

ANGRY COUNSEL.

Counsel in the case of Clarence Darrow on trial at Los Angeles, Cal., for alleged bribery acts in the trial of the McNamara brothers, are becoming forceful instead of argumentative and eloquent. The other day, one advanced towards another in a threatening attitude, and when restrained raised an inkwell as if to hurl it.

Pretty conduct for gentlemanly members of the bar. An apology to the court came just before adjournment. Rather a belated courtesy to the representative of the law of the state. The affair came near precipitating a free for all fight between the attorneys.

The court mildly characterized it a "hysterical outburst." But how would it have been named if indulged in by people of less power and influence and what would have been the result?

ROSE TEA.

Miss Bertha Fuller gave a Rose Tea to some of her friends Tuesday, at her home on Botolph street. The table decorations were very pretty, being roses. The menu consisted of cold tongue, vegetables, rolls, ice cream, cake, candy and nuts.

The evening was very pleasantly spent playing games, those who won prizes in the different games being Laura Daniels of Hollis avenue, Evelyn Luke of Billings street and Marion Wilson of Hollis avenue. Those present were:—Laura Daniels, Helen Dayman, Evelyn Luke, Viola Jackson, Beatrice Rogers, Marion Wilson.

The house was prettily decorated withcrimson ramblers, pinks and roses Amid a shower of good wishes and confetti the couple left on a short wedding trip. They will be at home to their friends after September 1st at 69 Goddard street, Quincy.

Both young people are well known and popular among a host of friends in and around Quincy, the groom having been president of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. CONSISTORY DESCRIBED roundings were described at length and a resume of the Notification ceremonies, at which a messenger came from the Pope and announced the good tidings to the three American archbishops. He added that Archbishop Falconio answered the message.

A copy of the message was shown on the slide. The conferring of the Berretta at the Vatican, attended by the personal friends of the Cardinals-to-be, was also shown, as well as an enlarged picture of the red hat.

Mr. Kenney showed a number of pictures of different pilgrimages. The magnificent ceremonies which were witnessed by 10,000 people.

The hotel Quirinal, where Cardinal O'Connell and suite stayed while at Rome was described in detail and the wonderful paintings of Michael Angelo were shown and described to great advantage.

Mr. Kenney spoke of Cardinal O'Connell's eloquent speech on the "Irish Race" delivered at the ceremonies held when he took possession of his titular church at Rome.

Various other features attending the ceremonies were told of and the speaker was tendered a rising vote of thanks at the conclusion of his address. Dr. A. H. Gilson worked the slides.

Refreshments were served at the close of the lecture and the floor was then cleared for dancing, which was enjoyed till midnight. The affair was in charge of Grand Knight Edward D. Barrett and Lecturer Andrew Driscoll.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Tells of Work Accomplished and to Be Done

San Francisco, June 27.—In her valedictory Mrs. Philip N. Moore of St. Louis, retiring president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, declared the general federation now is united as never before.

Among the accomplishments listed, Mrs. Moore said the country at large had the club women to thank for the pure food law, the preservation of Niagara Falls from the greed of power companies, the passage of the Weeks bill for the conservation of forest lands, and much legislation looking to the welfare of women and children.

For the future she urged that woman address themselves particularly to international and industrial peace, regulation of the industrial peace, regulation of the press and the drama, education, inspection of factories and a closer watch on national legislation affecting social and civic life.

The Sunday comic supplement came in for sharp criticism as actually "vicious." "Cannot we have a supplement," asked Mrs. Moore, "that is actually artistic and truly humorous?"

Details of divorce, scandals and crimes, she thought, were less and less tolerable to women. "An item of news," she said, "we must accept, but the unsavory details are no longer news."

MARRIED IN BOSTON CHURCH

Wollaston Girl the Bride of Easton Man

SUPPER AT SOMERSET

A wedding of much interest to the many friends of the bride in this vicinity occurred in Boston on Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, when Miss Mabel Norton Simmons, niece of Mrs. Fannie Ellen Davis, became the bride of Mr. Daniel E. Steckel of Easton, Penn.

The ceremony took place at the Central Congregational church, corner of Newbury and Berkeley streets, in the presence of only the immediate members of the families and was performed by the pastor Rev. Herbert D. Gallaudet. The impressive ring service of the Presbyterian Church was used.

Thompson Stone presided at the organ as the bridal party entered the church and played appropriate selections throughout the ceremony. The church decorations consisted of lilies palms and bay trees. The bride was attended by Miss Marion Louise Simmons as maid of honor, and was given in marriage by her brother Howard Simmons. The groom was attended by Ralph R. Simmons. The bride was attired in a gown of white charmeuse trimmed with rose point lace and wore a becoming bridal cap of Duchess lace. She carried a shower boquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. Her only ornament was a diamond lavallier set in platinum, a gift of the bridegroom.

The maid of honor wore a pink gown of crepe meteor, and a pink plumed hat and carried a boquet of Killarney roses. An interesting feature of the nuptials was the lighting of the magnificent lantern over the chancel, which illuminated the artistic interior of the church, during the entire ceremony. an effect that has been used but once before at church weddings in the past twenty years. Immediately following the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the Hotel Somerset on Commonwealth avenue.

The bridegroom who is engaged in the practice of law at Easton, Pa., is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Steckel. He is a graduate of Lafayette College and the Law Department of the University of Penn., and is a member of the Zeta Psi fraternity. Following an extended wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Steckel will make their home on Mt. Jefferson, Easton, Pa. The bride carries with her the best wishes of the host of friends for her future happiness in her new home.

QUINN SKIPPED BUT CAME BACK

The Officers Nabbed Him and He Was Fined $25

James J. Quinn was arrested by officer Milford, Wednesday on a warrant charging him with assault on Thomas Robinson the gate tender at the West Quincy depot May 25. At that time two other young men were arrested for alleged complicity in the same assault and discharged. Quinn, however, skipped and did not come back until Wednesday when he was arrested. Robnson testified that without provocation Quinn struck him twice. The court imposed a fine of $25 and then gave him until December 31, to raise the money.

PLEASING PROGRAMME

Presented at Musicale of Mrs. Darling's Pupils

A concert and recital was given by the pupils of Mrs. Amy F. Codding Darling in the Wollaston Methodist church, Wednesday evening.

The pupils were assisted by Miss R. Maude Alletzhauzer of Atlantic violincello; Miss Nina Oschman reader and Miss Agnes Ruggles accompanist.

The programme opened with two duets by Miss Annie Connors and Mrs. Darling. They were the "Wanderers night song" by Rubinstein and "When life is brightest" by Pinsuti.

"An old English dance" was played on the piano by Miss Cecelia Corcoran and was followed by a vocal solo, "Sweet Cosette" by Miss Connors.

Miss Oschman of the Curry School of Expression gave a number of readings that were well received. Among them were "The Thanksgiving dinner" and "The sweethearts."

Two vocal solos "Yellow roses" and "Confession" by Rogers were sung by Miss Alletzhauser accompanied by Mrs. Darling.

The trio "Lift thine eyes" from "Elijah "by Mendelssohn was finely given by Miss Connors, Mrs. Darling and Miss Alletzhauser. A 'cello solo by Miss Alletzhauser closed the first part of the evening.

Miss Helen Walsh rendered "Happy hearts a-Maying" by Coffman in such a pleasing manner that she was loudly encore and responded with "Star so bright." A piano solo by Miss Leonora Corcoran followed.

A duet "O that we two were Maying" by Miss Connors and Mrs. Darling was followed by readings by Miss Oschman including "Joining the Masons" "Teacher" and "A cabinet courtship."

Storer R. Wiggin was one of the hits of the evening and sang the "Bedouin love song" by Pinsuti and "Old friends" in good voice.

"Cavatina" a solo by Mrs. Darling with 'cello obligato was very effective. The evening closed with a trio by Morse "Queen of the night."

The pupils all showed the result of Mrs. Darling's training and were well received. As an accompanist Miss Ruggles could not be excelled.

It was voted to appropriate $50 for incidental expenses of the general committee , such as postage, typeing, etc.

It was announced for Charles H. Johnson that with an appropriation of $100 he could supply 1,000 children with ice cream cones and peanuts, and would secure permission to use the open space between the City Hall and the cemetery for the distribution. This matter will also be settled Saturday night. The committee will do something for the children if some other feature is eliminated for that purpose.

For half an hour before the meeting the Quincy Fife and Drum Corps paraded through City Square with red lights. They also carried cards announcing the Fourth of July celebration. This served to call attention that the committee was in session and that if any one had not as yet dropped their mite in the box now was the accepted time.

The meeting adjourned at 10.30 to meet again Saturday night. At this adjourned meeting the amounts available for the celebration will be definitely settled upon.

T. R. WATCHING THE DEMOCRATS

Sees Parallel With Conditions at Chicago

FORECAST MADE AT BALTIMORE

Colonel Keeping In Close Touch With Democratic Situation—Progressive Committee Will Not Meet Until After Democratic Convention—One Democrat Believes New Party Will Secure Recruits From Baltimore

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 27.—Colonel Roosevelt was greatly pleased at the news from Baltimore. He showed how closely he was keeping in touch with the situation there by reciting the vote by which William J. Bryan had been defeated a short time before in his contest with Alton B. Parker over the temporary chairmanship.

"Doesn't that remind you of what happened in Chicago?' he asked. "They are making the same fight at Baltimore. That is good. One thing is plain, that Mr. Murphy will never make peace with Mr. Bryan."

Colonel Roosevelt said apparently the issue among the Democrats was fundamentally the same is in the Republican convention. Should serious differences develop, it is his belief that the new party will profit by it, in the way of receiving support from disaffected Democrats. With this in mind, Colonel Roosevelt and his associates will take no definite steps until the Democratic convention has come to an end. He said that the first meeting of the temporary committee on organization, announced by Governor Johnson of California, would be deferred until after the Democrats have named their ticket and that it probably would be held the latter part of next week. The meeting is to be held in New York. Its chief work will be to fix the date for the national convention and issue the call.

"There is one thing which I would like to make clear," said Colonel Roosevelt. "It is that the temporary committee is in no sense a national committee in the ordinary acceptance of the term. It was selected simply for the purpose of taking the first step and calling the convention."

Each state, he said, would select its own national committeeman, and there was no guarantee that any man on the list would be the representative of his state after the convention. The only action which will be taken pending the news from Baltimore, Colonel Roosevelt said, would be the organiaztion of party machinery in the various states.

Baltimore, June 27.—"I firmly believe," said a Democrat, who is a late comer into the ranks of Thomas Jefferson, "that the 510 who voted for Bryan for temporary chairman of the convention are the nucleus for the strength which Roosevelt's new party will draw from the Democratic organization. They represent anti-machine Democracy just as surely as the ballots of the 356 men in the Chicago convention cast for McGovern represented the spirit of the men who had pledged themselves to work for the downfall of the old Republican organization and the building up of a new order of things political."

The speaker was talking to a group of newspaper men in Belvidere hotel. The speaker represented not himself alone, but also many others like-minded who are in Baltimore today. Although the idea only dates from Saturday last, it is already general and everywhere in this city one hears the hope expressed by those who are interested in the progressive movement that the old Democracy will hurry and put through its prearranged program so that the new party may speedily get under way. The Wilson element is ready and impatient for this moment to come. So are some of the Bryan men, though among them one hears more often expressed the hope that by some miracle yet to be achieved by the brilliant personality of the Nebraskan the regular organization may be brought around to see that it is time for the old Democracy to cease being conservative and become actually radical and hence satisfactory to the thousands of voters who are demanding radicalism in a more militant form than is provided for them by either of the two parties as now constituted.

The opening of the third day of the Democratic convention, therefore, finds many in Baltimore looking forward to a cut-and-dried schedule, ending with the nomination of Clark, or possibly some neutral dark horse, but ending in such a manner that the logical first step will be for the progressives who like progress better than party regularity to step out for themselves and join with the new movement. A week ago such a suggestion would have been received with incredulity. Seven days have wrought such great change that this suggestion is now commonplace and enters into the reckonings even of the most seasoned of the reactionary politicians.

NO CLUE TO MYSTERY

No Woman Missing In or Around Woonsocket

Woonsocket, R. I., June 27.—The police are still without a clew to the identity of the headless body of a woman which was found in the Blackstone river.

The river was dragged in an effort to recover the head. So far as the police can learn no woman is missing from this city, and they made inquiries of nearby cities and towns with regard to missing women.

A Beverly Fire

Beverly, Mass., June 27.—Flames bursting from the old Barker barn swept away two three deck tenements, made fourteen families homeless, and for a time threatened a large area of this city, with a total loss of about $35,600.

GROTESQUE STUPIDITY.

Some of Stanley's Experiences With the African Natives.

The natives of central Africa are described by the late Sir Henry M. Stanley in his autobiography as being incredibly stupid. He tells, for example, of one native who, with another man, was sent in a canoe across a river to fetch a company of men to camp. After waiting an hour Stanley went to the river, where he found the two paddling each in an opposite direction and blaming the other for his stupidity. They were in a passion of excitement and quite unable to hear the advice of the men across the river, who were bawling directions to them how to manage their canoe.

Another stupid fellow was generally saved from punishment because his mistakes were so absurd. One day we were floating down the Kongo. Near camping time, as he happened to be bow man, I bade him stand by and when I called out seize the grass on the bank to stop the boat. In a little while we came to a fit place, and I cried, "Hold hard, Kirango!"

"Please God, master," he replied and forthwith sprang on shore and seized the grass with both hands while we, of course, were rapidly swept on down stream.

The boat's crew roared at the ridiculous sight. Nevertheless his stupidity cost the tired men a hard pull up river, for not every place was available for a camp.

National Cash Register Loses

Cincinnati, June 27.—Judge Hollister in the United States district court overruled a demurrer to the indictments filed by attorneys for the thirty officers and employes of the National Cash Register company of Dayton, who, it is alleged, engaged in a conspiracy in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

THE EYE OF GENIUS.

And the Strain of the Nervous System Due to Defective Vision.

Much was made in the newspapers some years ago of the part bad eyes have played in the lives of great musicians and writers. What was called "the eye of genius" was illustrated in many portraits, notably the Lenbach paintings of Richard Wagner, in which one eye droops and is surrounded by concentric wrinkles of pain. The great composer's sick headache and insomnia, his shattered nerves and fits of violent temper, were attributed to eye strain. The diagnosis has since been accepted by his biographer, Ellis, himself a physician. Similar if less conclusive cases have been made out to explain the lifelong suffering of George Eliot, Browning, the Carlyles, Darwin, Huxley, Herbert Spencer, Balzac, Taine, Nietzsche, Tschaikowsky and others.

The straining of the nervous system due to defective vision is to be found among all who use their eyes in work near at hand. "The eye of genius" is as common among typesetters and proofreaders, reporters and typewriters, bookkeepers, lathe workers and seamstresses as among the master spirits of music and letters. It is, in fact, more common, for whereas the fortunate few are able to choose their time and place of labor, to find rest and recuperation when they need it, the many are held fast to long hours and endless days, with the result that they become hopeless, nervous wrecks and go blind or mad. — Metropolitan Magazine.

BRYAN FORCES SCORE TALLIES

Platform to Be Considered After Nomination Is Made

JAMES PERMANENT CHAIRMAN

If Progressive Platform Not Adopted, Bryan Will Present One—Kern Is Chairman of Committee—Bryan Gives Harmony Talk—First Ballot a Test of Candidates—Foss' Friends Working For Him

Baltimore, June 27.—The Wilson forces won a victory in the national Democratic convention at the night session when the minority report from the committee on rules, abrogating the unit rule, was substituted for the majority proposing to recognize the right of state conventions to apply it.

This had the effect of giving Wilson 18 votes from Ohio and may cause a break in other delegations.

It was hailed as a great Wilson victory in a session that had been marked by a prolonged Wilson demonstration.

Wilson also made inroads into Clark's own state, and seven Missouri delegates voted yes. A chorus of hisses and "boos" greeted Senator Stone's announcement of 29 votes for the majority report.

Bryan's home state, Nebraska, went solid for the Wilson report, and a round of cheers swept the hall when the vote was cast.

Jeers and hisses greeted Charles F. Murphy's announcement that "New York votes 90 no."

The minority report was substituted 565 1-2 yes to 495 2-5 no. Not voting or absent, 33.

It was the culmination of a day of Bryan victories.

It was generally reported about the convention hall last night that a number of western Clark delegations that cast their votes for Judge Parker for temporary chairman were beginning to "hear from home" on account of alleged desertion of the progressive cause. It also was common gossip that there was a good deal of feeling between the Bryan and Clark forces.

In the committee on credentials the Clark forces clearly controlled. The sitting delegates from South Dakota pledged to Wilson were unseated in favor of the Clark contestants, while six uninstructed delegates from the District of Columbia were unseated in favor of six instructed for Clark.

Baltimore, June 27.—Refusing to subside even after their first day's defeat, the progressives in the Democratic national convention engaged in a desperate effort to reverse their setback, and succeeded in regaining enough of their lost ground to send their hopes soaring.

Instead the progressives forced the selection of Ollie James of Kentucky by the committee on permanent organization to be permanent chairman.

The first victory was in reversing the program of the conservative steering committee, which intended to continue the temporary organization and make Judge Parker the permanent chairman.

Although instructed for Champ Clark in the presidential fight, James is a progressive and one of Bryan's closest friends. His keynote speech is expected to be strongly tinged with progressiveism.

Bryan repudiated the Murphy-Taggart-Sullivan attempt to mollify him and refused election as chairman of the resolutions committee.

He also made it plain that unless an out-and-out progressive platform is adopted he will return a minority report and carry the fight to the floor, or even to the voters of the country if forced to do so.

Bryan forced an unprecedented step by having the resolutions committee demand by a vote of 41 to 11 that the platform be not adopted until the candidates are named. The effect of this will be that even though a conservative should get the nomination he will have to run on a radical declaration of principles.

In place of Bryan, John W. Kern of Indiana, the commoner's closest friend, was made chairman of the resolutions committee.

Because the credentials committee was not ready to report the roll the convention "marked time" on the second day, listening to fervid oratory by party leaders and the real business did not begin until 8 o'clock at night.

PLATFORM TO WAIT

Will First Select Candidate and Then Build the Platform

The platform will be made for the man at Baltimore this week, not the man for the platform. Such is the decision of the resolutions committee, a decision so unusual, if not unique, as to overshadow for the moment much of the speaking which is rife concerning the various candidates for the nomination which will determine the planks on which the Democratic party shall go before the voters this fall. That this step is a concession to Mr. Bryan and the radical element goes without saying. That it is a surrender is not yet quite clear—more likely it is a concession thrown out well in advance of the time which everybody feels sure is coming when concessions will no longer be of any use.

Because he is not in sympathy with the force "seemingly in control of the Baltimore convention," Mr. Bryan declined to accept the chairmanship of the committee on resolutions unanimously tendered him. Senator John W. Kern of Indiana was elected, as Mr. Bryan twice refused the honor.

In refusing to accept the chairmanship Mr. Bryan said: "I appreciate the compliment, but I am not willing to act as chairman. I am a believer in harmony, but I think that the committee ought to be in harmony with the convention, and I am not in harmony with the organization of the convention, nor of the national committee which controls the organization. We used to have two kinds of Democrats—progressives and conservatives; we now have only one kind, progressive, but we find there is a wide difference in the definition of the word 'progressive,' and I do not define progressiveness as it is defined by a majority of this convention, and, believing in harmony, I want to be in harmony with the convention, and I desire to be more free to represent the minority sentiment. I do not say that there will be a minority report, but it would not look well for the chairman of the committee to take in a minority report. It may be necessary for me to take in a minority report. I do not know that it will, but I do not want to place myself in that awkward position, and for that reason I decline."

This resolution was unanimously adopted by the convention at the night session.

NOMINEES ALL HOPEFUL

Two-Thirds Rule Keeps Hope Alive In All Breasts

With the nomination sessions near, presidential gossip fills the air. It seems to be admitted by all that Speaker Champ Clark will go into the convention with a distinct advantage over all the other candidates. Mr. Bryan's friends refuse to consider him out of the running and say his defeat for the temporary chairmanship was in no sense a test of what his strength would be as the presidential nominee.

The Bryan followers are hopeful the nominating fight may go to a fourth or fifth ballot and believe that in that situation many delegates would go to him.

Dark horse talk is now more general than ever.

This was partly due to the fact that the New York delegation has determined to vote for Mayor William J. Gaynor on the first ballot. The evident purpose of this is to get a test among the candidates and something of a true line on the situation. Others interpret it as meaning that Mayor Gaynor may be boomed for the vice presidency.

The Woodrow Wilson people, who stood by Mr. Bryan almost to a turn in his fight for the temporary chairmanship, are expecting his support in return when it comes to nominating and apparently base their hopes of success upon some such action.

It is realized by all that the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate in the convention can only be secured by a combination of some of the candidates or by a "break" or "stampede" of the delegates.

The various leaders are firm in the belief there will be no stampede and say they do not even fear Mr. Bryan himself in that respect.

Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany boss, is today the dominating factor of the convention. Though he stands by Thomas F. Ryan, the Belmonts and other rich New Yorkers, the manager of every candidate is flirting with Boss Murphy to deliver the ninety votes of the Empire State.

Friends of Governor Foss of Massachusetts "papered" the Baltimore armory with an appeal to the Democrats to nominate the Masaschusetts man for the presidency. Thousands of copies of a pamphlet giving Governor Foss' record, and a circular headed "Foss the Only Democrat Who Can Win," were distributed to catch the attention of the delegates as they arrived.

The delegates and visitors spent considerable of their time criticising the national committee for having brought the convention to this city. Hotel accommodations are absolutely inadequate and the restaurants are unable to feed the hungry hordes on time. The people of the city have tried hard to make up by hospitality for the limitations of the city, but this does not affect the average delegate and visitor and he is loudly voicing his objections to the discomfort.

TAILORED LINES STILL IN EVIDENCE

Summer Weather Will Bring More Elaborate Gowns to View

ADVENT OF THE PANNIER

Unseasonably cool weather has had a very detrimental effect upon all branches of the summer clothes industry—upon wearing them as well as upon selling them. So few dressy gowns have had opportunity to appear that they might almost as well be non-existent, except for the pure pleasure their owners derive from mere possession. Then, too, there is far less inspiration in describing a gown which hangs upon its hook in the wardrobe than in limning with eloquent pencil the charms of a dress as displayed by its graceful wearer, so that the scribe, as well, suffers from a backward season. The majority of women seen on the streets even in these June days are still wearing their cloth coat suits. Some are clad in linen suits, and a very few seem to be forcing matters a little by anticipating the arrival of temperature appropriate to the month. But the dressy summer gown is still conspicuous by its absence. Satin and taffeta coat suits or serge in various manifestations we see in plenty. What linen or other wash fabrics there are are either strictly tailored or trying to effect a compromise between the two extremes by adhering to simple tailored lines while coquetting a bit with lace fronts and frills and all sorts of pretty feminine fripperies. To some minds a dress of this character possesses more charm than the beruffled and much betrimmed frocks affected bys ome women. But the occasion for which it is designed makes all the difference in the world in a woman's gown.

Although trimmed with lace, such a gown as this is entirely appropriate for the street, because it is made on lines of the strictest simplicity. Without the scallops and with vest and skirt front of plain material it is the most unsophisticated of frocks. As developed here, it is made dressy enough for any semi-formal occasion by the scalloped edges of skirt front, sleeves and collar. Blue linen was used for the dress, with white agaric or Turkish toweling for the collar and allover imitation Irish crochet lace for the fronts. The combination makes an attractive gown, as you see, and one in entire conformity with the canons of good taste.

From the fashion centers comes the hint of a tendency to greater width in skirts. Not that the skirts will be permitted to look wider—oh, no! we are too wedded to the slenderness we have attained by long effort. But we are tried of our inability to step across gutters and into street cars and motors, and so the arbiters of woman's looks have relaxed the fetters a little. We will not make needles betrayal of our more ample skirts, but accomplish the fact nevertheless by some necessary pleats modestly hidden in the side seams. Even if we do not display our freedom unduly, we enjoy it, and the more, perhaps, because we know in our secret souls that these fuller skirts are far and away more graceful and becoming than the awfully tight plain ones of last year. In the newest skirts the pleats are on both sides instead of on one as they were in the first tentative efforts. They will be welcomed by all women for they are becoming to stout and slender figures alike.

Sleeves are many and various, no hard and fast rule being set for them. Rather are they cut to fit the dress to which they belong. For street dress the sleeves should be long, say the best authorities, while for home wear or for elaborate frocks short sleeves are preferred, being more comfortable as well as being more easily made and ornamental accessory to a fancy blouse They may have a little fulness at the top, but the strong liking for kimono effects still has a restraining influence upon the tops of our sleeves. The kimono blouse, with a body and sleeve in one, was a popular style because it gives a graceful droop to the shoulderline, but it passed sooner than it otherwise would, perhaps because it is not cut to stand the strain under the arm. The device of a square gusset under the arm relieved the situation to a certain extent, but women felt that that looked too much like a patch and did not take to it kindly. The new sleeve with a large armseye, and the one set into a dropped armhole have largely replaced the kimono sleeve, and since they are both smart and comfortable, have been largely adopted.

There seems to be much diversity of opinion about the waistline. French women like the raised line and the noted dressmakers' whose customers belong moreexclusively to that nation give us gowns with very high waists. But Worth, who has a large American clientele, cuts them fully an inch lower, so you see there is still much scope for the exercise of individual preference. And then the panniers! Spite of the protests of conservative women that they never—never—never can wear them, there seems to be every indication that they will anyhow, before so very long. And when panniers are draped with proper regard for lines, they are attractive, there is no gainsaying that.

The illustration shows us how gracefully the new pannier skirts are when they are not exaggerated. In fact, there seems no more appropriate fashion for the development of the pretty flowered silks so fashionable this season. This dress has overskirt and waist of white satin crepe meteor besprinkled with small pink roses. The drapery is caught up with a bunch of lovely blush roses over the skirt of the same material in pure white. The underwaist is made of the loveliest of Swiss embroidery, large flowers raised high on a background of sheer batiste. A frill of applique lace and tiny black velvet bowscomplete the garniture of this most engaging little frock. Other materials may be selected for it, and the development varied as much as one likes, but in any guise it will be a tasteful and pleasing evening gown.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

Billy's father dies, and the lad is taken home by Sinton, who makes provision for his brother and sister.

Margaret finds Billy mischievous, but her heart softens, and he is adopted.

CHAPTER XII.

Wherein Elnora Discovers a Violin and Billy Disciplines Margaret.

ELNORA missed the little figure at the bridge the next morning. She slowly walked up the street and turned in at the wide entrance to the school grounds. She scarcely could comprehend that only a week ago she had gone there friendless, alone, and so sick at heart that she was physically ill. Today she had decent clothing, books, friends and her mind was at ease to work on her studies.

As she approached home that night the girl paused in amazement. Her mother had company, and she was laughing. Elnora entered the kitchen softly and peeped into the sitting room. Mrs. Comstock sat in her chair holding a book and every few seconds a soft chuckle broke into a real laugh. Mark Twain was doing his work, while Mrs. Comstock was not lacking in a sense of humor. Elnora entered the room before her mother saw her. Mrs. Comstock looked up with flushed face.

"Where did you get this?" she demanded.

"I bought it," said Elnora.

"Bought it! With all the taxes due!"

"I paid for it out of my Indian money, mother," said Elnora. "I couldn't bear to spend so much on myself and nothing at all on you. I was afraid to buy the dress I should have liked to, and I thought the book would be company while I was gone. I haven't read it, but I do hope it's good."

"Good! It's the biggest piece of foolishness I have read in all my life. I've laughed all day ever since I found it. I had a notion to go out and read some of it to the cows and see if they wouldn't laugh."

"If it made you laugh, it's a wise book," said Elnora.

"Wise!" cried Mrs. Comstock. "You can stake your life it's a wise book. It takes the smartest man there is to do this kind of fooling." And she began laughing again.

Elnora, highly satisfied with her purchase, went to her room and put on her working clothes. Thereafter she made a point of getting a book that she thought would interest her mother from the library every week and leaving it on the sitting room table. Every night she carried home at least two schoolbooks and studied until she had mastered the points of each lesson. She did her share of the work faithfully, and every available minute she was in the fields searching for cocoons, for the moths promised to become her best source of income.

She gathered large baskets of nests, flowers, mosses, insects and all sorts of natural history specimens and sold them to the grade teachers. At first she tried to tell these instructors what to teach their pupils about the specimens, but, recognizing how much more she knew than they, one after another begged her to study at home and use her spare hours in school to exhibit and explain nature subjects to their pupils. Elnora loved the work, and she needed the money, for every few days some matter of expense arose that she had not expected.

When the music swelled from the school orchestra Elnora's heart almost broke with throbbing joy, for music always had affected her strangely, and, since she had been comfortable enough in her surroundings to notice things, she had listened to every note to find what it was that literally hurt her heart, and at last she knew. It was the talking of the violins. They were human voices, and they spoke a language Elnora understood. It seemed to her that she must climb up on the stage, take the instruments from the fingers of the players and make them speak what was in her heart. She fairly prayed to get hold of one, if only for a second.

That night she said to her mother: "I am perfectly crazy for a violin. I am sure I could play one; sure as I live. Did any one"— Elnora never completed that sentence.

"Hush!" thundered Mrs. Comstock. "Be quiet. Never mention those things before me again—never as long as you live. I loathe them. They are a snare of the very devil himself. They were made to lure men and women from their homes and their honor. If ever I see you with one in your fingers I will smash it in pieces."

Naturally Elnora hushed, but she thought of nothing else after she had done justice to her lessons. At last there came a day when for some reason the leader of the orchestra left his violin on the grand piano. That morning Elnora made her first mistake in algebra. At noon, as soon as the great building was empty, she slipped into the auditorium, found the side door which led to the stage, and, going through the musicians' entrance, she took the violin. She carried it back into the little side room where the orchestra assembled, closed all the doors, opened the case and lifted out the instrument.

She laid it on her breast, dropped her chin on it and drew the bow softly across the strings. One after another she tested the open notes. They reminded her of things. Gradually her stroke ceased to tremble and she drew the bow firmly. Then her fingers began to fall, and softly, slowly she searched up and down those strings for sounds she knew. Standing in the middle of the floor, she tried over and over. It seemed scarcely a minute before the hall was filled with the sound of hurrying feet, and she was forced to put away the violin and go to her classes. Of food she never thought until she noticed how heavy her lunch box was on the way home, so she sat on the log by the swamp and remedied that. The next day she prayed that the violin would be left again, but her petition was not answered.

That night when she returned from the school she made an excuse to go down to see Billy. He was engaged in hulling walnuts by driving them through holes in a board. His hands were protected by a pair of Margaret's old gloves, but he had speckled his face generously. He looked well and greeted Elnora hilariously.

"Me an' the squirrels are laying up our winter stores!" he shouted. "'Cos the cold is coming, an' the snow, an' if we have any nuts we have to fix 'em now. But I'm ahead, 'cos Uncle Wesley made me this board, and I can hull a big pile while the old squirrel does only ist one with his teeth."

Elnora picked him up and kissed him. "Billy, are you happy?" she asked.

"Yes, and so's Snap," answered Billy. "You ought to see him make the dirt fly when he gets after a chipmunk."

He espied Wesley and ran to show him a walnut too big to go through the holes, and Elnora and Margaret went into the house.

They talked of many things for a time, and then Elnora said suddenly, "Aunt Margaret, I like music."

"I've noticed that in you all your life," answered Margaret.

"I can make a violin talk," announced Elnora, and then in amazement watched the face of Margaret Sinton grow pale.

"A violin!" she wavered. "Where did you get a violin?"

"They fairly seemed to speak to me in the orchestra. One day the conductor left his in the auditorium, and I took it, and Aunt Margaret I can make it do the wind in the swamp, the birds and the animals. I can make any sound I ever heard on it. If I had a chance to practice a little I could make it do the orchestra music too. I don't know how I know, but I do."

"Did—did you ever mention it to your mother?" faltered Margaret.

"Yes, and she seems prejudiced against them; but, oh, Aunt Margaret, I never felt so about anything, not even going to school. I just feel as if I'd die if I didn't have one. I could keep it at school and practice at noon a whole hour. Soon they'd ask me to play in the orchestra. I could keep it in the case and practice in the woods in summer. You'd let me play here over Sunday. Oh, Aunt Margaret, what does one cost? Would it be wicked for me to take of my own money and buy a very cheap one? I could play on the least expensive one made."

"Oh, no, you couldn't. A cheap machine makes cheap music. You got to have a fine fiddle to make it sing. But there's no sense in your buying one. There isn't a decent reason on earth why you shouldn't have your fa"—

"My father's!" cried Elnora. She caught Margaret Sinton by the arm. "My father had a violin! He played it? That's why I can! Where is it? Is it in our house? Is it in mother's room?"

"Elnora!" panted Margaret. "Your mother will kill me! She always hated it!"

"Mother dearly loves music," said Elnora.

"Not when it took the man she loved away from her to make it."

"Where is my father's violin?"

"Elnora!"

"I've never seen a picture of my father. I've never heard his name mentioned. I've never had a scrap that belonged to him. Was he my father or am I a charity child like Billy, and so she hates me?"

"She's got good pictures of him. Seems she just can't bear to hear him talked about. Of course, he was your father. They lived right there when you were born. She don't dislike you. She just tries to make herself think she does. There's no sense in the world in you not having his violin. I've a great notion"—

"Has she got it?"

"No. I've never heard her mention it. It was not at home when he—when he died."

"Do you know where it is?"

"Yes. I'm the only person on earth who does, except the one who has it."

"Who is that?"

"I can't tell you, but I will see if they have it yet and get it if I can.

"My father's!" cried Elnora. She caught Margaret by the arm.

But if your mother finds it out she will never forgive me."

"I can't help it," said Elnora. "I want that violin. I want it now."

"I'll go tomorrow and get it if it has not been destroyed."

"Destroyed! Oh, Aunt Margaret, would any one dare?"

"I hardly think so. It was a good instrument. He played it like a master."

"Tell me," breathed Elnora.

"His hair was red and curled more than yours, and his eyes were blue. He was tall, slim and the very imp of mischief. He joked and teased all day until he picked up that violin. Then his head bent over it and his eyes got big and earnest. He seemed to listen as if he first heard the notes and then copied them. Sometimes he drew the bow trembly, like he wasn't sure it was right and he might have to try again. He could almost drive you crazy when he wanted to, and no man that ever lived could make you dance as he could. He made it all up as he went. He seemed to listen for his dancing music, too. It appeared to come to him. He'd begin to play and you had to keep time or die. You couldn't be still."

(To be Continued.)

On Principle.

Bert (nervously)—I heard pa tell ma he was goin' to flog me on principle after prayers tonight. What's principle, Billy? Billy—I think it's somewhere at the back, Bert. The last time he flogged me on principle I had to sit sideways for more'n a fortnight.—London Tit-Bits.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

REBEL LEADER CRYING ENOUGH

Report Circulated Orozco Now Seeks Amnesty

WOMEN LEAD IN FIERCE RIOT

Said Mexican Cabinet Considered Clemency For All Rebels—Such Action Believed to Be Wise—Women Lead Mob to Rescue Mexicans—Guilty of Violating Neutrality Laws—Police Lay Out Twenty-Five

Mexico City, June 27.—An unconfirmed report is in circulation to the effect that Orozco, rebel leader, had communicated to President Madero his willingness to surrender and asking for terms for himself and men. It is believed the subject was discussed at a cabinet meeting. With this report came the news from a source heretofore dependable that amnesty without reservation is to be extended to all political offenders after the expected collapse of the revolution. The administration officials propose to thus celebrate the downfall of their enemies and at the same time prove their magnanimity.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 27.—Spurred on by the shrieks of women leaders a mob of several hundred Mexicans and sympathizers made what the police declared to be an organized attempt to rescue Ricardo Flores Magon, Enrikue Magon, Anselmo Figueroa and Librado Rivera, alleged leaders of the recent revolution in Lower California, as they were leaving the courthouse for jail after being sentenced to one year and eleven months' imprisonment for violation of the neutrality laws. When the Magons appeared the crowd rushed on the five officers guarding them. A riot call was sent in and several wagon loads of policemen were soon on the scene.

Relatives and friends of the convicted men, urged the crowd on, they themselves leading the attack. Reinforced, the police began to use their clubs and within five minutes more than twenty-five rioters lay on the pavement half unconscious from blows on their heads. Five women, together with fourteen men, were placed under arrest and the crowd dispersed.

HARASS THE MARINES

Cuban Rebels Keep Our Men Watchful All Night

Santiago, June 27.—Captain Gulick, commanding the United States marines at El Cobre, reports that his whole company is on guard every night and constantly exchanging shots with the insurgents. The marines have intrenched outposts mounting automatic guns. At night a bomb was exploded near the American outposts at El Cobre mines, but did no damage. The report that the insurgents had burned the town of Bayari is untrue. Cueto, a small village, was destroyed by insurgents believed to be under command of General Ivonet.

The government troops have had an engagement with the column under Estenoz at Calabazas. The rebel loss was ten killed and many wounded. A large number of horses and much ammunition was taken. General Estenoz is reported to be fleeing with a small following. The regulars also attacked a band of insurgents in the vicinity of the Juragua mines, killing several of them.

Havana, June 27.—An official note from the palace states that President Gomez conferred with representatives of the Liberal party, who gave him assurance that they would support the administration. A conspicuous feature of the meeting was the absence of Alfredo Zayas, the vice president.

HANFORD INQUIRY BEGINS

Congressional Investigation Committee Reaches Seattle

Seattle, June 27.—Congressman James F. Graham of Illinois, Congressman Edwin W. Higgins of Connecticut and Walter L. McCoy of New Jersey, delegated by the judiciary committee of the house of representatives to take testimony on the impeachment charges preferred by Congressman Victor L. Berger against United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, have arrived from Washington. The hearings, which will be public, probably will begin today.

Judge Hanford has engaged counsel to protect his interests before the committee.

Philadelphia, June 27.—The result of the ballot taken by employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad company on the question of a strike was laid before S. C. Long, general manager of the company. Officials of the labor organizations said that the vote had been almost unanimous in favor of a strike.

Chicago, June 27.—"Roosevelt and Bryan" badges have made their appearance in Chicago. Several hundred of them in the shape of long ribbon streamers have been distributed

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Quincy Readers.

For months Quincy citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by residence of this locality.

Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable?

Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement?

No stronger proof of merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time.

The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Quincy reader.

John Callahan, 55 Prospect Street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by their use. I was annoyed by a lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given in their praise by a member of my family in 1908."

EXTERMINATION COMES HIGH

Gypsies and Brown Tails Cost $47,806 Since 1905

It has cost the city considerable to take care of, or rather for the suppression of the Gypsy and Brown tail moths for since work in this line was undertaken in 1905, the city has expended $47,806 and some of the Gypsy and Brown tail moths are still with us This is a case however where the state compels the expenditure of money.

CELEBRATION COLLECTIONS

Additions to the List Already Published

COLLECTORS GETTING BUSY

The collections for the Fourth of July celebration are coming in quite lively. The people are doing well in coming to the aid of the committee. The celebration will cost about $2,000. This amount is needed to carry out all the plans and make the event a success.

It is hoped that the citizens will bear this in mind in making their contributions.

The collectors are a busy crowd of men. It is impossible for them to see every one.

For that reason citizens should not feel slighted if they have been overlooked.

Any one who desires to contribute and has not been seen by the collectors can forward their check or the money to the treasurer of the Fourth of July association, Clarence Burgin, Quincy Savings Bank, Hancock street.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME BLACKBERRY DAINTIES.

BLACKBERRIES are not only delicious, but they are exceptionally wholesome. They act as a tonic and have been known to do much good in cases of liver trouble.

The fresh berries, with powdered sugar, may be served at any meal. Eaten as the first course at breakfast they are most hygienic.

A Handsome Dish.

Blackberry Cream.—Take half a pound of fresh firm berries, cover with water, add sugar to sweeten and stew until soft; then pour into a buttered baking dish. Set aside some of the juice.

Take a pint of hot milk, add two well beaten eggs and stir into it about six tablespoonfuls of cream.

When the berries are cold pour the egg and milk mixture over them and bake in a slow oven. Pour a little of the strained juice on top of the dish and sprinkle with dried and crushed cake crumbs and finish with a decorative layer of sweetened whipped cream.

Berries and Cornstarch.

Blackberry Trifle.—Put a cup of blackberries in a pint of water. Boil slowly for ten minutes. Do not stir or you may break the berries. Moisten two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a little water. Pour this on the boiling blackberries, add sugar and stir until it thickens. Set aside to cool. Serve with sugar and cream.

Made With Gelatin.

Blackberry Sponge.—Soak one-half box of gelatin in a half cupful of water. Wash one quart of blackberries and add to them one-half cupful of sugar. Boil together for twenty minutes another half cupful of sugar and the same amount of water. Rub the berries through a fine sieve, add the gelatin to the boiling sirup and after removing from the fire add the berry juice. Place the dish in a pan of ice water and beat with the egg beater for fully five minutes; then add the beaten whites of five eggs and whip until the mixture begins to thicken. Pour into wet molds and set on ice. Serve with cream.

A Baked Pastry.

Blackberry Cobbler.—This is a dish which is prized in southern households. To make it take a pudding dish, line it with pastry; then fill it with ripe luscious blackberries. Sprinkle with sugar and cover with a top crust which has been rolled thin, doubled together and gashed with a knife. Open it and spread over the berries and press the edges down with a fork.

Bake slowly for half an hour. Serve with cream or with butter and sugar to suit the taste.

Anna Thompson.

ICEBOUND ANTARCTICA.

Twice as Large as All Europe Is the South Polar Continent.

The antarctic continent has been estimated to be at least twice as large as Europe. The evidence of paleontology is to the effect that Antarctica was once connected with the more northern lands, at least with South America, and that in prehistoric ages some tremendous convulsion of the earth's crust resulted in the sinking of the "submarine" floor, until in some places it is now 4,000 fathoms, or more than four miles below the surface.

All around the great land mass of this continent there is a deep ocean bed cutting it off from every other land of the earth and setting it apart as a region more unlike the rest of the globe than any other continent or island.

Explorations have proved that in times before the advent of man upon the earth this most southern land had a temperate or even a warmer climate. There are fossils, both animal and vegetable, which indicate this. The formation of the rocks in Antarctica also is of volcanic origin and volcanic activity, notably in the case of Mount Erebus, which is not yet extinct. A vast mountain range, perhaps at one time a continuation of the Andes, exists in Antarctica.—American Review of Reviews.

HE FOUND NO CANCER CURE.

L. M. Early, Who Offered $1,000,000, Dies a Victim of X Ray.

Dr. L. M. Early of Columbus, O., died recently from cancer. He had vainly offered $1,000,000 for a cure.

When Roentgen discovered the X ray Dr. Early began experiments with it. He used it in the treatment of cancer. But X ray machines at that time did not afford the operator sufficient protection. The X ray which he was using to treat cancer caused him to have cancer, which it could not cure.

While still experimenting with the X ray Dr. Early discovered how to make a new photographic paper and sold the formula for a sum said to be $3,000,000.

The cancer first manifested itself on Dr. Early's hand. His fingers, then his hand, and finally his arm were removed. The disease was arrested, but not eradicated.

Carte Blanche.

"I think," said Mrs. Cumrox, who was arranging a musical program, "that we will have a mezzo soprano."

"All right," replied her indulgent husband. "Don't bother me about it. Go ahead and see an architect."—Washington Star.

FIRE MARSHAL TO INVESTIGATE CAUSE OF TAILOR SHOP BLAZE

Gas Turned on and Gasoline Bottle Near By Gives Suspicious Turn to Events

Three Fires, Four Alarms, With Light Loss Stirs Up Things

Thursday night was a busy one for the firemen. There were three bell and one still alarm during the night. Two of the bell alarms were for the same fire and served to act as a general alarm calling out all of the city apparatus with the exception of Combination 3 at Houghs Neck. Two of the three fires were in buildings occupied by the John Berman Furniture company.

The first alarm came from Box 23 at 8.06 and was immediately followed by Box 35. Both boxes were for the same fire. They are what is known as succession boxes so that as soon as one was done sounding the other gave in its alarm.

This fire was in the Plummer building at 1601 Hancock street and owned by Mrs. Charles Jenness. The building is occupied on one half of street floor by the Berman furniture company who also occupy the whole of the upper part of the building. The second store on the street floor is occupied by Saltimatchie's fruit store. The fire however did not touch this store and his stock was not damaged.

Berman's place was packed full of furniture of all descriptions, so much so that it was almost impossible to get about the rooms. He informed the Chief that he had $11,000 worth of stock on hand, and it looked as though he did.

This fire was a spectacular one at the start when it looked like a bad blaze. The firemen however went at it with a vim and made a grand stop.

The fire started in a blind attic and when discovered the flames were coming through the roof. There are two tin ventilating fiues on the top of the building and the flames shooting up through the rear one made a very spectacular effect.

A large number of lines of hose were

His resolution to expurge candidates of the Morgan-Ryan-Belmont combine created quite a sensation, but was adopted after he withdrew the portion calling for the expulsion of Thomas F. Ryan and August Belmont as delegates

Wilson	324
Harmon	148
Underwood	117 1-2

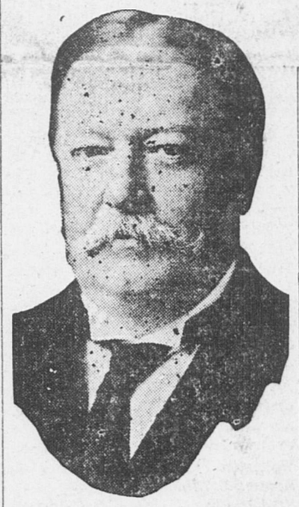
TAFT AND ROOSEVELT EXPECTED AS ATTRACTIONS JULY FOURTH



Copyright by Moffett.
PRESIDENT TAFT

COLONEL ROOSEVELT

There is a good possibility that not only President Taft but ex-President Roosevelt will be in Quincy to participate in the July Fourth celebration. Mayor Stone said this morning that a great effort was being made to get the President here and from private information received it was believed that he would come if possible.

As for ex-President Roosevelt it is understood that officers of the Atlantic Aviation Meet are making an effort to get him here and it is understood that the officers of the meet are prepared to present him with a solid gold admission ticket should he decide to come.

All doubts as to the appropriation of $1,000 by the City Council have been set at rest for Mayor Stone signed the order this morning so that the money will now be available.

LIVELY CAR SMOTE BUILDING

Freight Crashed Into the Sewer Department Shop

BUILDING A WRECK

It is fortunate that there was no one at work in the sewer department shop at South Quincy Thursday night or some one would have been injured when an empty freight car being shunted onto a spur track jumped over a stone wall and plunged into the shop. One of the night freight trains shunted the car onto a spur near the shop with more speed than intended with the result that the car run off the track and then over the wall and embankment and struck the shop on the end with sufficient force to enter half way into the shop forcing out the side of the building and lifting off the roof. In fact it about wrecked the building. As far as known no one was injured.

Harmony and good fellowship were the keynotes of every one and the encouraging reports of the chairmen of various committees were received with much applause.

Finest Thing in Fowl

We want to introduce our neighbors to our fresh killed, home dressed, milk fed fowl. That seems to be saying a great deal, but every word is significant. These are strictly native fowl killed for the home market among the nearby farms, especially for us. They've been fed and fatted upon milk. This gives the flesh a fine flavor and tender texture. Roasted in a double pan or parboiled for a few minutes before placing in the oven, and you've as fine chicken as you want to put your teeth to. We have them coming in every day now. Try one.

Fresh Killed Fowl, lb 23c

Genuine Spring Lamb, legs, lb 22c

We are glad to be able to announce some relief in the lamb market, and a consequent lowering of the high prices that have prevailed during the past few weeks.

We shall give our patrons all the benefit thus obtained.

Armour's Star Skin-Back Hams, lb 19c

The care in selecting the choicest porkers and the most improved methods of curing them are the cause of the great popularity of these hams. Sugar cured, hickory wood smoked and are not salty.

Green Vegetables That Are Fresh

It's easy enough to say fresh vegetables, but you have bought them when they were not as fresh as they might be. Vegetables to be good must be fresh. There is nothing that loses flavor so quickly as green vegetables.

Therefore, we make it a point to have our green stuff come into our store fresh every morning.

We believe it to be a better plan to sell you absolutely fresh vegetables at a fair price than it is to sell you somewhat withered goods at a bargain.

You get the taste and crispness in our vegetables.

EDITOR.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Hurry up with your subscription to the Fourth of July celebration so that the committee may know where it is at.

Discussion is almost useless after anything has been actually accomplished.

Quincy is liable to have an abundance of base ball this season. The financial end will be the most serious problem for the managers.

The Harmon cocktail is the latest addition to mixed drinks. But it has much the same ingredients and after effects as its predecessors.

Fourteen brave knights of the quill roasted the Los Angeles judge when he threatened one of their number with a jail sentence. They evidently felt strength in their numbers.

The politicians may rant and rave at the big moneyed men but what would they do without them when it came to financing campaigns?

New Jersey begins to loom pretty big on the presidential map.

A Roosevelt and Bryan ticket is suggested. It would be a case of How happy I would be if 'tother fair charmer was out of the way.

Woonsocket, R. I., has a perplexing murder mystery on its hands.

Nellie Bly, Globe trotter, is given jail sentence for contempt of court. Such is fame.

Will an attempt be made to hold President Taft responsible for Congress failure to pass an appropriation bill?

A Washington boy rebuked for swapping a chicken hung himself. That bird must have laid heavy on both mind and body.

Real thieves have been at work in Baltimore. Here is a chance for the orator to indulge in some of the Chicago stuff without really referring to the delegates.

Fitzy found the political game in Baltimore too alluring to leave it for the striking L men.

No doubt Governor Foss feels pretty cockey over that Vermont college degree.

The New York waiters' strike is ended. The men return at the old per per month. The public will continue to be mulcted to make up the difference.

Even Chauncey Depew is getting into the limelight again in the present political disturbance.

Murphy the Tammany boss is inscrutable but somehow he manages to get there with the goods.

CONGRESSIONAL LAXITY.

The failure of Congress to pass the appropriation bills which that body has before it will undoubtedly bring hardship to a great many deserving and innocent victims of the game of politics. Conditions are hard enough at the present time to people working on salary to be subjected to inconveniences which could be avoided. In looking over the list of those attending the Chicago and Baltimore conventions, it is readily seen that a great number of Senators and Representatives were in attendance at both. They would have served the people and country better by sticking to their posts and preventing this calamity which is about to fall upon people employed by the government. Unless some emergency remedy is immediately employed thousands of laborers will be thrown out of employment at the navy yards and other federal workshops the last of this week for an indefinite period.

It does seem as there could be some way of preventing this disaster. The people as a whole would justify the action of the president, if he arose equal to the occasion and ordered that the workshops be kept at their regular schedule, the money to be paid out from any in the possession of the government and later to be charged up to the proper appropriation. It is only a matter of a little paper and red tape which will close the shops or keep them open.

The money must be on hand and available in some form, else the mere lack of the appropriation bill would not be the only difficulty to surmount.

Here is a chance for the president to throw precedent and appropriation to the winds, accept the condition as an emergency and act upon it. No doubt the people of the country would heartily approve and cheer such action by the executive.

THE ELECTORSHIP.

If the assertion credited to some political workers is authentic then there is great need of a revision of the lists of many presidential electors in the coming election. Some men it is claimed asserted that they were positive that the Republican electors in their state would vote for Mr. Roosevelt whoever was nominated at Chicago. If this system of brigandage is to be carried out then the Republican convention made no mistake in the course it took last week.

There can be no excuse for such conduct by any candidate or his friends.

It matters not whether the electors are Democratic or Republicans the same severe condemnation of such a course would apply. That would be not only defeating, but defying the will of the people and it is hardly possible that any candidate or his friends would have the temerity to assume such an attitude. In that case the people would not be long in asserting themselves.

If a Republican or Democratic elector cannot feel that he can cast his vote for the party candidate then he should resign from that position immediately and permit the choice of some one else who would perform the duties to which he would be elected.

That some serious notice of those threats are taken is shown by the Taft men in Kansas who plan to have a new list of presidential electors submitted for the August primary.

For an elector elected on a ticket to support the candidate of a certain party and then turn around and vote for some one else would be the worst type of plain out and out robbery. For the candidate who would deign to profit by such a course there is the whole dictionary to draw from to say nothing of numerous choice terms coined within the past few weeks by which he can be characterized.

It is to be hoped that there will not be politicians so lacking in common decency as to attempt to carry out such a programme.

If there are the quicker they are eliminated from the public stage the better for the people and the country as a whole.

Possibly those ill advised claims, statements or threats whichever one may call them were only the temporary results of the brain storms which were so prevalant during that trying Chicago campaign.

PUPILS' RECITAL.

The pupils of Miss Margaret Carruthers will give a piano recital at her home 16 Edison street, this evening at 8 o'clock.

STAG PARTY POSTPONED.

At the meeting of Quincy Council K. of C. held Thursday evening in Greenleaf hall, it was decided to indefinitely postpone the "stag party" which was to be held July 9th. Several members were in favor of conducting a moonlight sail and it is likely that this subject will be taken up at the next regular meeting.

Mr. Chester I. Campbell, manager of the Boston Auto shows and a resident of Wollaston has contributed one of the above prizes (a beautiful silver cup). Additional contributions of prizes by any person will be promptly and publicly acknowledged.—Auto owners not wishing to enter parade and who are willing to co-operate with the committee in making the parade a big suecess, are asked to loan their car with driver during the parade, for the use of judges, members of the committee and distinguished guests. Owners who are willing to help in this manner are requested to notify Col. Henry L. Kincaide, chairman of the committee. Truck owners who are willing to loan their truck for the musicians or for children are also requested to notify the committee. There are decorating companies in Boston who make a specialty of decorating autos—loaning all materials, furnishing original ideas and doing all work—Many prize winning autos in the past have been trimmed with crepe paper—artificial flowers and foliage. The committee are willing to give all information and lend every assistance possible to those who desire their aid.

Special medals are offered by the committee to the parties sending in the largest list of entries—It is hoped that some of our enterprising young men will at once get busy and interview every auto owner possible, sending their names to the committee. In addition to the autos assigned to divisions where special prizes are offered, it is hoped that every owner of a car who does not care to decorate, will parade in the division reserved for family or individual undecorated autos. The cars in this division with the owners' families or friends, or with children of other families will make a large division. The committee will be pleased to have as large a showing of children as possible. Where no special car decorations are used it is hoped that auto owners will trim their cars with flags.

Let every automobile owner unite in making this the greatest automobile parade that has ever been held in the state. If you are willing to help and serve on the committee please send in your name at once—Join your comrades—Let's all get better acquainted—We aren't so bad when we know each other better—Will You be there?—Write, telephone, telegraph or send word any old way—Say YES!

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE IN BOSTON AND VICINITY

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The most notable event of the season is promised for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week, when "The Meistersingers" composed of the Harvard, Schubert, and Weber Male Quartettes of Boston will begin their second annual summer engagement. This famed collection of voices is without question the largest and finest singing organization the vaudeville stage has ever known. Last summer they created a veritable sensation during their six weeks' engagement at B. F. Keith's, and it was in response to thousands of requests from music lovers all over New England that Mr. Keith re-engaged "The Meistersingers for a second season. They will appear in a magnificent production built especially for them, entitled the "Meistersingers Camping Out." In a picturesque stage setting representing a bungalow onthe shore of the Rangley Lakes in Maine, that modern Paradise of the outdoors sportsman, "The Meistersings" will be seen, and while the audience enjoys the breezes and view acros the lake, "The Meistersingers" will pour forth their souls in song. Their repertoire is entirely new, and the selections will be chosen from over one hundred numbers, ranging from opera to rag-time. This superb feature will be but one act in a great summer show. McDonald and Donovan have a most delightful delineation of the most delectable type of real Irishmen, just as he is met in real life. Others are Mosher, Hayes and Mosher, a great troupe of bicycle comedians from the London Hippodrome: Barnes and Robinson in songs and pianoisms; Lida McMillan and Company in a comedy sketch; the Ramsdell Trio of acrobatic funsters; and others yet to be announced.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

Rural plays have always had a peculiar fascination for Boston theatregoers a fact which explains Mr. Lindsay Morison's penchant for presenting them as often as possible. The one he has selected for his stock company at the Majestic Theatre next week may truthfully be said to be the best of them all in simplicity of plot, character portrayal and dramatic construction. It is "York State Folks" written by Arthur Cidman who died before reaping the honors which the play eventually brought.

"York State Folks" appears to possess a charm which may be said to verge on fascination. While it does not contain any tragic situations does not exploit any "so-called social problems, and has no theatrical clap-trap whatever, it has the innate power to hold the audience with intense interest from the rise of the curtain to the close of the last act. It is clean, wholesome and elevating and full of delightful human interest. The people whom you meet in "York State Folks" are perfectly natural, and you instinctively feel that you have met them before. This probably accounts for the indescribable charm which the drama has for those who witness it.

Mr. Morison has arranged for a magnificent production of the play, and intends to make it fully the equal of the original which some years ago delighted local playgoers at one of Boston's two dollar houses. The rehearsals of the players will be under the direction of James R. Pitman, the veteran stage director, who is not only thoroughly familiar with the piece, but one of its strongest admirers.

CABARET AT PARAGON.

The round of amusements at Paragon, celebrated far and wide for its Palm Garden and its Cabaret, is as variegated as it is extensive. It is a veritable whirlwind of sight-seeing the moment one steps within its fanciful portals. Novelty in all things is the watchword with Manager Dodge and there is a new surprise of some sort every minute on one's visit there. The Cabaret has the advantage of being always new although some of the 75 artists engaged in giving this clever entertainment may remain the same week after week.

But the Cabaret is not all there is at Paragon by any means. For instance, there are such features as the 50 sea lions disporting in the Lagoon, the free circus acts of Speedy the high diver, and Demon who slides from the top of the electric tower enveloped in flames while hanging by his teeth; the band concerts, electric illumination, fireworks every Saturday night, Italian illumination Sunday evenings, the Green Streak Railroad, the new ball room, moving picture theatre, vaudeville, etc. Late boats now run back to Boston from the Park every night. There will be special features for the 4th of July including a monster fireworks display.

DOWNIE & WHEELER'S CIRCUS.

How the Great Show and its Army of People Are Managed.

When one considers that with Downie & Wheeler's Big Double Circus, which is to visit this city Wednesday July 17, there are hundreds of people employed, and that of these there are blacksmiths, painters, carpenters, barbers, laundrymen, doctors, a lawyer, detectives, cooks, trainmen, butchers, waiters, seamstresses, harness makers, musicians, shoemakers, a postmaster, hostlers, electricians, and many other mechanics and artisans, besides the performers, all jumbled together and working for a common interest. The task of organizing this traveling city seems the most wonderful feature of the institution. In Downie & Wheeler's winters quarters the home of these new giant shows, the work of organizing the circus began last September. The important thing is to engage the acts, and this is done by agents of the show, who, during the winter, visit the amusement halls of Europe andAsia in search of novelties. Meantime, in the ring barns the trainers are putting the various animal acts into shape. A few weeks before the season begins the various performers who have been resting during the winter arrive to practice their acts, that they may be perfected by the time the regular rehearsals begin, and all winter the sound of the anvil and the mallet is hard at the circus quarters. Meantime, the advertising cars have started out in advance, while the various contracting agents are on their way, arranging for circus lots and bill board space, etc. Then there is the 24-hour man, who is a story in himself. He gets his title from being 24 hours ahead of the show, arranging for wood, water, food and ice, besides attending to many other matters that have arisen. Everything about the Downie & Wheeler's Combined Shows has been so systematized that it is like a great clock.

EUROPEAN TOUR FOR CARDINAL

Bishop Anderson will probably be busier than usual during this summer now that Cardinal O'Connell is to spend the season travelling in Europe. As auxiliary bishop and vicar-general, much of the administrative work of the diocese naturally falls on him at all times, and more when the metropolitan is away.

WOMAN FLYER - AN ATTRACTION

At the Annual Parish Field Day of St. John's Church

Al plans have been completed for the field day of St. John's Parish, which takes place Saturday on the grounds adjoining the Parochial school, Phipps street. The various committees in charge have been actively engaged for the past three weeks, and from all reports a large number of present and former parishioners will take part in the event.

A fine list of sports has been arranged by the athletic committee, which includes 100 yards dash, mile run, three legged race, potato race, relay races (for boys) hop, step and jump. In addition there will be a base ball game between the St. John's Parochical team and a picked team of grammar school players. Plenty of attractions will be offered both young and old and the pie eating contest promises to be one of the features.

Miss Harriet Quimby will do her best to give an exhibition in flying and has been billed as the headline attraction. There will also be a balloon ascension, which will surely cause great fun to the spectators.

The children of the Parochial school will give an exhibition in folk dancing.

Dancing will be enjoyed on a platform to be erected for the occasion and a prize will be awarded to the couple adjudged the best waltzers.

Music will be furnished both in the afternoon and evening by a band and many prettily decorated booths will also lend a special air of charm to the affair. A large number of tickets have been disposed of and it is expected that the affair will eclipse anything of its kind ever held under the auspices of the parish.

LATE CAR FOR NIGHT OWLS

Club Members Can Now Stay Until After Closing Hour

In compliance with many demands the Bay State street will commencing Saturday put on a late car too and from Neponset to accommodate those who desire to remain in Boston after the last train. M. connecting at Neponset with a car for Boston. Returning the last car from Neponset for Quincy will leave at 1.30 arriving in City Square fifteen minutes later.

MARSHAL TO INVESTIGATE

laid from the nearby hydrants and from the steamer, which was stationed at the corner of School street. These streams were carried into the alley ways, on either side of the building and up the ladders to the second floor. The fire did not get below the blind attic but in order to get at the seat of it, after the flames had been subdued, it was necessary to raise an extension ladder to the window in the peak of the building. A chemical stream was carried through this window and what little fire there was left was soon extinguished.

Then a small ladder was taken inside of the building and raised to a scuttle trap in the floor. Up this the firemen went with lanterns and extinguishers and what few remaining sparks there were, were soon smothered out. Then it was seen that the fire had started in this blind attic and Chief Litchfield said that there was no question but crossed electric wires had caused it.

The Berman Furniture Company carried about $11,000 worth of stock but by good work of the fire department the loss will not be over $1,300. This will be to the roof of the building and the damage to the furniture caused by water, as no fire came below the attic. Had the roof not been slated it is probable that the fire would have been more disastrous.

Box 23 is known as the danger box and the sounding of this followed by Box 35 served to attract an unusually large crowd of spectators, who for a time blocked the street. Inspector Goodhue was one of the first on the scene and he promptly telephoned the police station and several officers were sent down. They were used to keep the crowd back although it was noticed that some of them were more interested in watching the progress of the fire than in looking after the several hundred boys that filled the street.

The second fire about 10.30 o'clock, was in what is known as the Odd Fellows building on the corner of Hancock street and Hancock court owned by Mrs. James Edwards. This building is also leased to the Berman Furniture Company who use the upper part for a storeroom. On the street floor is a bootblack shop and on the northerly end the Quincy Tailoring Company owned by D. S. Tempesta.

The fire started in the rear of the tailor shop and looked somewhat mysterious, so much so that Chief Litchfield had Fire Marshal Neal come to Quincy this morning to look it over.

When the department arrived there was a lively blaze in progress and the flames could be seen shooting through the rear windows. The front door was burst open and the large front window knocked in. Had this not been done there would have been a hot air explosion in a few minutes.

Early arrivals on the scene detected a strong odor of oil or gasoline and after the fire had been extinguished it was found that the gas on the fixtures was turned on. On a pressing table was a gas iron with the cock turned an and near by was a jug that had held gasoline. The top of this had been blown off.

It is thought by Chief Litchfield that the gas was left burning in the iron. As near as the Chief could learn the proprietor left the store Thursday noon and did not return. There were considerable things which looked suspicious about the fire and the Chief thought it worth while notifying the State Fire Marshal.

The flames were confined to the tailor shop although the upper part of the building was filled with smoke and it was necessary for the firemen to knock the windows in to let the smoke out. Just what the loss will be Chief Litchfield said he could not state until after investigation this morning. This was also a good stop by the firemen.

The third fire of the night was at 1.30 this morning and was a still alarm. It was in the Old Colony Laundry building in the rear of the Tirrell Block on Hancock street and it was considered rather a bad place to have a fire start. The prompt discovery by Officer Farrell no doubt prevented a most serious fire. Officer Farrell went in back of the buildings during the course of his duty and discovered a fire in the engine room. He telephoned to the Central Fire station and the auto chemical responded.

The fire proved to be in several bushels of coal in front of the furnace and but for its prompt discovery a bad fire would have resulted. The firemen broke into the building and shovelled the coal into the yard. There was no loss.

As stated above the loss at the Plummer building fire will not exceed $1,300 of which $1,000 is on the stock and $300 on the building. The loss in the Fellows' building probably will not exceed $1,000 on the building and contents. Both were fully covered by insurance.

GASTON FACTOR FOR SENATE

Return to Politics Demonstrates His Power

The return of Col. William A. Gaston to active politics, and the example of his power given at Baltimore, is believed to foreshadow his candidacy for the United States Senate as a rival to Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

Twice candidate for Governor and ex-National Committeeman, Col. Gaston has shown in Baltimore that he has lost none of his potency. Thus only a few hours after the Massachusetts delegation had voted, 35 to 1, urging the National Committee to withdraw Parker as candidate for temporary chairman, he succeeded in giving 15 Massachusetts votes to Parker, which, with three for O'Gorman, only left half the delegation for Bryan.

REMEMBERED BY FRIENDS.

The many friends of Mrs. Sarah M. Fuller are pleased to learn that she is convalescing after several months illness. On Monday she received numerous congratulations from relativse and friends in Quincy, Hudson, and Marlboro, it being the anniversary of her birth. The rooms and tables were beautifully decorated with ferns and roses.

After the guests arrived (among whom was Rev. T. C. Martin of the Hall Place M. E. Church) cake and strawberries were served.

At half past eight o'clock a musicale was given consisting of a piano solo by Miss M. Hattie Fuller; vocal solos by Harold Williams, accompanied by Miss Fuller; trio by Miss Helen Martin, Camille B. Fuller and Lawrence Martin. Miss Martin also rendered several delightfully pleasing vocal solos..

All present expressed themselves as having had a very enjoyable evening and departed wishing Mrs. Fuller many happy returns of the day.

MEYER IMPROVING.

Secretary of the Navy, George L. Meyer, who is confined to his home, Hamilton, with typhoid fever, is steadily improving and Wednesday was able to sit up in his room. Dr. Peer P. Johnson believes that the patient is out of danger.

OLLIE JAMES GIVES KEYNOTE

From Viewpoint of the Democratic Progressive

BEARS HEAVY ON WOOL TARIFF

Republican Party With Promises Defiantly Estrayed—Democratic Party With Promises Faithfully Kept—Tariff Board a Poor Excuse—Free Food Bill Was Killed—Only President to Veto Necessity Bills

Senator-elect, Ollie James, of Kentucky, entering upon his duties as permanent chairman of the twenty-first national Democratic convention, spoke as follows:

I am deeply grateful to this great convention of patriotic Democrats for the high honor you have bestowed upon me in calling me to preside over your deliberations while you select the next president of this great republic. I congratulate the Democrats of the nation on the fortunate auspices under which we have assembled. Here no charge of bribery hovers above this hall, no cry of thief and robber is hurled by one fellow Democrat at another. No soldiers stand in reserve to keep us from each other's throats. Our deliberations here shall be for the country's good, tolerant of each other's views, believing as I do that when the nominees are named by this convention they will have back of them every loyal Democrat in the republic as well as the hearty support of progressives everywhere. The Democratic party is essentially a party of the people because it is the people. It has fought a hard, long battle, when it seemed that night would never end and that day would never dawn, but the battle in the interest of the rights of the people they have continued to make until we see the common enemy, the once great Republican party, divided, distracted and torn asunder, while Democracy is united, harmonious, militant.

OLLIE M. JAMES
Senator-Elect From Kentucky, Permanent Chairman

There are two records that will be presented to the American people in the coming campaign for their consideration. One is the record of the Republican party with promises betrayed—arrogantly, defiantly betrayed: and the other is the record of the Democratic party of promises faithfully and honestly kept. The Republican party itself, recognizing that President Taft had been unfaithful to the great mass of Americans, refused by an honest majority of that convention to renominate him, and it was only brought about by the most wholesale, conscienceless and deliberate stealing of delegates honestly elected that was ever perpetuated in American history.

The Republican party, flushed with many victories, imperious as a tyrant, unheeding the demands of the people, took the reins of the government in 1908 under the solemn promise that they would revise the tariff in the interest of the consumer. Instead of keeping this promise as they should have done, because it was their bond of honor, they ebtrayed it. They raised the tariff higher than ever before until it reached its maximun of protection, being forty-seven percent. The story of this base betrayal is known to all men.

The Democratic party appealed on their record in the sixty-first congress upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill to the American people and received from them a verdict of guilty against the Republican party and the bestowal of power upon ourselves. How faithfully we have kept our promises to them is but a resume of our offical action. Having control of one branch of the law-making power, that of the house of representatives, we undertook to reform the tariff in the interest of the consuming public, believing as we do that it is a tax that is paid by the consumer most generally to the trust or monopoly that is sheltered by it, sometimes to the government; believing as we do that the right of taxation is a governmental right, that it cannot be indicated to individuals, trusts, corporations, monopolies, believing as we do that the right to levy a tariff exists only for the purpose of running the government economically and efficiently administered, we presented tariff question to the people in segregated form.

First we reduced the tariff upon woolen clothes forty percent. This was the one schedule that President Taft himself had said was too high, that it was only made possible by reason of the strength of the wool trust in the east and the wool grower in the west, but he could not veto all the other fourteen schedules of the tariff bill. This bill went to the senate and though it was controlled by opposition party we found sufficient assistance from the ranks of our opponents to pass it up to the president.

The president returned it to the congress of the United States, with his veto and assigned as his reason that he had no tariff board report and was therefore uniformed upon the question and for this reason returned it with his disaprpoval. We undertook to pass this bill over his veto. Our constitution requires two-thirds to accomplish this. We had more than one hundred majority in favor of the passage of the bill, his veto to the contrary notwithstainding. We lacked only eleven votes of having the necessary two-thirds to pass it through the house of representatives over the president's veto. And today the wool trust stands not behind a majority of the lawmakers of the republic, but behind the veto of the president and the eleven more than one-third of the representatives of the American people, picking the pockets of the shivering poor and ragged people of America. The Republican party became so arrogant and confident that this character of robbery would continue to meet the favor of the American people that they boldly wrote into their platform of 1908 a declarationthat the tariff should not only equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, but should be high enough in addition to this to give a profit to the manufacturer here. In all the history of civilized governments no party ever became so defiant of the public will or went so far as to say that all the rest of the people should be taxed and from their pockets taken a sufficient amount to give a profit to another class of people.

The tax upon woolen goods is the most indefensible of all taxes laid upon the American consumer. It is a tax collected at the drug store and by the undertaking establishments. The bill was passed by the Democratic house and vetoed by the president which would have saved to the consuming Americans upon the price of their clothing two hundred millions of dollars per annum, but the wool trust cried out to the president, and he unloosened the clutch that we had upon the throat of the wool monopoly by vetoing this bill and returning it to congress. When the veto of the wool bill was considered, four members of the president's cabinet for the first time through a service of ten years that I have been there appeared upon the floor as a mighty lobby with the patronage club in one hand and promises in the other to sustain the president's veto on this bill.

The Democratic party next passed a farmers and laborers' free list bill, giving free untaxed meat and bread to hungry mouths, giving free farming implements to the toilers of the American soil, offering free lumber to the homeless of the republic. This bill was so just that it found its way through the senate controlled by the opposition and was passed on to the president. Notwithstanding the cost of living had increased more than 100 percent in the last few years, and the workingman's wage has stood still, notwithstanding non-meat eating clubs were being formed in various cities of the United States, by men, women and children, denying themselves the food they desired and needed as a protest against the beef trust, notwithstanding the harvester trust was reaching its hand into the pockets of every farmer in America, notwithstanding the lumber trust was denying to millions of Americans the right to build a home that they could call their own, the president vetoed the bill and returned it to the congress of the United States.

We undertook to pass it over the president's veto. We lacked less than a dozen votes of the sufficient number and today the harvester, the lumber and beef trusts all stand hidden behind President Taft and a dozen more than one-third of the American representatives in congress, looting the pockets of the American consumers.

President Taft has the lone and singular distinction of being the only president in the life of this republic who ever vetoed bills cheapening clothing to the people, lumber to the homeless and meat and bread to hungry Americans and free farming implements to the toiling farmer. This bill would have saved to the consuming public $350,000,000 a year.

The next bill we passed was the one reducing the tariff on cotton goods, which would have saved many million dollars to our people. This, too, met with the veto of the president. Then we offered to the American people a bill taking the tax off of sugar, giving to them free sugar and placing an excise tax on all incomes in excess of $5000. This bill is now in the senate of the United States unacted on. I believe in free sugar. It will save to every householder in this country 2 cents upon every pound of sugar. I believe in a tax upon incomes; I believe in an excise tax and I deny that the people who are well-to-do, those who are rich, those who are so fortunate as to have the thousands pouring in every year are unwilling to bear their part of the burden of taxation to sustain this mighty government of ours.

The platform adopted by one branch of the Republican party at Chicago indorses the veto of President Taft, at the same time they had to censure and condemn the record of from thirty to one hundred Republicans in the house of representatives who supported us in favor of the passage of these bills. The American people are told in the tariff plank recently adopted in Chicago that they want a report from the tariff board before any legislation is attempted. This is a motion for continuance from a guilty client made by an expert criminal lawyer. Its sole purpose is delay. They want to take the power lodged by the federal constitution in the hands of the people's representatives and place it in the hands of a tariff board appointed by the President of the United States—those whom he can dismiss at will. And upon the report of this board the American people must depend for relief. Nothing was said about a tariff board report when the Dingley bill was passed; a tariff board report was not thought necessary when the McKinley bill was passed; we heard nothing from the Republican party in favor of a tariff board report when the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was hurried through congress amid the cheers of every trust and monopoly in the land. When does a demand for a report of the tariff board come to our ears? It is when the tariff has already been fixed so high that they know they can get it no higher, and if the people's representatives were allowed to speak they would reduce it. Then we are told the tariff board must report—this great right of taxation must be taken out of the hands of the people and and lodged in the hands of a board of five men and their report must be awaited by the suffering people of the United tates.

I believe in the rule of the people. I do not fear them. From their ranks has come every army that has fought for liberty in the history of the world. I am a progressive Democrat. In this age the people command and the leaders must obey.

I believe in the rigid enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. I would not proceed against these great monopolies in equity and when I found them guilty tell them not to do so any more or to divide their army of pillage into separate maurauding bands, but I would proceed againsts them on the criminal statutes and place upon them the felony stripes; I do not believe that a monopoly can be reasonable and would no more give to a trust the right to monopolize reasonably than I would give a thief the right to steal reasonably. These trusts must be destroyed. The American people know that they have grown up and have been fostered and encouraged by the Republican party and they cannot rely upon that party to destroy them. They have no vested right. Wrong never did and never will have a vested right in this great government.

The progressive spirit that sweeps this country now is called by some the principles of the progressives, by others the doctrines of the insurgents; but back yonder when a voice in the western wilderness cried out for them, they were called the vagaries of Bryan, the dreamer. However much we may differ in national conventions upon minor questions, all just men must admit that the one living American whose name will shine in history studded by a thousasnd flaming stars along beside that of Jefferson and Jackson, is that of William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska.

The Democratic congress not only scorched Cannonism, but it killed it. Our Republican opponents said we were unfriendly to the soldiers of the union army; that in our camps the fires of the Civil war still burned, that if given control we would be neither just nor generous to these veteran heroes of the Civil war. But behold the record of the Democratic congress, still in session. It remained for us to give the most liberal pensions to these deserving men in their declining years, that their old age might be made serene and bright. They charged we would be unjust to them, now they say we were too generous. Nedrly a half century after the war had closed it remains for a Democratic federal general to father the bill that did even-handed justice to the federal soldiers. The war is over and that flag, the brighest, dearest colors ever knit together in a banner of the free, waves about a united people, where it is loved by every heart and would be defended by every hand. And coming from the south as I do, I can say that if Abraham Lincoln were alive this night there is not a foot of soil under Dixie's sky on which he might not pitch his tent and pillow his head upon a Confederate soldier's knee and sleep in safety there.

Wager Against Taft

Brooklyn, June 28.—One wager was made, $100 to $1000, that Taft would not carry a single state.

A GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER

Copyright, 1909, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Although a good scholar, Elnora Comstock, entering high school, is abashed by her country dress. She needs $20 for books and tuition fees. Her mother is unsympathetic, and Elnora tells her troubles to Wesley Sinton, an old neighbor.

When Elnora was born her father was drowned in a swamp, embittering her mother's life. Elnora determines to raise money by gathering forest specimens. The Sintons buy clothes for her.

Elnora, getting her books cheaply, finds a market with the Bird Woman for butterflies, Indian relics, etc.

Mrs. Comstock's devotion to her husband's memory will not permit her to sell trees or have oil wells dug on her land. The Sintons bring Elnora new clothing.

Elnora is delighted with her outfit. Her mother says she must pay for it. Wesley and Margaret Sinton discuss the girl's affairs.

Pete Corson, a Limberlost frequenter, warns Elnora not to visit the Limberlost at night or go far into the swamp at any time.

Billy, a bright but untrained little chap, with a shiftless father and hungry brother and sister, gets Elnora's luncheon. Wesley, troubled by Corson's warning, investigates.

Sinton finds some one has been spying on Elnora. The girl feeds Billy again. She is "taken up" by the high school girls.

Billy's father dies, and the lad is taken home by Sinton, who makes provision for his brother and sister.

Margaret finds Billy mischievous, but her heart softens, and he is adopted.

The tears were rolling down Elnora's cheeks. "Oh, Aunt Margaret," she sobbed. "Why haven't you told me about him sooner? I feel as if you had given my father to me living so that I could touch him. I can see him too! Why didn't you ever tell me before? Go on, go on! Tell me more about my father."

"Wait until I see if I can get the violin."

So Elnora went home in suspense, and that night she added to her prayers, "Dear Lord, be merciful to my father and, oh, do help Aunt Margaret to get his violin."

Wesley and Billy came in to supper tired and hungry. Billy ate heartily, but his eyes often rested on a plate of tempting cookies, and when Wesley offered them to the boy he reached for one. Margaret was compelled to explain that cookies were forbidden that night because Billy had used a bad word that day.

"What!" said Wesley. "Wrong words been coming again? Oh, Billy, I do wish you could remember! I can't sit and eat cookies before a little boy who has none. I'll have to put mine back too." And Margaret did the same.

Then Billy slid from his chair, ran to the couch, buried his face in the pillow and cried heart brokenly. Wesley hurried to the barn and Margaret to the kitchen. When the dishes were almost washed Billy slipped from the back door.

Wesley, piling hay into the mangers, heard a sound behind him and inquired, "That you, Billy?"

"Yes," answered Billy, "and it's all so dark you can't see me now, isn't it?"

"Well, mighty near," answered Wesley.

"Then you stoop down and open your mouth."

Wesley bent over the small figure and received an installment of cooky that almost choked him.

"Now you can eat it," shouted Billy in delight. "It's all dark. I can't see what you're doing 't all."

Wesley picked up the small figure and set the boy on the back of a horse to bring his face level so that they could talk as men.

"Now, what a dandy scheme!" he commented. "Did you and Aunt Margaret fix it up?"

"No. She ain't had hers yet. But I got one for her. Ist as soon as you eat yours I am going to take hers and feed her first time I find her in the dark."

"But, Billy, where did you get the cookies? You know Aunt Margaret said you were not to have any."

"I ist took them," said Billy. "I didn't take them for me. I ist took them for you and her. Did—did—I steal?"

Wesley's big hands closed until he almost hurt the boy.

"No!" he said vehemently. "That is too big a word. You just made a mistake. If you had told Aunt Margaret what you wanted to do and asked her for the cookies she would have given them to you."

"Must I take it back?"

"You think hard, and decide yourself," suggested Wesley.

"Lift me down," said Billy, after a silence. "I got to put this in the jar and tell her."

Wesley set the boy on the floor, but as he did so he paused one second and strained him close to his breast.

Margaret sat in her chair sewing, Billy slipped in and crept up beside her. The little face was lined with tragedy.

"Why, Billy, whatever is the matter?" she cried as she dropped her sewing and held out her arms. Billy stood back. He gripped his little fists right and squared his shoulders. "I got to be shut up in the closet," he said.

"Oh, Billy! What an unlucky day! What have you done now?"

"I stold!" gulped Billy. "He said it was ist a mistake, but it was worser an' that. I took something you told me I wasn't to have."

"Stole!" Margaret was in despair. "What, Billy?"

"Cookies!" answered Billy in equal trouble. And he told her, "So I got to go in the closet."

Margaret gazed at him helplessly.

"Will you hold me tight a little bit first? He did."

Margaret opened her arms and Billy rushed in and clung to her a few seconds with all the force of his being, then he slipped to the floor and marched to the closet. Margaret opened the door. Billy gave one glance at the light, clinched his fists and, walking inside, climbed on a box. Margaret shut her eyes and closed the door.

Then she sat and listened. Was the air pure enough? Possibly he might smother. She had read something. She could bear it no longer. She arose hurriedly and opened the door. Billy was drawn up on the box in a little heap, and he lifted a disapproving face to her.

"Shut that door!" he said. "I ain't been in here near long enough yet!"

CHAPTER XIII.

Wherein Elnora Has More Financial Troubles, and Her Mother Again Refuses to Help Her.

THE next night Elnora hurried to Sinton's. She threw open the back door and searched Margaret's face with anxious eyes.

"You got it!" panted Elnora. "You got it! I can see by your face that you did. Oh, give it to me!"

"Yes, I got it, honey—I got it, all right, but don't be so fast. You can't have it before Saturday. It had been kept in such a damp place it needed gluing, it had to have strings, and a key was gone. I knew how much you wanted it, so I sent Wesley right to town with it. They said they could fix it good as new, but it should be varnished and that it would take several days for the glue to set. You can have it Saturday."

"Saturday morning?"

"He just said Saturday. But, Elnora, you've got to promise me that you will leave it here, or in town, and not let your mother get a hint of it. I don't know what she'd do."

"Uncle Wesley can bring it here until Monday. Then I will take it to school so that I can practice at noon. Oh, I don't know how to thank you."

Elnora lived by the minute until Saturday, when, contrary to his usual custom, Sinton went to town in the forenoon, taking her along to buy some groceries. Sinton drove straight to the music store and asked for the violin he had left to be mended.

In its new coat of varnish, with new keys and strings, it looked greatly like any other violin to Sinton, but to Elnora it was the most beautiful instrument ever made and a priceless treasure. She held it in her arms, touched the strings softly and then she drew the bow across them in whispering measure. She had no time to think what a remarkably good bow it was for sixteen years' disuse. The tan leather case might have impressed her as being in fine condition also had she been in a state to question anything.

She Drew the Bow Across Them In Whispering Measure.

She did remember to ask for the bill and she was gravely presented with a slip calling for four strings, one key and a coat of varnish, total $1.50.

As soon as her work was done she ran down to Sinton's and began to play, and on Monday the violin went to school with her. She made arrangements with the superintendent to leave it in his office and scarcely took time for her food at noon, she was so eager to practice. Her skill was so great that the leader of the orchestra offered to give her lessons if she would play to pay for them, so her progress was rapid in technical work. But from the first day the instrument became hers, with perfect faith that she could play as her father did, she spent half her practice time in imitating the sounds of all outdoors and improvising the songs her happy heart sang.

So the first year went, and the second and third were a repetition; but the fourth was different, for that was the close of the course, ending with graduation and all its attendant ceremonies and expenses. To Elnora these appeared mountain high. She had hoarded every cent, thinking twice before she parted with a penny, but teaching natural history in the grades had taken time from her studies in school which must be made up outside. She was a conscientious student, ranking first in most of her classes and standing high in all the branches. Her interest in her violin had grown with the years.

Three years had changed Elnora from the girl of sixteen to the very verge of womanhood. She had grown tall, round and her face had the loveliness of perfect complexion, beautiful eyes and hair and an added touch from within that might have been called comprehension.

She was so absorbed in her classes and her music that she had not been able to gather specimens as usual. When she realized this and hunted assiduously, she soon found that changing natural conditions had affected such work and specimens were scarce.

All the time the expense of books, clothing and incidentals had continued. Elnora added to her bank account whenever she could and drew out when she was compelled, but she omitted the important feature of calling for a balance. So one early spring morning in the last quarter of the fourth year she almost fainted when she learned that all her funds were gone. Commencement, with its extra expense, was coming. She had no money and very few cocoons to open in June, which would be too late. She had one collection for the Bird Woman complete to a pair of Imperialis moths, and that was her only asset. On the day she added these big yellow Emperors she would get a check for $300, but she would not get it until these specimens were secured. She remembered that she never had found an Emperor before June.

Moreover, that sum was for her first year in college. Then she would be of age, and she meant to sell enough of her share of her father's land to finish. She knew her mother would oppose her bitterly in that, for Mrs. Comstock had clung to every acre and tree that belonged to her husband. Her land was almost complete forest where her neighbors owned cleared farms dotted with wells that every hour sucked oil from beneath her holdings, but she was too absorbed in the grief she nursed to know or care. The taxes for the Brushwood road and the redredging of the great Limberlost ditch had been more than she could pay from her income, and she had trembled before the wicket as she asked the banker if she had funds to pay it and wondered why he laughed as he assured her she had, for Mrs. Comstock had spent no time on compounding interest and never added the sums she had been depositing through nearly twenty years. Now she thought her funds were almost gone, and every day she worried over expenses. She could see no reason in going through the forms of graduation when pupils had all in their heads that was required to graduate. Elnora knew she had to have her diploma in order to enter the college she wanted to attend, but she did not dare utter the word until high school was finished, for instead of softening, as she hoped her mother had begun to do, she seemed to remain very much the same.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustschian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HOBART--DEAN WEDDING QUIET

Small Party Attended Nuptials at Raynham

The wedding of Miss Bertha Louise Dean of Raynham and Sanford Warren Hobart of Braintree took place Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother, 38 South street, Raynham. It was a rather quiet wedding about forty of the immediate relatives of bride and groom being present. The ceremony was performed on the lawn in a bower of ferns and roses by Rev. Harry Grimes of Braintree. The bride was gowned in white and carried a bouquet of bride roses.

Little Emily Thacher of Attleboro was a sweet flower girl. The ushers were Harold R. Hall of Fairhaven and Fred R. Hall of Attleboro. The decorations were roses and ferns. The wedding march was played by Miss Grace Dean of Taunton. Among the numerous presents were silver, china and paintings, linen, etc.

A reception followed the ceremony. Refreshments were served by F. W. Leonard of Taunton.

Mrs. Hobart is a graduate of the Newton hospital, and a registered nurse. Mr. Hobart is a well-known young man, being a graduate of the Braintree schools. Mr. and Mrs. Hobart will reside at 699 Washington street, South Braintree.

NATION FACES STANDSTILL

Lack of Appropriations a Serious Question to Settle

Washington, June 28.—As the result of the unprecedented blockade of appropriation bills, with the threat of a deadlock between house and senate and a deadlock between senate and the president, all the important departments of the government face the prospect of beginnig the fiscal year next Monday without a cent to pay their employes. Inasmuch as executive heads are forbidden by statutes to spend a dollar which has not been authorized by law, and as the United States controller has decided that no employe can work for the government gratuitously, members of the cabinet have before them the possibility that they must close up shop Monday unless temporary provisions is made immediately by congress for carrying on the government's work.

It is believed that Postmaster General Hitchcock will decide to brave the law and order all employes to continue work, even if the senate does not act, or the house refuses to agree to make temporary provision for continuing the maintenance of the executive departments.

Most sock makers take care of the toe and heel, but let the sole and ankle take care of themselves.

The makers wear-proof the toe, heel, sole and ankle of Interwoven Socks

It's done by machines that are almost human—invented, owned, built and operated exclusively by the Interwoven Stocking Company.

That is why Interwovens are the only light-weight socks that really wear.

Perhaps you don't know this: It took the makers 50 years to perfect the interwoven process---to make light-weight socks that will wear as well as or better than heavy, clumsy ones. Being knit to form, the shape and fit of Interwoven Socks are permanent. Ten million pairs of Interwoven Socks were sold in the United States the past year---more than of any other millbrand. Try one pair---will convince you.

KID STILL ALIVE AND KICKING

Little Italian Thrived Under Mrs. Wood's Care

EATS AND GAINS WEIGHT

Mrs. Sarah Wood, of 30 Winthrop avenue, claims she has been instrumental in saving the life of an infant boy, which according to her story was given up for death by the doctors of the Lowell General Hospital, suffering from tuberculosis of the stomach. The child is an Italian by birth and the son of poor parents. He was brought to the Lowell Hospital, where Mrs. Wood is a nurse, for treatment.

Mrs. Wood was granted a vacation till September first, and believing that she could aid the child, asked to be allowed to bring him to Houghs Neck. The request was granted, although Mrs. Wood added that one of the doctors at the hospital said he would die before reaching his destination. The child lived however and Mrs. Wood says he is now able to eat and has gained a pound during the past week.

Bradshaw with their families. The grandchildren number eleven. These, with Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw, their two daughters and two sons with their husbands and wives respectively bring the number of the group up to twenty-one. A large picture was taken on the lawn and it will no doubt be treasured in years to come.

QUINCY MAN'S STORE DAMAGED

By a Fire Starting Above It Thursday Afternoon

The basement store at 209 Purchase street, Boston, occupied by George A. Brackett of Quincy was badly gutted by fire and water Thursday afternoon. The fire started on the first floor, probably from a cigarette and was confined largely to the first floor, although it worked into the basement occupied by Mr. Brackett before it was extinguished.

—The corporation counsel has decided that under an eight-hour law passed to control the work of municipal mechanics and laborers there can be no overtime and so no overtime pay in New York. It is said that there is some objection by the workers to this decision, which practically amounts in a number of cases to a decrease in earnings.

MAYOR STONE OBDURATE

Will Not Recede from Stand on Sunday Flying

CITIZENS JOIN PROTEST

Mayor Stone held a conference with the counsel of the Aviation meet Thursday relative to flying on Sundays at the aviation park. The counsel for the meet tried to get the Mayor to change his mind and permit flying on the field Sunday but all to no avail. He stuck to his conclusion made some days ago to prohibit Sunday flying.

When seen this morning the Mayor showed a large pile of letters protesting against Sunday flying, not only from clergymen but citizens as well.

It is now understood that these same parties are to take up the matter of Sunday golf playing at the Montclair links which has been allowed ever since the links were established.

ROBINSON LOST HIS 14 PLUNKS

Could Not Identify Johnson as the One Who Followed

One of the witnesses in the case of Charles Johnson the alleged pickpocket arrested in City square Sunday night, this morning was Calvin Robinson of West Canton street, Boston. Mr. Robinson was in Quincy Sunday afternoon with his wife and child, a baby. He was in City Square about 7.30 with the baby in his arms and entered Kittredge's store. He noticed a young man followed him and when he turned and went out the young man followed him out and he then saw him mingle with the crowd.

A little later he found that his pocketbook containing $14 in money was missing. His money consisted of a ten dollar bill and four ones. These were the same amount and denomination as taken from Johnson when arrested. Mr. Robinson could not positively identify Johnson as the fellow who had followed him but thought it was the same.

Judge Cook however said that Mr. Robinson's testimony had no bearing on this case.

BRIEFS

The meet was won by Sharon, with a total of 58 points, Westwood 2d, with a total of 26 1-2 points and Norwood 3d, with 23 1-2 points.

The many friends of Albert Damon, of the Sanborn & Damon Plumbing Company, will be pleased to learn that he is able to be about and resumed business today after an illness of two weeks.

The annual athletic meet of the Norfolk county Y. M. C. A.'s and the Federated Boys' clubs was held at Lake Pearl Monday. Sixty-four boys were enrolled in the different events and the complete success of the meet was a splendid tribute to the committee in charge.

GAMES AT HOME AND ABROAD

Double Header at Water Street Grounds Saturday

OTHER CONTESTS

The first doubleheader of the season in the Quincy City league takes place Saturday afternoon when the West Quincy and South Quincy teams cross bats. The first game will be called promptly at 2 o'clock and if the contentions of both managers carry weight, two of the best games ever witnessed in the city, should be played.

It must be admitted that West Quincy has not been represented as the fans of that section of the city would like to see. West Quincy is claimed to be the best base ball section of the city and if a good team represents the people of the fourth ward, they always rally to its support in a manner that has never been equalled by any other ward in Quincy. But the West Quincy team, though it does possess some good players has not fared as well as was at first anticipated.

Manager Barry himself has realized full well the situation and is also aware of the fact that upon this attraction depends whether or not West Quincy will continue to have a team in the league. He has made considerable changes in the lineup and these changes evidently were productive of much good last Saturday, for the strong Newton Catholic Club nine only beat West Quincy by a score of 3 to 2. Then too, it must be remembered that the best players of the other team that comprise the league include West Quincy boys.

No efforts have been spared to put as fast a team on the diamond as was available and Manager Richard Barry announces to the Quincy fans that he has a combination of ball tossers that can cope with the best in the league. He has a fine chance to prove these statements by encountering the leaders of the league, the "War Cries," who need no introduction to the public.

The South Quincy team is about as good an aggregation as can be found in semi-professional ranks and as a new team will be in line for West Quincy, the fans should turn out and give the boys all the encouragement possible. The games give promise of being of the tip top order and it seems that every one who travels to the grounds will be amply repaid for their trouble.

Makaria faces a tough proposition Saturday at Middleboro in the much heralded Childs team, one of the strongest semi-professional teams in the state. The "Missionaries" feel confident that they can take the measure of the home team and "Charlie" Ganzel claims that from now on, his contingent will make great strides towards carrying off the pennant of the Quincy league.

The victory over the Quincy A. A. nine last Saturday has placed great confidence in the Makarias and a win from the Middleboro players will stir them to the highest degree. Either Rice or Brittingham will do the slab work for the Makarias.

The Colonials of West Quincy travel to Franklin Field Saturday to try conclusions with the Clover. With Williamson on the mound, they feel sure of annexing their ninth straight victory. They are not discouraged in the least at their defeat at the hands of the Y. M. C. A., recently, but claim that a victory from the Clovers will place them in a fine position to cast the Orients from their high pinnacle and incidentally make them taste the bitter pill of defeat for the first time.

WEDDING BELLS.

Miss Nellie L. Leay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leay, and Frank L. Riley, an attorney, were married at St. Francis Xavier church, South Weymouth, Wednesday, Rev. John A. Butler performing the ceremony. Miss Margaret Leay was bridesmaid, and James P. Riley best man. Guests were present from Boston, Quincy and Braintree.

FORE RIVER WON IN JOINT MEET

Present Contest Closed Another One for the Fall

The noon athletic meets which have been held during the month of June were brought to a close Monday at the Gear works, when the Running High Jump was held, and on Thursday at the Fore River Co., when the three standing Broad Jump was the event of the day.

The running high jump at the Gear works brought out about 25 competitors and was finally won by Carlson with a leap of 4 feet, 8 inches. Hunter was second with 4 feet 7 inches and Tyttle third with 4 feet 6 inches.

The three broad jump at the Fore River Co., was very close, as until the last jump of Clapp about six men were only three or four inches apart. Clapp cleared 27 feet on his final jump which was very good considering the handicap of heavy shoes, clothes, etc. Fallon was second, 25 feet, 3 inches, McQuay third with 24 feet, 5 inches.

The final score of points between the two companies resulted in favor of the Fore River Co., who made 14 1-2 points in the different events.

The Gear Works scored a total of 12 1-2 points.

It is planned to have a dual meet in the fall at the Y. M. C. A. gym between the men.

A good game is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at Merrymount Park when the strong Norwood nine, led by Russell Tupper a former Quincy boy, crosses bats with the local Y. M. C. A. team. Game will be called at 3.15 o'clock.

GREATER BOSTON LEAGUE.

The Greater Boston league has decided to transfer the Dorchester team to Quincy and the first game will be played with the Somerville team at the Water street grounds, Monday.

The players of the present Dorchester team are glad of the chance to play in Quincy and feel sure that the fans will be given their money's worth at every game. A large number of the men being Dorchester residents has made it hard for them to play at home and they welcome a chance to work in Quincy.

A baseball team in an organized league costs money; it is a business proposition, pure and simple. Therefore it is distinctly up to the fans of Quincy whether the team will be permanently located here or not.

ACADEMY FOR THE GRAND ARMY

Organization to be Custodian of Adams Building

ARRANGEMENT TEMPORARY

Paul J. Revere Post, No. 88, G. A. R., will be installed as custodians of the Adams academy on Adams street.

The matter of the disposal of the Adams academy which has been in the air for some months came to a head this morning when Mayor Stone received definite word from the Supervisors of the Adams Temple and School Fund, approving of his appointing the Grand Army as custodian of the building. The Mayor promptly notified the Grand Army of the outcome of the conference and the latter will take possession immediately.

It has been some years since the academy building was occupied for school purposes and it has been fast deteriorating for lack of proper care ever since.

Some months ago Mayor Stone took up the matter and determined if possible to make arrangements whereby the Grand Army might use the building as a Memorial hall. The first action was the pasage of an order by the City Council to authorize the Mayor to petition the Supreme Court for such modification of the deed of trust as would enable the City and Supervisors to make other use of the building and to divert the fund for educational purposes. This has already been done.

A few weeks ago the City Council authorized the Mayor to appoint the Grand Army as custodians of the building. Since that time the Mayor has worked hard to carry out the desired ends and he will receive the thanks of every Grand Army man as well as members of other patriotic societies for the work he has done.

It is understood the present plan is to make the Grand Army custodians of the building until such time as the Supreme Court allows the city to sell the property and then it is proposed to take some action whereby the building may be legally turned over to the patriotic organizations of the city.

WARDEN WILLIAMS.

In connection with the Forest Fire rules published in Friday's Ledger it should be stated that ex-Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams is the Forest Warden for Quincy and is empowered to appoint such deputy wardens as he may deem necessary. Up to the present time however, the Chief has not made any such appointments but will look after the matters personally for a time.

TRUST COMPANY OPENS DOORS

Old Stand and Old Officers Under New Name

FILLS LONG FELT WANT

With the close of business this Saturday noon there will go out of existence the first banking institution established in Quincy, namely the National Granite bank, and with the opening of business Monday morning will come into existence Quincy's new banking institution, namely the Granite Trust Co.

RUPERT F. CLAFLIN,
Cashier of Quincy Safe Deposit and Trust Company.

The first bank of circulation and deposits in Quincy was the Quincy Stone bank which was established March 31, 1836. It was a state bank organized under the state banking laws with a capital of $100,000. Afterward its capital was increased to $150,000.

Lemuel Brackett was its first president and Ibraham Bartlett cashier.

In 1864 the bank gave up its state charter and became a national bank under the United States statutes and was called the National Granite Bank under which name it did business up to this noon.

Theophilus King is the present president of the bank, and has been for a number of years and he is also the president of the new institution the Granite Trust Co.

Its cashier and like wise the cashier of the new institution, Rupert F. Claflin has been with the bank since 1871. Mr. Claflin has been a bank man all his life having graduated from the foreign money department of the bank of Mutual Redemption of Boston at the time that bank was the redemption agent for a large number of New England banks, and was also an institution which had the honor of furnishing more bank officers than any other one establishment in the eastern states. Mr. Claflin was also at one time president of the Quincy Savings bank where he remained until the passage of the law which prohibited his acting as such.

The National Granite Bank was first located in the building at the corner of Hancock and Saville streets, now occupied by H. P. Kittredge and from there it moved to the new Greenleaf block ocupying the rooms on the corner of Hancock and Granite streets now occupied by E. J. Murphy, the druggist.

From there it moved to the northerly room in the Quincy Savings bank building which quarters it occupied up to its liquidation and which quarters the new trust company will also occupy.

There has always been a demand for safe deposit vaults and the Granite Bank filled a long felt want when it moved into its new quarters by having installed safety deposit vaults which are not only fire but burglar proof.

There will be no noticeable difference in the management of the new Trust Co., from the Granite bank. The

DEADLOCK UNBROKEN

Clark Gains Slowly but His Nomination Doubtful

BRYAN'S EYE ON POST

(Special to The Quincy Ledger.)

Baltimore, June 29—The deadlock of the democratic convention, remained unbroken at the 11th ballot up to three o'clock, this morning, when an adjournment was made to one o'clock this afternoon.

Both Clark and Wilson showed material gains. The former however failed to gain the necessary two thirds vote.

New York shifted its solid block of 90 votes from Harmon to Clark on the last ballot, but it did not start a stampede for the speaker.

Gov. Foss is on the ground ready to jump into the contest when his lieutenants think the situation warrant it.

The effort of the Foss managers to secure Bryan's support to their candidate, revealed the fact that a good many people have been cognizant of and which the Quincy Ledger predicted last week, that Bryan himself is a candidate. He hears the call of the people and will respond. His nomination is the only thing necessary to make the convention and party as a whole merely an appendix to the Bryan kite.

To nominate a two-thirds majority of the 1088 delegates votes, 726, is required under the rules.

DANCING IN THE GARAGE

Dancing in a automobile garage was the program Friday evening at the estate of William Cashman, Cross street, West Quincy. The party was given in aid of the coming lawn party of St. Mary's parish by the Ladies of the Parkway district table.

The affair was a success, due greatly to the generosity of Mr. Cashman. The homestead was prettily decorated numerous Japanese lanterns, with an array of electric lights with the grounds enclosed, with streamers of red, white and blue, made in the form of a 10 foot fence made a decidedly attractive feature.

Games of all kinds were played. Ice cream, cake, tonics, cigars, etc., were disposed of at booths on the lawn. and a goodly sum realized.

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church, his assistant Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, Hon. William T. Shea and Charles J. McGilvray, Grand Knight of Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus.

The Great and Glorious Fourth of July will be with us Thursday of next week and all patriotic residents of Quincy, and none within the borders of the city, are found beyond that pale, will unite in celebrating the anniversary of the Nation's birthday.

That the enthusiasm which prompts this outburst is universal and recognized on every hand.

In fact it is so wide spread in its scope that the city will enjoy two distinct and seperate observances with events in keeping with the day, but all are animated by the same spirit and the promoters of both celebrations, unite in wishing success to the undertaking of the other.

The Quincy Fourth of July Association will have charge of the celebration in the city proper under the leadership of Mayor Eugene R. Stone and an able corps of lieutenants.

The Atlantic celebration will be under the control of the Ward Six Patriotic Association, led by the president of that organization, Frank E. Badger and an efficient force of aids.

The bells of the city will peal forth their joyous salute in honor of the day, morning, noon and night.

The night before as usual will no doubt witness many social gatherings.

Many social organizations plan to keep open house to entertain local and visiting friends.

Under instructions from the mayor the police will see that a safe and sane observance of the day is carried out.

People in all parts of the city should clean their yards and premises of rubbish and other combustible material to lessen the danger from fires starting from fire cracker and fireworks.

People all over the city are requested to decorate their premises and if they cannot do this, at least display the American flag.

All persons having flag poles should display their colors and no doubt the mayor will see that the flag is displayed from the mast head at every school building.

The programs of each association for the observance of the day, with other events which will be accepted as features of the holiday within the city limits are presented below. The celebration in the city proper appearing first.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

There is only slight difference in the Bryan-Roosevelt enterprises. The former says "My program" the latter "My policies."

A lobster schooner turned out to be a Chinese smuggling craft. The Chinamen can claim they were up to date on the qualification to ship in such a craft.

The Brockton girl who changed her mind and secured two marriage licenses in two weeks better take a few more days to think over if she really wants to take the plunge.

It will be interesting to note the report of the state board of arbitration on the L strike situation, after hearing one side.

Boston police officers object to being held up to ridicule and abuse by street orators. So do a good many other people but they do not have the chance or authority to check it same as the police.

Jack Sheehan, referee of many prize fights is now to be the third man in the ring between the Revere fire chiefs and selectmen. He says it is the bitterest contest he has been called upon to decide and cannot tell whether Queensbury or London prize ring rules will be applicable.

Sure thing, every one is getting busy for the Fourth.

Some one wanted to mark time on the councilmen voting on the $1,000 Fourth of July celebration.

Is the $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 which Roosevelt reckons it will cost to run his campaign coming from the plain people?

The poor Philippine democrats were thrust out neck and scruff. They are without a flag or a country under that ruling.

Bryan seems to be the man at the throttle of the Baltimore steam roller.

But he avoids announcing his preference for one candidate or another.

The sovereign will of the people as expressed by Fourth of July orators and stump speakers is one thing. As demonstrated at Chicago and Baltimore it is a great bubble, inflated to the extreme by the windiest demagogues.

Champ Clark's daughter led the cheering for her father at one o'clock in the morning. Does pa let her roam around with a night latch key.

The Harvester Trust has been granted another delay of proceedings.

A SUGGESTION.

If the Masons are to have a Masonic Temple in the near future we would suggest as a suitable site, the Nightingale property at the junction of Washington and Temple streets. Not only is the location a good one, situated near a group of attractive buildings, but if utilized would blot out what has been an eyesore for several years. The corner deserves a fine building. Many have hoped the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., would sell their present location and move across the street.

HOUSE VS. SENATE.

While there was some hope held out for awhile that congress would provide a temporary relief measure upon the salary of federal employees before the order to shut up the navy yards was promulgated it seems that success in that direction was not forthcoming.

Judging from what can be learned by the Washington dispatches the whole matter or difficulty is brought about by a difference between the house and senate. The latter is republican the former democratic. Neither wants to give an advantage to the other by the action which it may take.

And while those gigantic intellects are quibbling over a small matter of political prestige, parliamentary clap trap or some other equally unprofitable enterprise, there is danger that fully 800,000 citizens, aye voters of this country and those depending upon them, making at a low estimate a total of 2,400,000 are prevented from earning their daily bread.

A pretty situation indeed.

How long will the people stand such dodging of issues, square meeting of business propositions because the house would not give way to the senate or vice versa. An effort was made to secure legislation through house action Friday.

But it was pointed out that even if the house action was favorable it would not be in time for effective operation, as the senate had adjourned over until Monday, and would not be in a position to act.

The senate knew before the adjournment was effected the true condition of things.

They could have foregone their few days holiday in order that the people mentioned could be saved the hardship which the loss of pay means at this time.

There is no excuse for the house or senate in this matter.

They knew the condition and should have taken measures to provide the money.

The people this fall will not listen to stump orators talking about policies, program, or anything else which may lead to blindfold them to the real issue.

Congressmen and senators will have to answer the question why they were juggling with the bread and butter of so many people?

Probably the whole trouble is the house and senate in the past two weeks have been more largely represented at Chicago and Baltimore than they have around the capitol building at Washington.

At any rate this is a matter on which the people should not permit themselves to be buncoed. They should put the question fair and square to their senators and congressmen and the answer should determine the people as to how they should vote this fall.

TAMMANY CHIEFTAIN.

It might be amusing, if it were not so pathetic to read every now and then that Charles F. Murphy the Tammany chieftain, has a face like a block of wood. That of course is not just the exact word used, but that is the meaning of those brilliant readers of human character, those men who direct affairs of nations, captains of industry, and other manifold giants, who mold destinies and make and unmake great men and great enterprises and great nations.

Of course you see them every day on the street.

They are the ones who occupy the seats oft he mighty.

They may topple off some day and then what a crash.

The whole universe will be thrown out of plumb.

Mr. Murphy may have a stolid face, but it is doubtful if his brain pan is at all stolid or slumbering.

Take the features of John D. Rockefeller and you would expect at any moment to see a revelation in the form of a pair of wings flapping over his ears.

Some people may be judged by but not all. Then again it is not a bad idea not to jump too hastily to conclusions about this or that man all because of the outward shell he presents for your inspection.

NEW $3,000 CLUB HOUSE

Assured for Squantum Through Improvement Association

OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR

There now seems no doubt but that the late summer will see a handsome $3000 clubhouse under course of construction at Squantum. By a rising vote 50 of the 125 members of the Squantum Improvement association at this week's meeting gave hearty endorsement of the committee's plans so far as drawn up. There were only five members who were not in hearty accord with the clubhouse proposition.

Chairman Timothy Callahan of the clubhouse committee said that the committee favored a site in the triangular plot of ground opposite the summer home of William A. Reed on Bellevue road. This site according to the committee is an ideal one for a year-round clubhouse. There was some discussion as to the advisability of having the clubhouse on the shore. So much time of the regular meeting was taken up in discussing clubhouse plans that president Kenyon finally entertained a motion to call a special meeting for this purpose only when the matter of building a suitable clubhouse will be taken up and probably settled.

The following officers were elected for the year:

President—C. E. Carlson.

Vice president—Herbert A. Smith.

Secretary—John Marden.

Treasurer—Timothy Callahan.

Executive committee—Perley Bostwick, Edmund White and Charles Swanson.

An enthusiastic vote of thanks was given the retiring officers for their excellent work.

Chairman George Morrill of the street railway committee reported that Superintendent Gammons of the Bay State Street railway had agreed to take up with the directors the matter of half hour service all day after July 8 and a 10.50 P. M. car daily.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the celebration of the 4th of July. Chairman Singleton of the committee reported that entries for the sporting events had already been received. There will be a parade in the forenoon. This will be in two divisions, one consisting of persons in fancy dress and the second an antique and horribles division. Prizes will be offered for the best and most appropriate costumes in each division, a silver loving cup being the first prize in the best dressed division. The parade will be followed by a baseball game in Squantum park, the opposing nines being dressed in groteqsue costumes. In the afternoon there will be field events on Callahan's oval with a Marathon run as the chief event. In the evening there will be an entertainment on the veranda of the Squantum Inn.

OVERCOME BY HEAT.

A large white horse attached to a South Boston barrel wagon was overcome by the heat on Hancock street, near Faxon avenue, early Friday evening. The horse was taken into the yard of the late Dr. Hallowell where he remained until late in the evning before he had sufficiently recovered to be taken home.

MR. SMITH PUTS FORTH QUESTION

It is Up to Some One Posted to Answer

J. H. Smith of 1359 Hancock street, is evidently annoyed at the dust clouds which have enveloped our streets at every high wind.

Wednesday afternoon, when the wind was playing all kinds of pranks, City Square looked like pictures of Sahara desert with a sand storm in full operation. And it had the Kansas cyclone of the Wizard of Oz, beat to a frazzle. However this is Mr. Smith's effort. Here is what he has to say:

Quincy, June 29, 1912.

Editor Quincy Ledger:

Dear Sir:—I will ask through your paper what is the reason that the streets are not watered this hot, dry summer. I should think the tax payers would rather pay for watering the streets; have $6,000 appropriated for grading Wollaston school lot, there must be something wrong at City hall.

Sincerely yours,
J. H. Smith,
1359 Hancock street.

If any one should be missed in rounds by our energetic and painstaking collectors, the omission can be remedied by sending your contributions to George B. Curran, Chairman Ward Five Collectors, 120 Belmont street, Wolaston.

Note:—Special Device American Flag.

These flags are made at the place of display. This special flag will be 20 by 30 feet. First the fire kindles and shows a huge flag of solid color of gold. This suddenly gives way to an American flag with perfect form and color. The American flag will burn fully four minutes This flag will be set off by the Marconi Wireless system, that is a spark transferred through space to the beautiful Girandole stationed about 100 feet from the set piece, the American flag. Then this Girandole returns through space and ignites the flag causing great surprise to the spectators.

National Salute of 21 guns.

These salutes will be fired from an eight inch gun at intervals of one half minute apart in honor of the American flag

No 80 will be substituted for five inch Sun splitting shell of eight breaks

OTHER FEATURES.

No. 1—Salute of six aerial maroons. These bombs are thrown to a height of 800 feet and then explode with a loud report which may be heard for miles which reverberates as the sound travels through space producing thunder roaring in the distance.

No. 2.—Garden of the Gods shell. Four breaks. With the breaking of this shell there are seen 12 columns of golden fire arranged in a half moon. The second break shows lightning with thunder, the third break shows a searchlight, lighting the skies like day and with the fourth break comes a vast canopy of silvery, waving, trembling and shimmering, over a circle with a diameter of 300 feet. The most beautiful combination ever combined in a single shell.

No. 3—Eva Garden shell. This shell will be thrown throughout the sky and without any spark but after a second 14 breaks of all colors will occur, representing a beautiful garden. At the second break 50 shots will be fired, giving an idea of war , concluding with a silver fountain in the form of 44 columns. This is one of the most beautiful novelties of this year.

No. 4—Cardinal's shell. First is seen the sky filled with the wonderful sparkling particles produced by a splitting sun shell with six columns. Then in the very center of it is seen the Cardinal's hat clear and perfect. New 1912.

No. 5—Frightened Fishes shell. Four breaks. This shell is thrown to a great height in the sky without a particle of fire to define its course. Then it bursts, throwing over the sky numerous fishes darting about as if in terror, and then, as if by one mind, they rush back to the starting point. Then all is dark, but after a moment, they start again darting through the heavens. After they die down again with a new burst a beautiful searchlight is thrown over the sky, followed by rolls of thunder and a violent explosion. New 1912.

No. 6—Fiery Serpents shell. Double break. From the bursting shell many serpents are seen skirmishing about the sky, darting and shooting in fantastic paths. Then from the tail of each serpent are thrown brilliant flashes of green color. An effect never before produced with serpents and most pleasing. New 1912.

No. 7—Cross of Savoy shell. Two breaks. First appears the effect of splitting the sun shell, which fades leaving complete darkness. After it follows a star effect of pure white, covering a large area of the sky. Then in the very center appears a cross of delicate red, the arms of Savoy. New 1912.

No. 8—Silvered Cross shell. Three breaks. First comes the effect of a splitting of the sun shell, and then in the centre appears a cross of liquid silver, clear, distinct and perfect. Then, as if in honor of its perfection the shell throws out hundreds of roses and violets.

No. 9—Liberty shell. Four breaks. This shell throws a great searchlight effect through the sky, which is followed by a heavy cannonading, resembling the turmoil of war, but from the smoke of war comes the emblem of peace and progress. From the center are thrown rays of color forming a circle 200 feet or more, every particle flashing and shining and showing the circle in three segments red, white and blue. New 1912.

No. 10—American shell. This shell shows the National colors. From the centre are thrown out hundreds of stars in the shape of a huge wheel. This wheel divides into three parts, of red, white and blue. Each is different and all of the same size.

No. 11—Flight of Combination Squibs. This starts the real beginning of the fireworks. Those that preceded being a kind of preface. This will consist of the squib finish, which is as follows:—From the pits in the ground shells of firelike comets will be thrown to a height of 300 feet. It might remind one of a burning dove cote with the birds all on fire, circling through the heavens as though to escape. They will exceed 150 in number and will scale and dart through the air like so many birds. It is startling and will be accompanied by the noisy explosions of Italian mines and the ascension of many pretty shells. It is a most beautiful sight, and is one steady streak of fire. Nothing was ever produced to equal this in splendor and beauty.

No. 80—National salute. This was described at the start of the program.

No. 81—Garden of the Gods shell. Four breaks. With the breaking of this shell are seen 12 columns of golden fire arranged in a half moon. The second break shows lightning and produces thunder, the third break shows a searchlight, lighting the sky like day and with the fourth break comes a vast canopy of silvery waving, trembling and shimmering over a circle with a diameter of 300 feet. The most beautiful combination ever produced by a single shell.

No. 82—Liberty shell. Four breaks. This shell shows a great searchlight effect through the sky, which is followed by a heavy cannonading, resembling the turmoil of war but from the smoke of war comes the emblem of peace and progress. From the center are thrown rays of color forming a circle of 200 feet or more, every particle flashing and shining and showing the circle in three segments, red, white and blue.

No. 83—Special combination— shell. Salvo of one 24 combination shell. This shell has five breaks with the following effects:—searchlight, whistling satellite or distant thunder and lightning and heavy thunder effect, ending in a break showing a bouquet of colored flowers. This shell is one of the most rare and complicated among aerial shells. It comprises five different shells, set and ascending as one. Each is different and produces wonderful effects. It has never been manufactured before and is one of the most pleasing pieces ever made.

No. 84—The Geysers of Yellowstone park. This piece starts as a bubbling fountain of boiling water from the earth, being lashed into silvery spray by its agitation, then as if by superhuman force this geyser rises from the earth in a huge column of silvery water to a height of 200 feet, then reascends to its former height. This is beautiful indeed and words fail to describe it. A rare creation of 1912.

No. 85—Scale of splitting of the Sun shells. This shell breaks as if by sudden eruption in the very center of the sun, numerous fragments filling the sky with columns of golden fire. Then from the centre of these columns extending down towards the earth forming a canopy of glittering golden fire and forming a dome of gold, beautiful beyond description.

No. 86—Salvo of one 12 Sun splitting shell, two breaks with 88 columns.

No. 87—Salvo of one 12 Sun splitting shell, three breaks with 132 columns.

No. 88—Salvo of one 12 Sun splitting shell, four breaks, with 176 columns.

No. 89—Salvo of one 12 Sun splitting shell five breaks with 276 columns.

No. 90—Salvo of one 12 Sun splitting shell, six breaks with 264 columns.

No. 91—Special scale of Troni shells. These shells are of six breaks each with the following effect:—With each break a gleam oi light is shown followed by a cannon report and many smaller reports like rifle shots. It has the effect of a battle with cannon and rifle fusilade. These shells are timed to follow each other so accurately as to seem a continuance of the first one. A most difficult but effective operation.

No. 92—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 93—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 94—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 95—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 96—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 97—Salvo of one 15 Troni shell with six breaks.

No. 98—Special set piece of Magic. This set piece is of most pleasing design. First the light spreads over the place, burns for a minute, then dies out, as if it was ended. Then it rekindles with change of color and new effects. This is repeated with each change of color. The effect is unique in that it produces practically three or four set pieces one after the other, in a single set piece. The beauty is in the fact that this piece entirely dies out and then as if by magic makes an entire change. Every color in it is extremely brilliant and in no case does one see blotches of different color.

No. 99—Special scale of Star shells. These shells are of the large size and show the simple star effect. Their beauty is in the scale itself. First a shell is exploded covering a portion of the heavens, a thing of beauty itself. The next shell with the extra break shows this effect repeated in the same shell and each step in the scale adds another break. These shells are really wonderful because of their beauty, being exceptionally large and the effect produced by the successive breaks. Salvo of one 15 Star shell with one break.

No. 100—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, with two breaks.

No. 101—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, three breaks.

No. 102—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, four breaks.

No. 103—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, five breaks.

No. 104—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, six breaks.

No. 105—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, seven breaks.

No. 106—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, eight breaks.

No. 107—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, nine breaks.

No. 108.—Salvo of one 15 Star shell, ten breaks.

No. 109—Special brilliant shells. These shells are a credit to their name as they are extremely brilliant upon bursting and appear first in blue, then green, white, red and gold showers, forming a canopy in the heavens. They ascend to a great height without a particle of light and then burst throwing from the centre towards every corner of the heavens shafts of colored fire, making in all 44 columns reaching nearly to the horizon. They will fill the sky with colored lights and cast a brilliance over a large area of the heavens. Salvo of one 15 brilliant shell with one break.

No. 110—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, two breaks.

No. 111—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, three breaks.

No. 112—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, four breaks.

No. 113—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, five breaks.

No. 114—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, six breaks.

No. 115—Salvo of one 15 Brilliant shell, seven breaks.

No. 116—Marconi Wireless, special device. This is the most surprising piece ever made. A wheel of fire on a set piece is thrown from its position across the field to a new position. The wonderful effect and surprise produced is beyond description, for no one realizes that it is different from the ordinary set piece and no one can see why it should go as it does. Then a wheel lights another wheel which shoots back across the field to the original location. A duplicate of its first act. There the wheel revolves and lights a set piece as it does the Girandole, with two wheels going in opposite directions. The set piece follows:

No. 117—Special trip hammer shells Special eight inch guns. Special 25 breaks. This shell on breaking produces alternately the report of the largest aerial maroon made and a glorious star effect follows in different colors. It is as though a huge banner was striking a piece of heated metal and dispersing hundreds of particles of liquid. New 1912.

No. 118—Grand finale. This finale is a blending of the most beautiful colors known to the fireworks art and will be accompanied by the discharge of huge aerial maroons which are sent into the heavens in rapid succession, making a dazzling effect which is simply sublime. The whole air seems to vibrate with force, the heavens are alight, the earth belches forth with fire and noise. For five minutes every one is thunderstruck. All is wild and uncanny. It is a sight of exceptional beauty and splendor. No battle scene could be more realistic. This finale consists of mines, fountains, batteries, shells, and maroons.

No. 119—Salute of one aerial Maroon, 18 inch gun. These bombs are thrown to a height of 800 feet and then explode with a strong report which may be heard for miles and which makes the ground tremble with the force of its explosion.

No. 120—Good Night set piece. Note—Rockets will not be fired unless the ground is considered suitable for their use and if the ground is unsafe, their equivalent will be given in shells.

Lumber needed for this display and to be on the ground and ready for use is as follows:—Six pieces, 4 by 4, 18 feet long, three pieces 3 by 3, 16 feet long, 14 pieces, 4 by 4, 12 feet long, four bunches of straps 2 by 1, 18 feet long, one bench, one foot, 12 feet long, four railroad ties.

In addition to the above features, a scale of shells from one to 13 breaks, star shells will be given.

HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION

Delightfully Entertained by Mrs. George Macfarlane

IN CLOSING SEASON'S WORK

Mrs. George Macfarlane of Merrymount road was hostess on Thursday afternoon for the June meeting of the Hospital Aid association. It was the last meeting of the season until fall, and was a very pleasant social gathering being held out of doors on the spacious lawn overlooking Butler's pond.

The treasurer's report showed a good balance on hand for the fall work. Twenty new members have been added to the association and everything indicates interest and continued activity.

A vote of thanks was given Miss Carrie Follett Spear for the earnest and hard work she put into the concert which she arranged for the benefit of the association, the results being the addition of $67.25 to the treasury.

Afternoon tea was served by the hostess, who was assisted by her daughter, Miss Maude Macfarlane, after which the gathering broke up amid cordial wishes for pleasant vacations and a happy reunion in the fall.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Finest Thing in Fowl

We want to introduce our neighbors to our fresh killed, home dressed, milk fed fowl. That seems to be saying a great deal, but every word is significant. These are strictly native fowl killed for the home market among the nearby farms, especially for us. They've been fed and fatted upon milk. This gives the flesh a fine flavor and tender texture. Roasted in a double pan or parboiled for a few minutes before placing in the oven, and you've as fine chicken as you want to put your teeth to. We have them coming in every day now. Try one.

Fresh Killed Fowl, lb 23c

Genuine Spring Lamb, legs, lb 22c

We are glad to be able to announce some relief in the lamb market, and a consequent lowering of the high prices that have prevailed during the past few weeks.

We shall give our patrons all the benefit thus obtained.

Armour's Star Skin-Back Hams, lb 19c

The care in selecting the choicest porkers and the most improved methods of curing them are the cause of the great popularity of these hams. Sugar cured, hickory wood smoked and are not salty.

Green Vegetables That Are Fresh

It's easy enough to say fresh vegetables, but you have bought them when they were not as fresh as they might be. Vegetables to be good must be fresh. There is nothing that loses flavor so quickly as green vegetables.

Therefore, we make it a point to have our green stuff come into our store fresh every morning.

We believe it to be a better plan to sell you absolutely fresh vegetables at a fair price than it is to sell you somewhat withered goods at a bargain.

You get the taste and crispness in our vegetables.

Caleb F. Howard of 62 Trafford street, Quincy, who is said to be a member of the Industrial workers of the World and Morrison I. Swift of Boston, spoke for an hour in City square, Friday night, condemning the incarceration of Ettor and Giovannitti, as an injustice.

Howard applied for a permit to hold this meeting last week but was refused by Commissioner of Public Works Frederick E. Tupper.

The matter was called to the attention of Mayor Stone who referred it to City Solicitor John W. McAnarney and Chief of Police Burrell and they are expected to take some action.

Up to noon time no court papers had been issued.

CELEBRATION ECHOES.

The Automobile Division in the parade on the Fourth containing undecorated cars, and cars decorated with flags, bids fair to be the largest in the parade. Large numbers of auto owners are going to parade with their families or with children, whcih will be a pleasing feature.

The Central Garage, C. W. Hodgkinson is placing six new cars at the disposal of the automobile parade committee for use of judges and committee. That's the spirit that helps.

NO DOCK INSPECTION

Required In New York and No Blame Can Be Personally Laid

Buffalo, June 29.—After an inquest into one of the thirty-nine deaths which occurred last Sunday night when an excursion dock at Eagle Park, Grand Island, collapsed and dropped a crowd of nearly 200 excursionists into the Niagara river, Guy B. Moore, first assistant district attorney, said that probably nobody could be held criminally liable for the catastrophe.

Said Mr. Moore: "The law does not impose upon anyone the duty of inspection or of keeping in repair these docks. Since that is so, there could be no charge of manslaughter, because manslaughter is based upon wilful neglect, and there can be no wilful neglect where nobody is charged with a duty."

SOCIALIST OLSSEN HANFORD WITNESS

Disfranchised Man Testifies Before House Committee

Seattle, June 29.—Leonard Olesen of Tacoma, revocation of whose citizenship papers precipitated impeachment charges pending against United States Judge Cornelius P. Hanford, was the first witness before the congression committee. Olesen declared he had been asked by Judge Hanford if he was "devotedly attached to the constitution of the United States." He replied that he had no "superstitious reverence" for the instrument, but was willing to abide by the laws of the country.

He had been asked, he said, if he belonged to any organization, and replied that he was a member of the Socialist Labor party and the Detroit wing of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Olesen said he had been asked if he believed in organized government, and he replied "Yes." He said, also, that he had declared in response to questions that he would abolish political government, as the latter would be useless when Socialism had established an industrial government through "revolution by the ballot."

Olesen explained that his—the Detroit—branch of the I. W. W. believes in resorting to the ballot for improving labor conditions, while the radical Chicago branch believes in discarding the ballot and resorting to "direct action."

"Direct action—or in other words, violence," said Mr. McCoy.

"Direct action," repeated Olesen. "The members of that branch of the organiaztion must answer for themselves."

NEW ENGLAND CLUB WOMEN

ENGLISH MILITANTS SCORED

Spirited Contest For Presidency—Greatest Danger the Uneducated and Unassimilated—New Independent Clubs Number 254—Certain Feminine Styles Considered Atrocious—In Moral Competition With Men

San Francisco, June 29.—In the General Federation of Women's clubs the contest for the presidency is becoming spirited. More than twenty state delegations have held caucuses and selected their members of the nominating comittee. The names of these will not be anonunced by President Moore until today.

The surprise of one session was the declaration from the platform of Mrs. Dimies T. S. Dennison of New York, honorary president of the Federation, that "lawlessness among women has arisen."

"Our greatest danger," said Mrs. Dennison, "is from the uneducated and unassimilated. In my own city I have seen women who couldn't understand when prices rose that it was not the butchers who were responsible. They stormed the butcher shops, beat down the stalls and poured kerosene on the meat. I think I am right when I say that the differences becaptial and labor are most acute in New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and here in California."

Later she was loudly cheerd as she made reference to the English suffragettes thus:

"We cannot afford to indorse the women of England who have been guilty of malicious mischief."

New clubs enrolled during the last two years and new members not included in the state federations were given respectively at 254 and 17,572.

Speakers took cognizance of women's clothing, certain styles of which were pronounced atrocious, and of their souls, which, as the anchorage of the nation, were said to be facing a crisis which might result in disaster. Mrs. John C. Hessler spoke of clothes and criticised tight skirts, high heels and "picture hats." Mrs. A. F. Gulin, Fort Wayne, Ind., speaking on "Problems of Civilization," said that women for the first time in history found themselves in moral competition with men. "Whether we have a moral fibre that will hold the American race to its ethical moorings is yet to be tried out," she said.

New England is represented on the board of directors of the General Federation by Mrs. Alvin R. Bailey of Newton, Mass.; in the national department of civics by Mrs. G. H. Fowler, Pawtucket, R. I., and Mrs. Frank S. Streeter, Concord, N. H., on the education department by Mrs. James Minot, Concord, N. H., Professor Elizabeth Kemper Adams of Smith college, Dean Sarah L. Arnold of Simmons college and President Mary E. Woolley of Mt. Holyoke college; in conservation by Mrs. Rebecca P. Fairbanks, St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Mrs. Francis B. Hornbrooke, Newton, Mass.; in household economics by Miss Anne Barrows of Boston; in music by Mrs. Ellis W. McAllister, Providence; in public health by Mrs. Robinson M. Pierce, Edgewood, R. I., Mrs. Ella J. Mason, University of Maine, Mrs. O. C. Ashton, Rutland, Vt. The advisory committee of the civil service reform section has Miss L. S. W. Perkins, Concord, Mass., as chairman and other New England members of this section are Miss Georgie A. Bacon of Worcester, Mass., and Mrs. Fredric H. Dart of Niantic, Conn.

MONEY GIVEN DETECTIVE

Darrow Paid Detective For Evidence In McNamara Case

Los Angeles, Cal., June 29.—For the first time a witness in the Darrow trial charged Clarence S. Darrow with having personally offered him a bribe to turn over to him certain evidence against the McNamara brothers. Guy Biddinger, a Chicago detective, one of the men who arrested James B. McNamara and Ortie McManigal, testified that at a meeting in Chicago Darrow offered him $5000 if he would "forget" the conversation on the train with James B. McNamara, when McNamara had practically admitted guilt as to The Times disaster and had offered Biddinger $30,000 to let him go.

The offer by Darrow, according to Biddinger, was repeated in Los Angeles and, feigning acceptance, Biddinger said he was given by Darrow $500. The money was introduced in evidence by the district attorney. A week later, in San Francisco, Darrow gave him $200, said Biddinger.

Contempt Defendants Appeal

Washington, June 29.—Samuel Gompers and Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, have taken an appeal and given bail.

Most sock makers take care of the toe and heel, but let the sole and ankle take care of themselves.

The makers wear-proof the toe, heel, sole and ankle of Interwoven Socks

It's done by machines that are almost human—invented, owned, built and operated exclusively by the Interwoven Stocking Company.

That is why Interwovens are the only light-weight socks that really wear.

Perhaps you don't know this: It took the makers 50 years to perfect the interwoven process---to make light-weight socks that will wear as well as or better than heavy, clumsy ones. Being knit to form, the shape and fit of Interwoven Socks are permanent. Ten million pairs of Interwoven Socks were sold in the United States the past year---more than of any other millbrand. Try one pair---will convince you.
